PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 84th CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION

SENATE

WEDNESDAY, JULY 25, 1956

(Legislative day of Monday, July 16, 1956)

The Senate met at 10:30 o'clock a. m., on the expiration of the recess.

The Chaplain, Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, as we turn unfilled to Thee, grant the assurance to our anxious groping hearts that behind the shadows and in them standeth One who slumbers not, nor sleeps. We are beset by perplexity, our needs are many as we turn from problem to problem, but our greatest need is of Thee; unless we find Thee and are found of Thee, the laws of Thy physical universe break our mortal life, and the laws of Thy moral realm make mockery of our futile rebellion. For Thou hast said regarding Thy laws for human behaviour, "Whosoever falls upon them shall be bruised, but upon whomsoever they shall fall, he shall be ground to powder."

Only in Thy will is our peace. And so Eternal Father, whose mercy is like the wideness of the sea, breathe now on hearts that pray the peace that comes only when our jarring discords are tuned to the music of Thy will. Then, as heralds of Thy love, send us forth across all barriers of race and creed, bearing to yearning hearts as a holy sacrament the bread of human kindness and the red wine of sacrificial service. We ask it in the Redeemer's name. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. JOHNSON of Texas, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Tuesday, July 24, 1956, was dispensed with.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States submitting nominations was communicated to the Senate by Mr. Miller, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGE REFERRED

As in executive session,

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which was referred to the Committee on Armed Services.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, its reading clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 2568) to amend title I of the act entitled "An act to authorize and direct the construction of bridges over the Potomac River, and for other purposes."

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7049) to revise, codify, and enact into law, title 10 of the United States Code, entitled "Armed Forces," and title 32 of the United States Code, entitled "National Guard."

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12130) making appropriations for mutual security for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1957, and for other purposes; agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. PASSMAN, Mr. GARY, Mr. ROONEY, Mr. CANNON, Mr. FERNANDEZ, Mr. LANHAM, Mr. NATCHER, Mr. DENTON, Mr. TABER, Mr. WIGGLESWORTH, Mr. FENTON, Mr. FORD, and Mr. HAND were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

AUTHORITY FOR CERTAIN COMMITTEES TO FILE REPORTS

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the chairmen of the various standing committees, with the exception of the Committee on the Judiciary, be permitted to file reports during the sessions of the Senate for the remainder of the session.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. LEHMAN. Does the Senator from New York understand that we are now in the morning hour?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senate is not in the morning hour. The Senate is meeting following a recess.

Mr. LEHMAN. As I read rule VII, it provides:

1. After the Journal is read, the Presiding Officer shall lay before the Senate messages from the President, reports and communications from the heads of Departments, and other communications addressed to the Senate, and such bills, joint resolutions, and other messages from the House of Representatives as may remain upon his table from any previous day's session undisposed of. The Presiding Officer shall then call for, in the following order:

The presentation of petitions and memorials.

Reports of standing and select committees.

The introduction of bills and joint resolutions.

Concurrent and other resolutions.

All of which shall be received and disposed of in such order, unless unanimous consent shall be otherwise given.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The section of the rule which the Senator from New York has read applies only when there has been a reading of the Journal when the Senate meets after an adjournment. This morning the Senate is meeting after a recess. Therefore the section of the rule to which the Senator has referred does not apply.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, a further parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. LEHMAN. Does the Senator from New York understand, therefore, that until a new legislative day comes into being—and there has been no legislative day, as I understand, since July 16, in spite of the fact that today is July 25——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator is correct.

Mr. LEHMAN. There will be no morning hour and that no bills, therefore, can be introduced, except by unanimous consent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New York is correct.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, may I address another parliamentary inquiry to the Chair?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator may state the parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. LEHMAN. I wish to make it very clear—as clear as I possibly can—that my inquiry in no way reflects, by implication or otherwise, on our present leadership, whom I consider to be men of honor and of good will.

However, if the ruling of the Chair is correct, it seems to me that inevitably the logical conclusion must be that no work can be done by the Senate except by unanimous consent, unless there is a new legislative day. Therefore it follows that at some future time, if we should have a leadership of lesser stature and of lesser integrity than the leadership of today, a leader could recess the Senate at the close of business on the very first day of the session; and if he had sufficient votes behind him, he could continue to recess the Senate every day until the end of the session. That would result in legislation exclusively by unanimous consent, and not in an orderly way of a democratic legislative body.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEHMAN. I yield, although I have addressed an inquiry to the Chair.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. I do not wish to get into an argument on this subject with my good friend from New York. I believe that before the session is over he will find that there has never been a session of the Senate in which more business has been transacted and in which the calendar has been kept so clear as it has been during the present session.

The Senator from New York is quite correct, that if a majority of the Senate decided on the first day of the session that it did not want the Senate to do anything, such a majority could decide to do just that. All the majority would have to do would be to have a Senator move to recess, which is a motion that takes precedence. If 48 other Senators joined in the motion, the majority could do anything it wished to do.

In the same way, a majority of 49 Senators could move the consideration of bills and vote against them. In that way no business would be transacted.

The Senator is correct that that could be done, if a majority of the Senate wanted to do it.

However, a majority of the Senate has demonstrated that it wants to act on legislation. Although I do not have the list with me, I believe that during this session the Senate has passed approximately 2,800 bills. I will say to the Senator from New York that between now and final adjournment it will be in order, and it is in order today, without any consent to move to consider any bill. That was done last night, when the Senate took up a very important bill which had been reported by a committee of which the Senator is a member, the Committee on Banking and Currency. Any other bill on the calendar could be taken up in that way prior to the last legislative day.

I will say to my friend from New York that I have no doubt the Senate will adjourn sometime between now and the sine die adjournment. Yesterday there was an extremely important bill before the Senate under a consent agreement, and the leadership felt that we should go ahead with it and dispose of it.

We have other bills scheduled for consideration, and we have several reports we wish to have received. There are also several conference reports which must be disposed of.

Ever since the first day the Senate met in January a motion could have been made to discharge a committee from the consideration of a bill. Furthermore, it has been in order since last January to move to suspend the rules. That could have been done. Now we are in the last 2 or 3 or 4 days of the session, we hope, and there are measures on the calendar which affect my State and the Senator's State. They are measures of great importance, affecting all the people of those and other States.

The Senator has had some bills passed by the Senate, and there are other bills pending in the House which we wish to pass before Congress adjourns. It is hoped that we can act on the supplemental appropriation bills, the rivers and harbors bill, and various conference reports within the days between now and the time of the Democratic National Convention.

There is a bill pending before the Senate at this time. We can act on that bill today, and when it is acted upon we can go through the calendar and pick out any bill for consideration. I have a list of those which we expect to take up and act upon; and we shall act upon them expeditiously. I have never undertaken to have the Senate consider a bill which had not been cleared with the majority policy group and the minority policy group. Sometimes the Senator from Delaware [Mr. WILLIAMS] has objected to measures being considered, and we have had to send them back to committees.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, I wish to make it clear that I believe we have had a productive session, and I desire particularly to remind the majority and the minority leaders that what I am saying now has no application whatsoever, actually or by implication, to the present leadership. I am, however, addressing myself to a situation which I think could, under less honorable and well-disposed leadership, become serious and one which is by no means understood by the American people, and, I may say, by the membership of the Senate itself.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. If my friend from New York will permit me to interject at that point, that is true, but the majority of the Members of the Senate would have to be corrupt as well as the leadership to bring about such a situation.

Mr. LEHMAN. That is true. But I can conceive of a situation where 1 party or 1 group might be in the great majority and might be able to impose, through the weight of their representation, conditions which would be onerous to other Members and be very, very harmful to the Nation.

The majority leader mentioned a number of important bills which are now ready for consideration. I know they are. But what I am getting at is this: If there is to continue in effect the rule—and I think it is an extremely bad and dangerous rule—that there cannot be a morning hour save on a new legislative day, it is perfectly conceivable that at some time in the future a leadership could, as I have already pointed out, move to recess on the very first day of a session and continue to recess day after day until the end of the session.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator from New York yield at that point?

Mr. LEHMAN. Let me finish my sentence. The Senate could continue to recess day after day until the end of the session, and under those circumstances bills could not be introduced. It would not be a matter of considering bills which were on the calendar, but bills could not be introduced.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. The Senate could recess for 3 days at a time if the majority did not want to do anything.

Mr. LEHMAN. I am addressing myself to the question of holding a morning hour only if there is a new legislative day, and if there is not, requiring unanimous consent to transact business.

I now yield to the Senator from California.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I hoped the Senator would yield to me while he was on my side of the aisle. I am glad to welcome him temporarily over here.

Mr. LEHMAN. I have been on the same side as the minority leader on many issues.

Mr. KNOWLAND. With reference to the hypothetical case which the Senator presents, in the first place, no leadership in the Senate, in my judgment, either sitting on this side of the aisle or on the other side of the aisle, would take any such arbitrary attitude as that suggested by the Senator from New York, because the Senate itself would not stand for it. There are 96 Members of this body. They have it in their control at any time to adjourn the Senate or to take the leadership away from any leader resorting to any such arbitrary and unfair action as has been suggested by the Senator.

As the Senator has said, at some future time there may be a question of the integrity of the leadership; but the majority has control at all times. There may be a time when one party will have a predominant voice in this Chamber. Instead of being divided, as we are now, with 49 Members on the other side of the aisle and 47 Members on this side, there may be 17 on the other side or on this side. In recent history the Republican representation in the Senate has been down to that narrow margin. It is for that reason that the rules of the Senate are rather strict, so that an arbitrary majority can not temporarily ride roughshod over the minority. It is for that reason that the rules prevail. There are honest differences of opinion as to how strict the rules should be, but the Senator can at any time submit a resolution providing for a change in the rules and have it go before the Committee on Rules and Administration, have it reported to the Senate, and ask that it be taken up and considered, and if a majority of the Members agree, the rules can be changed.

But with reference to the matter under discussion at this time, this is the second year of the 84th Congress. At any time since the introduction of the measure, the Senator from New York had it within his power, and the Senator from Missouri had it within his power, to move to discharge the Judiciary Committee from the consideration of such a bill. It was not necessary, in the last few days of the session, to submit a resolution of that kind.

There are matters of great importance before the Senate this late in the session, and the Senator from New York knows as well as I do that those who are in favor of a particular measure are within their rights to move to discharge a committee from the further consideration of a particular bill when the bill has been in the hands of the committee even for only 1 day. Assuming for a moment that the parliamentary situation should become such that a motion of that kind could be made, it would require a majority vote to discharge a committee from the further consideration of a bill. But the motion to discharge would be subject to unlimited debate. Then, if a cloture petition were filed, it would have to be approved by 64 Members. Then, each Senator would have 1 hour for debate. If the bill were taken from the committee and placed on the Senate calendar, the next motion would be to proceed to its consideration, whether a House bill or a Senate bill, and that motion would be subject to unlimited debate.

Cloture would have to be invoked before it could be brought before the Senate for consideration. If the Senate agreed to consider the bill, the bill itself and each amendment to it would be subject to unlimited debate. A hundred amendments might be proposed, and each one would be subject to unlimited debate. It might be necessary to circulate a cloture petition on each amendment. If Members finally became tired of offering amendments, a cloture petition on the bill itself would have to be circulated, and each Senator would have 1 hour's debate.

The Senator from New York is a practical man. This is no time, in the last few days of the session, to proceed with something which, from a practical point of view, the Senator knows as well as anyone knows cannot be accomplished.

It is only "kidding" minority groups and the American people to go through a lot of idle gestures.

As the minority leader of the Senate, I have had some experience with filibusters. I have helped to break them. I have on occasion signed cloture petitions. On occasions I voted for cloture.

But if the Senate is to be faced with prolonged debate, the only time to bring up such measures is early in a session, before there is a backlog of important bills.

Then, after a fair debate—because regardless of what the issue is, every Senator is entitled to have fair debate, and I would insist on that even before I signed a cloture petition—after the Senate had run along for perhaps a week or two with what might be termed legitimate debate, it might be necessary to have the Senate remain in session around the clock.

The Senator from New York knows, as well as I do, that at the end of a session, when Senators have worked hard, it is not desirable to start to have sessions around the clock, considering the parliamentary situation as it is.

I am merely stating what the facts are.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KNOWLAND. I yield.

Mr. LEHMAN. I am very much interested in what the Senator has said. He has stated the various courses of action which are open. He has described the length of debate which might take place and various motions which could be made. All that is interesting. I do not question the accuracy of the statements made by the Senator from California.

But the fact remains that we were estopped from entering the motion to discharge the committee, and we were estopped on one ground only, namely, that there was no morning hour. Under the rules, there must be a morning hour, to enable Senators to have an opportunity of at least of presenting such a motion and of having it considered by the Senate.

Mr. KNOWLAND. The Senator from New York does not claim that that failure to have a morning hour is in violation of the rules, does he?

Mr. LEHMAN. No. Of course I accept the decision of the distinguished Vice President. But what I am saying is that in effect it is really a prohibition on the introduction of bills each day. It is really a case of going way beyond any specific legislation. I believe such a practice affects the orderly processes of the Senate.

I may say to the Senator from California—and I believe I speak for many other Senators—that until 3 days ago I did not know, indeed, I never suspected, that there was not a morning hour each day, regardless of whether it was a legislative or a calendar day. I do not recollect a single instance in the 7 years I have been in the Senate when we did not have a morning hour.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I find it most difficult to understand that the distinguished Senator from New York, with all his background of public service, would have such a belief, because year after year, in the 11 years I have been in the Senate, both in the period of time I served as majority leader, succeeding the late Senator Taft, and in the time I have occupied the position of minority leader, and the distinguished Senator from Texas has occupied the position of majority leader, as have many of his illustrious predecessors, there has never been a day which has passed when either from this side of the aisle, or the other side of the aisle, when we did not have an adjournment, but recessed instead, the custom or practice of the majority leader was not to rise and ask unanimous consent that there might be a period for the insertion of material in the RECORD under a 2-minute rule. But that has been accomplished by unanimous consent.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Or when Senators did not yield for that purpose.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Or when Senators did not yield for that purpose. As the Senator from New York knows, almost anything can be done by unanimous consent; and the customary practice is that unanimous consent is given.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. I may say to the Senator from New York at this point—and I should like to have the attention of all Senators——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Senators who are familiar with the operations of the Senate know that it has not been the practice of the leadership of any party, at any time, to adjourn the Senate every night. The leadership has followed what was usually considered to be the wishes of the majority of the Members of the Senate. Sometimes there was an adjournment, if it was necessary to have a morning hour of 2 hours' duration, when there had not been an adjournment in several days. The leadership has sometimes followed that course. Until the day before yesterday, the Senate had been recessing from July 16. No objection was raised to it.

I do not object to Senators making insertions or to moving to adjourn, even now. In the opinion of the majority leader—and I hope the minority leader concurs in my view—there will be an adjournment of the Senate before there is a sine die adjournment. But the point I wish to make is that there will not be an adjournment based on what one Senator says or on what two Senators say, when important legislation must be acted on by the Senate, and the leadership thinks an adjournment does not serve the interest of the Senate.

The question of adjournment was submitted to the Senate last night. The Senate determined whether it wanted to adjourn.

I shall ask that the Senate adjourn before the sine die adjournment of the Senate. I shall ask the Senate to permit Senators to make statements. I shall freely yield my time to any Senator who wishes to make a statement or make an insertion in the RECORD or submit a report.

I assure the Senator from New York that, so far as the Senator from Texas is concerned, he anticipates that the Senate will adjourn before a sine die adjournment resolution is submitted. But the Senator from Texas will not be threatened, bludgeoned, intimidated, or forced to move an adjournment at a specific time or on a specific day by any Senator, regardless of the side of the aisle on which he sits. I think the Senate will support that position; I hope the minority leader will support it.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I may say in reply to the Senator from Texas that I think we must follow the orderly procedures of the Senate; otherwise, the Senate could easily become snarled, just as some of the parliamentary bodies of Europe have become snarled, and no one now knows where the responsibility lies, because the control of those parliaments changes from day to day. Such an occurrence in the United States Senate could result in an utterly chaotic situation.

There have been many times in the course of the years when, because of the absence by reason of illness, or for other reasons of Senators of the majority party, the control of the Senate could have shifted to the other side of the aisle. There have been times when I have had a majority of the Members of the Senate actually present on this side of the aisle. At such times I could have moved to usurp the leadership of the Senate—and, I may say, when I would have preferred to have it.

However, I do not believe there has ever been a majority leader who has been and is more courteous and more considerate to the minority leader than the able Senator from Texas. But if it had merely been desired to cause the Senate to become snarled, I could probably have moved on two dozen occasions, perhaps more, to usurp the leadership for a day or two. The majority leader then would have had to rush forth and get Senators from his side of the aisle out of a sick bed to come to the Senate, because he controlled 49 votes, while I had only 47.

In the next Congress I hope that my party will have a substantial working majority. But suppose my side had a majority of one. I would be faced with the same problem. If there were a temporary vacancy in the Senate, the leadership could be usurped. I think such usurpation would be disruptive of the orderly processes of the Senate.

If we do not like the procedures, there are methods provided for changing the rules. I, myself, have, on occasion, suggested changes in the rules. So far as I am concerned, so long as I remain in this chair, and so long as I am dealt with fairly, and my party is dealt with fairly—and I believe my party is being dealt with fairly—I shall not be a party to usurping the prerogatives of the majority leader of the Senate when bills are being considered which affect the welfare of the country.

If I had the responsibility to schedule a program, or if I were interested in a type of legislation in which the President of the United States is interested, I would try to schedule it early in the session, when the Senate would not be involved in such a situation as this.

I shall not destroy the orderly processes of the Senate. I intend to back up the majority leader so long as I feel he is treating the party on this side of the aisle equitably and is following the rules of the Senate, and I feel that every Member of the Senate is being accorded all his rights under the rules.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, what the Senator from California and the Senator from Texas say is no doubt, in the main, technically true.

Mr. KNOWLAND. It is not only technically true, but it is factually true.

Mr. DOUGLAS. If we pierce behind the complex rules and procedures, we know, as men, that the rules of the Senate have been very skillfully devised to prevent any action on civil rights which is obnoxious to the Members from the South who sit in the United States Senate.

A complex of rules for this purpose has been built up over the years, carefully guarded, carefully defended—the provisions that the Senate can be recessed rather than adjourned, so that the introduction of bills and resolutions and motions to discharge and reports, as of right, can be shut off in what would otherwise have been the morning hour; the provisions for motions to proceed to consideration of a bill being subject to unlimited debate, and requiring cloture motions to secure a vote for that; and the provisions for unlimited debate when the bill comes up. The severe restrictions upon cloture is another set of fortresses. A combined Republican and southern majority fastened those rules on the Senate still more firmly in 1949, when I am sorry to say, the then minority leader joined with the Members of the South to make the application of cloture still more difficult.

Mr. KNOWLAND. The Senator has mentioned my name. The fact of the matter is that the new rules do not make cloture more difficult.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Yes, they do.

Mr. KNOWLAND. To the contrary, up to the time of the rule changes, cloture was not applicable to a motion to proceed to the consideration of a bill. There was no way one could possibly bring debate to a close until we changed the rules so that, on a motion to bring up a bill, a cloture petition could be filed. Up to that time the Senate could not apply cloture even if 64 or 70 Members wanted to.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I think the RECORD will show I made this statement of the then minority leader. It was the late Senator Wherry who made the motion which made bringing the measure to a conclusion and to a vote more difficult. The RECORD will show, I believe, that the Senator from California also voted for the Wherry motion.

But all this is beside the point. I think it is now clear, from our experience of yesterday, when a motion which would have permitted us to propose action was defeated by the crushing vote of 76 to 6, that it will be impossible, under the rules of the Senate, with the present temper of the southern Senators, and with the temper of the leadership on both sides of the aisle, and with the present attitudes of the real leaders of both political parties, ever to bring a civil-rights measure of any real substance to a vote in this body. Pale imitations may be offered by the political leaders to clear their skirts but it has now been demonstrated that no real improvement can be made.

I think the course which the Senate has followed will probably prevent the American people, in a legislative fashion, from ever proceeding to defend the rights of the Negro minority in this country.

I say that with great sadness, but I think it is a fact. Many persons may exult over this tendency. I do not.

I say that great wrongs are perpetrated upon the Negroes of this country, in all sections of the country. Sometimes those wrongs are perpetrated legally. Sometimes they are perpetrated outside the law, by the coercion exercised upon Negroes to prevent them from voting, and in various other ways. They are discriminated against in employment and in housing. They are discriminated against so far as schooling is concerned. They are discriminated against in voting which frequently they can only do at the peril of their lives. They are not assured of a fair trial and frequently do not receive it. I regard all this as a great blot upon the American people, and as unworthy of the ideals upon which this Republic was founded. It is in the deepest sense of the term un-Christian.

I want to say that the Senate of the United States, along with all the other matters with which it has to deal, has in this matter a heavy burden upon its conscience.

I think as a result of the disillusioning experience we have gone through that practically there is very little we can do. The Negroes of this Nation are subjected, in many quarters, to great economic and physical pressure and are deprived of their basic rights under the Constitution. The rules of the Senate are so devised that we cannot act to defend them, and thus our legislative action in their protection will be almost impossible.

Mr. KNOWLAND. I will say to the Senator, if he will yield——

Mr. DOUGLAS. May I complete my statement?

Mr. KNOWLAND. Yes.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I do not believe the American people can permanently postpone dealing with this issue. But the Members of the Senate who are in this quiet, and at times pleasant, club cannot hope to escape the scrutiny of the public opinion, not only of this country, but of the world.

I have probably not been very skillful in the efforts which I have made to bring this matter to a vote. I have tried my best but I know that at on at least two occasions I have been outwitted by the very able field generals on the opposing side. I make no protestations of personal virtue. I believe we must seek to right the great wrongs we have inflicted upon the Negro people if we are to escape the judgment of a just God. I do not question the motives of those, however, who have taken a contrary position. I merely say this is an issue which will weigh not only upon the conscience of the country, but upon the conscience of the Senate.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, I do not agree with the Senator from Illinois that the rules of the Senate make impossible the passage of proposed legislation on civil rights. To the contrary, I think it is quite possible to get civil rights proposed legislation before the Senate. But I make the point that there should not be an effort to get it through in the last 4 days of the session, when much major proposed legislation is backing up in the Senate. As I said to the Senator before, and as I say again, if I had the responsibility as majority leader, and my party was in control of the votes, as the Senator's party has been, I would endeavor to get a bill to the Senate early in the session, when the situation of a prolonged debate could be met, and not in the last four days.

Mr. NEUBERGER and Mr. RUSSELL addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New York has the floor.

Mr. NEUBERGER. I wanted to make a very brief statement on the subject the Senator from California and the Senator from Illinois were discussing.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New York has the floor.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, I want to make one statement in reply to the statement of the Senator from California.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New York has the floor.

Mr. LEHMAN. The Senator from Illinois, of course, expressed my views, with regard to civil rights legislation, very graphically and sincerely. As my colleagues know, I have been fighting for civil rights legislation for a great many years, for many years before I came to Washington, during the time I was Governor of the State of New York, and even before that. I consider the issue of civil rights the most important confronting the Nation today. We can no longer close our eyes to the injustice and cruelty shown to some of our fellow citizens because of the color of their skin. I feel deeply about the fact that we have been estopped from invoking what I believe are orderly means to bring this utterly compelling measure before the Senate. The Senator from California, the minority leader, and the Senator from Texas, the majority leader, have said they would not be intimidated—I think that was the word—or forced into any situation by an individual or a small group of individuals.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEHMAN. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. The Senator from Texas made it very specific. He said so long as he was the majority leader—and he hoped he would be supported by the minority leader—on no particular day could a Senator tell him he had to move to adjourn or recess the Senate on that particular day. The Senator from Texas believes there should be an adjournment, as there have been adjournments; but he desires to say, that he does not believe 1, 2, or 3 Senators, or less than a majority, have a right to say, "Throw away your plans, junk your procedures, lift everything out in the aisle, throw it in the wastebasket; we are going to proceed to adjourn forthwith." If a majority of the Senate wants to do that, it always has that power. The Senate did not adjourn yesterday, just as it had not adjourned since July 16, just as it did not adjourn many days in February, March, and April. I think the Senate will adjourn before Congress adjourns sine die, and the Senator may present anything he wishes to under the rule, but the majority leader was not going to do it on Tuesday.

Mr. LEHMAN. May I say to the Senator from Texas, of course, the motion to adjourn, rather than recess, which was made last night was merely a part of the battle we have been fighting for 2 days to obtain the right to make our motion to bring the civil rights bill to the floor of the Senate. That right was denied to us.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. That right was denied on Tuesday. The Senator has had that right since January. We have had morning hours time and time and time again.

Mr. LEHMAN. But we did not do it. We have a right to make a motion to discharge, in an orderly way, under rule XXVI. Rule XXVI definitely prescribes the manner in which a motion to discharge may be submitted to the Senate. When it is submitted to the Senate, it is supposed to be considered by the Senate and decided by majority vote. On several occasions, we were estopped, by a single objection, even from making our motion. It was ruled out of order because of the objection of only one Member. You Senators speak of orderly procedure and democratic processes. I maintain that what you have done is neither orderly procedure nor democratic process, inasmuch as rule XXVI definitely prescribes the manner in which a motion to discharge a committee from the further consideration of a measure may be made and may be brought to the attention of the Senate for action by majority vote, not by the vote or decision of only one Member.

Mr. NEUBERGER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. LEHMAN. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. NEUBERGER. I thank the Senator from New York.

Mr. President, some of us who are sincere and persistent advocates of civil rights have been placed in a most unfair situation by this episode.

I merely wish to announce that I plan to speak at slightly greater length this afternoon, if I can obtain the time from the majority leader, regarding exactly why I voted last night against the motion to adjourn.

At this time I merely wish to say that I am a very new and inexperienced Member of this body. However, I believe there is a proper and strategic and appropriate time for everything. For example, there are a great many of us on the floor of the Senate who would like to see the Kremlin destroyed and overthrown. However, that does not mean that we are going to rise this morning and suggest that American boys be put on ships and American pilots be put in bombers, to go forth and destroy the Kremlin. It is my opinion that there is a right time for everything.

I wish to state for the RECORD at this time my memory of an incident in January 1955, and I shall ask the distinguished Senator from New York whether my recollection of it is correct: In January 1955, on the day when the 1st session of the 84th Congress convened, there was held in the office of the distinguished junior Senator from New York [Mr. LEHMAN] a meeting to discuss the civil-rights situation and the possibility of amending the Senate rules so that a civil-rights bill could successfully be considered. I remember that day particularly well, because it was the day when I became a Member of the Senate. I remember the occasion especially because the distinguished Senator from Michigan [Mr. MCNAMARA] and I stood in one corner of the room, inasmuch as there were so many Senators present at the meeting that there were not sufficient chairs for all. Therefore, we, being new Members with only a few hours seniority, stood in one corner. I remember that the junior Senator from New York went around the room—and I ask him to state if I am incorrect in my recollection; however, I think my memory is fairly good—and asked Senator after Senator what should be done. When he came to the Senator from Michigan [Mr. MCNAMARA] and me, we passed, saying that we had no opinion, because as Members of the Senate with only 2 or 3 hours of service, we certainly did not have sufficient knowledge to pass on the question.

If I am not mistaken, the only Member of the Senate in that office on that day who favored making, at the very beginning of the 1st session of the 84th Congress, an all-out fight to change the rules of the Senate was the junior Senator from New York [Mr. LEHMAN]; no one else among those present took that view. I ask the Senator from New York whether I am correct or incorrect in that recollection.

Mr. LEHMAN. The Senator from Oregon is absolutely correct.

I was very much saddened that at that time I did not have the support I had hoped to have. I shall add that I have never ceased to regret that I did not on my own, as an individual Senator alone, move that the rules be changed. I have stood alone on other occasions. I regret that very much even though I would have been overwhelmed by an adverse vote. The Senator from Oregon is quite correct in recalling that I was the only one who favored the submission of a motion to change the rules of the Senate.

Mr. NEUBERGER. The Senator from New York will also bear me out in my recollection, I believe, that the Senator from Michigan [Mr. MCNAMARA] and I, having just been sworn in, passed, when our opinion was requested. We did not express any opinion, because of our total lack of experience in such a situation. Is that correct.

Mr. LEHMAN. Yes; I recall that; and that is absolutely correct.

Mr. NEUBERGER. And all the other Senators then present, with the sole exception of the Senator from New York, did not then favor, at the beginning of the 1st session of the 84th Congress, making an all-out effort to change the rules of the Senate, so that a civil-rights measure could be considered; only the junior Senator from New York [Mr. LEHMAN] favored undertaking that procedure. Is that correct?

Mr. LEHMAN. That is correct. But we should have undertaken it; we should have pushed for it.

Mr. NEUBERGER. I simply wished to have that account of the episode appear in the RECORD.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New York still desire the floor?

Mr. LEHMAN. No; Mr. President, unless some Senator requests that I yield.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New York has yielded the floor.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I seek the floor in my own right, and not by sufferance.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Georgia is recognized in his own right.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I do not desire to prolong this discussion, but I cannot remain completely silent, in view of so many of the statements which have been made.

There are times when we hear a great deal said about democratic processes.

Those times usually occur when individual Senators have not been able completely to accomplish their will in the manner they desire on the floor of the Senate.

The rules of the Senate apply to all Members of the Senate. When they are invoked, every Member of this body is bound thereby.

Mr. President, I am not one who believes that there is no democratic process other than that which I prescribe.

Mr. President, all men may differ in their opinions on the proposed legislation which has been discussed here this morning. Some Senators may believe it is good and salutary legislation. There are others of us who believe that it is largely political in its inspiration and that it is totally and completely in violation of the provisions of the Constitution of the United States. We believe that it is destructive of the rights of the States. We believe that if carried to its final analysis though it may be aimed at one section of the country, it could finally take away from our people in every section the priceless heritage of individual rights and liberties which have enabled us to become the greatest Nation on the face of the earth.

Mr. President, I merely say that when such nefarious schemes as these are presented in the future—and we hear that they will be—there will be Members of the Senate of the United States who will undertake to point out the vice of those proposals, and will resort to every weapon at their command to prevent such proposals being imposed upon the people of the United States.

The VICE PRESIDENT. At the beginning of the discussion, the Senator from New York [Mr. LEHMAN] propounded a parliamentary inquiry, and the Chair made a ruling.

The Chair has asked the Parliamentarian to check the records of the Senate, to see how long the interpretation made by the Chair of the rule has been held to be correct. The rule interpreted by the ruling of the Chair has been in effect for 88 years.

The Chair would like to point out also, as Senators are aware, that the ruling made today by the Chair was not new or arbitrary. As is the custom, the Chair made the ruling after consultation with the Parliamentarian.

TRANSACTION OF ROUTINE BUSINESS

By unanimous consent, the following routine business was transacted:

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following letters, which were referred as indicated:

ADMISSION OF DISPLACED PERSONS—WITHDRAWAL OF NAMES

A letter from the Commissioner, Immigration and Naturalization Service, Department of Justice, withdrawing the names of Edward (Shou Shrue) Keh, and his wife, Martha Mei Sing Keh nee Chen, from a report transmitted to the Senate on August 3, 1955, pursuant to section 6 of the Refugee Relief Act of 1953, with a view to the adjustment of their immigration status (with an accompanying paper); to the Committee on the Judiciary.

REPORT ON NUMBER OF AIR FORCE OFFICERS ASSIGNED TO SEAT OF GOVERNMENT

A letter from the Director, Legislative Liaison, Department of the Air Force, reporting, pursuant to law, that at the end of the fourth quarter of the fiscal year 1956, there were 2,720 officers assigned or detailed to permanent duty in the executive element of the Air Force at the seat of Government; to the Committee on Armed Services.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

Petitions, etc., were laid before the Senate, or presented, and referred as indicated:

By the VICE PRESIDENT:

Resolutions of the Senate of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts; to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service:

"Resolutions memorializing the Congress of the United States relative to the issuance of a commemorative postage stamp depicting the Adams National Historic Site

"Whereas the Adams Mansion in Quincy, Mass., the home of John Adams and John Quincy Adams, an illustrious father and an illustrious son, both presidents of the United States of America, has been established as a national historic site in honor of the Adams family and the great contributions of that family to the United States and to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts; and

"Whereas visitors from all parts of the country pay homage to the Adamses by visiting the old Adams home, now a historic shrine, thereby keeping alive the memory of the two distinguished leaders of our country who fought courageously to acquire and to retain the freedom and rights enjoyed by Americans: Therefore be it

"Resolved, That the Massachusetts Senate respectfully urges the Congress of the United States to authorize and direct the Postmaster General of the United States to issue a special commemorative postage stamp depicting the Adams National Historic Site; and be it further

"Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be sent forthwith by the Secretary of the Commonwealth to the President of the United States, to the Postmaster General of the United States, to the presiding officer of each branch of the Congress, and to each of the Members thereof from this Commonwealth."

The petition of Ken Mantel, of Brooklyn, N. Y., relating to the admission into the United Nations of Communist China; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

A telegram in the nature of a petition from the Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association, New York, N. Y., signed by Shing-Tai Liang, president, relating to the admission into the United Nations of Communist China; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

SERVING OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES IN AIRCRAFT—PETITION

Mr. YOUNG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD, a petition signed by some of the good people of North Dakota, concerning pending legislation.

There being no objection, the petition was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

BEACH, N. DAK., July 17, 1956.

MILTON R. YOUNG,

United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We were pleased to hear bill H. R. 8000, introduced by Congressman JOHN BELL WILLIAMS, of Mississippi, was favorably reported by the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

We urge you to act promptly in reporting the Siler bill H. R. 4627 out favorably and also H. R. 388.

We are tired of the false claims made by the brewing industry in their advertising.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Guy Brown, Secretary; Mrs. H. Halstead, Mrs. F. D. Spiegelberg, Mrs. C. Lee Birdsall, Mrs. Marie Chuska, Mrs. Mary Avis Douglas, Mrs. Gurine Risli, Mrs. Chas. Slocomb, Mrs. W. E. Logan, Mrs. C. C. Hollstein, Mrs. O. L. Alsrud.

FUND FOR THE REPUBLIC—RESOLUTIONS

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. Mr. President, the International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and the National Agricultural Workers Union have each recently released resolutions concerning the Fund for the Republic. I ask unanimous consent that these resolutions be printed at this point in my remarks.

There being no objection, the resolutions were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

RESOLUTION OF THE INTERNATIONAL UNION OF ELECTRICAL, RADIO, AND MACHINE WORKERS' EXECUTIVE BOARD, JULY 16, 1956

RESOLUTION ON THE FUND FOR THE REPUBLIC

A democratic nation has the obligation to carry on an unceasing survey of its ability to implement the promise of freedom and liberty. Such study is a difficult burden to bear, not only because of the magnitude of the task but because of the antagonisms bred of ignorance and demagoguery that will always assail democracy's efforts. The Fund for the Republic has embarked on what may be the noblest and most auspicious experiment ever attempted by a private organization in the United States to encourage and facilitate the study of civil liberties. In addition, the Fund for the Republic has dramatized those situations in which liberty has prevailed over momentary expediency by rewarding institutions which have advanced the cause of democracy.

The Fund for the Republic has carried on its activities in the face of unscrupulous attacks from those who either do not understand or do not agree with, the precepts of a democratic society. A committee of the United States Congress will, in the very near future, conduct hearings designed to evaluate the validity of such attacks. Therefore be it

Resolved, That this meeting of the IUE-AFL-CIO Executive Board warmly commends the activities of the Fund for the Republic; and be it further

Resolved, That this meeting has confidence that when all the facts are laid before the American public, the Fund for the Republic will be vindicated and the criticisms leveled against it will be shown to be without foundation.

BROTHERHOOD OF SLEEPING CAR PORTERS,

New York, N. Y., July 13, 1956.

HON. FRANCIS E. WALTER,

Chairman, House Committee on Un-American Activities, House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN WALTER: Because we are unequivocally opposed to the Soviet Union Communist conspiracy, we are strongly committed to the support of those organizations in our national community whose control is in the hands of persons who believe in the democratic process and human dignity for all men regardless of race, color, religion, national origin, or ancestry, and the purpose and program of which are designed to give strength to our national unity and reality and integrity to our American dream.

By these standards, without passing judgment on the merits or demerits of the Report on Blacklisting by John Cogley, a noted and able journalist, and former editor of the well-known Catholic weekly, Commonweal, we wish to express our unqualified belief in and support of the Fund for the Republic, headed by a distinguished and responsible educator, Dr. Robert N. Hutchins, backed by a board of directors comprised of such outstanding American patriots as Paul G. Hoffman, George N. Shuster, president of Hunter College and Dean Erwin N. Griswold of the Harvard Law School, to name a few.

A review of the grants by the Fund for the Republic will indicate that they have been made to causes the advancement of which is fundamental to the leadership of the democratic forces of the world by the United States against Russian Soviet communism in its drive for worldwide conquest of the minds and allegiance of the peoples of Europe, Asia, and Africa.

It is our earnest hope that nothing will be done that may impair the usefulness, in these times of crisis to the free world, of this valuable and important movement, the Fund for the Republic.

Very truly yours,

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH,
International President.

RESOLUTION OF NATIONAL AGRICULTURAL WORKERS UNION, AFL-CIO

The National Agricultural Workers Union, AFL-CIO yesterday forwarded to Chairman FRANCIS E. WALTER, of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, a resolution adopted by its executive board. The resolution warmly commended the Fund for the Republic for its activities in providing an explanation essential for an adequate understanding of American democracy and its underlying principles. The union executive board resolution which was adopted June 17, 1956, also expressed its appreciation to the Fund for a grant-in-aid made to Ernesto Galarza for a study of civil rights of contract workers imported into the United States for employment on large-scale corporate farms. Galarza is research director for the union and a member of its board. A copy of the letter to Congressman WALTER and the attached resolution follows:

Hon. FRANCIS E. WALTER,
Chairman, House Un-American Activities Committee, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. WALTER: Enclosed is a copy of a resolution adopted by the executive board of the National Agricultural Workers Union, AFL-CIO, on June 17, 1956, respecting the activities of the Fund for the Republic.

We request that this letter and the accompanying resolution be included in the record of the hearings being held by your committee on this matter.

Sincerely yours,

H. L. MITCHELL,
President.

RESOLUTION ON THE FUND FOR THE REPUBLIC

The executive board of the National Agricultural Workers Union, AFL-CIO, having before it a report on the civil rights and legal status of contract workers imported from Mexico for employment on the large-scale corporate farms of the United States, expresses its appreciation to the Fund for the Republic for having made this study possible by a grant-in-aid given to Dr. Ernesto Galarza, one of the members of this executive board.

The Fund for the Republic was established by the Ford Foundation for the purpose of exposing and combating the deterioration of traditional principles of American democracy set forth in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. It has carried on its activities in the face of unscrupulous attacks from those who do not understand or do not agree with the precepts of a democratic society. A committee of the Congress of the United States is reported to be exploring the charges leveled against the Fund for the Republic in order to determine whether they have any valid foundation. The congressional committee either projects or has scheduled hearings which will investigate various phases of the Fund's operations: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the National Agricultural Workers Union warmly commends the Fund for the Republic for its activities in providing information and explanation essential for an adequate understanding of American democracy and its underlying principles; further be it

Resolved, That this organization believes that a fair investigation can disclose only that the charges leveled against the Fund for the Republic are without foundation and that the Fund is in the forefront for the preservation of the democratic American way of life.

REORGANIZATION OF SAFETY FUNCTIONS OF THE GOVERNMENT

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. President, from the Committee on Government Operations, and on behalf of the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. HUMPHREY], the chairman of the subcommittee which processed the bill, I report favorably, with an amendment, the bill (S. 3517) to provide for the reorganization of the safety functions of the Federal Government, and for other purposes, and I submit a report (No. 2788) thereon.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report will be received, and the bill will be placed on the calendar.

CONSTRUCTION OF CERTAIN PUBLIC WORKS ON RIVERS AND HARBORS FOR NAVIGATION AND FLOOD CONTROL (S. REPT. NO. 2784)

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, from the Committee on Public Works, I report favorably, with amendments, the bill (H. R. 12080) authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors for navigation, flood control, and for other purposes. I ask unanimous consent that the report may be printed, together with the individual views of the members of the committee.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. KNOWLAND. What was the request?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The request was that the individual views of the members of the committee be printed, along with the report.

Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

CONSTRUCTION AT CERTAIN MILITARY INSTALLATIONS (S. REPT. NO. 2775)

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, from the Committee on Armed Services, I report favorably, with amendments, the bill (H. R. 12270) to authorize certain construction at military installations, and for other purposes.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, the Senator from Mississippi was the chairman of the subcommittee which did the work and held the hearings on the bill. I ask unanimous consent that he may report the bill under the order heretofore entered, in his name.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the report will be received, and the bill will be placed on the calendar.

REPORT ENTITLED "PACIFIC COAST AND ALASKA FISHERIES" (S. REPT. NO. 2801)

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, pursuant to Senate Resolution 13 and Senate Resolution 163, 84th Congress, I submit a report entitled "Pacific Coast and Alaska Fisheries." I ask that the report be printed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report will be received and printed, as requested by the Senator from Washington.

REPORT ENTITLED "TRANSPORTATION PROBLEMS OF ALASKA AND THE PACIFIC COAST STATES" (S. REPT. NO. 2802)

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, pursuant to Senate Resolution 13 and Senate Resolution 163, of the 84th Congress, I submit a report entitled "Transportation Problems of Alaska and the Pacific Coast States." I ask unanimous consent that the report may be printed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report will be received and printed, as requested by the Senator from Washington.

REPORT OF JOINT COMMITTEE ON REDUCTION OF NONESSENTIAL FEDERAL EXPENDITURES ENTITLED "UNEXPENDED BALANCES, DOMESTIC-CIVILIAN AGENCIES" (S. REPT. NO. 2803)

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, pursuant to section 601 of the Revenue Act of 1941 (55 Stat. 726), as chairman of the Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures, I submit a report entitled "Unexpended Balances, Domestic-Civilian Agencies," which I ask to have printed as a Senate report.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report will be received and printed, as requested by the Senator from Virginia.

DISPOSAL OF CERTAIN PARCEL OF LAND AT FORT BELVOIR ACCOTINK DAM SITE MILITARY RESERVATION (S. REPT. NO. 2793)

Mr. RUSSELL, from the Committee on Armed Services, reported an original bill (S. 4284) to authorize the Secretary of the Army to dispose of a certain parcel of land, a part of Fort Belvoir Accotink Dam site military reservation, which was read twice by its title, and placed on the calendar.

REPORT ENTITLED "DEFENSE ESSENTIALITY AND FOREIGN ECONOMIC POLICY" BY JOINT ECONOMIC COMMITTEE—ADDITIONAL VIEWS (PT. 2 OF S. REPT. NO. 2629)

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, I submit the additional views of myself and Representatives WOLCOTT and CURTIS of Missouri, as members of the Joint Economic Committee, on the report of that committee entitled "Defense Essentiality and Foreign Economic Policy—Case Study: Watch Industry and Precision Skills." I ask unanimous consent that the additional views may be printed as part 2 of Senate Report No. 2629.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the additional views will be printed, as requested by the Senator from Arizona.

DISTINCTION BY FOREIGN NATIONS AGAINST UNITED STATES CITIZENS BECAUSE OF INDIVIDUAL RELIGIOUS AFFILIATIONS (S. REPT. NO. 2790)

Mr. GEORGE, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, reported an original resolution (S. Res. 323) opposing distinction by foreign nations against United States citizens because of individual religious affiliations, which was placed on the calendar, as follows:

Whereas the protection of the integrity of United States citizenship and of the proper rights of United States citizens in their pursuit of lawful trade, travel, and other activities abroad is a principle of United States sovereignty; and

Whereas it is a primary principle of our Nation that there shall be no distinction among United States citizens based on their individual religious affiliations and since any attempt by foreign nations to create such distinctions among our citizens in the granting of personal or commercial access or any other rights otherwise available to United States citizens generally is inconsistent with our principles: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate that it regards any such distinctions directed against United States citizens as incompatible with the relations that should exist among friendly nations, and that in all negotiations between the United States and any foreign state every reasonable effort should be made to maintain this principle.

REPORT ON DISPOSITION OF EXECUTIVE PAPERS

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina, from the Joint Select Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers, to which was referred for examination and recommendation a list of records transmitted to the Senate by the Archivist of the United States that appeared to have no permanent value or historical interest, submitted a report thereon, pursuant to law.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

FAITH IN THE WORD OF GOD AND RENEWED OBSERVANCE OF THE 10 COMMANDMENTS

Mr. BRIDGES (for himself and Mr. CLEMENTS) submitted the following concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 88), which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

Whereas the world today is divided by conflicting ideologies which cause people to live in constant fear of annihilation or enslavement, and

Whereas the basic principles of man's ethical conduct towards his fellow man have cast aside throughout so much of the world today, and

Whereas a return to the precepts as expressed in the 10 Commandments never was more vital to our survival and continued civilization than today; and

We believe, the 10 Commandments, as the primary moral force behind the 3 great religions of today—Christianity, Judaism and Islam—should be reaffirmed as the ethical code governing the lives of men, and are the means of bringing about lasting world peace and a solution to the many problems of mankind: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That we hereby proclaim our faith in the word of God and thereby perpetuate renewed observance throughout the world, by nations and by individuals, of the 10 Commandments.

AMENDMENT OF FEDERAL POWER ACT, RELATING TO DEVELOPMENT OF WATER RESOURCES

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, on behalf of myself, my colleague, the junior Senator from Washington [Mr. JACKSON], the Senators from Oregon [Mr. MORSE and Mr. NEUBERGER], and the Senators from Montana [Mr. MURRAY and Mr. MANSFIELD], I introduce, for appropriate reference, a bill to amend the Federal Power Act to define "comprehensive plan" and to provide for multiple-purpose development of water resources for optimum public benefit.

Mr. President, the necessity for this amendment has been made all too clear by the action of the Federal Power Commission in licensing the low-dam plan for development of the Hells Canyon reach of the Snake River, and by the failure of this body last week to pass legislation authorizing a high Hells Canyon Dam. The Senate action, I might add, appears to have been based to a large extent on the acceptance by many Senators of the FPC conclusion that the low-dam plan is best adapted to a comprehensive plan.

Mr. President, the FPC decision was a political decision not justified by the facts. The FPC obviously ignored the meaning of comprehensive plan, as it has evolved over the past 50 years, and misapplied the statute in the Hells Canyon case. The FPC has disregarded the law. This amendment should prevent recurrence of any such disregard for the law.

The proposed amendment, Mr. President. will define "comprehensive plan" under section 10 (a) of the Federal Power Act. The definition identifies and relates six attributes of "comprehensive plan" applicable to water resources development. These are:

One. Geographic scope—"a river basin and its watershed."

Two. Scope of development—"optimum public benefit."

Three. Multiple purpose test—"for all beneficial public uses."

Four. Long range test—"during the economic service life."

Five. Flexibility test—"no projects shall result in a unnecessary limitation upon the multiple purpose use."

Six. Concern with not only "existing and proposed projects" but also "other possible projects."

Mr. President, I do not suggest that the language of this bill necessarily is perfect. But I do believe it is a good starting point for some serious thought about defining "comprehensive plan" in such a way that the FPC may never again twist the meaning of the statute.

I am introducing this amendment now for the purpose of full study and discussion between sessions. As chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce I intend to schedule hearings early in the next session on this subject.

Mr. President, the number of sites available in the Pacific Northwest and other regions for multiple-purpose development is limited. We cannot waste a single one.

I am not ready to concede that the Hells Canyon site is yet lost for really comprehensive development. For one reason, the case is still in the courts.

But the fight for comprehensive development, first enunciated by President Theodore Roosevelt more than 50 years ago, will not end with the fight for a high Hells Canyon Dam. Mr. President, this amendment is an integral part of the fight for comprehensive river development.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be received and appropriately referred.

The bill (S. 4278) to amend the Federal Power Act to define "comprehensive plan" and to provide for multiple-purpose development of water resources for optimum public benefit, introduced by Mr. MAGNUSON (for himself and other Senators), was received, read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Works.

WELFARE OF INDIAN CITIZENS OF MINNESOTA

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. Mr. President, the House Subcommittee on Indian Affairs of the House Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs held hearings on June 18, 1956, on H. R. 10909, the companion bill to S. 3786. I introduced this bill on May 7, 1956, to promote the welfare of the American Indian citizens of Minnesota, and to establish the Minnesota Indian Administration, and for other purposes.

A great deal of expert testimony was presented at the House hearings. Indians themselves came from Minnesota to testify. As a result of these hearings certain changes in this bill seemed appropriate, and I introduce, for appropriate reference, a revised version of the measure. I ask unanimous consent that the bill be printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be received and appropriately referred; and, without objection, the bill will be printed in the RECORD.

The bill (S. 4281) to promote the welfare of the American Indian citizens of Minnesota, and to establish the Minnesota Indian Administration, and for other purposes, introduced by Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota, was received, read twice by its title, referred to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, for the purpose of promoting and advancing the welfare and economic situation of the Indians in the State of Minnesota, there is hereby established the Minnesota Indian Administration, hereinafter referred to as the "Administration." The Administration shall be subject to the general direction of the President of the United States, or the head of such agency as he may designate as his representative.

SEC. 2. The Administration shall have its principal office in the State of Minnesota, and it may establish branch or other offices in the District of Columbia or in the State of Minnesota in such places as it may deem necessary in the conduct of its business.

SEC. 3. The Administration is authorized to engage in the following activities when it finds that such activities will further the purposes of this act:

(a) To promote and engage in land-use planning, to the end that the lands owned by the Indians shall be put to the most beneficial use.

(b) To investigate and conduct research and experimentation in the production, distribution, and marketing of any products of Indian lands and waters, and of any articles and materials, including handicrafts, which are or may be produced by Indian labor.

(c) To promote, sponsor, or engage in a plan or program of tree planting and reforestation on Indian lands, whether tribal or allotted, in order that a future supply of timber may be harvested on the principle of sustained-yield management.

(d) To make loans to any Indian, band, tribe, or community for the establishment, construction, reconstruction, repair, enlargement, improvement, or operation of any industrial, commercial, agricultural, or related enterprise in the State of Minnesota. All such loans shall be secured as reasonably to assure repayment, full consideration being given to the intent of the Congress that the lending powers of the Administration shall be used for the purpose of improving the general welfare of the Indians of Minnesota, with special reference to their economic and social condition. It shall be the policy of the Administration to charge interest on loans at a rate reasonably expected to cover the current interest cost of funds to the United States, but in no event to exceed 3 percent per annum.

(e) To establish, maintain, operate, and engage in, upon, and for its own account, any enterprise, business, or activity for the development of the industrial, commercial, mineral, agricultural, fishery, forest, or other resources of the Indians in Minnesota.

(f) To encourage and enlist the investment of private capital in commercial, industrial, agricultural, and other enterprises or undertakings for the purpose of insuring the maximum development of Indian resources.

(g) To make grants-in-aid or loans, or both, in its discretion, for the construction and maintenance of roads and trails across or on Indian lands, when such roads or trails cannot be built from other funds.

(h) To make grants-in-aid or loans, or both, in its discretion, for either individual Indians or to tribes, bands, or communities for the maintenance, repair, and construction of homes and appurtenant buildings, including the acquisition of lands by purchase, exchange, gift, or otherwise.

(i) To establish a program of financial aid to students in vocational schools, business schools, colleges, art, and other professional schools, by granting scholarships either directly to specially selected students or by grants to institutions: Provided, That not more than $100,000 shall be spent in any one year for this purpose.

(j) To promote, establish, and operate social, recreational, or community centers, within or without Indian reservations, including facilities which would permit and encourage programs of education for adult Indians in language training and improvement in community customs and living standards.

SEC. 4. The Aministration shall have and may exercise the following general powers:

(a) To have succession for 20 years from the date of the approval of this act or until a later date if authorized by act of Congress.

(b) To sue and be sued.

(c) To acquire any property, real, personal, or mixed, to hold, use and operate the same, and to lease, sell, or otherwise dispose of such property whenever any of such transactions are deemed appropriate or necessary to the conduct of the activities authorized by this act.

(d) To enter into and perform such cooperative agreements, leases, contracts, or other transactions with any agency or instrumentality of the United States, or with the State of Minnesota or any political subdivision thereof, or with any institution, corporation, association, or person; as may be deemed necessary or appropriate to the conduct of the activities authorized by this act.

(e) To appoint or employ, without regard to the provisions of the civil-service laws, such persons, including attorneys, as may be necessary for the conduct of the business of the Administration: Provided, That preference shall be given first to qualified Indian residents, and second, to other qualified residents of Minnesota. If the Administration requires bonds from any of its officers or employees, the premiums therefor shall be paid by the Administration. In the appointment and promotion of employees no political test shall be permitted or given consideration, but all such appointments and promotions shall be made on the basis of merit and efficiency.

(f) To use the United States mails in the same manner and under the same conditions as the executive departments of the Federal Government.

(g) To settle and adjust claims held by it against other persons or parties, and by other persons or parties against the Administration.

(h) To request and accept gifts, or donations of services, money, or property, real, personal, or mixed, tangible or intangible, including any property which may be declared surplus by the Bureau of Indian Affairs, or by any other Federal agency, in aid of any of the activities authorized by this act.

SEC. 5. (a) The Administration is authorized to obtain money from the Treasury of the United States, for use in the performance of its duties and functions, not to exceed a total of $10 million outstanding at any one time. For this purpose appropriations not to exceed the sum of $10 million are hereby authorized to be made to a revolving fund in the Treasury. Advances shall be made to the revolving fund when requested by the Administration.

(b) As the Administration repays the advances received from the Treasury, the repayments shall be made to the revolving fund: Provided, however, That interest received by the Administration shall be paid into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

SEC. 6. (a) The management of the Administration shall be vested in a board of directors of 5 members, 1 of whom shall be chosen by the tribal executive committee of the Minnesota Chippewa Tribe; one by the Red Lake Band; one by the Governor of Minnesota; one by the Secretary of the Interior; and these four by majority vote shall select a fifth director who shall be a resident of the State of Minnesota. The directors to represent the tribe and the band may be, but need not be, Indians of each group, respectively.

(b) The directors appointed by the Governor and the Secretary of the Interior shall hold office at the pleasure of the appointing officer. The Indian directors shall serve for such term, not less than 2 years or more than 5, as may be fixed in each case by the tribal executive committee of the Minnesota Chippewa Tribe or by the Red Lake Band. The fifth member of the board shall serve for 5 years. Any member of the board shall be eligible for reappointment and shall serve until a successor is selected and sworn in.

(c) If, within 6 months after approval of this act, the Indians shall not have designated directors to represent them, as provided in paragraph (a) above, the Secretary of the Interior shall designate the President of the Minnesota Chippewa Tribe and the Chairman of the Red Lake Tribal Council to serve as directors interim, until regular directors shall have been selected. During their tenure the interim directors shall have all the powers and duties of regularly selected directors.

(d) The board shall elect its own chairman. Appointees to the board may be persons regularly employed by the United States, the State of Minnesota, or any political subdivision or agency thereof.

(e) Directors shall receive no salary for their services on the board, but they shall be allowed and paid reasonable per diem fees, not to exceed $50 per diem, and allowance in lieu of subsistence expense, and their necessary travel expenses, for attendance at meetings of the board and when engaged in official service of the Administration. Such schedule of fees and allowances shall be fixed by the board, with the approval of the President or his designated representative. The board shall hold regular meetings at least quarterly, and may meet at other times at the call of the chairman or at the written request of any two directors.

SEC. 7. (a) Title to the lands and interests in lands, together with the improvements thereon, which were acquired by the United States under authority of title II of the National Industrial Recovery Act of June 16, 1933 (48 Stat. 200), and subsequent acts, lying within the White Earth Indian Reservation, Minn., administrative jurisdiction over which has heretofore been transferred from the Secretary of Agriculture to the Secretary of the Interior is hereby declared to be held in trust by the United States for the use and benefit of the Minnesota Chippewa Tribe, Minnesota, and such lands shall constitute an addition to the White Earth Indian Reservation.

(b) Any rents previously collected for the use of the lands referred to in the first paragraph of this section are hereby declared to be held in trust by the United States for the use and benefit of the Minnesota Chippewa Tribe, Minnesota.

SEC. 8. (a) No program, plan, or project shall be carried out by the Administration on Indian lands except at the request of, or with the consent of, the Indian band, group, or individual owner.

(b) Nothing in this act shall be construed to change or amend the existing rights and powers of the Minnesota Indian Tribe, the Red Lake Band of Chippewas, or any other recognized Indian group in Minnesota, or any individual members thereof.

SEC. 9. This act may be cited as the "Minnesota Indian Act of 1956."

STUDY OF REHABILITATION OF NARCOTIC ADDICTS

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, the Congress, in recent weeks, enacted legislation increasing the police powers of Government agencies in connection with the apprehension and punishment of those engaged in, or victims of, the traffic of narcotics. The main emphasis in this legislation is to invoke more severe punishment.

No effective consideration has been given to the question of the rehabilitation of narcotic addicts in the United States. I pointed out and described this tragic failure in several speeches on the floor of the Senate and elsewhere. Unfortunately, little heed was given to my warning.

I submit, for appropriate reference, a resolution authorizing the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare to conduct a full and complete study on rehabilitation of narcotic addicts and to report its findings to the Senate.

I realize, of course, that no action will be taken on this resolution at this session of Congress. I am submitting the resolution, however, so that careful consideration may be given to it before the 85th Congress convenes next January. I hope at that time appropriate legislation dealing with this important subject may be introduced and enacted.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be received and appropriately referred.

The resolution (S. Res. 322) to make a study of the rehabilitation of narcotic addicts in the United States, submitted by Mr. LEHMAN, was received and referred to the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized and directed to conduct a full and complete study of the rehabilitation of narcotic addicts in the United States. In the conduct of such investigation, special attention shall be given to (1) determining the nature and extent of the facilities and services available and needed for the successful rehabilitation of narcotic addicts; (2) the adequacy of existing laws providing for the treatment of youthful and juvenile addicts; (3) the extent and effectiveness of the cooperation and coordination of the various departments and agencies of the Federal Government both among themselves and with the various State and local agencies concerned with the rehabilitation of drug addicts; and (4) the efficacy of the Nation's present approach to the rehabilitation of drug addicts with special emphasis upon youthful and juvenile addicts.

SEC. 2. The committee, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized to sit and act at such places and times during the sessions, recesses, and adjourned periods of the Senate, to hold such hearings, to require by subpenas or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, to administer such oaths, to take such testimony, to procure such printing and binding, and, within the amount appropriated therefor, to make such expenditures as it deems advisable. Subpenas shall be issued by the chairman of the committee or the subcommittee, and may be served by any person designated by such chairman.

SEC. 3. The committee shall report its findings, together with its recommendations for such legislation as it deems advisable to the Senate at the earliest date practicable but not later than January 31, 1957.

SEC. 4. For the purposes of this resolution, the committee, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized, to employ upon a temporary basis such technical, clerical, and other assistants as it deems advisable. The expenses of the committee under this resolution, which shall not exceed $50,000, shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers approved by the chairman of the committee.

REPORT OF BOARD OF VISITORS OF UNITED STATES MERCHANT MARINE ACADEMY

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. President, as chairman of the 13th Congressional Board of Visitors to the United States Merchant Marine Academy, Kings Point, N. Y., I submit the report of that Board, and ask unanimous consent that it may be printed in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The report is as follows:

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF VISITORS TO THE UNITED STATES MERCHANT MARINE ACADEMY, KINGS POINT, N. Y., MAY 11, 1956

The PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

The SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

GENTLEMEN: As a result of meetings held at the United States Merchant Marine Academy, Kings Point, N. Y., the members of the 1956 Board of Visitors, hereinafter noted, specifically recommend:

1. That a supplemental appropriation in the amount of approximately $860,000 be approved to permit the Academy to achieve a satisfactory level of operations on a permanent basis and embark upon a major repair and replacement program.

2. That steps be taken to restore the previous Naval Reserve status of midshipman to the students at Kings Point.

3. That the annual budget for Kings Point be established at a level to permit an entering class of 400.

4. That in view of the new permanent status of the United States Merchant Marine Academy the rehabilitation of the engineering and nautical science laboratories commence at the earliest possible moment.

5. That funds be approved to permit courses of instruction in nuclear engineering to be offered at the earliest practical moment.

6. That funds be provided for the construction of a separate and adequate library building.

7. That the Congress appropriate sufficient funds to complete the chapel fund drive in accord with the language of Public Law 485, 80th Congress, approved April 17, 1948, and as recommended by previous Boards of Visitors.

Pursuant to Public Law 301, 78th Congress, approved May 11, 1944, the following Senators and Members of the House of Representatives were designated to constitute the 1956 Board of Visitors to the United States Merchant Marine Academy:

By the President of the Senate:

Senator CLIFFORD P. CASE, Republican, of New Jersey.

By the chairman, Senate Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce:

Senator SAM J. ERVIN, JR., Democrat, of North Carolina.

Senator FREDERICK G. PAYNE, Republican, of Maine.

By the Speaker of the House of Representatives:

Congressman FRANK J. BECKER, Republican, of New York.

Congressman EUGENE J. KEOGH, Democrat, of New York.

By the chairman, House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries:

Congressman JOHN J. ALLEN, JR., Republican, of California.

Congressman IRWIN D. DAVIDSON, Democrat, of New York.

Congressman JOHN C. KLUCZYNSKI, Democrat, of Illinois.

Ex-officio members:

Senator WARREN G. MAGNUSON, Democrat, of Washington (chairman, Senate Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.)

Congressman HERBERT C. BONNER, Democrat, of North Carolina (chairman, House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.)

The meetings of the 13th congressional Board of Visitors to the United States Merchant Marine Academy were held on Friday, May 11, 1956.

The following members of the Board were present: Senator FREDERICK G. PAYNE, of Maine; Congressman JOHN J. ALLEN, Jr., of California; Congressman IRWIN D. DAVIDSON, of New York; Congressman EUGENE J. KEOGH, of New York; and Congressman JOHN C. KLUCZYNSKI, of Illinois. Congressman JAMES T. PATTERSON of Connecticut attended the meetings at the invitation of the Board, and was of great assistance in its deliberations, being a member of the Armed Services Committee and the Joint Atomic Energy Committee.

The Board convened at Wiley Hall, Kings Point, at 10 a. m., May 11, 1956. The Board elected Senator PAYNE to serve as permanent chairman and confirmed the appointments of Comdr. Clifford William Sandberg and Lt. (jg) John A. Walsh, and Ens. John Kiszenik as Secretary and Assistant Secretaries respectively.

During the first meeting the Superintendent, Adm. Gordon McLintock, and his staff discussed the present status of the Academy and provided such information as the Board requested. At the conclusion of the first meeting the Board was invited to lunch with the regiment by Regimental Comdr. Lee A. Farber, of Utah. Senator PAYNE addressed the regiment on behalf of the Board.

After lunch the Board members met with cadet-midshipmen from their districts and States. These discussions were followed by the second meeting of the Board and the executive session. At the conclusion of the executive session the Board toured the grounds and facilities. Following the tour of the grounds Senator PAYNE served as reviewing officer for the regimental parade on Tomb Memorial Field.

GENERAL COMMENTS

Part I

Needs to Achieve a Satisfactory Permanent Condition for Kings Point

The Board recognizes the fact that the academy has certain basic needs which must be fulfilled if it is to achieve a satisfactory permanent status. The signing of Public Law 415 by the President on February 20, 1956, established the United States Merchant Marine Academy as a permanent Federal service academy. The Board wishes to emphasize that with the signing of this bill the status of the academy underwent an appreciable change in status and responsibilities. The Board noted that Public Law 415 requires that the Government assume uniform and textbook expenses to a degree greater than existed prior to the passage of Public Law 415. The additional funds needed amount to approximately $244,400. The Government also must assume certain new travel expenses for cadet-midshipmen traveling under orders. These expenses are of a recurrent nature and the Board presumes that the necessary funds will be appropriated for these purposes.

In its new status as a permanent Federal service academy the Board recognizes that certain nonrecurrent needs are proper and necessary. As pointed out by the superintendent the question of major repairs at the academy has long been a critical one. This nonrecurrent expense is approximately $291,080 over the $33,900 earmarked in the budget for this purpose. The Board is in sympathy with this request and urges that this amount be appropriated to permit a start to clear up the backlog of major repairs and institute a program of equipment replacement.

In order to achieve a satisfactory permanent status for the academy the Board urges that all present vacancies, which will require $46,000, should be filled and the academy complement be brought up to full strength as soon as possible.

The Board noted with interest the dean's advice that in order for the academic departments to operate adequately during fiscal 1957 an additional $125,000 is required for additional personnel services, library improvements, preparation for instituting a nuclear engineering program, and to defray the costs of a long-range planning survey. The request for these funds in the Board's opinion seems a proper one and accordingly the Board sanctions this request for additional funds.

The Board noted that steps have been taken to request funds for operational improvements such as the reorganization of the property accounting and administrative services, the installation of an automatic system to facilitate recordkeeping, aptitude estimates, conduct grades, and equipment and supply inventories. The funds requested amount to approximately $150,000.

These requests for supplemental funds total approximately $360,000 of which some $247,000 represents new expenses stemming from Public Law 415; $211,000 represents recurring expenditures stemming from additional personnel required to carry on the mission of the Academy; and approximately $401,080 which is nonrecurring expenditure for necessary major repairs, replacements, operational improvements, and so forth.

In order to further the achievement of a satisfactory permanent condition the Board recommends that immediate steps be taken to bring the engineering and nautical science laboratories to a more up-to-date condition by providing the necessary funds for the installation of the requisite engineering and electronic equipment. The Board notes with satisfaction that many requested items for these laboratories are available from other Government sources and that the primary needs of the Academy are for funds to pay the cost of installation. The Board urges that the development of the nuclear engineering program be given a higher priority and that funds be provided to permit the offering of this course at the earliest moment.

The Board was pleased to learn that the effect of permanent status has been salutary with respect to the number of applications for admission received for the class of 1960 which enters the Academy in August 1956. The greater number of applications received is undoubtedly the result of the removal of the uncertainty which has existed so long concerning existence of the Academy. It would seem that an entering class of 400 students would represent a more logical size for an entering class based upon the needs of the industry, as supported by the recent investigation of Maritime Training conducted by the Special Subcommittee on Maritime Training of the Senate Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and the important reserve of competent officers represented by the graduates of this Academy.

The Board was impressed with the magnitude of the funds already raised for the construction of the chapel. This private subscription is in the order of $325,000 and plans are well underway to renew the fund raising drive in view of the newly achieved permanency of the Academy. It is now estimated that a minimum total of $600,000 will be necessary to build the Merchant Marine Memorial Chapel. The Board learned with interest that funds in the amount of approximately $175,000 are held in escrow by the Maritime Administration as a result of certain profits from ship's service activities during World War II. The Board strongly urges that means be found to release these funds and transfer them to the Chapel Fund.

The Board believes that the library is unsatisfactory from the point of view of the space available for this activity. It is clear that a library building is necessary for the library to develop in accordance with the needs of the Academy and recognized college library standards and to this end the Board recommends that early steps be taken to provide the necessary library facilities. The Board renews its previous request that the library be constituted a designated depository of Government publications.

Part II

Needs To Improve Condition and Status of Students and Graduates

The Board learned with concern that the Naval Reserve status of the students at Kings Point was changed from that of midshipman, United States Naval Reserve, to that of officer candidate, United States Naval Reserve. The significant difference appears to rest with the fact that under the new classification the graduate of Kings Point is liable to be drafted as a private in the Army or an apprentice seaman in the Navy. In view of the commission received by each graduate at Kings Point as ensign, United States Naval Reserve, this strikes the Board as a situation where a deplorable and expensive waste of highly skilled manpower is involved. The Board wishes to stress the fact that the graduate of Kings Point is a competent Naval Reserve officer whose major study at the Academy is to qualify him as a superior merchant marine deck or engineer officer. This is quite different from the standard NROTC graduate whose major field of activity is seldom associated with maritime affairs and probably never is directed toward making him a deck or engineer officer aboard ship.

In addition, the interdependence of the Navy and the merchant marine is well understood; the merchant marine is regarded by all as the fourth arm of national defense. In view of the unique situation facing the graduate of Kings Point and the State maritime colleges the Board strongly urges that the midshipmen status of the students of these institutions be restored at the earliest moment in such a way that the interests of individual and the Government are protected. The Board recognizes that the graduates of these institutions have certain service obligations; the Board requests that the final resolution of these problems associated with the change in the Naval Reserve status be accomplished in such a manner as to encourage and foster the desire of the graduates for assignment aboard American vessels, both merchant and naval.

The Board commends the Maritime Administration for its program of education and training at its Academy, The United States Merchant Marine Academy; and specifically commends the superintendent, Rear Adm., Gordon McLintock, and his staff for the efficient manner in which the program is being carried forward.

The Board offers its sincere thanks to its secretaries, Comdr. Clifford W. Sandberg, Lt. (jg.) John A. Walsh, and Ens. John Kiszenik for their assistance.

ADDRESSES, EDITORIALS, ARTICLES, ETC., PRINTED IN THE RECORD

On request, and by unanimous consent, addresses, editorials, articles, etc., were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

By Mr. MAGNUSON:

Statement by him in tribute to the motion-picture industry and the motion picture Away All Boats.

By Mr. KEFAUVER:

Statement prepared by him in connection with the vote on the bill, S. 1333, to authorize the construction, operation, and maintenance of the Hells Canyon Dam on the Snake River between Idaho and Oregon, and for related purposes.

By Mr. NEUBERGER:

Statement proposed by him on live musical programs of the National Broadcasting Co.

By Mr. BYRD:

Addresses delivered by him, by Counsellor Ronald W. Bailey, of the British Embassy, and by John Marshall Dinwiddie, at Portsmouth, Va., on July 6, 1956, at ceremonies honoring Robert Dinwiddie.

TRANSPORTATION OF CHILDREN FOR ADOPTION

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to file a report from the Committee on the Judiciary on Senate bill 3021.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, has this question been taken up with the majority leader and the minority leadership? What is the bill?

Mr. KEFAUVER. It is a bill to make illegal the transportation of children for adoption from one State to another.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, the chairman of the committee—and the same is true of the chairman of all standing committees—has authority to file reports from the committee during the remainder of the session. However, I believe an exception was made with respect to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, the request has been made. While it is being checked by the majority leader and the minority leader, I withhold the request. I shall renew it later.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. I thank the Senator from Tennessee. As soon as the minority leader can check with his members, in accordance with the procedure we have established throughout the session, I will notify the Senator from Tennessee and the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. EASTLAND].

Mr. NEUBERGER. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. NEUBERGER. I have a brief address, which will occupy 8 or 10 minutes, on a disturbing situation in the Northwest with respect to Indian tribes. Is it in order at this time to make that speech?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will lay the unfinished business before the Senate, and the Senator from Oregon will be recognized. The Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which is Senate bill 3911.

SAFEGUARDS AGAINST MERGERS AND CONSOLIDATION OF BANKS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 3911) to amend the Federal Deposit Insurance Act to provide safeguards against mergers and consolidation of banks which might lessen competition unduly or tend unduly to create a monopoly in the field of banking.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Oregon is recognized.

ACTIVITIES OF THE SWISS WATCH CARTEL

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NEUBERGER. I yield.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the body of the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks a statement which I have prepared relative to the activities of the Swiss watch cartel.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY UNITED STATES SENATOR BRIDGES, RELATIVE TO ACTIVITIES OF THE SWISS WATCH CARTEL

Until recently the Nation seemed to be of one mind in supporting the defense mobilization policy expressed in the Defense Production Act, extended by Congress each year since 1950. To have the capacity to resist aggression and further the cause of peace, our Nation required a mobilization effort which included the expansion of defense production and the creation of new capacity beyond the levels needed for peacetime civilian demand. Only in this way could we hope to reduce the time required for full mobilization in the event of an attack on the United States.

Last year, alarmed by the threats of injury to our mobilization base, the Congress provided a new procedure designed to insure that our national security would not be impaired by excessive imports of critical items. Such a procedure was made necessary by the deep inroads which repeated tariff reductions made under the Trade Agreements program have had on the capacity of some essential industries to compete with low-cost foreign products in the United States market.

The Congress decided that if the security of the American people called for the annual expenditure of billions of dollars to create and sustain our defense essential productive capacity and skills for use in an emergency, it was also important to protect that critical capacity from erosion and injury from the increased quantities of imports ushered into the United States under the forced draft of the tariff reductions which have been made under the Trade Agreements program.

Now, one of the chief beneficiaries of American generosity under the Trade Agreements program is using a portion of the profits which that lucrative trade generates to attack this Nation's defense mobilization policy—and the maintenance of a broad mobilization base to safeguard the security of our people from aggression.

I refer to testimony recently given by a sincere and patriotic American industrialist, Mr. Arthur B. Sinkler, president of the American Watch Manufacturers Association, to a committee of Congress. Mr. Sinkler told the Subcommittee on Foreign Economic Policy of the Joint Economic Committee that the Swiss watch cartel was using the very wealth created by the Swiss Trade Agreement to propagandize the United States. He explained that the Swiss cartel makes a 12½-cent levy on each of the 25 million jeweled watches exported annually by the Swiss. This is added to the price paid by the consumer. It is a brazenly called a propaganda tax by the Swiss cartel. The cartel has directed that this fund of $2 million or more per year be used in a very special effort to influence American opinion.

The obvious inequality involved in the marshaling of this multi-million-dollar propaganda fund by the cartel for use in the United States against our 4 remaining domestic watch companies, offends one's sense of fair play. But there is something much more disturbing about the Swiss propaganda campaign.

I am appalled to learn that these propaganda funds have been turned to a systematic attack on our basic national policy for the creation and protection of an industrial mobilization base.

The Swiss watch trust in its unceasing efforts to destroy the domestic jeweled watch industry is now using a large part of its propaganda war chest in an outright attempt to undermine our basic national policy of safeguarding industries essential to national defense from destruction or impairment from import competition. This national policy was made unmistakably clear in section 7 of the Trade Agreements Extension Act of 1955.

Bear in mind that for the past 6 years Congress has repeatedly extended the Defense Production Act, and its watchdog committee, the Joint Committee on Defense Production, has continually reviewed the manner in which the Office of Defense Mobilization has gone about planning our defense mobilization resources. Against this background, agents of the Swiss cartel have lately been launched in a full-scale effort to destroy our mobilization base concept.

The efforts of this well-financed foreign cartel, operating from the sanctuary of a neutral country, to subvert an entire United States national policy of this importance, surely merits the attention of every American. The attention of the American people is equally appropriate not only because of the importance of this policy to their personal security but also because a major portion of the funds in the Swiss propaganda campaign is financed by every American consumer who buys a Swiss watch.

As soon as it became known last winter that the Government intended to examine the possible need of the domestic jeweled-watch industry for additional assistance to correct the unhealthy conditions stemming from the overwhelming Swiss dominance of the United States market, the propaganda efforts to destroy the basis for any future relief to this essential industry commenced.

The Swiss watch cartel is, of course, indifferent to what is or is not essential to the American national defense. The Swiss watch cartel is expending its millions of dollars in propaganda money in the United States and other parts of the world to fight anything which might affect its own interests.

This commercial conflict between a highly regimented Swiss watch industry which controls over 95 percent of the world trade in watches, and our relatively small domestic industry which enjoys less than a quarter of the American market has now swirled over into an area which is vital to the security of every American.

The agents in this country, who report directly to Swiss watch cartel headquarters in Bienne, Switzerland, for orders are reported to be carrying on a campaign to discredit the defense essentiality of the American watch-manufacturing industry—despite the fact that this industry has been declared essential to America's national defense by the old National Security Resources Board under President Truman, the Office of Defense Mobilization under President Eisenhower, with the concurrence of the Departments of Defense, Commerce, Treasury, Labor, and State, under both administrations, by the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee of the Senate Armed Services Committee, by Secretary of Defense Wilson, Secretary of State Dulles, and by President Eisenhower himself.

The Swiss through their many propaganda agents began in December 1955 to urge the Office of Defense Mobilization to abandon its patiently forged mobilization policies in favor of looser views which would not call for the protection of industrial capacity and production workers in existing industries whose products are essential to the support of military and critical civilian activities in time of emergency. This dangerous doctrine they blandly stated as follows: "Government policies concerning strengthening the mobilization base should be refocused away from protecting production workers and toward methods of preventing bottlenecks from developing in engineering and tool design talents."

The propaganda organs of the cartel have taken up this line. A subcommittee of the Joint Economic Committee of the Congress hurriedly called a 4-day hearing in June to hear hand-picked witnesses develop the theme that (1) our mobilization planning—despite the continuing study of both ODM and our own congressional watchdog committee—is obsolete because it emphasizes concepts which lead logically to the necessity for preserving industrial capacity and production skills essential to national security from destruction by imports (or any other cause), and (2) the classical free-trader's theoretical concept of international alliances of imperishable friends is the only approach to the security of Americans.

The objective of these maneuvers by the Swiss propagandists is clear enough for those who will look. The possible need of the domestic watch industry for further relief to enable it to hold its domestic watchmaking personnel and operations together through access to much less than half of the United States market in order that essential mobilization needs for precision military timepieces and other microprecision subminiaturized components can be met by this industry is under investigation by the Office of Defense Mobilization. Obviously, the Swiss cartel seeks to create a climate of opinion in and out of Government which will embarrass the judgment and hamstring the freedom of action needed by ODM and the President in conforming to the congressional policy of preserving essential industries reflected in section 7 of the Trade Agreement Extension Act of 1955.

This is the same cartel which has been the subject of months of investigation by the Department of Justice—the same cartel which is now a defendant in an antitrust suit pending in the Federal courts of New York.

Thus far it would not appear that the dangerous propaganda of the Swiss cartel has had much effect on Government agencies or committees of Congress who have national security responsibilities. The threat of these continued efforts, however, lies in the fact that sooner or later this propaganda line could cause confusion or even injure the capacity of our Government to respond adequately to the needs of defense industries.

I do not believe that the American people are indifferent to these things. What the Swiss watch cartel wants is not necessarily what America wants. I am confident all Members of Congress believe that the strength of America's defenses must come before the desires and international objectives of any foreign trust.

THE ESSENTIALITY OF THE DOMESTIC JEWELED WATCH INDUSTRY

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NEUBERGER. I yield.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, it has come to my attention that a subcommittee of the Joint Economic Committee has prepared a report which touches on the essentiality of the domestic jeweled watch industry. I understand that the subcommittee failed to reach a unanimous conclusion on the matter.

Senators who are interested in the subject will undoubtedly recall that the Preparedness Subcommitteee of the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate, which I appointed examined this question just 2 years ago. The subcommittee reached the unanimous—and I may say, bipartisan—conclusion that the highly skilled workers in the American watch and clock industry, who require long years of training and experience, and their unique ability to develop and produce, within the shortest time possible, precision instruments to minute tolerances, are essential to the national defense. We found that it is in the interest of national defense to keep this essential industry alive and vital.

It is reassuring to me that the Congress in its wisdom provided last year in section 7 of the Trade Agreements Extension Act of 1955 a specific procedure which will insure that essential industries such as the watch industry are not weakened beyond their capacity to perform their vital defense role.

NEED FOR RESOLVING THE AIR NAVIGATION CONFLICT

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oregon yield to me again?

Mr. NEUBERGER. I yield.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the body of the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks a statement which I have prepared on the subject of the need for resolving the air navigation conflict by the adoption of Senate Concurrent Resolution 16.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR BRIDGES ON THE NEED FOR RESOLVING THE AIR NAVIGATION CONFLICT BY ADOPTING SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 16

The recent crash of two commercial planes in Arizona with such appalling loss of life tragically illustrates a dangerous situation in civil and military air operations which has deeply concerned me for some time.

Although the investigation of this crash is not yet complete, enough is already on record from highly competent authorities to show that the crash was due to a collision when both of these planes were off the existing civil airways, without information of their exact positions in the air.

The problem this crash illustrates so tragically is the confusion and controversy which still exists over the need for a common system of air navigation in the United States.

Let me give a brief description of the predicament in which we find ourselves at this time.

Back in 1947–47 a Joint Congressional Aviation Policy Board undertook an exhaustive study of what should be the aviation policies of the United States. One of its chief and most important findings was that the United States could not afford to have two air navigation systems, one for civilian aviation and one for the military. They reached this finding on grounds of expense, air safety, and relief of air congestion. The Board thereupon recommended that the Civil Aeronautics Administration should create and develop a common system of air navigation which would meet both the needs of civil and military aviation.

The end result was the development of what is known as the VOR/DME system which was fully agreed upon by all interests concerned, military and civilian. Although the installation of equipment needed to operate this system was costly, the Federal Government and non-Government interests invested heavily and made great progress toward bringing the system into being. It is recognized that the system works satisfactorily for civilian aviation, but apparently has not met the full needs of all military operations.

As a consequence, the military, secretly at first and lately more openly, began experimenting with a new system known as TACAN. It is not necessary for my present purposes to describe in detail the technical differences between the VOR/DME and the TACAN systems, except to say that they are in large part incompatible systems. That is to say, the use of TACAN would render the full use of VOR/DME impossible.

I may say that both VOR/DME and TACAN are based on the principle of providing information to the pilot to determine the exact location of an aircraft in terms of distance and direction with relation to a known ground point. As a result of the 1948 policy the VOR/DME equipments are part of the common system of air navigation. The common system at present employs electronic devices designed to control air traffic both on the airways and while taking off and landing at airports. It is called the common system because it is used in common by all users of the air space, just as in automobile movement over the Nation's highways we all agree to have one traffic control system governing all vehicles on the road.

The military development of TACAN obviously alarmed the civilian lines because it threatened the agreed operation of a common system of air navigation and also jeopardized the millions of dollars spent by both the Government and the civilian airlines for the installation of the VOR/DME system. Two incompatible systems of air navigation in the United States would not only compel costly duplications in equipment, but they would amount to a standing appointment with disaster for all air traffic.

The conflict came out into the open when civilian aviation became fully aware of what the military was developing in secret. In an effort to resolve the conflict the Air Navigation Development Board set up a special committee, VORTAC, to conduct a special investigation. The special committee came up with a divided report. Some of its members, chiefly the Army, Navy, and Air Force, favored the TACAN system, while most of civilian aviation favored the VOR/DME in which they had heavily invested in the good faith belief that that was to be the common short distance air navigation system.

The situation, therefore, in the early months of 1955 was that a basic conflict existed between rival air navigation systems which apparently could not be resolved by any Government or private body. The conflict indicated great waste of taxpayers' money as the military branched out on its own with TACAN after agreeing to a common system with civilian aviation. It threatened great delays to civilian airlines, which needed the complete VOR/DME system, particularly for the jet transports which are just over the horizon.

The civilian airlines have been reluctant, in view of this confusion, to make the heavy investments necessary to equip their fleets with DME. Finally, the conflict threatened to throw air navigation into confusion in such important matters as air safety and relief of growing air congestion.

At this point, the situation was brought to my attention. After careful study, I submitted Senate Concurrent Resolution 16 to the Senate on March 10, 1955, calling for a joint congressional committee to investigate the conflict and to recommend a policy to resolve the conflict. It was clear to me then that here was a very important technological conflict affecting heavy investments in money and threatening air safety and air congestion, which could not be resolved by Government or private aviation bodies without a clear mandate of policy by the whole Congress—just as Congress in 1948 had laid down the original policy of a common air navigation system.

My resolution was passed by the Senate on May 5 with some perfecting amendments and went to the House where on May 6 it was referred to the House Committee on Rules. There it was considered along with House Resolution 162, sponsored by Congressman HALE BOGGS, whose resolution was similar to mine with the exception that Mr. BOGGS called for a select committee rather than a joint committee.

As the two resolutions were being considered by the House Rules Committee on May 17, there was placed before the Committee House Report No. 592 made by the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce the day before, May 16. Briefly this report was grounded upon hearings which attempted to investigate the conflict in air navigation systems. The committee offered recommendations based upon an attempt of the Air Coordinating Committee to resolve the conflict. Although all these recommendations were made in sincerity and good faith, they do not resolve the conflict in air navigation systems. Caught up in the complexities of a complex and evolving technical development, they merely postpone the settlement of the issue—leaving all the confusion, expense, and the threat to air safety and air congestion to carry on for years to come.

Either misled by the belief that the Air Coordinating Committee had resolved the conflict, or discouraged perhaps by the hopelessness of ever doing anything about it, Congressman BOGGS withdrew his resolution. The House Rules Committee apparently reached similar conclusions because it took no further action on Senate Concurrent Resolution 16, which I sponsored and which the Senate passed.

Since that time, still another inquiry was made into the situation by the Subcommittee on Military Operations of the House Committee on Government Operations. The findings of this committee are contained in House Report No. 737 filed on June 8, 1955.

The subcommittee's first and most important recommendation is as follows:

"1. The subcommittee recommends that the Congress undertake at once an exhaustive investigation of the relative merits of TACAN and VOR/DME for use in a common system of air navigation which meets both civil and military requirements. This subcommittee endorses the proposal for such an investigation as contained in Senate Concurrent Resolution 16 [my resolution], and urgently recommends that the House of Representatives expedite concurring action on this resolution as amended by House Resolution 128, or action on House Concurrent Resolution 128."

The House subcommittee made several other very worthwhile recommendations, but the one quoted above is the heart of its action. This subcommittee has seen as clearly as I saw more than a year ago that great confusion and a serious conflict in air navigation systems exist and that nobody but the Congress itself is capable of resolving the situation.

The best proof of the way this situation has tied itself into knots lies in all these past investigations, which, for want of proper authority to enforce their recommendations, have ended in blind alleys.

We start with a common air navigation system laid down in 1947–48 by congressional authority. Then the military secretly commences to develop a system at a cost of over $325 million, which threatens to destroy the common system originally agreed upon. When confusion and conflict follow in natural course, everybody gets into the act, but no one has the authority to enforce its decisions or resolve the conflict.

The Air Navigation Development Board considered the matter. Its technical subcommittee VORTAC investigated. The Radio Technical Commission for Aeronautics investigated. Finally, the Air Coordinating Committee investigated the problem. The military did its own investigating and strictly on its own began developing a new system.

All of these bodies came up with recommendations which either revealed division within their own ranks, conflicted with recommendations made by others, or lacked sufficient authority to lay down a policy to resolve the conflict.

This was followed by consideration of the problem by at least 1 Senate committee and some 3 or 4 House committees which, at best, could offer recommendations on which no definite congressional action has been taken.

It is not clear that the one thing lacking in this web of confusion and indecision is an authoritative mandate that only a joint committee of Congress can issue and enforce? That is precisely what my resolution, Senate Concurrent Resolution 16, aims to bring about. That is why the House Government Operations Committee has strongly endorsed my resolution and urged its immediate passage by the House.

Every day we delay joint congressional action we permit deeper confusion, more waste of taxpayers' money for duplicate air navigation systems, and invite new disasters in air operations.

Since Congress last authoritatively set air policies in 1948, enormous technical advances have been made in aviation and in the electronics equipment for air navigation. Planes are larger, swifter, and far more numerous than in 1948. Air congestion is rushing upon us. Air safety has become more vital than ever. Disasters, such as we have recently witnessed in Arizona, may become the heavy price we may have to pay for failure to keep air navigation well defined and abreast of the times. We urgently need a new look at air navigation policies with an authority that only the whole Congress can impart.

The final days of the 84th Congress are here. It would be a misfortune we would deeply regret if the session closed without action on Senate Concurrent Resolution 16. The leadership of this Congress, of course, rests with our Democratic friends in both Houses. Republicans cannot put through legislation without their consent and cooperation. We can only urge action and plead for cooperation. In these circumstances, and when the important House Committee on Government Operations also urges the same action, I hope that the House Rules Committee will report out Senate Concurrent Resolution 16 and that the House will pass the resolution.

ILLEGAL PRACTICES IN CONNECTION WITH PLACING OF MINOR CHILDREN FOR PERMANENT FREE CARE OR FOR ADOPTION (S. REPT. NO. 2786)

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, on behalf of the Committee on the Judiciary, I ask unanimous consent to submit a report on the bill (S. 3021) to amend title 18, United States Code, to make unlawful certain practices in connection with the placing of minor children for permanent free care or for adoption. The proposal would prohibit so-called black marketing of babies for adoption.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FREAR in the chair). The report will be received and the bill will be placed on the calendar.

INTERIM REPORT, JUVENILE DELINQUENCY IN THE TERRITORY OF ALASKA (S. REPT. NO. 2774)

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to file an interim report of the subcommittee to investigate juvenile delinquency of the Committee on the Judiciary, dealing with juvenile delinquency in the Territory of Alaska.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair inquires of the Senator from Tennessee whether this is a report of the subcommittee or a report of the full committee.

Mr. KEFAUVER. It is a report of the full committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be received and printed.

MILITARY AID

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oregon yield to me.

Mr. NEUBERGER. I yield.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, I voted against the appropriations bill for military aid because I am convinced that the amount provided in the bill, plus the amount already appropriated and unused, is entirely too much money to make available before there is a complete and thorough legislative survey of the entire program, a reappraisal of the world situation, and a new start taken.

We now have $6.4 billion available and on hand for expenditures in future years. Should we appropriate as much as $2 billion for fiscal year 1957, I am satisfied that the program would be continued without interruption and without injury. Because, in my opinion, we are voting far more than is necessary, I am opposing the bill in its present form.

If my vote against this bill meant a stopping of the program, I would have voted otherwise because I think that some military aid is necessary. Further, I feel that this military aid program, on a more limited scale, of course, must be continued for several years, especially in certain critical areas. We should prepare now to continue the program on some scale for perhaps a decade in the future.

It is the very necessity of this continuation of the program that furnishes the compelling reason why we should hold this appropriation to a reduced amount and then resurvey and reappraise the entire program and the world situation before continuing further these expenditures on such a lavish scale. Further, a special study could well be taken of the attitude of the people in the various countries involved, as well as their capacity to carry their part of the burden.

In years past we have been so generous with military aid that some of our allies have been encouraged to postpone rather than hasten their own preparedness program.

Even though the amounts appropriated during the last few fiscal years has been decreasing, the actual sums expended have not decreased in proportion to the decreases in appropriations. This year, we are requested to almost double last year's appropriation.

For illustration, in fiscal year 1953, we appropriated $6 billion for our entire aid program, including military aid and other, and we spent $5.7 billion.

For fiscal year 1954, we reduced the appropriated sum $1.3 billion down to $4.7 billion, but we reduced the expenditures only $0.9 billion, making the expenditures $4.8 billion.

In fiscal year 1955, we further reduced the appropriated sum by $1.9 billion down to $2.8 billion, but actual expenditures were reduced by less than one-third this much—that is, by only $0.6 billion, bringing actual expenditures down to $4.2 billion.

In fiscal year 1956, we reduced the appropriation to $2.7 billion, but actually spent $4.18 billion, virtually the same as in the preceding year.

For fiscal year 1957, we were asked to appropriate almost $4.9 billion, and the bill now before the Senate will appropriate $4.1 billion.

It is gratifying to see that the Congress is recognizing its responsibilities and asserting its own powers in the recent passage by the Senate of a resolution providing for a reconsideration and resurvey of this entire program. This will and should be done from the congressional viewpoint.

There is a natural tendency by those administering the program to continue it on a large scale. Sizable, voluntary reductions in expenditures are seldom made. This is a congressional responsibility which we should not shun. Those of us who feel that some military aid is of necessity a part of our foreign policy are greatly concerned that these expenditures remain within more reasonable limits. Otherwise, the entire program is likely to lose the necessary public support for its continuation.

It is my considered conclusion that the sum appropriated in this bill is far in excess of the amounts required for the essential part of the program for fiscal year 1957, and in protest against this large amount I voted against the bill.

Next yar our military-aid program should be fully considered by the Armed Services Committees of both the House and the Senate. Our military aid is definitely a part of our military defense and should have active legislative consideration as a part of our worldwide military program. I shall exert my effort and my influence as a Member of the Senate to see that such a legislative course is adopted regarding all military aid in the future.

Mr. NEUBERGER. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

CONSTRUCTION OF A NUCLEAR-POWERED MERCHANT SHIP

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, I am glad to see that both the Senate and House adopted on Monday the conference report on H. R. 6243, the bill authorizing construction of a nuclear-powered merchant ship. I am sorry that I was tied up in a meeting of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy on Monday, but I would now like to say a few words concerning the reactor to be installed in this ship.

The reactor should not be an exact duplicate of the Nautilus reactor. It would be folly to place a 1925 model T engine in a 1956 automobile. Similarly, it would not make sense to take the first power reactor ever developed, designed for use on a submarine, and ignoring subsequent developments, stick that reactor in a newly designed surface ship. It would be far better to take an additional year's time for redesign and development work in order to move clearly forward, and to hasten the day of widespread application of nuclear power by the American merchant marine. The estimated construction time of such a reactor is 39 to 42 months.

I agree with the following statement of the House managers concerning the conference report on this bill:

> It was the contemplation of the conferees that the vessel would contain the most advanced type of reactor possible for a practical merchant ship which would be a definite step forward in the art of nuclear propulsion utilizing all experience and improvements learned to date.

Also, the Commission should not merely construct a Nautilus duplicate because of the security restrictions that this might necessitate. It would be tragic indeed to display this ship throughout the world but to keep the design characteristics of the reactor secret.

For these reasons, as well as others, the Atomic Energy Commission should arrange for the construction of an up-to-date, newly designed reactor for installation in this ship.

Mr. NEUBERGER. Mr. President, I shall now yield to the Senator from Massachusetts for the presentation of a conference report.

IMPROVEMENT OF GOVERNMENTAL BUDGETING AND ACCOUNTING METHODS AND PROCEDURES—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I submit a report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 3897) to improve governmental budgeting and accounting methods and procedures, and for other purposes. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read for the information of the Senate.

The Chief Clerk read the report.

(For conference report, see House proceedings, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, July 23, 1956, p. 14007.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the conference report?

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, I understand this is the conference report about which the Senator spoke to me earlier today. I understand it has been signed by all conferees. Is that correct?

Mr. KENNEDY. The conference report has been signed by a majority of the conferees. Three members did not sign it, two of whom are present on the floor, and no doubt they will have a statement to make relating to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report?

Mr. COTTON. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I merely wish to make sure, because the Senator from Massachusetts is presenting the report on time yielded to him by the Senator from Oregon [Mr. NEUBERGER], that other members of the committee on conference may be certain of having sufficient time in which to make statements explaining why they did not sign the report.

Mr. KENNEDY. I believe, unless lengthy debate ensues, it will be agreeable to the Senator from Oregon that the two Senators, the Senator from Maine [Mrs. SMITH] and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. COTTON], may make their statements. I am sure they will make their statements within a reasonable time, and in that way we will be able to dispose of the conference report promptly.

Mr. President, the conferees agreed to the House amendment which deleted section 1 (b), (c), and (d) providing that proposed appropriations be determined on an annual accrued expenditure basis and the lapsing of unused balances of appropriations at the end of each fiscal year.

On the other hand the conferees accepted all of the other provisions of the Senate bill which will permit the agencies to prepare and execute their budgets on a cost basis; bring about closer correlation between budgeting, accounting, and organizational structure; improvement in the budget justifications by inclusions of information on performance and program costs; permit the agencies to maintain their accounts on an accrual basis; integrate the property accounting records with the financial accounting system, and to simplify the allotment accounting system.

One of the most important provisions of the bill was deleted by the House of Representatives, namely, the accrued expenditure basis for determination of appropriations. The acceptance of this amendment became necessary, in the view of a majority of the conferees, because the Appropriations Committee of the House insisted that this provision be deleted. The Senate conferees did everything possible to restore the language of the Senate bill, but it was finally concluded by a majority of the Senate conferees that we would have to forego this objective or enact no legislation on this important bill at this session of Congress. We are not altogether satisfied with this turn of events, but believe that substantial progress will be possible under the language agreed to by the conferees, and for this reason I strongly urge acceptance of the conference report.

It was agreed by conferees of both the House and the Senate that the action of the conferees in adopting the substitute language should not be construed to indicate disapproval of authorization to determine the amounts of proposed appropriations on an annual accrued expenditure basis, but that lack of information at the present time on this important phase of the program made it advisable to defer action until the next Congress.

The House conferees agreed with the Senate conferees that this important provision of the bill should be reconsidered at the next session of the Congress, and it was our understanding that something would be included in the statement of the managers on the part of the House to this effect.

These objectives were submitted to the chairman of the committee of the other body for inclusion in the statement of the managers, but I was surprised to find that the language agreed to was not included in the report.

I have in my hand messages from Mr. J. Harold Stewart, chairman, Hoover Commission Task Force on Budgeting and Accounting; Clarence Francis, chairman, Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report; John Coleman, president, Chamber of Commerce of the United States; Meyer Kestnbaum, special assistant to the President; Percival Brundage, the Director of the Budget; and former President Herbert Hoover.

I ask unanimous consent that the messages be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the communications were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

BOHEMIAN GROVE, CALIF., July 22, 1956.

Hon. JOHN F. KENNEDY,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

S. 3897, as presently before the Congress, will, if enacted, carry out certain recommendations of the task force and commission which will provide basic tools in form of cost-based budgets and accrual accounting. These are incidental to the most significant recommendation No. 7 for budget in terms of annual accrued expenditures which fundamental improvement must be sought in the next session of the Congress if it cannot presently be accomplished. I greatly appreciate your statesmanlike effort in this matter for which the country is in your debt.

J. HAROLD STEWART,
Chairman, Hoover Commission Task Force on Budgeting and Accounting.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 20, 1956.

Senator JOHN F. KENNEDY,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

Thank you for your splendid work on behalf of the Hoover Commission's budget and accounting report. While we would have much preferred your Senate version in full, the conference-approved bill will be a major stride in the history of Federal fiscal practice, and lead to important savings. The citizens committee hopes the conference version will be speedily enacted. Please accept our congratulations.

CLARENCE FRANCIS,
Chairman, Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 23, 1956.

Senator JOHN F. KENNEDY,
Senate Office Building:

Strongly recommend approval of conference report on H. R. 11526 to implement Hoover Commission budget and accounting recommendations. Warmest congratulations to members and staff of Reorganizations Subcommittee, Government Operations Committee, for your efforts in behalf of better government at less cost. Sincerely hope next session will approve other fiscal reforms recommended by Commission.

JOHN F. COLEMAN,
President, Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, July 23, 1956.

Hon. JOHN F. KENNEDY,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR KENNEDY: Inasmuch as the administration has accepted wholeheartedly the basic recommendations contained in the Hoover Commission Report on Budget and Accounting, those of us who are working to advance these recommendations were very much encouraged by the passage in the Senate of S. 3897. We were hopeful that the House would take similar action. We appreciate the fact that the elimination by the House of the provision for accrual expenditure accounting, which is one of the basic recommendations of the Hoover Commission, raises some question as to the wisdom of enacting any legislation at the present time. Nevertheless, I am of the opinion that the bill as now accepted by the conference committee would be helpful, and would provide a basis for further legislation in the next session of the Congress. Now that Mr. Hoover's reservations have been resolved, I am hopeful that this legislation will be enacted.

Every good citizen should be indebted to you for the great interest that you have taken in the work of the Hoover Commission, and for the leadership that you have assumed in securing congressional action on these recommendations.

Sincerely,

MEYER KESTNBAUM,
Special Assistant to the President.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT,
BUREAU OF THE BUDGET,
Washington, D. C., July 23, 1956.

Hon. JOHN F. KENNEDY,
Chairman, Subcommittee on Reorganization, Committee on Government Operations, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I testified before your subcommittee on June 4, 1956, regarding S. 3897, "To improve governmental budgeting and accounting methods and procedures, and for other purposes." I strongly favored the enactment of the bill including the provision that appropriations be determined on an annual accrued expenditures basis to the maximum extent deemed desirable and practicable by the President. In the course of my testimony, I stated, "We believe that this change would have many advantages both for the legislative and the executive branches."

Since the date of my testimony, I understand that consideration has been given by your subcommittee to the elimination of section 1 (a) of the bill in order to meet the desires of the House. Under the circumstances, I think it important that I clarify my position with respect to this matter.

While I favor putting appropriations on an accrued expenditure basis, and believe that legislation to accomplish this should ultimately be enacted, I regard the other sections of your bill to be of such great importance that I would strongly favor the enactment of your bill even without the section to place appropriations on an annual accrued expenditure basis. In view of the fact that appropriations could not be placed on an accrued expenditure basis until accrual cost accounting is adopted throughout the Government, which will take several years to accomplish, I can see no danger in postponing until next year the enactment of section 1 (a).

Immediate benefits would result from prompt enactment of the remaining portions of the bill. I refer specifically to the following:

Section 1 (b) providing for the development of appropriations from cost based budgets.

Section 2 (a) which would require consistency between accounting and budget classification, and the synchronization of accounting and budget classification and organizational structure.

Section 2 (b) requiring agency accounts to be maintained on an accrual basis.

Section 3 establishing the objective of financing each operating unit at the highest practical level.

I believe that efforts should be made next year to enact another bill containing the substance of section 1 (a) of the present bill, but I would deplore the failure to adopt the other provisions of the bill at this time.

After the situation had been thoroughly explained to Mr. Herbert Hoover, he was in favor of enacting the amended bill as approved by the conference report as was Mr. Clarence Francis and Mr. Meyer Kestnbaum, all of whom are particularly anxious to see the recommendations of the Hoover Commission adopted.

Sincerely yours,

PERCIVAL BRUNDAGE,
Director.

BOHEMIAN GROVE, CALIF., July 24, 1956.

Senator JOHN F. KENNEDY,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

I agree completely with position of Stewart task force chairman stated to you in his telegram of the 21st. Sincerely appreciate all your effort which is real leadership.

HEBERT HOOVER.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, before concluding my statement I should like to express my keen regret that the conferees, from both parties, on behalf of the House of Representatives felt unable to accept the heart of the bill, which would have placed our appropriations on an annual accrued expenditure basis. It would have brought about a most desirable reform in our budgeting and accounting procedures. That was the heart of the Hoover Commission recommendation on budgeting and accounting.

It is most regrettable that the House conferees felt they could not accept the provision because of the opposition of some Members of the House to that reform.

I assure the membership of the Senate that this question will be the primary one before the Subcommittee on Reorganization next year, and it is my hope that the full committee will again be able to report it unanimously to the Senate, and that the Senate will again take prompt action on it. It is my further hope that after some experience has been developed along these lines in Government during the intervening period, we will be able to enact the heart of the program without further delay.

So, while I understand perfectly why my colleagues on the other side did not feel that they could sign the conference report—and I must say that I have great sympathy with their position and at first was inclined to take the same position myself—after talking with the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, I felt that this step forward would be in the public interest, and I reluctantly signed the report, while some conferees who were as keenly disappointed as I was felt constrained to withhold their signatures.

Mrs. SMITH of Maine. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oregon yield?

Mr. NEUBERGER. I yield.

Mrs. SMITH of Maine. Mr. President, I should like to ask the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts, the chairman of the subcommittee, if he included in the RECORD both the telegrams from former President Hoover in his unanimous-consent request.

Mr. KENNEDY. I have not included Mr. Hoover's original telegram, a copy of which I think the Senator from Maine has, which expressed the hope that there would be no compromise of position. I received a second telegram which I assume represents his latest thinking. That is the one I am placing in the RECORD.

Mrs. SMITH of Maine. Mr. President, in order that the record may be clear, I should like to include in it at this point the first telegram which was sent by former President Hoover, dated July 18, 1956, which was a day and a half before he sent the second telegram which has been referred to by the Senator from Massachusetts. I wish to read the telegram:

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIF., July 18, 1956.

Hon. JOHN F. KENNEDY,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.:

I wish to express my appreciation for the statesmanship you and your colleagues have shown in the legislation which would reform the Federal budget and accounting system. The heart of the Commission's recommendation in this legislation is to restore to the Congress the control of the purse through the provision for a budget based on annual expenditures. The Senate passed this provision without dissent. It is supported by the President, the Comptroller General, and the Director of the Budget and has been widely supported by the press and the public.

The passage of the House version deleting this critical provision would be misleading to the country. My view is that unless the House conferees are willing to yield on this critical provision, the country will be better served by allowing the legislation to die in this session in order that we may have an opportunity to present to the country and the next session the fundamental importance of this issue.

HERBERT HOOVER.

Mr. President, as a member of the Senate conferees I have refused to sign this report. My two colleagues, the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. COTTON], and the Senator from Iowa [Mr. MARTIN] also have refused to sign it.

This bill, which had so much promise of restoring to the Congress control of the public purse, in my opinion, is now but an empty gesture in that direction.

Stricken from it, at the insistence of the House of Representatives, is its very heart—the Hoover Commission's recommendation that appropriations be made on an accrued-expenditures basis.

There has been a great amount of publicity about implementation of cost-based budgets, accrual accounts, and other improvements in the Government's financial structure by enactment of this legislation.

But, let me point out to Senators there is nothing in this bill which cannot be effectuated by administrative action within the executive branch at the present time or which already is not now being effectuated by administrative action in the various executive agencies.

Any claim that this action by the Congress carries out the Hoover Commission's major recommendations on budgeting and accounting—recommendations which are regarded as among the most important that the Commission presented to the Congress—would be a deception. And to claim that the enactment of this legislation would result in any substantial savings any way near approaching the ridiculous estimates that have been given official credence would be to deliberately mislead the American public.

S. 3897, as introduced, implemented directly the Hoover Commission's recommendations. Thirty-two Senators from both sides of the aisle sponsored it. Extensive hearings were held by the Subcommittee on Reorganization of the Committee on Government Operations. The bill was reported unanimously by the Subcommittee on Reorganization on June 6, 1956. It was reported unanimously by the Senate Committee on Government Operations on June 7, 1956. It was passed unanimously by the United States Senate, by voice vote, on June 20, 1956.

I find from a review of the hearings this bill had the unreserved endorsement of the Government's foremost financial authorities—the Secretary of the Treasury, the Comptroller General of the United States, and the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, each of whom presented testimony upon it. And, in addition, this legislation carried the endorsement of the President of the United States, who, in a special message to the Congress on May 10, 1956, urged early enactment of appropriate legislation on the Hoover Commission's recommendations in this area.

Yet, to my regret, and, I am confident, to the regret of every Member of the Senate who believes in restoring control of the public purse to the Congress, all of this has been lost.

Mr. President, I wish the record to be clear. The above facts show clearly why I, in good conscience, could not agree to the conferees' action.

Mr. COTTON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oregon yield to me?

Mr. NEUBERGER. I yield.

Mr. COTTON. Mr. President, I do not wish to take the time of the Senate in unnecessary repetition of the statements made by the distinguished Senator from Maine [Mrs. SMITH], indicating why the members of the conference committee on this side of the aisle found themselves unable to sign the conference report on this bill which sought to improve the budgeting and accounting procedures of the Government. I wish, however, in a very brief way, to let the record show exactly the point of disagreement.

It is a question, Mr. President, of tactics. I think the earnest desire of the able Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY] and of his colleagues on the other side of the aisle was exactly the same as our own. We were seeking to find the course we could pursue which would be the most effective in making the Hoover Commission recommendations really an essential part of this all-important measure and enacting their full weight into law.

Mr. President, this budget and accounting bill, which was originally introduced by the able Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY] and the able Senator from Maine [Mr. PAYNE], in my humble opinion, is the keystone of the arch of all the various recommendations of the so-called Hoover Commission. It had the greatest possibilities, it could accomplish the most, and it would give Congress, had it been enacted in the form in which it passed this body, the most important power it could possibly have and the one most vital to the welfare of the American taxpayers, namely, full control of the purse and of all Government spending.

I think it would be of interest to the Senate to realize—and I am sure I speak the fact—that had this bill been the law yesterday, the amendment offered by the distinguished minority leader to the mutual-security bill affecting money in the pipeline for aid to Yugoslavia would have been in order, because this bill, if enacted, would have given to Congress every year complete control not only of appropriations made for that year, but complete control over money previously appropriated and remaining unspent, in other words, control over money and goods in the pipeline.

Mr. President, when the bill reached the House, the heart of it, as has been so well expressed by the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY], was taken out. That portion of the bill which would have meant the ultimate control of some $70 billion in carryover balances from previous appropriations passing through the pipeline was completely stricken and eliminated.

The Senator from Maine [Mrs. SMITH] has referred to the part that remains. Someone has said it is a declaration of policy or of intent on the part of the Congress. I would not even dignify it by saying it is a declaration of intent; I would say it is only a declaration of a hope. It confers upon the executive departments, in my opinion, not a single power which they do not have at present.

The question before the conferees was whether we should accept the bill as it has been emasculated, or whether we should let it die. On the theory or the philosophy that half a loaf is better than none, the conferees, headed by the Senator from Massachusetts, sincerely felt it should be accepted. But, Mr. President, it is not half a loaf. There is no wheat in the bill. The conferees—I think I am expressing the opinion of the Senator from Maine [Mrs. SMITH] and the Senator from Iowa [Mr. MARTIN]—felt that to pass the bill in its present form, which is an utterly empty and meaningless gesture, would be a disservice to the American people, because it would lull them into slumber.

This statement is in no way a reflection on the views or the sincerity of the Senator from Massachusetts, as I feel certain he knows. But we felt it would be a disservice to the American people because it would enable the people, including Members of Congress, who are all human, to say, "Here is another bill, here is another important measure. Which is part and parcel of the Hoover recommendations which have been enacted. This is one more achievement. This means that a larger percentage of the recommendations has been accomplished."

As a matter of fact, not a single dollar will be saved by this bill in its present form. It is highly possible, on the other hand, that more money will be spent, because the bill encourages the setting up of a dual system of bookkeeping in the executive departments without any assurance that the new accrual system will be put into practice or utilized in any way to save a dollar for the taxpayers.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. COTTON. I do not have the floor.

Mr. NEUBERGER. I yield to the senior Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. BRIDGES. I agree with the original intentions of the bill as set forth, but I agree with the junior Senator from New Hampshire that if it shall be finally passed, it will be far from what it should be and far from what I thought it would be.

There was one item in the original bill which I considered highly important, and that was the provision giving the Committee on Appropriations and Congress control over appropriations previously made and in the pipeline. That is vital to the control of those appropriations. Is that provision still in the bill, or was it eliminated?

Mr. COTTON. I answer my distinguished senior colleague from New Hampshire, who incidentally was a sponsor of the bill, by saying that it definitely is not any longer in the bill. I want to repeat the statement I made which I think points up the importance of what he has emphasized; namely, that if this feature had been in the law yesterday, the amendment offered by the minority leader to the mutual security appropriation bill yesterday would have been in order, because Congress would have been in control of the money in the pipeline.

Mr. BRIDGES. I thank the Senator.

Mr. COTTON. The issue then, was a question of whether the conferees would accept a synthetic bill or would refuse to agree to the report and would let the American people know that this great step had not been taken, but still remained to be accomplished.

We felt—at least I felt, and I think my colleagues felt the same way—that the danger in accepting the conference report is that the people of the country, especially those who are interested in the Hoover Commission reports, will come to believe that this bill will lead to accomplishments which, in fact, have not been accomplished, and which we cannot now do because there will not be steam or drive behind this vital budget proposal when Congress reassembles next January.

We felt—and I feel—that it would be far better to have the bill die and to have the people know it died, than to have them falsely believe that something has been accomplished. I believe we should make it perfectly clear that Congress has not taken this vital step in the improvement of our budgets and accountings as recommended by the Hoover Commission.

That is the reason why I was unable to sign the conference report.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NEUBERGER. I yield to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. I must say that with most of what the junior Senator from New Hampshire has said I am in complete agreement. At least, I took the same position at the beginning as he did, namely, that because what we got in relation to what we wanted was comparatively minor, it would be better to reject the report and to start again next year.

But after talking with the responsible officials of the Government, including the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, who has communicated with me about this matter, I reconsidered my position. I should like to quote a paragraph from the Director's letter:

> While I favor putting appropriations on an accrued expenditure basis, and believe that legislation to accomplish this should ultimately be enacted—

This is important—

> I regard the other sections of your bill to be of such great importance that I would strongly favor the enactment of your bill even without the section to place appropriations on an annual accrued expenditure basis.

It is because of that view, strongly held, which has been expressed in that letter and expressed to me in person, and expressed in a letter by Mr. Kestnbaum; in a telegram by J. Harold Stewart, who directed the task force of the Hoover Commission; and expressed by Herbert Hoover, that I was willing to sign the conference report.

I share the view completely, however, that it is a misfortune of great proportions that our bill was not accepted by the House. It might have been easier to dramatize the issue if we had rejected the report; but because the executive departments felt that it would be a valuable step and would lay the groundwork for later passage of the other provision, I somewhat reluctantly agreed to sign the conference report.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. President, first of all, I share very much the feeling which has been expressed by my colleague, the distinguished senior Senator from Maine [Mrs. SMITH], and also by the distinguished junior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. COTTON], as well as the statement which has been made by the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee [Mr. KENNEDY].

It is true, undoubtedly, that under the present structure of our Government the executive department has had, for a long period of time, the perfect right to put into effect much of this cost basis proposal. It is also true that under the present governmental structure the executive branch undoubtedly could have directed the various departments to establish their accounts on an accrual basis.

The fact, however, remains that neither one of those steps—both of them steps which could develop orderly, proper control over Government fiscal operations—has been put into effect, regardless of whether the authority exists or not.

This particular provision of the bill, which does not include, I also admit, the most important provision which was embraced in the bill as originally introduced by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY] and myself, along with a number of other sponsors, nevertheless goes to the root of some of the evils which have existed in the Government financial structure.

By this enactment, if this much can go through, there will be conveyed to the executive branch of the Government the mandate of Congress that the departments and agencies of the Government shall start to put their house in order and should adopt a cost-based budget.

So that no one can misunderstand what I mean, let me say that in the past, in submitting budgets for the various departments and in the compiling of the budget for the next fiscal year, the inventories of goods which are on hand devoted to the development of a particular program have never been taken into consideration. Under this proposal it will be necessary to take that into account in determining the additional amount of money which is needed in order to carry out any specific program which is being presented to Congress.

In the establishment of an accrual system of accounting at the staff level in the agencies and departments of Government, the groundwork will be laid that will lead to an orderly development of the accrued expenditure appropriation basis, which must come if Congress is to obtain full and complete control over the expenditures of Government.

Let me say that it was a disappointment to me to find that any Member of the House of Representatives could in any way have held his tongue in check and believed that this type of proposal was going too far in any way, shape, or manner. Anyone who will reflect about it, will realize that the Corps of Engineers, operating as it has done for many years, actually has been operating under the very system this bill proposed originally, namely, on an accrued expenditure basis, from appropriations for 1 year, and 1 year only, in the case of projects which the corps has been able to estimate as being possible of accomplishment in that 1 year. The corps has for a long time worked on contract authorizations with annual appropriations, and it has to come before the appropriate committees to justify, in the next year, the money it needs in furtherance of a project for which the corps has been given a contract authorization. So there is nothing extraordinary and there is nothing new in the proposal. Such a plan has been in operation in that agency. It has also been in operation in the Atomic Energy Commission, and I believe in the reclamation division. So it is unfortunate that the provision has been omitted from the bill; but much as I am disappointed, I am convinced that there is some merit at least in having the Congress of the United States for once lay down a firm and definite mandate to the agencies in charge of our fiscal operations that they shall get their house in order, that they shall start to develop a cost-based system, and that they shall set up their accounts on an accrual basis, which will lead to the development of the other system.

I can assure the Members of the Senate and the American people that, so long as I have a little breath left in me, I shall fight for recognition and understanding by the American people that the provision, which my distinguished colleague [Mrs. SMITH of Maine] has mentioned as having been stripped from the bill must ultimately be adopted to put the house in order; that it is a provision which will help save for the American people a very substantial amount of money; and that it is the only means by which Congress can gain control, which it does not now have, over the moneys it appropriates.

Mr. KENNEDY. I thank the Senator. I will say that will be the first proposed legislation which the Subcommittee on Reorganization will consider next year.

Mr. President, I move that the conference report be agreed to.

The motion was agreed to.

INDIAN TIMBER SALES AND UNFAIR INTEREST CHARGES ON CONTRACTS

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oregon yield to me?

Mr. NEUBERGER. Mr. President, I decline to yield. I have yielded for 55 minutes and to 13 Senators, and I think that represents a reasonable amount of yielding.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon declines to yield.

I

Mr. NEUBERGER. Mr. President, on June 24 last year, I addressed the Senate indicating my concern about the low prices the American Indians were receiving for their timber. I was particularly concerned about the situation on the Quinaielt Reservation in Washington. I have visited this reservation, and I am familiar with the way many of the Indians live on the Olympic Peninsula. Many of them exist under very straitened circumstances. Their allotted share in the tribal timber stands is their only asset. Upon the way this timber is managed depends the economic future of hundreds of Indian families.

I had written to Commissioner Emmons of the Bureau of Indian Affairs about this situation. My inquiry into the Quinaielt timber contracts was in part responsible for the congressional timber hearings which were held in the Northwest last fall.

With a business administration in the saddle, as the then Secretary of the Interior had said, one might expect the Indians would be getting business management. Now I find they have been "given the business."

Not only are the Indians consistently getting too low prices for their timber, the ex-bankers and businessmen who have been acting as trustees for the Indians' affairs even seem a little hazy on simple and compound interest.

Here is what has occurred. On October 1, 1955, the Office of the Secretary of the Interior, on the recommendation of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, allowed some 1,000 Indian allottees on the Quinaielt Reservation to be saddled with what may total $3½ million in interest charges for advance payments made to them under their long-term timber contracts—contracts which, under the previous national administration, had provided for these advance payments on an interest-free basis.

At the present time, not only are the prices which the Indians receive for their timber about half of its market value, but also the Indians are paying an uncalled-for interest charge.

Last October, when the self-proclaimed business management over in the Department of the Interior took this unprecedented action, they were supposedly raising the price the Indians were getting for their timber. They did raise them. On one contract the increase averaged 47 cents per thousand board-feet—47 cents. At the same time the Indian was socked with a charge of $1.72 per thousand board-feet for interest; and, as if this were not enough, the Indians are being charged an additional 23 cents per thousand board-feet as profit-and-risk allowance on this interest. This raises the total charge to $1.95 per thousand board-feet.

In other words, the Secretary of the Interior determined that the contract price for the Indians' timber was too low by at least $2.42 per thousand board-feet and adjusted the terms of the long-term contract accordingly. Two dollars and forty-two cents is a modest enough adjustment in the light of the price for similar timber in the surrounding area. But, instead of the Indians' receiving this additional $2.42 per thousand board-feet for their timber, their share was increased by 47 cents, while $1.95 was taken right off the contract price of the timber again, in the form of prorated interest and profit-and-risk allowance on the advance payment by the purchaser to the Indians required under the contract. On another contract, I am told, the situation in terms of these charges is even worse.

If the Secretary had done the job to which the Indians are entitled, he would have exerted to the utmost his rights under the contract, so as to raise the price of the Indians' timber to a par with the prices obtained by the Forest Service for adjacent timber. Under the Indian Bureau's long-term contract, the Indians now get an average for all the species on the Quinaielt Reservation of about $10 per 1,000 board-feet, while the Forest Service's competitive sales bring about $19 per thousand average for a comparable combination of species.

II

Perhaps there is little or nothing to be done about the Indian Bureau's long-term timber sale contracts until they have run their course, unfavorable as they have proved to be for the Indians. But this new interest charge on the downpayments to the Indians adds a new and unnecessary burden to these already disadvantageous contracts, and in a manner certain to fall unevenly and unfairly on different Indians.

Under these long-term Indian timber contracts, which may run for one-third of a century, the purchaser wins the right to cut hundreds of millions—perhaps three-fourths of a billion—board-feet of timber. He does not have to keep bidding every year on this timber against competitors hungry for trees. Such an assured timber supply for 20 or 30 years is an exceedingly important and valuable right, as pressure on the limited log supply of the area steadily increases.

In return for this long-term assurance, the purchaser is bound to make certain substantial advance payments. He has to pay 25 percent of the total appraised value during the first year of the contract, 15 percent in the third year, and 10 percent in the sixth year.

However, the contracts contain no express provision that the Indians are to pay interest to the purchaser for these advance payments on timber not yet cut. These interest charges were adopted by the Indian Bureau in October 1955, without prior notice to the Indians.

Moreover, interest was not computed, in the normal manner, on the remaining balance of advance payments over the sums recovered from timber cut under the contract. Instead, it was computed on the basis of applying the interest charge to an assumed average of the advance payments outstanding. Then this charge was prorated, by volume, over the timber to be cut over the life of the contract, to be recovered as a cost by the purchaser. And a profit-and-risk allowance is further added to this cost. This, I repeat, represents $1.95 of the recalculated, increased price of the Indians' timber, while the Indians themselves were left the other 47 cents.

Mr. President, quite apart from the propriety or impropriety of adding an interest charge to these long-term contracts at all, these methods of letting the purchasers recover it as a cost, apportioned by volume to the timber cut, results in serious inequities among the different Indian owners of the timber themselves.

The individual Indian's advance payment is based on the estimated value of his timber, but his share of the interest charge on the total advance payment is recovered by the purchaser on the basis of the volume—not the value, but the volume—of that timber, which may be more or less.

On 1 million board-feet of timber worth, let us say, $10,000, an Indian receives, under the contract, an initial advance of $2,500. Another Indian with 1 million board-feet of a different kind or grade, worth only $5,000, receives an initial advance of $1,250. Under the astute business management of the Interior Department, the purchaser recovers from each of these Indians $1,950 in interest on the advance, in the form of timber prices reduced $1.95 per 1,000 board-feet.

It must be noted further, Mr. President, that the individual Indian is charged with this interest, not only without regard to the value of his particular timber, but also irrespective of when his timber is cut. It may be cut in the very first year, in which case it is obviously absurd to charge him with interest on his so-called advance payment. Yet he will, in effect, pay as much interest as another Indian with the same volume of timber which may not be cut until the very end of the contract period—25 years after he has received his final advance payment.

Again, because this interest charge is prorated by volume over the timber cut, another inequity occurs. It is not at all unusual for the actual cut to overrun the estimate by as much as 50 percent. But the interest component is to be recovered as a part of the purchaser's cost at the rate of $1.95 per thousand board-feet. Thus the 2 Indians of my hypothetical examples may end up paying $2,925 in interest on their advances of, respectively, $2,500 and $1,250.

III

It seems to me, Mr. President, that $2,925 is rather steep interest to pay for an advance of $1,250 for 1 year—or for 10 years—even under the business management of the Department of the Interior.

Mr. President, I cannot believe that it is beyond the ability of the Department and the Indian Bureau to devise a method for pooling the Indians' timber allotment in a way to assure equitable sharing of the income, along with proper forest management. Under the present method, after the advance payments, the Indian gets the balance of the money for his timber when it is cut—at the convenience of the purchaser under the long-term contract. The Indians cannot decide when their timber will be cut. An Indian with high-value timber may find it cut in a period of low prices. On the other hand, if his allotment were pooled for purposes of payment, he could receive a prorata share of the value of his timber over the life of the contract, and thus avoid this risk.

The forest is under sustained-yield management, but not the Indians' income. All of the Indians get the advance payments under the long-term contracts. Those whose timber is cut early in the contract get all of their money quickly. The others may have to wait 14, 24, or 34 years for the final receipt of their money.

Now the sterility of ideas is compounded by an improper $3½ million interest surcharge on the Indians, which moreover falls upon each individual in a most inequitable manner, without relation to the value of his timber or the time when it is cut.

What the Indians have long deserved is to have their timber sold under procedures which will return to them the greatest income, consistent with the long-term protection of their forest resource. Once the long-term contracts were chosen as the Indian Bureau's device for dealing with the particular difficulties of the situation on the Quinaielt Reservation, the Indians at least were entitled to the exertion of every effort by the Bureau to obtain for them the highest returns possible under the terms of the contracts. A trustee can hardly justify anything less than such efforts on behalf of those whose property is entrusted to his management.

Instead, after apparently determining that timber prices, under the contract formulas, could be raised between $2 and $3, the Indian Bureau raised the return to the Indians 47 cents. The companies who hold these contracts asked to have the price of timber calculated so as to allow them to recover interest on their contractual advances to the Indians, and the Secretary of the Interior blithely agreed.

Mr. President, I intend to ask the Comptroller General to look into the propriety of these interest charges and their apportionment to the timber of the individual Indians. I hope that the Secretary of the Interior, too, will review this question of the management of the timber on the Quinaielt Reservation under these long-term contracts, and that the injustice to the Indians will be speedily corrected.

EXPIRATION OF THE GI BILL OF RIGHTS FOR SERVICE PERSONNEL

Mr. NEUBERGER. Mr. President, today, July 25, 1956, there expires one of the greatest veterans' programs of all time—the GI bill of rights for the veterans of World War II.

For millions of young American servicemen of that great war, this great program, created in June of 1944, has meant help with readjustment to civilian employment, with purchasing a home or starting a business, but above all, it has meant the opportunity to complete their educations.

By making it possible for more than 2 million veterans to obtain educations which were either interrupted by the war, or which might have been beyond their economic capacities, the GI bill has brought untold benefits to the Nation. It should not have been permitted to die, without having a substitute take its place for the hundreds of thousands of servicemen still entering the armed services every year.

The Nation needs educated men and women more than ever. We still draft men into the Armed Forces, which must be kept at a level lower than for war, but certainly higher than for real peace. We impose upon them a compulsory Reserve obligation unprecedented in our history. For these reasons, I introduced on January 18, 1956, S. 2967, cosponsored by eight other Senators, to revive the GI bill. During the coming session of Congress, I shall again urge enactment of a new GI bill or a bill providing an equivalent, revised program to offer our servicemen the educational opportunities which their services and the needs of our Nation demand.

I ask unanimous consent, Mr. President, to include in the body of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD an article from the July 22, 1956, issue of the New York Times by Dr. Benjamin Fine, entitled "Education in Review," which stresses the outstanding success of the GI bill.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EDUCATION IN REVIEW—GI BILL, EXPIRING AFTER 12 YEARS, HAS BEEN, IT IS AGREED, AN OUTSTANDING SUCCESS

(By Benjamin Fine)

On Wednesday the GI bill of rights set up for veterans of World War II on June 22, 1944, expires. In 12 years, nearly 8 million ex-servicemen attended school and college, took on-the-job training, or worked on farms. The whole program cost the Government $14,500,000,000.

Educators began last week to take stock of this great educational venture. At one time college campuses were swamped with veterans. A total of 2,200,000 veterans took advantage of the GI bill to go to college or graduate school, with up to $500 in tuition fees, and subsistence grants ranging from $75 to $110 a month from the Government.

There were misgivings at first. But the educators soon found that the veterans were characterized by maturity and strong motivation. The veterans were substantially older than their civilian classmates. And they wanted to make up for lost time.

Perhaps the situation at Yale University is typical of the institutions that found their campuses overcrowded with ex-servicemen. Some 15,000 veterans attended Yale in the 12 years. A maximum of 5,900 were enrolled during the spring term of 1947. Yale found that scholastically the vets did better work than the other students. But as Richard R. Shank, head of the veterans' affairs program at Yale puts it, the university benefited also from the rise in standards achieved by the veterans.

BENEFITS CONFERRED

The GI bill, educators generally agree, opened avenues of educational opportunities to wide numbers of veterans qualified in every way except financially. It did so without directly subsidizing schools. Nor were the administrative controls too objectionable. Many veterans continued their education at the graduate level. This, of course, increased the country's supply of research scientists and doctor of philosophy scholars to teach as well as to man posts in private industry.

The GI bill discounted the theory, held in some quarters, that only those able to afford it should take graduate studies. It has given impetus to a fellowship program sponsored by industry and the Federal Government.

The Columbia University campus probably had the largest number of GI's of any institution. Some 85,000 veterans have attended Columbia since the program began. The peak year was reached in 1947 when 17,733 ex-servicemen were enrolled, comprising 74 percent of the male student body.

Contrary to expectations, few veterans gave up before completing their educational objectives. The ease and completeness with which the ex-GI's fitted into the academic environment proved heartening.

"Veterans seem to be more interested in public affairs and world problems, and in equipping themselves for sound citizenship," one official summed up. "They have brought to our campuses an atmosphere of serious purpose and a sense of responsibility."

The GI program is bound to have lasting results. It has trained 238,000 teachers, 450,000 engineers, 180,000 doctors and nurses, 113,000 scientists, and 36,000 clergymen.

There is little doubt that the veterans brought a sense of maturity previously unknown to college campuses. This view was best expressed by Dr. Herold C. Hunt, Under Secretary of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and former Chicago school superintendent and Harvard University professor.

HIGH LEVEL OF ACHIEVEMENT

"Having shared the experience and responsibility of winning World War II," he said, "many veterans came to college with a deeper sense of values than those who came directly from high schools. Their seriousness brought good scholarship and a high level of achievement. The progress they are now making in their peacetime pursuits confirms this observation.

"As a former superintendent of schools, I have observed the benefits of the GI bill of rights at first hand. I feel that inestimable good has come from educational and training opportunities the bill made possible."

According to Dr. Henry T. Heald, president of New York University who recently has been named as president of the Ford Foundation, the GI bill was one of the most enlightened pieces of legislation enacted by Congress in the wake of any military effort in which the Nation has been engaged.

Educators in all parts of the country, in almost every type of institution, speak highly of the GI program. Dean Fred W. Ajax, coordinator of veterans' affairs at Georgia Institute of Technology, says, "The veterans' program was worth every cent spent by the Government, both to the individual veteran and to the country. Federal aid to higher education in peacetime is more than justified by the results of the federally sponsored GI bill."

UNDER HANDICAPS

Not only were the GI's ambitious and eager to complete their courses, but many worked under tremendous handicaps. Some 600,000 disabled veterans received vocational rehabilitation, some of them in colleges. A striking example is the Tulane University veteran who had lost both hands and one eye but completed an architecture course with an outstanding record.

Many institutions created veterans' divisions. Brown University set up a separate college for ex-servicemen in the fall of 1946 for men whose academic background was not up to those of the regular students. All, however, who had the equivalent of a high-school education had been told by Uncle Sam that they could go to college. College gave them this chance to show that acquired maturity and greater incentive to learn could offset any deficiencies of previous training.

They took the same course under the same faculty and with the same grading system as the students of the regular college. The only differences were that their classes and laboratories were held in the late afternoon and evening (thus utilizing the Brown plan during off-hour periods) and they did not participate in any extracurricular activities. They made good. Most of them were able to transfer successfully to the college proper.

Although in the main the GI program did an excellent job, in its early years some unscrupulous promoters made financial killings. They organized phony trade schools or other institutes to get a share of the free tuition funds. Some GI's in these schools spent Government money on ballroom dancing, toying with photography, or taking up horseback riding. The Government cracked down in 1948, when the Veterans' Administration tightened up its requirements.

Now the Korean veterans, 350,000 strong, are on the Nation's campuses and in the classrooms—not a large number, in comparison with their predecessors. But they are being made welcome by educators impressed with the success of the World War II veterans.

RACIAL SEGREGATION IN FEDERAL HOUSING

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter which I have received from the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing. The letter is in reply to a letter addressed to me by Albert M. Cole, Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency. Inasmuch as some time ago I had Mr. Cole's letter printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, therefore in fairness I believe that this committee's comments on Mr. Cole's letter should also be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL COMMITTEE AGAINST DISCRIMINATION IN HOUSING,
New York, N. Y., July 23, 1956.

Hon. PRESCOTT BUSH,
United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR BUSH: An Associated Press story of June 27 reported that you have inserted into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of June 21 a letter from Housing Administrator Albert M. Cole, commenting upon a letter of mine to you. My letter had been written over a year ago, on June 16, 1955. I trust you are interested in my appraisal of Mr. Cole's reply.

Mr. Cole makes abundantly clear that he is not only familiar with our assertion "that racial segregation continues in housing built under the Federal housing programs, and that the Federal Government is actually supporting the spread of segregation," but that our charge is correct. He reports attempts by the Housing and Home Finance Agency to foster the production of "Negro housing" or "minority housing." Nowhere does he mention efforts to assist in opening up the housing market—wherever Government aid is involved—to free bargaining of all families, regardless of race.

Mr. Cole's report of Agency accomplishments is inaccurate and ambiguous. He cites a conference he held in December 1954 with the real estate, lending, building, and public interest groups. The purpose of the conference was to develop Federal housing policy with regard to racial factors. The home builders, seconded by the lenders and real estate interests, and with the tacit approval of the Government representatives, offered to devote 10 percent of their next year's anticipated production to "minority group housing if they could obtain suitable sites." All the public interest groups rejected this racially segregated housing plan. They supported instead a policy statement that all housing built with Federal aids be open to all who qualify, regardless of race.

No report on the conference has been made nor any policy statement issued by the Housing Agency. In answer to a question asked by Senator HERBERT LEHMAN at hearings before a subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, Mr. Cole stated, "Nothing tangible came out of the conference * * *. I * * * set up a committee to help me * * * determine what could be done. The committee never met. * * * That was the end of that conference." Nothing like 10 percent of new building has been available to minority groups, even on a segregated basis. Practically none has been available on a nondiscriminatory basis.

Mr. Cole further reports in his letter that he and other housing officials have exhorted builders, lenders and FHA district offices during 1954–55 to step up the production of housing for minorities including "emphasis on the development of demonstration open-occupancy projects in suitable key areas." Neither in Cole's letter to you nor at any other time, are any specific results of these exhortations, speeches, and directives presented or stated in statistical or any other form.

Mr. Cole tells you that "I am convinced that the efforts of these leaders on a national scale are being reflected locally in an increasingly substantial volume of production of housing for these families." Where are the facts and figures? How many homes were actually produced? In what cities? At what prices? And how does the number compare to those made available to "whites" but closed to Negroes?

The Administrator makes much of the voluntary home mortgage credit program. But let us look at the facts: The program is available to assist only FHA- or VA-aided housing. Since Negroes already are largely excluded from both of these programs, the availability of VHMCP to them must be severely limited. For the whole country, for the 1½-year period, through May 1956, only 1,085 individual loans (to minority families) and 1,938 to builders for housing available to minority groups were placed. Mr. Cole admitted to Senator LEHMAN at the subcommittee hearings, "The applications are extremely small." Furthermore, I am sure that an analysis of the loans would reveal that most, if not all of them, are in areas already occupied by minorities, or in neighborhoods already in racial transition. The builders' loans are mainly for "Negro housing." We have received many reports that local correspondents of VHMCP lenders are refusing loans except for homes in "Negro neighborhoods."

Mr. Cole's statements regarding the Public Housing Administration policy and program serve only to reemphasize that agency's application of the discredited "separate-but-equal" doctrine to publicly subsidized housing. The statement that "local housing authorities are encouraged to admit tenants without regard to racial considerations" is revealing. Mr. Cole went further in statements at the Senate subcommittee. He said: "This is the problem of the people in the locality. If they want integrated housing, they have it. If they don't want it, they don't have it." This is a clear abdication of Federal responsibility. The projects he is speaking of are directly subsidized by Federal funds. The notion that the locality may determine for itself whether to obey the law and Constitution is quite fantastic. The President has stated firmly that public funds and powers are not to be utilized to foster racial discrimination or segregation. Yet, 85 percent of federally subsidized public housing remains segregated. New segregated projects continue to be approved. In addition, projects actually owned by the Federal Government continue to be operated on a segregated basis.

It is a shocking fact that Federal policy permits entire Negro neighborhoods to be cleared under the urban renewal program to make way for housing—usually FHA-aided—from which the developer, with local and Federal sanction, may exclude all Negro families. An official report as of December 1954 shows 13 federally approved projects under this program were replacing racially integrated sites with new segregated housing. At the same time the racial relations staff attached to the urban renewal program has been reduced from 5 persons to 1 person.

A basic reason that many of the promising urban redevelopment plans have either been stopped cold or inordinately delayed is the failure of the Federal agency to insist that the total supply of housing available to minorities be increased. Almost two-thirds of all families displaced are nonwhite, but additional living space, either on a segregated or integrated basis, is not being opened to them.

Mr. Cole's statement of our case is in itself an effort to prejudice against it. Mr. Cole says that we are asking as a condition to all types of Federal assistance in housing, a [rigid] agreement, that the recipients of this aid agree to [limit racial segregation] and to [require integration]. [Words in brackets supplied.] What we ask is stated very simply: As a condition of Federal assistance, recipients agree to make the housing available to all eligible families on exactly the same basis, and without regard to race.

The FHA commitments already require two agreements from the recipients during the life of the mortgage: (1) that no racial restrictive covenants will be recorded against the property, and (2) that no lease or other instrument will be executed which would restrict occupancy on the basis of race. These agreements with FHA are formal but meaningless. Builders of FHA developments simply do not admit Negro families. We are asking that the Federal Government render these two agreements meaningful and require a commitment that housing produced through FHA insurance is to be available to all eligible families on the same basis without regard to race.

Mr. Cole argues that under such a condition, private builders and local communities in various sections of the country would reject FHA assistance. This would be their privilege. Federal aid is not obligatory and is supposedly available only where a need exists which is beyond local and State ability to meet. Further, Mr. Cole is not called upon to be either prophet or spokesman for what builders or communities will do. This will be a question for each builder for himself and each community for itself to decide. Experience in New York State, however, where discrimination in Government-insured housing is barred by State law, has not shown any dropoff in FHA applications.

We believe that the decisions of the United States Supreme Court during the past several years require that the Federal Government refuse to support segregated housing. The briefs amicus curiae filed by the United States Government in such cases as those on racial covenants, segregation in transportation, and segregation in public schools, clearly affirmed the doctrine that racial segregation imposed or supported by law or public powers is per se unconstitutional. Mr. Cole's homily upon local rights and privileges to exercise racial discrimination in varying degrees smacks of the same argument completely rejected by the United States Supreme Court in the public school cases. It is evident that these are the principles which have guided Mr. Cole during the past 3 years. It is simply not true that he has taken "vigorous steps against racial discrimination in housing." Vigorous words have been spoken, but action has been meager and even then directed toward the expansion or reinforcement of racial segregation in housing. Mr. Cole quotes the President in behalf of moderation in the enforcement of the Supreme Court's decision regarding public schools. He seems to forget that the President has unequivocally stated on many occasions that it is his determination that public funds will not be used under his administration to foster racial discrimination or segregation.

Either Mr. Cole does not understand what the President has declared or the President has not been adequately advised as to the implications of his stated policy in the field of federally assisted housing.

The HHFA has reproduced and given wide circulation to Mr. Cole's letter containing my name. It appears in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. I should like to ask your consideration in inserting this letter also in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, in order that all sides of the issue may be presented to the American people.

Your interest in the matter is very much appreciated.

Sincerely yours,

FRANCES LEVENSON,
Executive Director.

THE ARMY AND NAVY LEGION OF VALOR ANNUAL REUNION

Mr. MARTIN of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, the Army and Navy Legion of Valor will hold its 66th annual reunion in the great State of Texas, at San Antonio, July 29 to August 1, inclusive.

This organization is composed of men and women who have received the highest decorations of the United States for valor in action. It is noteworthy that five Members of the United States Senate have received this highest award, the Congressional Medal of Honor. They are as follows: Adelbert Ames, of Mississippi; Henry A. du Pont, of Delaware, of the famous Du Pont family; Matthew Stanley Quay, of Pennsylvania, an outstanding political leader; William Joyce Sewell, of New Jersey; and Francis E. Warren, of Wyoming.

Senator Warren was father-in-law of General Pershing.

The commander of this great organization is Lt. Peter Paul Martinek, of California; and the adjutant and quartermaster is "Old Reliable" Lt. Ben Prager, of Pennsylvania.

Mr. President, in order that all of us may be better acquainted with this organization, I ask unanimous consent that there may be printed at this point in the RECORD, as a part of my remarks, a statement relative to the Legion of Valor and its annual reunion program, and also a list of those who have received two Congressional Medals of Honor.

There being no objection, the statement and list were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE LEGION OF VALOR

The Legion of Valor is, perhaps, the most unique organization in the United States. Membership is not achieved by birth, social position, wealth, academic achievement, or other requirements that most societies and organizations have established for membership qualification.

Eligibility is confined to recipients of our Nation's two highest decorations for valor. The official presentation of these decorations to members of the Armed Forces in appropriate ceremonies determine whom its members shall be.

The Legion of Valor was organized on April 23, 1890, in Washington, D. C., by a group of Civil War and Indian campaign veterans who had been awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor. Membership was, of course, restricted to recipients of this medal.

The membership was somewhat augmented during the Spanish campaign of 1898 and again during the Philippine Insurrection.

The membership was never large and with the passage of years and subsequent death of members, it was decided on November 25, 1918, to change the name of the organization to the Army and Navy Legion of Valor and admit into membership persons who had been awarded the Army's Distinguished Service Cross, the second ranking Army decoration.

Then again in 1933, persons who had been awarded the Navy Cross, the second ranking Navy decoration, were admitted to membership.

Today, the membership consists of our two highest Army and Navy decorations; however, there actually are four medals; namely, the Army Congressional Medal of Honor and the Distinguished Service Cross, the Navy Congressional Medal of Honor and the Navy Cross. Personnel of the Air Force are awarded Army decorations; the Marine Corps and Coast Guard are awarded Navy decorations.

At the present time the official name of the organization is the Army and Navy Legion of Valor of the United States of America, Inc., the organization having been incorporated under the laws of the State of New York.

It is interesting to note that this quite small but select group of service veterans are members of the oldest veteran organization in the United States today; the Grand Army of the Republic was until quite recently the oldest. With the death of all except a few of these wonderful gentlemen (at this writing) the organization was dissolved for lack of perpetuation of the body as an active organization.

The Legion of Valor, dating its inception in 1890, therefore is at present our oldest veteran organization.

The Navy Congressional Medal of Honor was the first to be authorized. On December 21, 1861, "An act to further promote the efficiency of the Navy" was introduced in and approved by Congress (12 Stat. 329–330, sec. 7): "And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Navy be, and is hereby, authorized to cause 200 Medals of Honor to be prepared with suitable emblematic device, which shall be bestowed upon such petty officers, seamen, landsmen, and marines as shall most distinguish themselves by their gallantry in action and other seamanlike qualities during the present war."

On July 12, 1862, some 6 months later, similar legislation was approved by Congress for issuance of an Army Congressional Medal of Honor.

The original Medals of Honor were awarded to enlisted men only; however, both services in later legislation made provision whereby the Congressional Medal was authorized to be awarded to officers.

When first authorized, both the Navy and Army Congressional Medals of Honor were awarded to persons who "shall most distinguish themselves by their gallantry in action." Since that time, however, many modifications have been introduced in legislation pertaining to requirements for the award of the medals.

On July 9, 1918, legislation clarified the Army Medal of Honor award in the following wording: "That the provisions of existing law relating to the award of Medals of Honor to officers, noncommissioned officers, privates of the Army be, and they hereby are, amended so that the President is authorized to present, in the name of Congress, a Medal of Honor only to each person who, while an officer or enlisted man of the Army, shall hereafter, in action involving actual conflict with an enemy, distinguish himself conspicuously by gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty."

On August 7, 1942, legislation affecting the Navy Medal of Honor amended the act of February 4, 1919, and provides in section 1: "That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby authorized, to present, in the name of Congress, a Medal of Honor to any person who, while in the naval service of the United States, shall, in action involving actual conflict with the enemy, or in the line of his profession, distinguish himself conspicuously by gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his life above and beyond the call of duty and without detriment to the mission of his command to which attached."

At the present time the requirements for the award of the Medal of Honor are set at such a high standard that a great portion of awards are posthumous. The actual act of outstanding heroism must entail the risk of almost certain death.

Citations record acts of heroism which seem utterly incredible of performance by an individual. Yet witnesses observe and in many instances owe their very lives to these men who brave death so that their comrades in arms may live.

Even with the advent of World War I the membership could foresee eventual termination of the organization unless the membership was somehow augmented. After much discussion, it was decided to change the requirements of the constitution and bylaws so that persons awarded the Army Distinguished Service Cross would become eligible for membership. This, of course, necessitated the change in name of the organization to its present name.

The requirements for award of the Distinguished Service Cross are, to quote Army Regulations No. 600–45 of June 27, 1950, "The Distinguished Service Cross is awarded to any person who, while serving in any capacity with the Army of the United States, shall have distinguished himself or herself by extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against an armed enemy."

Several years later recipients of the Navy Cross were also admitted to membership. The requirements for award of the Navy Cross as set forth in section 8 of Navy Regulations relating to decorations reads:

"The act of August 7, 1942, 'That the President be, and he hereby is, further authorized to present but not in the name of Congress, a Navy Cross of appropriate design and ribbon, together with a rosette or other device to be worn in lieu thereof, to any person, who, while serving in any capacity with the Naval service of the United States, distinguishes himself by extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against an armed enemy'."

Although the award of the Congressional Medal of Honor entails an act of almost incredible heroism, yet in the military history of our country since the authorization by Congress of this medal and prior to the close of World War I, 17 persons had performed heroic acts which merited two awards of the Medal of Honor. Five of those persons rereceived 2 Army Medals of Honor, 7 received 2 Navy Medals of Honor, and 5 received 1 Army Medal of Honor, and 1 Navy Medal of Honor. The names of the 17 persons are listed on the following pages and copies of their citations are included in the Medal of Honor volumes of the Army and the Navy Departments:

Frank Baldwin, United States Army, July 20, 1864, Army; second medal, November 8, 1874, Army.

Smedley Butler, United States Marine Corps, April 22, 1914, Navy; second medal, November 17, 1915, Navy.

John Cooper, United States Navy, August 5, 1864, Navy; second medal, April 26, 1865, Navy.

Louis Cukela, United States Marine Corps, July 18, 1918, Navy; second medal, July 18, 1918, Army.

Thomas Custer, United States Army, April 2, 1865, Army; second medal, April 6, 1865, Army.

Dan Daly, United States Marine Corps, August 14, 1900, Navy; second medal, October 22, 1915, Navy.

Charles Hoffman, United States Marine Corps (awarded under the name of E. A. Janson), June 6, 1918, Navy; second medal.

Henry Hogan, United States Army, 1876 to 1877, Army; second medal, September 30, 1877, Army.

John J. Kelly, United States Marine Corps, October 3, 1918, Navy; second medal, October 3, 1918, Army.

John King, United States Navy, May 29, 1901, Navy; second medal, September 13, 1909, Navy.

Matej Kocak, United States Marine Corps, July 18, 1918, Navy; second medal, July 18, 1918, Army.

Patrick Leonard, United States Army, May 15, 1870, Army; second medal, April 28, 1876, Army.

John McCloy, United States Navy, June 22, 1900, Navy; second medal, April 22, 1914, Navy.

Patrick Mullen, United States Navy, March 17, 1865, Navy; second medal, May 1, 1865, Navy.

John H. Pruitt, United States Marine Corps, October 3, 1918, Navy; second medal, October 3, 1918, Army.

Albert Weisbogel, United States Navy, January 11, 1874, Navy; second medal, April 27, 1876, Navy.

William Wilson, United States Army, March 28, 1872, Army; second medal, September 29, 1872, Army.

COMMITTEE MEETING DURING SESSION OF THE SENATE

On request of Mr. JOHNSON of Texas, and by unanimous consent, the Committee on Foreign Relations was authorized to meet during the session of the Senate today.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT TO CONSIDER SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I invite the attention of all Senators to this unanimous-consent request, which I have cleared with the minority leader and other interested Members of the Senate.

I ask unanimous consent that Calendar No. 2825, H. R. 12350, making supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1957, be in order immediately following the disposition of the pending business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

SAFEGUARDS AGAINST MERGERS AND CONSOLIDATION OF BANKS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 3911) to amend the Federal Deposit Insurance Act to provide safeguards against mergers and consolidation of banks which might lessen competition unduly or tend unduly to create a monopoly in the field of banking.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FREAR in the chair). The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, S. 3911 was introduced by myself and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART] to provide effective Federal regulation of mergers and consolidations involving banks insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. I am sure that every Member of this body is aware of the great rash of bank mergers that has taken place in the last few years. The magnitude of the problem is emphasized by the fact that there have been 830 mergers, consolidations, and purchases involving national and State banks during the 6-year period from January 1, 1950 to December 31, 1955. With 225 banks being absorbed during the year 1955, it is evident that the pace of bank mergers is steadily increasing.

It is also clear that the present laws governing bank mergers are inadequate and ineffective. Theoretically, all bank mergers are subject to scrutiny under sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act. However, the Sherman Act has never been applied to bank mergers and consolidations.

Most, if not all, bank mergers are accomplished through asset acquisitions because national banks and State member banks of the Federal Reserve System are prohibited from acquiring stock in other banks, and virtually all State banking laws prohibit State chartered banks from acquiring the controlling stock in another bank. Since section 7 of the Clayton Act applies, in the case of banks, only to mergers or consolidations by stock acquisitions, the prohibitions of that act are for all practical purposes a nullity insofar as banks are concerned. This conclusion is borne out by the fact that there has never been an action instituted against a bank pursuant to section 7.

In this connection, it should be noted that there was an unsuccessful attempt to enforce the stock acquisition provisions of section 7 against a bank holding company. The enactment of the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956 earlier this year provides effective regulation of all acquisitions by bank holding companies, and thus eliminates the necessity of resorting to the Clayton Act in such cases.

The National Bank Act and the Federal Deposit Insurance Act require advance approval by the banking agencies of certain mergers involving insured banks. However, the law specifies no standards to be applied to such transactions and, in particular, no mention is made of competitive and monopolistic aspects.

Thus, we are faced with an important problem, and the present statutes are inadequate to meet the problem. We believe S. 3911 will provide effective and uniform regulation of all bank mergers, consolidations, and other asset acquisition transactions involving banks insured by the FDIC.

The bill contains two fundamental provisions:

First. Administration of the law follows the traditional structure of the banking statutes by placing authority in the three Federal banking supervisory agencies.

Second. The banking agencies would be required to consider whether the proposed bank merger would lessen competition unduly or tend unduly to create a monopoly.

I should like to discuss these two points in some detail.

The bill amends the Federal Deposit Insurance Act to require every insured bank to receive advance approval before it can acquire the assets of another bank by merger, consolidation, or assumption of deposit liabilities. The authority to grant consent to bank acquisitions is divided along traditional lines between the three banking agencies. Thus, prior written consent would be required from the Comptroller of the Currency if the acquiring, assuming, or resulting bank is to be a national bank; the Federal Reserve Board if the acquiring, assuming, or resulting bank is to be a State member bank; or the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation if the acquiring, assuming, or resulting bank is to be a State nonmember insured bank.

The bill requires the 3 banking agencies to consider the banking factors enumerated in section 6 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act. These factors cover the financial history and condition of the bank, the adequacy of its capital structure, its future earnings prospects, the general character of its management, and the convenience and needs of the community to be served by the bank.

In addition, the three banking agencies would be required to consider carefully whether the effect of each asset acquisition may be to lessen competition unduly or to tend unduly to create a monopoly. The committee adopted this new competitive test of unduly lessening competition in preference to the substantial lessening of competition standard as used in section 7 of the Clayton Act. The new test is intended to provide a more flexible test of the degree to which competition may not be impaired than the Clayton Act test.

The new test was necessary in order to permit acquisitions when this is the best means of dealing with situations such as—

First. Where the acquired bank's future prospects are unfavorable because of inadequate management or lack of provision for management succession;

Second. Where the acquired bank has inadequate capital or unsound assets;

Third. Where the acquired bank is an uneconomic unit or is too small to meet the needs of the community by providing loans of sufficient size or necessary banking facilities;

Fourth. Where there is a reasonable probability of the ultimate failure of the bank to be acquired; or

Fifth. Where several banks in a small community are compelled by an "overbanked" situation to resort to unsound competitive practices which may eventually have an adverse effect upon the condition of such banks.

The new criteria would permit the Federal banking agencies to deal with situations such as these and others peculiar to banks. In the absence of such exceptional circumstances, the new standard is intended to be applied vigorously to preserve competition in the banking field.

In the interest of achieving uniform standards, the agency having jurisdiction in a particular merger must seek the views of each of the other two agencies on the competitive and monopolistic aspects of the transaction. This mandatory consultation requirement will insure that the law has uniform applications to all acquisition transactions by insured banks.

S. 3911 also permits the banking agencies to request the opinion of the Attorney General on any competitive or monopolistic question. As a result, the banking agencies, when confronted with an unusually difficult competitive situation, will be free to obtain the views of the Attorney General. This provision, coupled with the fact that the Attorney General would retain his authority under sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act, adequately protects the legitimate interests of the Attorney General in the banking field.

I should also like to point out that the bill is not intended to deprive the State bank supervisors of any of their present authority over bank mergers and consolidations within their respective States. As has been the case in the past in regard to other bank regulatory problems, the views of the State supervisory authorities will be given careful consideration by the Federal agencies in any transaction involving a State-chartered bank.

In conclusion, Mr. President, I wish to emphasize that this bill is unequivocally endorsed by the Treasury Department, the Comptroller of the Currency, the Federal Reserve Board, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. The Bureau of the Budget has stated that "the enactment of legislation for this purpose would be in accord with the program of the President." The bill also has the full support of the Federal Advisory Council, the American Bankers Association, and many individual bankers throughout the country.

The need for a uniform system of Federal regulation of bank mergers and consolidations is evident. S. 3911 will meet the need and provide adequate safeguards to preserve competition. I hope Members of the Senate will join with me and the members of the Banking and Currency Committee in voting for this important legislation.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, I wish to congratulate the chairman of the committee on the very able presentation of the bill. I sat in the committee with him in the preparation of this measure.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I thank the Senator.

Mr. BUSH. I very strongly endorse the bill, which has the sponsorship of the ranking minority member of the committee, the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART].

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, may we have order? We cannot hear the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LAIRD in the chair). The Senate will be in order.

Mr. BUSH. As I see it, the bill places the regulation of mergers in the hands of the expert and informed agencies of the Government which are experienced in every way to deal with the problem. I very strongly urge the passage of the bill.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, I wish to commend the Senator from Arkansas and the other members of his subcommittee, and the members of the full committee, as well, for the very thorough work they have done on this important measure. It is important and, to me, rather complicated. It is absolutely necessary that there be proper regulation of bank mergers, because they can be vital to the future economy of our country, and there must be an agency to exercise continuous supervisory authority over them. It is my understanding that S. 3911 comes nearer to meeting the problem than some of the other bills which have been introduced dealing with the same subject. I should like to ask the Senator whether it is not correct that his subcommittee went thoroughly into all the bills which were introduced on this subject?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I will say to the Senator——

Mr. STENNIS. At least the subcommittee gave consideration to those bills.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. That is correct. This matter has, of course, received attention by other committees, such as the Committee on the Judiciary. It is a very broad field. Our committee takes the view that banks are in a class by themselves, and should not be treated as ordinary industrial corporations, and should be regulated as quasi-utilities and monopolies are regulated, and that that is the proper approach to the problem of regulating banks.

Mr. STENNIS. I thank the Senator.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, after the rather crushing defeat which was administered to the Senator from Illinois last night, I was not quite certain whether it would be appropriate to move an amendment to the bill under consideration at the present time. However, there is an old Scottish song which my ancestors used to sing: "I lie me down to rest, and rise to bleed again."

I wish there might be a longer interval before I was compelled to rise and bleed again, but the exigencies of the fight require me now to rise and move an amendment. I therefore call up my amendment, which is offered by me on behalf of myself and the Senator from New York [Mr. LEHMAN], and is identified as "7–20–56—C."

I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be printed in the RECORD at this point, and that it be not read by the clerk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment will be printed in the RECORD.

The amendment offered by Mr. DOUGLAS on behalf of himself and Mr. LEHMAN is as follows:

On page 2, lines 14 and 15, strike out the words "to lessen competition unduly or to tend unduly" and insert in lieu thereof "substantially to lessen competition or to tend."

On page 2, line 20, strike out the word "may" and insert in lieu thereof "shall."

On page 2, line 21, add the following sentence after the period at the end thereof: "If the Attorney General finds that the effect of the proposed transaction may be substantially to lessen competition or to tend to create a monopoly, consent shall not be given under this subsection unless the Attorney General finds further that such a transaction is necessary to prevent the probable failure of one of the banks concerned.".

Amend the title so as to read: "A bill to amend the Federal Deposit Insurance Act to provide safeguards against mergers and consolidations of banks where the effect may be substantially to lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in the field of banking."

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, the question of bank mergers is an extremely important one. There has been a consolidation of bank control into fewer and fewer hands through three processes: Branch banking, which we have attempted to regulate with greater or lesser success; bank holding companies upon which we passed a fairly good bill earlier in the session, and made better, I believe, by an amendment which I offered, and which, by some strange action, was accepted by the Senate; and bank mergers, of which in the last 2 or 3 years we have had a very large number in the big metropolitan centers of this country. These have been mergers of banks which were not in any sense in financial difficulty. The banks were all in excellent financial condition, and the security of the depositors was not threatened in any respect. By an interchange of assets or acquisition of assets the provisions of the Sherman Act were avoided.

That process of acquiring assets of a bank, rather than the stock, avoids the Sherman Act. Through a slip in the revision of the Sherman Act, which the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER] and Representative CELLER, of New York, put through some years ago, banks were exempted from that law. Therefore, at present, the gates are open for further bank mergers. Representative CELLER introduced a bill to meet this situation which has been passed by the House. That bill gives to the Attorney General the final decision as to whether mergers are in the public interest and to say whether a merger substantially lessens competition. In other words, the test of the Sherman Act is to be applied to bank mergers.

We did not hear anything from the Federal Reserve Board about the pending bill, or from the FDIC or from the Comptroller of the Currency, until after the Celler bill had been passed and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary in the Senate. Suddenly these agencies developed an interest in the question of bank mergers. I believe the very able Senator from Arkansas will agree that this bill had its genesis in the sacred precincts of those three regulatory agencies.

(At this point Mr. DOUGLAS yielded to Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina for a statement on the Dominican Republic, which, on request and by unanimous consent, was ordered to be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of Mr. DOUGLAS' speech.)

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Official Reporter to read back to me a few words where I was interrupted by the distinguished Senator from South Carolina [Mr. JOHNSTON].

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, does that require unanimous consent?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from Illinois restate his request?

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I simply inquired if the Official Reporter would read back to me the last 2 or 3 sentences so that I might be able to make a more connected statement, because of the fact that I yielded to the Senator from South Carolina.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, and I do not believe I shall object, I should like to point out to the Senator from Illinois that he will accomplish very little by objecting to minor unanimous-consent requests on the floor. What some Senators are doing with regard to the bill he wishes to press through this session is exactly what he did last year with reference to the sugar bill. The bill was killed because certain Senators would not give unanimous consent to report it.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Apparently the Senator agrees that the tactics which were used yesterday were wrong.

Mr. LONG. The Senator certainly understands that the attitude he takes toward the bill from the further consideration of which he wishes to discharge the committee is similar to the action he took last year.

However, Mr. President, I shall not object to the Senator's request.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I withdraw my request, lest I offend the sensibilities of my good friend from Louisiana. But I may say to him, in reply, that I think there is a difference in the magnitude of the issues involved in acting on a sugar bill which would benefit a small group of people at the expense of the 165 million consumers of the country, and the question of civil rights for 16 million Americans. But I shall let that go. If the Senator from Louisiana wishes to score a point on that matter, I shall certainly let him do so.

Mr. President, I withdraw my request, and although I am laboring under some disability because of my attempt to be polite to the Senator from South Carolina——

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, if the Senator from Illinois will yield to me I could refresh his memory.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, the Senator from Arkansas has had a very fine classical education, including education at Oxford, and several honorary degrees, and I am sure he is familiar with the expression "Timeo Danaos, et dona ferentes"—Beware of the Greeks when they bring gifts.

So, I feel that the Senator from Arkansas will pardon me if I do not yield to him to give his version of what I have been saying. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, as I was saying when I was interrupted—and I believe that is the way Oliver Wendell Holmes begins The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table—it was not until the Celler bill had passed the House and was before the Judiciary Committee of the Senate that these regulatory agencies discovered an interest in regulating bank mergers.

Then they drafted this bill, and the Senator from Arkansas lent the prestige of his deservedly great name to the bill and it was presented to the Banking and Currency Committee at the same time the Celler bill was in the Judiciary Committee.

The Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and the Comptroller of the Currency have never evinced any real desire to check bank mergers. Their testimony before House committees and Senate committees has been that they were at best indifferent toward mergers and at times were very favorable to them.

So the only conclusion I can draw is that they wanted a softer bill, a bill which would make mergers easier. That is what this bill does. It is a step forward from the present situation, but it is a comparatively soft bill.

For one thing, it replaces the standard of the Sherman Act, which provides that combinations in restraint of trade which substantially lessen competition shall be illegal, and now provides merely that combinations shall not "unduly" limit competition.

That change of words may seem to be innocent; but the testimony which was given before our committee clearly indicated their belief that there could be a very substantial lessening of competition even though it would not be an undue limitation of competition.

So the standard which the agencies desire is one which gives them great leeway. The agencies want to be made the final arbiters as to whether or not a merger is to take place. I think the confiding of such decisions to these bodies will not provide a great deal of protection for the public.

There is a tendency, as we all know, as practical men, for bodies which supposedly regulate industries to become in effect regulated by those industries and for those who are the ostensible controllers to become the controlled. This can take place without any dishonesty on the part of the regulators. They associate with the persons whom they are regulating. They have business dealings with them. They frequently have social dealings with them. They live in a limited world, and they subconsciously absorb the point of view of those whose activities they are supposedly regulating. This is evidenced by the way these gentlemen have refused to take, in the past, any determined stand against bank mergers.

Moreover, they have a certain occupational bias. They think that financial solidity is the sole and only test. They do not place much importance to the decline of competition.

Therefore, without reflecting on the characters of the men who form the Federal Reserve Board, who man the FDIC, or who run the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, I think there would be soft enforcement of this provision if the Fulbright bill in its present form were passed. That is why the Senator from New York [Mr. LEHMAN] and I have proposed an amendment, which is, as I have said, on the desks of all Senators, and which is rather simple in nature.

In the first place, we give the ultimate decision as to whether combinations will substantially reduce competition to the Office of the Attorney General, who then has the power in advance of approval. I hold no brief for the Office of the Attorney General; I certainly hold no brief for the present Attorney General. I recognize that in recent years the Office of the Attorney General has been a political office, to which the leading politicians of both parties have been appointed. I know that.

Nevertheless, there is an Antitrust Division in the Office of the Attorney General. The Antitrust Division concentrates its attention upon whether competition is being substantially impaired. On the whole, the record of the Antitrust Division has been a good one.

I should say at this point that I think the Assistant Attorney General who has been in charge of antitrust matters in the present administration, the Honorable Stanley N. Barnes, is a great public servant, an honest man, an able lawyer, one who works in the public interest. Although he is of an opposite political party from mine, I have only words of commendation for what he did. I prophesied to him a year ago that he was such a good Assistant Attorney General that shortly he would be kicked upstairs and appointed to the Federal bench in order to get him out of the way. This has happened. Barnes has now been promoted to the bench. We rejoice in his appointment. I think he will be a good judge.

What kind of administrator his successor will be, I do not know; but I think Judge Barnes had some voice in his selection.

In any event, unsatisfactory as the Office of the Attorney General may be, there is a concentration upon the question of preserving competition and restricting undue combination.

We have made 1 modification—I should, perhaps, say 2 modifications—in the Celler bill in this respect. The Attorney General is to be advised by the agencies which do the examining, which, in the case of the national banks, is the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency; in the case of State banks which are members of the Federal Reserve System, the Federal Reserve Board; and in the case of State banks which are not members of the Federal Reserve System, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. So I think an improvement has been made upon the Celler bill in this respect.

We have also provided that the test of substantially lessening competition can be modified if a merger is necessary to prevent the imminent failure of one of the banks in question. I do not think it was really necessary to include this in the bill, because it is the common law under the International Shoe Co. decision, but it has been made explicit now, so far as the statutes are concerned.

In short, Mr. President, if Senators want a soft bill, they can vote for the present draft. If they want a more vigorous enforcement of the antitrust laws, so as to maintain this country more effectively as a country of free competition, then I suggest that Senators should vote for the amendments of the Senator from New York and myself.

This is not an unimportant matter; rather, it is a matter of grave concern. Wherever banks have become consolidated, control has been concentrated in a few hands; control over industry has then become concentrated; and the control over banks has helped the concentration of industry.

In England there are now only five great banks. Those great banks work very closely with the cartels and monopolies which have been created. The same thing is true in Germany; it is true also in Canada.

So the more the concentration of credit is facilitated, the greater will be the concentration of industry. This is bad in itself. It leads to a restriction of output. It leads to a concentration of power in economic life, which is bad. It also means that it is very hard to maintain a true political democracy in a country where economic power is concentrated in ever fewer and fewer hands, because, make no mistake about it, if a few control the credit of a country, they will control not only the industry of the country, but also the politics of the country.

So while the move of the Senator from Arkansas is a step forward from what we have, it is not as good a measure as it would be if the amendments of the Senator from New York and myself were put into effect. I hope very much that the amendments may be adopted.

THE DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

During the delivery of Mr. DOUGLAS' speech,

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me briefly?

Mr. DOUGLAS. I yield to the Senator from South Carolina, with the understanding that his remarks will be printed in the RECORD at the end of my speech.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. will the Senator from Illinois permit me to read a 2-minute statement?

Mr. DOUGLAS. The Senator from Illinois is in a very obliging mood, despite the fact that our friends from the South call foot faults on him at every opportunity.

The Senator from Illinois believes in the admonition contained in the Book of Matthew, to turn the other cheek and to go the second mile. However, it is extraordinary how these demonstrations on the part of the Senator from Illinois and his fellow Senators from the North never seem to awaken reciprocal tendencies on the part of Senators from south of the Mason-Dixon line.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, I wish to report to the Senate on the subject of my recent visit to one of our Latin American neighbors. Latin America is a subject which has long occupied my interest since I have always felt that the efforts of our great country should be directed toward assisting and improving conditions in the deserving countries of Latin America.

I have often expressed to the Senate my view that much of the money which we have appropriated for foreign aid in Europe has been wasted and I now express the view that our country could best serve its own requirements by lessening our concentration on aid and assistance to Europe and concentrating more directly on the subject of aid, assistance, and interest in the affairs of some of the countries of Latin America.

We have all witnessed the communistic developments which have taken place in some Latin American countries and have been horror stricken by recent activities in Guatemala, with the ensuing confiscation of American properties in that country. This has been a matter of grave concern to the State Department and the administration as well as to the Congress.

In the last several months particularly I have heard much about the activities of the Government of the Dominican Republic and I deemed it advisable to acquaint myself fully with conditions in that Republic. Accordingly I recently visited that country at my own expense in order to obtain firsthand information. I was amazed by what I saw and heard in that country. Generalissimo Trujillo, in a period of 25 years, has achieved a tremendous success in the improvement of the spiritual and economic well-being of the people of that country. The country has experienced a remarkable development. It has remained free of external debt; has continued to maintain its currency at a par with the United States, with complete freedom of exchange between its pesos and our dollars. This accomplishment alone is remarkable when one realizes that almost every other country in the world has its entire economic system out of balance because of its inability to earn sufficient United States dollars to run its day-to-day affairs.

The Dominican Republic has continued to improve the working and living conditions of its people to a point where it is almost unthinkable that the terror of communism can acquire even the slightest influence.

New and modernly equipped hospitals are available in sufficient number to care for the country's sick; sickness and disease have been substantially reduced within the past 25 years; extreme health measures have been undertaken by the government and the cleanliness which exists throughout the Republic would be an inspiration to most of our American cities.

The increase of electric power has been undertaken with great success and the country is now about to embark on the installation of an atomic-powered reactor for the production of electricity. This step into the future is in keeping with the progressive views of the country and will make the Dominican Republic one of the first nations of the world and perhaps the very first in Latin America to encourage and use the wonders of atomic energy for the production of power and for the betterment of the welfare of its people.

The Government of the Dominican Republic has produced wonderful results in increasing the educational opportunities available to all children of the Republic in place of the education of only the select few which has so long been a problem of many Latin American nations and which has contributed so much to the general low level of the educational accomplishments of these countries.

Although tolerant of all religions the Dominican Republic is predominately a Catholic country and the spiritual well-being and religious activities of the country have won the highest praise of the Catholic Church. Recently during the International Catholic Congress at Ciudad Trujillo, Cardinal Francis J. Spellman best stated the spiritual development of the country when he said:

"The Catholic Church needs freedom to carry out the mission of Christ. Praise God that this freedom exists in the Dominican Republic.

"New and magnificent edifices have risen to stand alongside the ancient Cathedral of Santa Maria La Menor, San Nicolas De Bari, San Miquel and others. The people of the present generation are adding to the richness bequeathed them by their ancestors. The proof is all around us. New hospitals and clinics, new roads, new industries, greatly improved social and sanitation facilities, new housing, new ports, and new public works, a higher standard of living and education. At the same time there are rising in the Republic new churches and new convents and magnificent new schools to educate the future generation of your citizenry. But even more significant than buildings and monuments, highways and ports, the Dominican Republic will be remembered in history for a great act of social justice.

"My friends of the Dominican Republic, you have been among the first in the world to recognize the need for the solidarity of the Americas. You have been among the first to recognize the threat to the Americas of world communism. Perhaps long after your physical achievements have disappeared, you will be remembered for your courage and wisdom in this regard. Only last month I returned from a trip around the world. For the fifth consecutive year I spent Christmas with the American troops in Korea, still devastated by the years of war. With my own eyes I saw once again the results of Comunist aggression. Once again I saw at first hand how communism would enslave the people of the earth.

And above all, I was thankful to Almighty God for the strong Christian tradition of the Americas. That tradition is well symbolized in the strength and faith of the Dominican people as expressed in your magnificent International Fair."

When I speak of this country I speak of one of America's stanchest allies in the field of hemispheric defense and solidarity. At their own expense and in close cooperation with the United States Navy, the Dominicans have maintained the largest fleet in operation in the Caribbean. They are in process of completing a new and modern shipyard which we anticipate will soon be in full-scale operation on an efficient, economic basis. I look forward to the operation of this great shipyard as an adjunct of the United States Navy for its use in conjunction with the Government of the Dominican Republic for the use of our ships patrolling the waters of the Caribbean.

During my recent visit I was informed by Generalissimo Trujillo and his staff of advisers that the country is now preparing to embark upon the further development of its natural resources by working in conjunction with technicians from American oil companies, in order that this great potential wealth might be further developed for the benefit of its people.

As I viewed the development of this country and became aware that so much of this great accomplishment had taken place within the period of only 25 years, I became shocked to think that the Congress of the United States in the present foreign-aid bill had been so paltry in its treatment of the nations of Latin America, our close friends and allies, while being so extremely generous to the nations of Europe. I could not help but think that out of the $4 billion appropriation for foreign aid this year we granted only $50 million for financial assistance to all of the Latin American countries or one-eightieth of the total aid voted by the Congress.

The conclusion is inescapable. These vast accomplishments which I have only briefly called to your attention, Mr. President, have been done almost without assistance from the United States. The task undertaken so far has been most difficult, as will be the fulfillment of the present programs of this Government. I consider it shocking when I think of how little this great country has done to assist this friend and military ally.

It is bad enough for us to fail to give material assistance to friends and allies, but it is far worse for us to tolerate the working of sinister forces in our own country, communistically inspired, whose known purpose is to injure the Dominican Republic and its people and eventually subject that nation to control by a communistic government. Communist Russia will welcome that day when the United States is confronted with problems in the Dominican Republic such as those which have recently confronted us in Guatemala.

Today I am confident that the same communistic sources, the same people, and the same financial agents who destroyed the Government of Guatemala are actively working in this country for the destruction of the Government of the Dominican Republic.

The Government of this Republic has only recently been subjected to unfair and unfounded attacks. The sinister elements within the United States can not escape responsibility for having participated in these unfounded attacks and thus willfully and knowingly advanced the cause of communism within our own hemisphere to the detriment of our allies and good neighbors.

I am pleased to learn from press reports that even the Republican administration has suddenly realized that the rise of Soviet influence in Latin America is taking place at an alarming rate. Finally it appears from the President's pronouncements at the current Panama Conference that the Republican administration is at last agreeable to meeting this problem head on and taking some steps to correct it. The administration would do well to take action within our own borders designed to prevent insidious communism from using our country as a launching board for such deliberate and unfounded attacks and unfair statements as have recently been directed against the Government of the Dominican Republic.

Whether or not the administration takes the action which fairness and decency demand, it is the duty of this great body to use the vast powers which it possesses to determine and publicly expose the forces which prompted such action within our own country.

I advise you, Mr. President, that as a Member of this body I intend to devote my energies to informing the American people of the true situation with respect to the Dominican Republic precisely as it exists. It is my further intention to conduct such investigations as may be necessary to fully expose these sinister forces within our borders.

I thank the Senator from Illinois for yielding to me.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Bartlett, one of its clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 1637) to extend the time limit within which awards of certain military and naval decorations may be made.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 1774) to abolish the Verendrye National Monument, and to provide for its continued public use by the State of North Dakota for a State historic site, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4090) to amend part II of title III of the Communications Act of 1934, so as to require the installation of an automatic radiotelegraph call selector on cargo ships of the United States carrying less than two radio operators, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 4096) to provide for the disposal of public lands within highway, telephone, and pipeline withdrawals in Alaska, subject to appropriate easements, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5712) to provide that the United States hold in trust for the Pueblos of Zia and Jemez a part of the Ojo del Espiritu Santo Grant and a small area of public domain adjacent thereto.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bill and joint resolution, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 7992. An act to enact certain provisions now included in the Department of Defense Appropriation Act and the Civil Functions Appropriation Act, and for other purposes; and

H. J. Res. 689. Joint resolution to provide for the preparation of a history of momentous scenes in the Congress since the Revolutionary War.

HOUSE BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED

The following bill and joint resolution were each read twice by their titles and referred, as indicated:

H. R. 7992. An act to enact certain provisions now included in the Department of Defense Appropriation Act and the Civil Functions Appropriation Act, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Armed Services.

H. J. Res. 689. Joint resolution to provide for the preparation of a history of momentous scenes in the Congress since the Revolutionary War; to the Committee on Rules and Administration.

SAFEGUARDS AGAINST MERGERS AND CONSOLIDATION OF BANKS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 3911) to amend the Federal Deposit Insurance Act to provide safeguards against mergers and consolidation of banks which might lessen competition unduly or tend unduly to create a monopoly in the field of banking.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, while I shall, of course, vote for S. 3911, I sincerely hope that the amendments which have been proposed by the distinguished Senator from Illinois and myself will be agreed to.

I have the feeling that bank mergers should take place only where a real economic reason can be definitely shown. Certainly, in the past the reasons which had been advanced by many banks as justification for the mergers in which they were proposing to engage were completely inadequate. I have looked with great concern on the evergrowing number of mergers which are taking place in this country, and notably in the State of New York. Since 1950, in 5 years, mergers have occurred involving banks with total resources of $19 billion.

In the State of New York mergers took place as follows: Banks having resources of under $5 million, 44. Banks having resources of over $5 million and under $10 million, 40. Banks having resources of over $10 million and under $25 million, 29. Banks having resources of over $25 million and under $50 million, 11. Banks having resources of over $50 million, 13. And, Mr. President, believe it or not, those 13 banks had total resources of nearly $9 billion.

I can say, Mr. President, from a very long experience in the banking field, that there are today in the State of New York less than half the number of banks there were 20 years ago. They have been absorbed, they have been merged, their assets have been bought, or in other ways, banks have been taken into other banks.

I can see that in certain instances it is an economic advantage and perhaps in the interest of depositors that banks should be sold through mergers. In our amendment we have provided that wherever the Attorney General feels that necessity requires, he should give consent; but, in the main, there is no real advantage——

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEHMAN. I yield.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I think there is some confusion. Maybe it is on my part. The Senator said only where there are sound economic reasons should mergers be permitted.

Mr. LEHMAN. I did not hear the Senator.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. The Senator said only where there are sound economic reasons should mergers be permitted.

Mr. LEHMAN. No. I qualified that by saying when there are reasons which demonstrate that mergers are in the public interest, either because of the economic considerations involved or in order to protect the depositors. I know that in many instances there is an advantage in merging, for the protection of the depositors. We found during the days of the depression that many banks had to be merged.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEHMAN. I yield.

Mr. DOUGLAS. The Senator from Arkansas knows perfectly well what our amendment provides. It provides that a merger can be permitted when, in the opinion of the Attorney General, it is necessary to prevent the probable failure of one of the banks concerned. The Senator from Arkansas is merely muddying the waters.

Mr. LEHMAN. I thought I had made it very clear to the Senator from Arkansas that that was the case. I mentioned that whenever the Attorney General felt it was in the public interest, or for the protection of depositors or the community, he could give permission. However, what I am talking about is that we know that there have been mergers between the Chase National Bank and the Bank of Manhattan in New York, creating the Chase-Manhattan Bank. There has been a merger between the Chemical Bank & Trust Co. and the Corn Exchange Bank, leading to the creation of what is now known as the Chemical-Corn Exchange Bank. There have been mergers of other huge commercial banks. I do not believe there is any need of that. After a bank has reached a certain size, sufficient to care for the community's needs, I do not believe there is any advantage whatsoever to the community in permitting such mergers.

I again wish to repeat that today there are in the city of New York less than half the number of banks there were 20 years ago. The banks that have been taken over, absorbed, and merged were the very banks which gave service to small groups, small merchants, and the small private investor. They have been simply absorbed and merged into great entities having assets of $5 billion, $6 billion, or $7 billion. The size of banks beyond a certain level does not inure to the benefit of the community or the people who live in the community.

So I believe the amendment which the Senator from Illinois and I have offered is definitely in the interest of sound banking, and particularly in the interest of communities served by banks. This is true particularly when we realize that in one State alone, within a period of 5 years, banks having resources of about $10 billion have merged and throughout the country there were mergers of banks which had total resources of nearly $19 billion. When we realize that in very few cases was there any need of or necessity for or any advantage to the community in the mergers, I think we should take every possible step to insure that mergers will have to be proved to be in the interest of the community and on a basis that is sound and safe for the depositors.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, I think there is some real confusion about the significance—the meaning, if you like—of the amendment offered by the Senator from Illinois and the Senator from New York. If I understand what the Senator from New York has said, there are circumstances which he thinks should be considered in cases of mergers, such as that the mergers should be to the benefit of the community, perhaps result in a saving to stockholders, and so on. I wish to call to the attention of the Senate the language of the amendment which appears on page 2:

> That the effect of the proposed transaction may be substantially to lessen competition or to tend to create a monopoly—

That is very specific—> consent shall not be given under this subsection unless the Attorney General finds further that such a transaction is necessary to prevent the probable failure of one of the banks concerned.

In other words, the only exception is failure of a bank. The amendment states nothing about benefit to the community or other reasons. The very point of the bill of the committee is to permit consideration of other elements than lessening of competition. There are six broad categories under section 6, which were referred to and mentioned specifically in my initial statement. In other words, the amendment encompasses the very narrow conception of lessening of competition. What we are trying to do is to permit broader consideration of all the factors involved before the merger is prohibited. The pending amendment provides that if the effect of the proposed transaction may be substantially to lessen competition, the Attorney General shall oppose it, unless he finds the transaction necessary to prevent the failure of the bank.

If I correctly understood the Senator from New York, he was saying that he, himself, had a broader concept of what would be to the welfare and benefit of the community. But what does he mean by such language? That language is not in his own amendment. That language is involved in the concept of the law we are proposing to create, a concept not now in the law. We wanted the bill to be so flexible that the benefits to the community can be considered. I understand that is the sort of language the Senator from New York wishes to use. I do not think there is any difference between the objective of the amendment of the Senator from New York and the objective of the bill I introduced.

It is true that in his own State, some large mergers have occurred. For example, nothing could be done about the merger between the Chase National Bank and the Manhattan National Bank, because no existing law could have prevented it. But if this bill had been enacted and in effect, I hope it could have and would have prevented such a merger.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Arkansas yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HUMPHREYS of Kentucky in the chair). Does the Senator from Arkansas yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I yield.

Mr. LEHMAN. I have already told the Senator from Arkansas that I would support his bill. I am a member of the committee which reported the bill. But my thesis is that the amendment submitted by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS] and myself would greatly strengthen the bill.

I realize perfectly well that all that the bill does, as a matter of fact, is to call the Attorney General into the picture and require that when he sees a transaction which may substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly, he shall take action. Of course, we assume that in such an event he would not give his consent. But he would be allowed to give his consent in cases where, even though the mergers might lessen competition or might tend to create a monopoly, the failure to carry out the transaction or merger would lead to probable failure by one of the banks concerned, and thus to cause loss to the depositors in the bank.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, apparently the Senator from New York himself recognizes that the standard of substantially lessening competition was too narrow. So he has provided for one additional exception, namely, unless the Attorney General finds it will result in the probable failure of one of the banks.

All that the bill seeks to do by its adoption of the word "unduly" is to give the regulatory bodies authority to consider these five different elements, in making their decision—for example, where the acquired bank has inadequate capital or unsound assets. That is similar to the exception favored by the Senator from New York, namely, with respect to probable failure of one of the banks; but it is not quite similar. It is a little different; the Attorney General would not have to wait until the bank was about to fail.

Second, where the acquired bank is an uneconomic unit and is too small to meet the needs of the community by being of sufficient size to provide the necessary banking facilities—and so on. I shall not read the remainder.

The Senator from Illinois and the Senator from New York seek to provide the power to consider additional factors, besides that of competition—which is what I would interpret the Senator meant when he said "consider the public welfare in the community."

Mr. PASTORE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Arkansas yield to me?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I yield.

Mr. PASTORE. Does the Senator from Arkansas interpret the amendment of the Senator from New York [Mr. LEHMAN] and the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS] to mean that the Attorney General must, of necessity, find that the transaction is necessary in order to prevent a probable failure, before he could permit a merger to occur?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Yes.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Provided that he must find also that it does not substantially lessen competition.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I would say that practically every merger would lessen competition.

Mr. PASTORE. I invite the attention of the two Senators—the Senator from New York and the Senator from Illinois—to their amendment. If they mean something other than what is stated in the amendment, I think they should modify the amendment accordingly.

After setting forth the things to be considered by the Attorney General, then on page 2, in line 3 of the amendment, there is the statement:

> Unless the Attorney General finds further——

In other words, he must, of necessity, find it further, as a further fact, in addition to all the other things—> that such a transaction is necessary to prevent the probable failure of one of the banks concerned.

That is a further finding that he must make in any event, regardless of all else.

If the sponsors of the amendment do not mean that, I think they should correct or modify the amendment.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President——

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, who has the floor?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I have the floor.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, may we have a ruling as to who has the floor?

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, I think I have the floor.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, do I not have the floor?

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, I believe that I yielded to the Senator from Arkansas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HUMPHREYS of Kentucky in the chair). The Senator from Arkansas was recognized, and has the floor.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. That is correct, Mr. President.

I may say that the Senator is quite correct, because the merger of banks in an existing community is bound to lessen competition. The point is not whether the merger will lessen competition; the point is whether the effect of the merger will be beneficial or not beneficial.

The Senator is quite correct in saying that the only consideration under this bill, the only thing the Attorney General can consider, is whether the merger is likely to result in the failure of one of the banks. That criterion is much too narrow. So I think the Senator is entirely correct.

The Senator from Illinois said this is a soft bill. Mr. President, it is not soft at all, in any respect, other than when it permits and directs the authorities to consider elements other than that of the substantial lessening of competition.

I would say that a mandatory requirement that the Attorney General must object to a proposed merger if there would be a substantial lessening of competition, is much too narrow, and would not work; and when it is so unrealistic and unacceptable, I believe it probably would result in evasion of the law. So I do not believe that in the long run it would be nearly so effective for all purposes as the standards set forth in the bill itself—beginning with that of unduly restricting competition, in which case the authorities are authorized and directed to consider additional elements which would exist in the community.

Mr. President, the amendment proposed by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS] for himself and the Senator from New York [Mr. LEHMAN] would destroy the fundamental nature of Senate bill 3911, by attempting to transplant portions of the Clayton Act into the banking statutes.

The amendment proposes two drastic changes: First, the Clayton Act test of substantially lessening competition would be imposed on all mergers by insured banks; and, second, the Attorney General would be given a veto power over all insured bank mergers.

The bill presently provides that no merger may lessen competition unduly or tend unduly to create a monopoly. The Douglas amendment would substitute for this test the criteria of substantially lessening competition as used in the Clayton Act. The Clayton Act test, as interpreted by the courts, is not broad enough to permit bank mergers which would be in the public interest. Earlier today I mentioned a number of situations where, although there might be a substantial lessening of competition, a merger might properly be permitted.

The Senator from Illinois, by modifying his amendment, has recognized the fact that there are cases where a bank merger should be permitted, although there is a substantial lessening of competition. However, the Douglas amendment permits such a merger only where it is necessary to prevent the probable failure of one of the banks concerned. The difficulty with this approach is that it recognizes only one of the many factors which should be considered in a bank merger. The Douglas amendment does not cover situations such as where the acquired bank's future prospects are unfavorable because of inadequate management or inadequate capital or unsound assets or because it is too small to meet the needs of the community. It is impossible to list all the situations which may arise where a bank merger could be permitted, although there is a substantial lessening of competition.

The unduly lessening of competition test is used in the bill, instead of the Clayton Act test, in order to permit the Federal banking agencies to deal with these situations peculiar to banks.

The competitive test in Senate bill 3911 is broad enough to meet these situations and yet will provide ample safeguards to insure competition in the banking field.

The other change proposed by the Douglas amendment is to give the Attorney General a veto power over all bank mergers covered by the bill. Even though the banking agencies after considering all the relevant factors consent to the merger, under the proposed amendment, the Attorney General could step in and override the findings of the banking agencies. The banking agencies are fully competent to pass on the merits of these transactions, and there is no need to superimpose another level of administrative authority. It is well known by every Member of this body that the Attorney General's Office is often used for political purposes. There is certainly no need to inject political considerations into the bank-merger question. Nothing could be more disastrous to the reputation of a bank and to the depositor's confidence in a bank than to have scare headlines relating to the Attorney General's rejection of a bank-merger proposal.

The Attorney General's legitimate interests are fully protected by the present provisions of the bill. If the banking agencies have a difficult merger question to consider, they are free to obtain the opinion of the Attorney General. I am sure that if the banking agencies are faced with a merger of the magnitude of the Chase-Manhattan situation, they will not hesitate to obtain the Attorney General's views. In addition, the Attorney General would retain his authority to proceed against any bank merger under the provisions of the Sherman Act.

I do not think it is logical to attempt to place provisions of the Clayton Act in the banking statutes. I am sure it is clear that the Comptroller of the Currency, the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and the American Bankers Association strenuously oppose the Douglas amendment. The Douglas amendment would destroy the fundamental principles of this legislation, and I urge the Members of the Senate to vote against it.

The Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS] made reference to the fact that there had been no great interest in bank mergers by these authorities. Nearly a year ago the Banking and Currency Committee requested the agencies to make suggestions covering this subject, and they were slow in doing so. However, it is very natural that no agency or industry goes out of its way to seek additional regulation, however meritorious it may be. I cannot see any particular reason why the bill should be objected to because there was not prompted action on the part of the agencies in suggesting regulations.

In connection with the last point I should like to make, I invite the attention of Senators to a paragraph on page 17 of the hearings on Senate bill 3911, from the statement of L. A. Jennings, first Deputy Comptroller of the Currency. I ask unanimous consent that that paragraph be printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks, in order to make the point I wish to make. It is the next to the last paragraph at the bottom of the page. I think it would make the RECORD much clearer.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Banking is a supervised and regulated industry, and our dual banking system is one composed of well designed checks and balances that have been the outgrowth of long experience. It assures an aggressive and progressive climate for banking which redounds to the benefit of the public. The Congress has long recognized the regulated and supervised nature of banking, as it has in other regulated industries, and we are aware of no justifiable reason for placing asset acquisitions by banks in the form of consolidations, mergers, and purchases within the scope of section 7 of the Clayton Act and within the jurisdiction of the Department of Justice. Section 7 of the Clayton Act prohibits corporate mergers where there may be a substantial lessening of competition or a tendency to create a monopoly. That section and other sections of the Clayton Act are administered by certain named boards and commissions with concurrent enforcement authority in the Department of Justice; but the last paragraph of section 7 of the Clayton Act expressly provides that that section shall not apply to transactions in certain regulated industries which are duly consummated pursuant to authority given by the Civil Aeronautics Board, Federal Communications Commission, Federal Power Commission, United States Maritime Commission, and the Secretary of Agriculture. We see nothing in the bank supervisory field or in the field of banking that should require the Congress to treat the regulated banking industry and its duly constituted supervisors in a very special and less favorable way than is the case in the regulated industries, commissions, and boards just named.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. This paragraph points out that in all other cases in which the Government supervises an activity of a quasi-monopolistic nature, such as a railroad, a communications utility, or a power company, the agency which has supervision over it is authorized to approve mergers within its jurisdiction. Such mergers are exempt from the Clayton Act.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. What is the pending question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS] for himself and the Senator from New York [Mr. LEHMAN], which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, lines 14 and 15, it is proposed to strike out the words "to lessen competition substantially or to tend unduly" and insert in lieu thereof "substantially to lessen competition or to tend."

On page 8, line 20, it is proposed to strike out the word "may" and insert in lieu thereof "shall."

On page 2, line 21, it is proposed to add the following sentence after the period at the end thereof:

If the Attorney General finds that the effect of the proposed transaction may be substantially to lessen competition or to tend to create a monopoly, consent shall not be given under this subsection unless the Attorney General finds further that such a transaction is necessary to prevent the probable failure of one of the banks concerned.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, it seems to me that during the past 48 hours every Member of the Senate has had a complete education in parliamentary law. We have seen problem after problem presented, within and without the rules of the Senate. We know how important it is, if any constructive legislation is to be enacted, that it have the support of the departments involved, as well as the support of the two Houses of Congress. Therefore, in seeking to obtain any legislation it is incumbent upon those who desire to get constructive results to keep their eyes upon what each House is doing with respect to the legislation, and to keep their eyes upon what the Executive attitude toward a particular measure may be.

I am speaking directly, now, to my good friend, the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. FULBRIGHT], chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee. I should like to have the RECORD show that the bill which he has brought before the Senate today is a Senate bill. This is Wednesday. By the terms of the Legislative Reorganization Act the Congress is under obligation to bring its session to a close by the 31st of July. We must bring it to a close unless a resolution can be passed through both Houses extending the session. So when we seek legislation to place upon the statute books, we must think of the executive power as well as the legislative power.

Before us is a bill which was introduced in the Senate, not in the House. It was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency; and at the very moment when it was introduced and sent to the Banking and Currency Committee, there had passed a House bill designed to stop mergers—mergers which are eating up the substance of the free-enterprise system in America. We find them in connection with the food industry. We find them in every branch of agriculture. We find them in the automobile industry, and we find them in almost every line to which we turn our attention. Monopoly through merger is closing the door of opportunity to the plain people of America. Is it not important to bear that in mind?

The House bill contained provisions for prenotification to the Department of Justice and to the Federal Trade Commission by corporations which were seeking to merge, not only in the industrial field, but in the banking field. The bill which passed the House was before the Judiciary Committee. Therefore, in the Judiciary Committee we have a bill dealing with bank mergers which would require notification to the Attorney General.

In that way the Attorney General would know in advance whether or not the mergers of banks, as well as mergers in other industries, would have an adverse effect upon free opportunity and free enterprise. Not until that bill had passed the House did the financial agencies of the Government—the Federal Reserve Board, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and the Comptroller of the Currency—make any move with respect to mergers. They did not want the Department of Justice to have its hand in bank mergers.

If a monopoly is brought about by a bank, it is just as much a monopoly as if it had been consummated by some great national corporation engaged in some other branch of industry. We know that with so many mergers taking place the position of small business is constantly becoming worse and worse and worse, because we fail to deal with fundamentals.

I remember very well when the Legislative Reorganization Act was passed—it was designed to make Congress a more efficient legislative unit by reducing the number of committees—so that Members would not have to serve on so many committees, thus would know more of the business that was going on.

Legislative reorganization was based upon the theory that the respective activities of the Government should be under the supervision of committees which were in close touch with the various governing agencies. The antitrust law, passed for the protection of small business, has been on the statute books since 1890, and everyone has been paying mere lip service to it. Combinations in restraint of trade have been universally denounced, even by the leaders of monopolistic combinations.

What is the situation with respect to the banks at the present moment? I have talked with Members of the Senate, who will tell anyone, I am sure, of the inability of a small-business man to secure credit in his own community.

Last Sunday afternoon, I was riding from Boston to Washington in an airplane. By chance I sat with a gentleman who is the head of a large corporation. His headquarters are in Detroit. It is a large corporation by the standards of small business, but a small business by the standards of big business. In the course of our conversation, he told me that in the city of Detroit there are only 2 big banks, because those 2 big banks have absorbed the other banks. He said it has come to the point where it is getting more and more difficult all the time for the little fellow to get credit which will keep him in business.

In the city of Boston, while I was there, only for a few hours, I talked with another man, who had obtained a loan from the Small Business Administration, which was established by Congress. It was a loan to permit him to continue in business. It was for only $35,000. In the 6 months since that loan was extended, he had made a profit of about $12,000. The loan by the SBA was based upon the condition that a local bank should participate in the loan to the extent of 10 percent. The bank did that. However, only the other day the bank, which is a small branch of a big bank that operates throughout the State of Massachusetts, told the borrower that even though he had paid every single obligation up to date, the bank did not want to go along with him any longer. The manager of the small branch of the big bank was perfectly within his right in telling him that. However, the sad thing is that when that bank suspends operations with that small-business man, he goes out of business, because the SBA will have to liquidate the loan. That will happen because of the concentration of bank mergers.

So much for the merits. That situation is found in every State, and in every large city.

There is now pending in the Committee on the Judiciary a bill, to be considered by the committee tomorrow morning, which contains a provision with respect to banks. It came to us from the House, and that bill, with its bank provision—we did not put the provision in the bill—preserves the right of the Department of Justice to enforce antitrust laws against bank mergers when the occasion arises. What is wrong about that? The Department of Justice testified before the Committee on Banking and Currency, and the former head of the Antitrust Division, Judge Barnes, whose nomination by the President to be a circuit judge in California was recently confirmed by the Senate, told the committee what he thought of the bill. He said:

> All told, then, that proposal does little, if anything, to insure competitive enterprise in banking. Any pretense that it does seems to me unrealistic and largely a sham.

When the head of the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice has that to say about a bill sponsored by the financial agencies which never were at all in favor of control of bank mergers until after the House had acted and the Department of Justice had recommended it, what is the result?

We have before us a Senate bill. We have only Thursday, Friday, and Saturday remaining of this session. There is no possibility of the bill being enacted in the House against the recommendation of the former head of the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice. The Senate in passing the bill is merely taking action in futility. The Senate is asked to pass a bill which the House cannot consider because of the lack of time, and against which the Department of Justice has already testified, saying that the proposed legislation is largely a sham.

How are we going to have constructive legislation enacted by that method? How will we get the Executive's signature to the bill?

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Wyoming yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Is it not true that if the amendment under consideration were adopted the bill would not be a sham? It may be that, because of the shortness of the time of the session, no legislation can be passed, but I wonder if the Senator from Wyoming, if he supported the amendment, could not be satisfied with the whole bill itself.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I think the amendment is an improvement, of course, because it is an attempt to correct the situation which now exists. But what I am asking the Senator from Arkansas, and I do so in the utmost sincerity, is why would it not be better, if constructive legislation is desired, to postpone further consideration of this bill until the Judiciary Committee tomorrow has an opportunity to work out an amendment to the House bill, which might bring about some results? I realize, from long experience, that all legislation comes as a result of compromise. I know perfectly well that no legislation will come out of this procedure, because the bill from the Banking and Currency Committee does not have a Chinaman's chance to pass the House.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. At least, it is on the floor of the Senate, and the Senator's bill is not on the floor. I do not know that it will ever get there.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Neither do I; but all I am asking is that the Chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee wait until the Judiciary Committee acts tomorrow. If it does not act, my mouth is shut.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. As long ago as February or March I wrote to the then chairman of the Judiciary Committee calling attention to the jurisdiction of the Banking and Currency Committee over this matter. That committee clearly does have jurisdiction over banking legislation. I cannot understand the Senator's enthusiasm for putting bank mergers under the regulatory authority of the Department of Justice when he himself has, better than anyone else in this country, convinced us that that Department has been ineffective in enforcing antimonopoly legislation already on the books. There is a complete inconsistency out of his own mouth.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Senator exaggerates his compliment.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. The Senator from Wyoming is trying to give to the Department of Justice power to restrict bank mergers. I am informed by excellent authority that if we had had on the books legislation such as that to which the Senator refers it would have prevented certain mergers. I do not say this is a perfect bill, but it is consistent with the previous actions of the Government in other fields. The Clayton Act exempts mergers approved by the CAB, by the Department of Agriculture, and by the Maritime Commission——

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Before the Senator asks me 10 questions, let me answer the 3 which he has propounded. In the first place, I am not trying to take any authority away from fiscal agencies. I have good words for them.

In the second place, I never said that the Department of Justice for 50 years was not enforcing the antitrust laws. What I have said is that for 50 years the Congress of the United States has not amended the antitrust laws so as to make them effective. That is what I am trying to do now, to ask the cooperation of the Committee on Banking and Currency for 24 hours with the Committee on the Judiciary in the hope that tomorrow morning we may be able to report a bill dealing with bank mergers, as well as with other mergers, a bill which will be satisfactory to the Senator from Arkansas and the members of his committee and which will have a chance of being signed. The measure the Senator proposes, if it shall pass, when it goes out of this door, will go right down the road to oblivion.

If the Senator will cooperate with me and with the members of the Judiciary Committee to see if we cannot agree upon a bank amendment which will be satisfactory to the three Government agencies for whom the Senator speaks, and the Department of Justice for which I am now speaking, then we may have a law upon the statute books which will prevent these mergers.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. The Senator has not persuaded me that he knows the House will agree to such a provision as he suggests. He knows that, so far as the executive branch being in favor of it, there is no question that they prefer this Senate bill. There is no question that the President will sign the Senate bill if it is passed. The House has had a housing bill before it for a long time, which was passed by the Senate by an overwhelming majority, and the House has refused to do anything with it. On the other hand, if they could get a rule, they could pass it tomorrow.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. If they could get a rule. The Senator from Arkansas himself was once a very amiable and very able Member of the House. He knows all about the Rules Committee. He knows how bills can be bottled up in the Rules Committee, and he knows that debate can be limited in the House.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. And that a bill can be passed in a minute if the House wants to pass it.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. But, on the other hand, with time pressing as it is now, and with every Member of Congress, whether in the Senate or in the House, buttonholing every other Member of Congress in order to get through bills which they regard as very important, the result is that important proposed legislation does.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Why does the Senator think the House will pass the bill to which he refers.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It has already passed the House.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. But it has not passed the Senate. I told the Senator long ago that I would object to the jurisdiction of his committee, the Committee on the Judiciary, in this field.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Did the Senator introduce a bill?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Yes; I introduced this bill.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Not until after the House had passed its bill.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I had given notice in February that we were developing a bill [illegible] set forth in a letter many of the features of the bill. The coincidence of the timing is not particularly significant. Even the sponsors of this amendment admit that the bill is a step forward.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. But it is only a gesture, a futility.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. The Senator from New York and the Senator from Illinois simply wish to adopt the standard of the Clayton Act. I cannot see why the Senator from Wyoming is so enthusiastic about putting further power in the hands of an agency which has been so unsuccessful in preventing monopolies in the past. Why not give us a chance with a new agency?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Congress has been endeavoring by means of the bill which is before the Judiciary Committee to increase the efficiency of the Department of Justice. But when we transfer the jurisdiction over bank mergers to the financial agencies they will have to hire a new bunch of lawyers if they undertake to enforce it.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Banking is a regulated business. It is not comparable to the automobile business or to the food industry. It is comparable to the communications business, which is regulated.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I rose not to hold the floor and prevent disposition of the bill. I rose to point out to the chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee the realistic facts of legislative life, including the fact that there are only a few days left of the session. The Senator stands for a bill which has not yet passed the Senate or the House. I favor the bill which has already passed the House. I am saying to the Senator that in the session of the committee tomorrow it is quite possible we may be able to work out an amendment which will be satisfactory to the Senator. Therefore, I am only requesting that he let the matter go over for a day or so—until tomorrow afternoon.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. The Senator has asked something which it is very difficult to agree to, for the same reason he has mentioned, namely, that we are nearing the end of the session. If we are to get action on the bill at all, it will have to be done in the proper order. There are many conference reports which are pressing upon the Senate. I do not know what will happen.

I do not think it is a legitimate request that action on the bill be postponed based on what the House may or may not do. This is a good bill. It should be considered on its merits. Whatever the House may do is its responsibility, not ours. If the House acts arbitrarily or unwisely, that is the responsibility of the House. But the Senate should not consider the bill with that in mind.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. ANDERSON. What does the Senator have to say on the question of jurisdiction? I am very much interested in what the Senator from Arkansas said about that, because many of us know that occasionally the question of jurisdiction crops up. Should not a bank matter stay in the Committee on Banking and Currency?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Should not an antitrust matter stay in the Department of Justice?

Mr. ANDERSON. Is this primarily an antitrust matter?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It deals primarily with the merger of banks. It relates to monopolistic mergers. If there are no monopolistic mergers, then the Department of Justice will have nothing to do with the matter.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. This is a very important question. I pointed out that in other fields where the Government is given regulatory powers, these very questions of mergers are specifically exempted from the operation of the Clayton Act, indicating that for years we have recognized that there are regulated industries, and that, therefore, they are exempt from the ordinary jurisdiction with regard to mergers. That is true. I think that point is very well taken.

Mr. ANDERSON. So far as I am concerned, if a bill is a good bill and there is still a chance of having it acted on by the House, I do not care whether the House can take action on it or not.

A couple of years ago some Senators were trying to get action on the upper Colorado bill in almost the last days of the session. We knew it was a futile attempt, but we thought we might express the action of one House on the subject.

I am somewhat interested in the question of bank mergers. In the neighboring State of Arizona, the banking situation is such that about two banks control all the banking in the State. If a person cannot get money in one place, he cannot get it anywhere else.

Now one of those chains has come into my home State of New Mexico and has established a great many banks. I am concerned to know what is going to follow that. That is why I am curious about the queston of jurisdiction.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The reason why the merger provision is before the Committee on the Judiciary now is that it is a part of a House-passed bill.

Mr. ANDERSON. I understand that; it is the Celler bill.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The Celler bill. If we desire to procure legislation which will be effective to prevent monopolistic banking, such as the Senator from New Mexico is worried about, then I say the Senate should agree to my simple request of the Senator from Arkansas to withhold further action upon the pending bill until we have had a chance, in the bill already passed by the House, to see if we cannot write an amendment which will be satisfactory both to the Senate and to the House.

In other words, I am saying that, if we delay action for 24 hours, we may have a chance to secure legislation. If we do not, then perhaps we will have killed the chance to have legislation.

Mr. ANDERSON. Will the Senator indicate how long the House bill has been before the Senate?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I have forgotten. We held our hearings very quickly. The hearings were held not less than 2 months ago.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I should like to announce for the information of the Senate the bills which have been reported to the Senate today and which I hope will be ready for consideration by the Senate tomorrow, or as soon as possible thereafter. I shall announce all the bills in the hope that some or all of them can be favorably acted upon by the Senate at the earliest possible time.

H. R. 11270, the military construction bill;

H. R. 7728, to ratify the transfer of property from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the Navy;

H. R. 9631, to confirm a 1947 sale of surplus land;

H. R. 10383, for the conveyance of land to Vero Beach, Fla.;

S. 3021, relating to the black market in child adoption in interstate commerce;

H. R. 12080, the omnibus rivers and harbors bill;

Senate Resolution 314, to investigate the importation of distilled spirits;

H. R. 10624, relating to the Manila Electric Co., in the Philippines;

H. R. 2845, relating to a statutory award for certain injuries to military personnel;

H. R. 7634, providing an increased tax exemption on transportation charges;

H. R. 9396, relating to the transfer of guar seed to the free list;

H. R. 9875, providing an increased exemption on theater tickets;

H. R. 12254, relating to the extension of the Tariff Commission report filing date;

H. R. 10177, to provide a 2-year free entry of certain shoe lathes;

S. 4164, providing for the appointment of a Federal Highway Administrator in the Department of Commerce;

H. R. 11833, relating to the Great Plains Conservation program; and

S. 3517, to provide for the reorganization of the safety functions of the Federal Government.

I do not know that any or all of these bills willl be called up; but when the reports are available, and when I have cleared the bills with the respective policy groups on both sides, and after I have given notice, and Senators have had a chance to register their views with me, the bills may be taken up.

I shall attempt to give as much advanced notice as possible of the calling up of bills.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. I yield.

Mr. DOUGLAS. May I inquire if it is the intention of the leadership to schedule Calendar No. 2618, H. R. 3210, a bill to authorize the State of Illinois and the Sanitary District of Chicago, under the direction of the Secretary of the Army, to test, on a 3-year basis, the effect of increasing the diversion of water from Lake Michigan into the Illinois waterway, and for other purposes?

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. That bill has not been cleared, although I have not made any special effort to clear it. I shall be glad to do so this afternoon.

I shall inform the Senator from Illinois before we conclude our session today of the results of my efforts, and perhaps ask his cooperation.

So far as I am concerned, I shall be very happy to schedule the bill and to see that the Senate acts on it.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I appreciate the assurance of the Senator from Texas. This is a very important measure. It was passed by the House last year by a very large vote. It is vitally connected with the sanitation problem in the city of Chicago. It will not effect any real hardship on any other locality.

The bill has been opposed by the administration in the past on the ground that Canada did not like it. But I think the Canadian objections have been pretty well refuted in the hearings before the Committee on Public Works.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. I shall discuss the bill with the chairman of the Subcommittee on Flood Control of the Committee on Public Works, the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. KERR]; with the distinguished minority leader; with the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Public Works [Mr. CHAVEZ], and with the ranking minority member of the committee, the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. MARTIN], to see if I can make any progress, and I will keep the Senator from Illinois fully informed.

If I am unable to have the bill cleared, I will tell the Senator the reasons, and perhaps he can help me to do something about it.

AUTOMOBILE DEALERS' DAY IN COURT

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, if I may have the attention of the majority leader, I have just consulted the Senator from California, and it is agreeable to him that I may bring before the Senate the House-passed dealers-day-in-court bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. I may say to the Senator, so far as the subject which he is discussing and on which he has done so much work is concerned, whenever the Senator from Wyoming says he wants to move to concur in the House amendments, the Senator from Texas will be standing by his side, as he has during the long, tortuous road the Senator from Wyoming has traveled.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I ask unanimous consent that the amendments of the House to Senate bill 3879 be considered, after the bill from the Banking and Currency Committee shall have been disposed of.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. I do not want to object to the request of my friend, the Senator from Wyoming, but we have a unanimous-consent agreement with respect to the supplemental appropriation bill.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I realize that.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Would the Senator from Wyoming agree to a time limitation of 10 minutes to each side?

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, I am not in a position to agree, because there are several Members on this side of the aisle who want to be notified and to have a chance to present their views. I think there is some opposition to the amendments.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Would the Senator from Wyoming be agreeable, when we take up the supplemental appropriation bill, to laying it aside and taking up the House amendments?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Has the Senator made his unanimous-consent request?

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. The Senator from Wyoming asked unanimous consent that the amendments of the House to the dealers-day-in-court bill be laid before the Senate immediately following action on the pending bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent request? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

RETIREMENT OF SENATOR MILLIKIN, OF COLORADO

Mr. ALLOTT. Mr. President——

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, may we have order in the Chamber? The Senator from Colorado has an important announcement to make, and I should like to have complete order in the Chamber.

Mr. ALLOTT. This morning my colleague, the senior Senator from Colorado, EUGENE D. MILLIKIN, announced at a press conference that he would retire from the United States Senate at the conclusion of this term. This is an announcement which causes a great deal of grief to many of us who have known him for these many years. He is one of Colorado's greatest citizens, if not indeed its greatest citizen. He was graduated from the University of Colorado law school in 1913, and thereafter entered the Army as a private, and came out as a lieutenant colonel in the First World War.

He then began the practice of law in Denver, and participated very actively in the Republican Party and in politics in the State of Colorado, and did so for many years. He later formed a partnership with the late United States Senator Karl C. Schuyler, who died in 1933.

In 1941, GENE MILLIKIN was appointed to the United States Senate by our mutual, and great friend, Ralph Carr, then the Governor of Colorado, and he has served in the Senate since that time.

Mr. President, no words can do adequate justice to this occasion. Senator MILLIKIN has been, I believe, one of the great leaders and one of the great minds of the Senate. He has been a United States Senator in every sense of the term, and his mind has helped formulate and solve some of the most difficult problems which have faced this body and the Nation during the past 15 years. He has been our Senator from Colorado, but, more than that, he has been the representative of every man, woman, and child in this country. His mind—his brain—has always had the forward look, and he has at the same time been the conservator as well as the planner for the future.

One distinguished journalist, writing in one of our periodicals, described him as "a man of inner gaiety and lively humor which not even taxes and tariffs can blunt. He is a heavy-duty Senator with the light touch."

I say, as I am sure many of my colleagues will say, that he has been a great harmonizer in the Senate, and many difficult situations have been passed over lightly and without hard feelings because of his ability to pull from the recesses of his mind some light shaft of wit which lessened the flush of victory or the pain of defeat, as the case may be, on either side.

He has had the ability, and he has now, of keeping the respect of his friends. As the ranking minority member of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, as I recently stated on this floor, no small amount of the credit should go to him for the passage of the upper Colorado River bill, for the passage of the Fryingpan-Arkansas bill, and for many other measures of a similar kind, and, as former chairman and now ranking minority member of the Finance Committee, he deserves great praise for the rewriting of the finance provisions of the Federal statutes in 1954, and for the enactment of an almost endless list of laws. In his legislative efforts he has been devoted and tireless.

Mr. President, I pay tribute to GENE MILLIKIN. I call him Gene because that is what I have called him all my life. We in Colorado, and I am sure all the people of the Nation, will miss his services in the Senate, his guidance, his commonsense, and, of course, always his wit. My wife and I are both greatly indebted to him and his wonderful wife for their friendship and counsel.

I do not suppose that any of us can realize the courage it has required for him to be in daily attendance in the Senate and in committee meetings during the past few months; but I may say it is only the courage which he has shown in every single act of his life in his long period of public service. And so I think the tribute written by Beverly Smith in an article some 2 years ago would be proper to repeat at this time:

> He was the ponderous, witty, modest, brainy EUGENE D. MILLIKIN, of Colorado, a man not afraid to burn the lonely midnight oil, an erudite fellow, but possessing the wit to bring the subject down to earth with a jolt.

That is EUGENE MILLIKIN, and we are proud to pay our respects to him today.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I do not know of any Member of the Senate who is going to be more greatly missed than the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN]. He is one of the great stabilizing influences in this body.

I have a very deep affection for EUGENE MILLIKIN. The fact that we sit on opposite sides of the aisle does not affect my regard for him in any manner whatsoever.

In a very real sense he is a statesman—a man who never talks too much and never thinks too little. He is a man of massive intellect, of deep conviction, of prudence, and of great wisdom.

I have always found EUGENE MILLIKIN to tower above the petty conflicts of partisanship and personality. He has always been able to go to the heart of a question and to put the Nation's good ahead of any personal consideration.

Mr. President, this announcement means to me that the Senate is losing two of its great men at the close of this, the 84th, Congress. In my own mind, I like to link the Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN] with the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], both of whom are retiring. They are leaving this Chamber when final adjournment comes, but both of them are going to remain with all of us forever. They are the kind of men who work for permanent and constructive achievements, and those achievements will always be with us.

I want the Senator from Colorado to know that my respect and my regard and my affection for him are deep and abiding.

Mr. President, GENE MILLIKIN is one of the greatest Americans I have ever known, and he has devoted his life to his country. I feel positive that every Member of the Senate, on both sides of the aisle, will echo that sentiment.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, I rise to pay my tribute to a great Senator of the United States. GENE MILLIKIN'S imprint on legislation of vast importance to the country is very clear. Perhaps no person who has served in the Senate of the United States has had a finer grasp of the great subject of reclamation in the West than has the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN].

He serves now on the important Interior and Insular Affairs Committee. He is also the ranking Republican member of the Senate Finance Committee, and was formerly its chairman. He has left his imprint on much legislation of tremendous value to the people of the United States and to the solvency of the Federal Government. He has served since its inception on the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, and prior to that time he served on the then special committee dealing with that subject, which played so important a part in the formulation and passage of the original Atomic Energy Act.

He has been active in the affairs of his party. He serves as chairman of the Republican conference.

In dealing with the complex problems of our country, not only has he been a great Senator of his beloved State of Colorado but he has also been, in the full sense of the word, a Senator of the United States.

Mr. President, if I may be pardoned a personal observation, let me say that when I first came here as a new Senator—as all of us have done at one time or another—new to the rules of the Senate and its procedures, I found in GENE MILLIKIN a friend who treated me as an elder brother would have done, in helping me to learn the ropes of the Senate of the United States. On numerous occasions he has been his considerate, thoughtful self in helping to work out problems with which I, as a new Senator, have been confronted from time to time. We shall miss him in the Senate. To me this body will never be the same without GENE MILLIKIN in the Chamber participating, as he has so actively, in the great debates of the Senate.

He has been loyal to the Senate and to his country. He has been here day after day, attending the meetings of this body, attending the meetings of his committees, and returning, if necessary, for yea-and-nay votes late at night, in order that he might cast his vote as a Senator of the United States.

Mr. President, we shall miss him greatly. We hope that from time to time he will have opportunity to visit again with us. I believe that all the other Members of this body—all 95—hope that we shall have an opportunity from time to time to see GENE MILLIKIN and to wish him every happiness in the years ahead.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I have just learned of the announcement of the decision of one of America's great Senators to retire at the end of this session.

It is with a deep sense of regret that I and others have learned that Senator EUGENE D. MILLIKIN, who has served the Nation and the State of Colorado for the past 15 years in the Senate, has decided to leave us.

Mr. President, Senator MILLIKIN is one of the truly great legislators.

Because I am 1 of the 3 Republican Senators who currently sit in the Senate, and who also were here when GENE MILLIKIN took his seat December 20, 1941, it becomes my privilege—one of the very great privileges in all my 20 years in the Senate—to speak of this man of outstanding intellect, good will, and deeds, who gave a helping hand to all who needed it.

Mr. President, this is a day of regret, to be sure, because GENE MILLIKIN has announced he will leave us as a Senator. But, Mr. President, his counsel forever will be sought by Senators on both sides of the aisle. Mr. President, how his gracious wife, his associates, and his frends must be proud of this man and the record he has made.

Only a few days ago, the Senate demonstrated its respect for and faith in GENE MILLIKIN when one of his favorite pieces of proposed legislation—the Fryingpan-Arkansas reclamation project—was passed by the Senate. As the United Press reported in its news story at the time, debate on that important measure consisted of one tribute after another to the senior Senator from Colorado.

Only a short time before in the Senate, it was GENE MILLIKIN who helped place on the Nation's law books the measure authorizing one of the West's biggest multiple-purpose projects affecting five States. This was the upper Colorado River water-storage project.

But GENE MILLIKIN'S name is not alone associated with these laws.

Throughout his years in the Senate, Senator MILLIKIN has been a statesman in the finest sense of that term. He has had a brilliant record of accomplishment in many fields—notably, in taxation and in resource development. For the last 10 years he has served as chairman of the Republican Conference of the Senate—the leader of the organization of all Republican Senators. Since he was first elected to this post, there never has been any question about his continuing to occupy it for as long as he was willing to do so. His reelection as conference chairman has been unanimous at the start of every new Congress.

Mr. President, Senator MILLIKIN was chairman of the Senate Finance Committee in the 80th and 83d Congresses. In each of these Congresses there was a tax reduction, and the legislation had the benefit of the guiding hand of GENE MILLIKIN.

The citizens of this Nation should never forget that it was Senator MILLIKIN who, as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee in 1954, was one of the few persons responsible for the change and codification of the tax laws, which resulted in the biggest tax reduction in a single Congress in our history.

Oh, Mr. President, we could cite instance after instance of this man's legislative genius, his humor, his guiding hand in the Republican Party, his ability to bring those of opposing views to a settlement.

Year after year, important legislation was guided through the Senate by GENE MILLIKIN. Just in the last few days the new social security bill passed the Senate with the help of his wise counsel.

Some Senators may recall that day in July—July 25, 1945—when the late Senator Vandenberg arose on the Senate floor to comment on Senator MILLIKIN'S work in connection with the hearings on the United Nations Charter. Senator Vandenberg said:

> Mr. President, before the Senator from Colorado takes his seat I desire to make one observation. During the hearings before the Foreign Relations Committee he was by far the most presistent and consistent cross-examiner of the witnesses among all Senators, and I simply want to say to him that I think he rendered a very great service by the constant attention he gave to those examinations and the very illuminating information which he produced as the result of his questions. I want to thank him on my own behalf for the service he rendered in that fashion.

Mr. President, that was more than 10 years ago, but today let me add my humble thanks and appreciation for all that Senator MILLIKIN has done for his country, both in the Senate and on the field of battle during World War I, in which he served with great honor, bravery, and distinction.

May I also recall to mind that it was Senator MILLIKIN who handled the important Mexican Water Treaty in the early 1940's—being asked by the then Democratic administration to guide this matter through the Senate.

Senator MILLIKIN represents a type which has lent a peculiar distinction and charm to American history. He is the boy who pulled up stakes and went west. Denver had not ceased to be wild and woolly when GENE MILLIKIN went there. He proved to be an adept in the catch-as-catch-can life of the time when it took an alert and forceful person to survive. To be an intellectual and simultaneously capable of dealing with ordinary human affairs is an unusual accomplishment. The Senator is such a person. His interests are wide and discriminating. His sense of humor is sharp and instant. He can size up a situation accurately better than most men I know. In politics, an able strategist, he can—like President Martin Van Buren—row toward his objective with muffled oars. He has proved himself to be an opponent to be feared and an ally to be depended on.

There is another thing about him that is more than pleasant to remember. He has known the ups and downs of life. He remembers when a dollar looked like a large sum. I believe that in the days before he studied law he and Gene Fowler worked together on the Denver Post. Something of those days has stuck with him. No man has ever been able to see the hole in the doughnut more quickly than the senior Senator from Colorado, and, at the same time, no one has ever been a softer "touch" for a real hard luck story.

Senator MILLIKIN has a long and distinguished record of public service, beginning with his enlistment as a private in the Colorado National Guard in 1917. He served during World War I in France with the 42d, 6th, and 7th Divisions and the 4th Corps, and later with the Army of Occupation. He was commissioned a captain, then a major of infantry, and finally a lieutenant colonel of engineers. He received the Pershing citation for distinguished and meritorious service.

He was again called on to serve his country when he was appointed United States Senator from Colorado on December 20, 1941, and has served with distinction in this body ever since, having been elected three times by his constituents as their representative here.

I have no doubt that he would have again been called upon by the people of Colorado to continue as senior Senator from that great State had he felt able to stand for renomination.

Mr. President, the Senate will miss the wise counsel and forthright leadership of Senator MILLIKIN. He will be missed in this Chamber, where even during recuperation from his illness he came to lend his strong support to the issues of the day. His keen mind and astuteness will be missed on the committees on which he has been such a powerful influence. He has been a valued member of the Finance and Interior and Insular Affairs Committees and the Joint Committees on Atomic Energy and Internal Revenue Taxation. His Republican colleagues have profited from his leadership as chairman of the minority conference.

I agree with what his distinguished colleague the junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. ALLOTT] has said, and what the distinguished majority and minority leaders have said. We shall miss him and his very able associate, the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], who is also retiring at the conclusion of this session.

In conclusion, Mr. President, I know that my colleagues on both sides of the aisle will join me in an effectionate salute and an expression of fond regard for the future to Senator MILLIKIN as he concludes his brilliant career in the Senate of the United States.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I well remember the day when Senator MILLIKIN entered the Senate. I well remember the first days of his service here. From the very first he impressed the Senate as a man of great stability, great wisdom, and great understanding of the problems we have to face here day after day.

He was very early assigned to the Senate Committee on Finance, of which I was a member on the opposite side of the table, so to speak, and had been for some years. From the very beginning Senator MILLIKIN demonstrated his fine capacity as a lawyer who understood the tax problems, but with business judgment also. He understood what lay behind the making of our entire tax structure.

I do not recall that in all our service on the Finance Committee, on any purely tax matter, there was ever any serious disagreement between the views of Senator MILLIKIN and the views of those of us on the other side of the table who were called upon to help write our tax laws. I know that, on the whole, his views and my views were very much the same.

He understood the mining laws of the West. He understood the problems of those who produce our minerals. He had a very clear understanding of the problems which confront American business. From week to week and from year to year I learned not only greatly to admire him, but greatly to depend upon the soundness of his judgment.

When we were dealing with trade matters and treaties which have been entered into, and which have shaped in such large measure our commercial and economic affairs, especially in the foreign trade field, Senator MILLIKIN had the patience which men often denominate and describe as genius, in the careful study of those intricate and sometimes very dull and tiresome problems, which someone in the Senate as well as in the House of Representatives must from time to time carefully study and evaluate, if our affairs are to be kept in balance.

Senator MILLIKIN was closely associated with me as a member of the Senate Finance Committee. During two Congresses he was chairman of that committee, and I was but the ranking minority member. On other occasions I was chairman, and during other Congresses I served as chairman and he as the ranking minority member, or next to the ranking member, until Senator Vandenberg left the Finance Committee.

That is a great committee yet. But at one time, as I recall, when Senator Vandenberg and Senator MILLIKIN and other great men who have served in the Senate were members of that committee, it was a peculiarly and particularly strong committee. I never knew Senator MILLIKIN to advocate any piece of tax legislation which was unsound and which on the whole worked against the economy of his country. He gave his very best thought to the tax problems which came before us and to all the trade and tariff issues which arose. He gave his very close and almost undivided attention to all the important problems which had to be considered by that committee during the time he served on it.

I am quite sure that he is one of the great intellects of the Senate. He has been so recognized from almost the first day he entered the Senate, and very early left his impress and imprint upon the minds and hearts of thoughtful men in this body. I am quite sure that he yet remains one of the great intellects, one of the great men who have served in the Senate.

He is also a man of great heart. He has always loved his State and the Far West. He has kept in mind, and referred repeatedly to the many States in the Far West, enumerating them, that depended upon wise and just legislation in the field of taxation and in the field of tariffs.

Therefore, it is with peculiar sadness that I learn Senator MILLIKIN is retiring, that he is leaving the Senate, the field of his labors for so many years. But certainly there is no stain upon his character. Whatever record leaps to life in future days, there will be nothing to make him ashamed, or his people ashamed.

I hope I may be pardoned for a simple statement, which some of my Democratic friends may not fully appreciate, but which I trust they will. I remember that there was a year in which Senator EUGENE MILLIKIN had what was supposed to be very strong opposition. I think in the same year, or at about that same time, Senator Bob Taft, who also served on the Committee on Finance, and also was a very active and diligent member of the committee, had very stubborn opposition. When the elections were over I, as a Democrat, very well remember telegraphing Bob Taft a congratulatory message, and I also telegraphed EUGENE MILLIKIN. While naturally as a party man I would like to see my party prevail, I recognized the worth of these two men. I recognized the value and the enormous contribution which they had made to the public life of the Nation, a contribution which will last long after our present day and generation.

Therefore I feel in a peculiar sense a personal grief to think that Senator EUGENE MILLIKIN has decided to leave the Senate at the end of his present term.

I could go away with a little higher degree of confidence if he remained, in his accustomed health and strength and vigor of mind and patience of heart, to help enact sound and wholesome legislation for this, our America.

I know that the present chairman of the Committee on Finance, the distinguished Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] will sorely miss Senator MILLIKIN, as I missed him when even on occasion he was unable to be present or when for any reason I did not have the advantage and support of his very great ability and his very earnest devotion to public duty and his very constant work upon the tasks before us.

So Senator MILLIKIN leaves this body with the respect, with the confidence, with the affection, and with the love, not only of the men who now serve with him or have served with him, but of the whole American community, who know the value of his service.

After all, the work that men do does live after them; and the things to which men devote themselves to in public life, as well as in private life, live after them.

Senator MILLIKIN, though he goes back to his home, perhaps in Colorado, carries with him to a high degree, the confidence and the esteem of his fellow citizens.

Many perplexing problems have arisen in our day since the Senator from Colorado became a Member of the Senate, but in nearly all of them he took a position which would be expected of a statesman. He conscientiously followed the course that all men of great conviction, of great sincerity of purpose, and of great devotion to public duty, strive earnestly to follow.

To Senator MILLIKIN and to his charming wife, I am pleased to speak these words, and I am pleased to say to him in his presence that for no man with whom I have served have I ever had a more profound and sincere feeling of friendship, affection, admiration, and appreciation as a great public servant.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, we have listened to the distinguished Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], and to the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], the chairman of our policy committee, tell us of the record of Senator MILLIKIN as a Member of this great deliberative body. I should like to speak for a moment regarding my personal friendship with him.

Friendships come slower as we grow older, but they also become much warmer.

When I came to this body 12 years ago Senator MILLIKIN was a Member of it, and we shortly became friends. Our families exchanged social visits on many occasions. A humorist, a man of sharp wit, Senator MILLIKIN excels as a conversationalist, and inspires a feeling of enthusiasm and interest in one who engages in conversation with him. I, for one, shall miss the opportunities for conversation and exchange of wit with my friend, Senator MILLIKIN.

As a Member of the Congress he sets a great example. He is a hard worker; he is an individualist; he does not make up his mind because of what anyone may tell him. He takes to heart what we say, but reaches his own conclusions and renders his own judgment. He is a great example of one who knows thoroughly what he proposes to say before he rises on the Senate floor. I know that any one of us may well hesitate to tangle with him in debate when he speaks in support of or in opposition to some measure. We do so with hesitation because we realize that he has studied the subject thoroughly and has made up his mind only after a most careful and painstaking examination of the facts. When he takes the floor he is a keen debater. His remarks are enlivened with much humor and sharp language, and are couched in words we can clearly understand.

When he is engaged in debate many Senators come to the floor, not because they have not made up their minds, perhaps, on the subject under discussion, but because they wish to hear GENE MILLIKIN'S analysis.

He has served his country well. He has always stood for measures which were of interest to his State. He has been a friend to many of us. As chairman of the Republican conference he has presided over its deliberations with great skill and tact, and an ability to make every one feel he has had his opportunity to speak, and yet, when the discussion has closed, the decision is made quickly, whether it be for or against a proposition.

Mr. President, I shall miss Senator MILLIKIN as a friend and as the personification of a great Senator; I shall miss him as one who has taught me much and demonstrated what a legislator can do after studying and acquiring knowledge of the subject at hand.

It is my hope that Senator MILLIKIN and Mrs. Millikin, who is a great friend of my wife's and of mine will have many more happy years together in Colorado.

Mr. YOUNG. Mr. President, in every body of men some one man stands out above all others. In my nearly 12 years of service in the Senate of the United States there have been five Members who stood out, in my mind, above all others, they are the late Senator Arthur Vanenberg of Michigan, the late Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. George], the junior Senator from Georgia [Mr. Russel] and my good and close friend, Gene Millikin.

It has been a great honor and privilege for me to serve with him as secretary to the Republican conference of which he has been chairman. I have been secretary of the conference for nearly 8 years. I have learned much from him. He is a kindly person, and, certainly, no more able man ever served in the Senate of the United States. He has helped me as he has others time and time again.

In talking with many lawyers in the Senate, and particularly those who are historians, all will tell us that GENE MILLIKIN will go down in history as one of the ablest lawyers ever to serve in the Senate of the United States.

Sentor MILLIKIN has many great qualities which have made him the great man that he is. He is a very intelligent person; he has a great sense of humor, super judgment, and he has been a most faithful servant of the Senate. On Saturday afternoons or most holidays one could always find him in his office, when most Senators had gone home. He has made a great contribution to the Senate of the United States and to this great Nation. I, like all the Members of the Senate, deeply regret that he is leaving us, and we will miss him greatly. I wish he and his good wife many, many more years of health and happiness.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. President, there is a poem containing a line something like this: "Give us men to match our mountains."

I think of that line when I think of GENE MILLIKIN, for if ever a State has had a man to match its mountains, Colorado has such a man in the person of GENE MILLIKIN.

I first came to know him in the summer of 1944, when he was a member of a committee of the Senate which was dealing with a proposal to authorize a comprehensive water-development plan on the Missouri River. Senator MILLIKIN was one of those whose names became associated with an amendment which preserved for the States of the West the waters west of the 98th meridian for beneficial consumptive use. At that time I learned something of his tenacity, his ability, and his loyalty to a friend and to a cause.

During the years I have had the privilege of knowing GENE MILLIKIN, and particularly years I have served in the Senate I have become even more impressed with the intelligence he applies to every question to which he directs his attention. His loyalty to the great West was never questioned. When we were considering the highway bill in the Senate Committee on Public Works, a little more than a year ago, and he appeared before the committee, and again this year, when he came to talk about the importance of extending the mileage of the so-called Interstate System, he said that originally when the pioneers went to Colorado, they saw the mountains, and the mountains stopped their progress for a while, but, he said, "today the mountains do not stop us. We do not let the mountains bluff us any more; we are masters of the mountains."

The people of Colorado are masters of the mountains because of the spirit and the leadership of men like GENE MILLIKIN.

We have a phrase in South Dakota which we cherish because of a book written about some of the early pioneers, called Giants in The Earth.

Those who have had the privilege of serving with Senator MILLIKIN will forever remember him as a giant in the United States Senate, and our good wishes will go with him wherever he may go.

Mr. BRICKER. Mr. President, it has been my hope that as long as I should serve in this body the guiding spirit of Senator MILLIKIN would be with us. I knew GENE MILLIKIN many years before he came to the Senate and before I came here. I knew of his great distinction as a leading member of the bar not only of his State, but of the bar of the United States. His contribution to this body has been of great and lasting value.

No one in our midst has cherished the fine and noble traditions of the Senate more than has Senator MILLIKIN. We have all been inspired by his devotion to the highest traditions and principles of this body. His going will leave a great void in our midst. His leadership will be hard to replace.

Since I came to the Senate, I have had no finer friend, no more loyal guide and helper, than GENE MILLIKIN. I have become very fond of him personally. That friendship has meant much to me. When I speak of my personal friendship and dependence upon his guidance, I know I voice the feeling of many other Senators.

Today, as Senator MILLIKIN announces that he will leave the Senate at the end of this term, I can only express my abiding friendship for him and give voice to the hope and prayer that health may return to him, and that many years of fine companionship with his gracious and lovely wife may attend him.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. President, while I rise with great sorrow, it has been a great privilege to me to be present this afternoon to hear the wonderful tributes being paid to our beloved friend and colleague, GENE MILLIKIN. I am happy to identify myself with all that has been said, which is so deserved and so splendid.

My own remarks are very personal, because for a time in my life I lived in Colorado. I went there during my younger days for reasons of health which was fully restored. I have received inspiration from the gorgeous mountains there. I know the spirit of the people of Colorado. Later, after I came East during World War I, and then stayed here because of situations which had developed, I always held great love for that area.

When I came to the Senate 12 years ago, GENE MILLIKIN, because of his representing my former home State of Colorado, was one with whom I immediately became acquainted; and then he and his good wife and my wife and I came to know each other because of the intimacy of the Colorado association. It has been that association which has meant so much to us.

I take pride in the jovial attitude which GENE MILLIKIN and his colleague, the distinguished junior Senator from Colorado [Mr. ALLOTT], take toward me in calling me the third, and junior, Senator from Colorado. I take real pride in that, because it shows a warm friendship and shows that they understand what my early life in Colorado meant to me and what our intimate contacts here have been.

I rejoice in the honors which have come to Gene in the expressions which are being made in the Senate today concerning his great accomplishments. I need not recount them further. I simply identify myself with all those expressions.

I say to Gene: As you leave us, you leave with me, as one Senator, an impression which will remain with me all my life. You are deep in my affections, and I will always feel that the inspiration of your presence here, your great knowledge, and, above all, your inimitable wit and lightness of touch, no matter what the circumstances were, have left with me something that will stay with me always.

So on behalf of my wife and myself, I extend to you and your lovely wife our deepest affection and best wishes. As I plan to visit Colorado frequently—every year, I hope—I shall be able, I hope and pray, to maintain the wonderful friendship which we have had throughout the last 12 years.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, knowing the sense of modesty, and even of humility, which is always present in the person of our very dear friend, Senator EUGENE MILLIKIN, I am very certain that he is passing through quite an ordeal, as those of us who feel so tender an affection for him speak briefly about him. I hope, however, that he will bear with me and with other Senators, because we will all feel so much better if we have this little say on the day when Senator MILLIKIN has made up his mind not to come back to the Senate after this term.

On a somewhat similar occasion, when his great former colleague, Senator Edwin Johnson, was announcing his retirement, I spoke briefly in the Senate. Because those remarks at that time are quite appropriate now, I should like to refresh the Senate as to those remarks, although I wish to make it very clear that what I am saying is in no way in derogation of the distinguished present colleague of the senior Senator from Colorado, who has already made for himself a place of respect and esteem in the Senate.

On that day, April 5, 1954, I said this:

> Mr. President, I think that all Members of the Senate who are not from the State of Colorado will agree with me when I say that we have seen no more effective teamwork, for the interests of their State and region, and also for the interests of the Nation, than that of the team composed of the two great Senators from Colorado, who sit on different sides of the aisle and come from somewhat different backgrounds, yet who always have worked together here so cordially. I believe they maintain between them the only joint staff of any team of Senators who represent any of the great States of the Union.
> My own high tribute goes to the team, but more particularly at this time to that splendid member of the team who quietly is bowing out of the Senate at a time when he does not need to do so.

We now see the other member of that great team, Senator MILLIKIN, bowing out of the Senate under similar conditions at a time when he does not need to do so.

I think the very fine service rendered by the joint efforts of those two great Senators, sitting on opposite sides of the aisle, holds out something in the nature of an inspiration and a lesson to all the rest of us who have been privileged to serve with both of them.

To comment briefly about Senator MILLIKIN, I think there has not been, in my stay in the Senate, a Member of the Senate who has been quite so scholarly as has the distinguished senior Senator from Colorado. Whenever he has had anything to say, it has been just as if it were documented, just as if it had come from the source of final authority on the subject upon which he spoke. We learned, therefore, to value very greatly and to heed with very deep respect anything serious that was contained in the speeches of the Senator from Colorado.

Wise he was, and is; matchless in oratory and debate; with humor that is rollicking and with sarcasm that is devastating.

Mr. President, because I think we like to treasure happy memories in the Senate, I shall never forget the afternoon in which I laughed more heartily, I think, and for a longer period of time than I have in years, when the distinguished Senator from Colorado, while engaging in debate with my distinguished friend the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS], who, I regret, has just been called from his seat next to mine, put on as fine a show of friendly, humorous exchange as it has ever been my privilege to hear or witness. I doubt whether there has been any superior display of friendly wit in the Halls of the Senate. I shall ever remember that fine afternoon.

Mr. President, I know that we are going to miss Senator MILLIKIN, and it will be a personal loss, and also a collective one—for his party, for both parties, and for all of us. I am sure he would much rather have us recall the pleasure which we all received from the numerous instances when he first regaled us and rendered us helpless by his humor, and then proceeded to overwhelm us with such salutary persuasion that, caught unaware, we could not help but admit he was right and go along with him.

Mr. President, as Senator MILLIKIN goes back with his lovely wife to Denver, to a spot which is a mile higher than the places where we who live near sea level reside, I want him to know that we shall think of him as having the intellect, character, and kindly consideration for others which will place him always, in our recollections, as away up yonder above the ordinary plane of most of us humans. We shall, indeed, miss him very, very greatly.

Mr. MARTIN of Pennsylvania. Mr. President, like most of my colleagues, I had hoped that the distinguished Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN] would be a candidate again, and continue to be a Member of the Senate. When I became a Member of the Senate, the first Senator with whom I had a conference, was the senior Senator from Colorado. I conferred with him in order that I might a little better perform my duties as a Senator. He gave me some advice which I have tried to follow. It has been sound advice.

As a new Member of the Senate I gave some consideration to the biographies of the other Members of this body. One of the Senators whose biographies I went into was that of the senior Senator's from Colorado. I found he had been a soldier. In going into his military record, I found that he was 1 of the 500 officers of the 200,000 in World War I who was selected for the initial general staff eligibility list. I found he was probably the youngest man of any officer in the United States Army to receive that honor. The record of GENE MILLIKIN, as a soldier, disclosed that he always tried to carry out what our flag symbolized. That meant 100 percent loyalty to the ideals for which we have fought.

Mr. President, when I first came to the Senate I was assigned to the Senate Finance Committee. GENE MILLIKIN at that time was not only the senior Republican member, but he was the chairman of the committee. I soon found that he made a very thorough study of every question which came before that committee.

In the consideration of the tax bill of 1954, which was the first rewriting of the tax laws of the United States in three-quarters of a century, much of the burden fell on the shoulders of GENE MILLIKIN, and the United States was very fortunate in having a man of his ability and his ideals in charge of the writing of that bill. It may be of interest to my colleagues to know that the Senate Finance Committee proposed more than 900 amendments to that bill as it came from the House. So long conferences with the other body were required. Senator MILLIKIN's ability was very helpful in formulating a tax bill which I think is of such great importance to our country.

As my colleagues realize, in a form of government such as ours, a bad tax law may destroy a whole segment of industry. Senator MILLIKIN not only appreciated what the tax laws meant to our own country, but what they meant to our trade with foreign countries.

I regret very much that GENE MILLIKIN is leaving the Senate. I regret very much that WALTER GEORGE, of Georgia, is leaving the Senate. They are two great, stalwart Americans, who always keep the ideals of our country uppermost in their minds.

Mr. President, as Senator MILLIKIN leaves this body, my family wishes for him and his most gracious wife long years of health and happiness.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, someone once remarked about a very able man who became President of the United States that he loved him because of the enemies he had made. I am afraid if we had to judge the record of GENE MILLIKIN by that standard, he has been a great failure in the Congress of the United States, because, wherever he has been, he is known and admired today for the friends he has made. I do not know where we would go to find any enemies he has made.

It was my pleasure, when I came to the Senate of the United States, to be assigned to the Senate Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs. I found the able Senator from Colorado, who was then the junior Senator from Colorado to be its ranking minority Member. We had much interesting legislation to consider during that time. One of the most interesting pieces of legislation, of course, was the so-called Tidelands bill, on which the Senator from Colorado and I were usually on different sides. However, I came out of those experiences with the finest appreciation of what a great legal mind can mean to a committee. He was my lawyer, even though he was on the other side. When we finally went into a conference on the bill, and I was privileged to have the opportunity to contribute something to the final writing of the conference report, I depended to a great degree upon the legal advice of the Senator from Colorado, which he was willing to give me, even though my point of view was different from his. He steadily tried to make sure that we would write good legislation that would stand the test of time.

Subsequently, the Submerged Lands Act came before the Congress. It had been a part of our desire in the other effort. The Senator from Colorado was of tremendous help to us in the writing of a good bill. From that day on, I have had the greatest respect not only for his fine humor and for his good commonsense, but also for his remarkable legal background, which stretches over a vast experience in the State from which he comes.

Then, Mr. President, I was assigned to the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy. Although the able Senator from Colorado was senior to the Senator from Iowa [Mr. HICKENLOOPER], and was the ranking Member on the Republican side, he was not named the chairman, because of the desire to fill the chairmanship on a somewhat different basis than the ordinary seniority basis, since the Senator from Colorado was Chairman of the Finance Committee. But I have had the privilege of sitting next to him on the Senate side of the Joint Committee many, many times, and for a number of years. There, again, his wise counsel and excellent business judgment were of great benefit and help to our committee.

Finally, Mr. President, I was assigned to a third committee—the Finance Committee—on which the Senator from Colorado served. I think that was probably a unique experience on my part. So the able senior Senator from Colorado and I have had the pleasure of serving together on all three of our principal committees.

On the Finance Committee, I had known that when the great Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] was its chairman, he had relied greatly upon the remarkable talents of the Senator from Colorado. I know that the more recent chairman of that committee, the able Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], relies no less on and depends on the great ability and fine character of the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. President, it was one of the great joys of my life a few days ago to have the privilege of presenting to the Senate the Fryingpan-Arkansas bill, which was close to the heart of the great senior Senator from Colorado. I am sure that he and I can be happy in our realization that the bill was passed by the Senate under his guidance and leadership, and with his name attached to it.

Mr. President, I am sorry that GENE MILLIKIN is leaving the Senate. We can ill afford to lose men of his fine and outstanding stature and character.

Mr. SCHOEPPEL. Mr. President, all of us are saddened by the announcement of the decision by the brilliant senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN], who has advised the Nation and his constituents in Colorado that at the close of this session, he will end his career in the United States Senate.

Mr. President, I have great affection for the distinguished senior Senator from Colorado. He has long been the leading statesman in our sister State to the west and in the entire Midwestern section of the United States. He has established himself as an elder statesman in this great body. It was my good fortune to enter the Senate at a time when I had the helpful assistance and guidance of GENE MILLIKIN. I found him to be considerate, patient, and a man devoted to duty. He is a man of great industry, and he always displays a fine sense of fairness. I know he is without peer in ability in the Senate of the United States.

Mr. President, I shall leave it to my peers to recite fully his brilliant legislative record. But from the record, I know that GENE MILLIKIN'S name has been attached only to constructive legislation which has been good for the Nation. I know that he has always been regardful of his constituents' needs and requirements, and that he has the sort of understanding which has won confidence in his judgment and respect for him when he took positions on proposed legislation.

He is a man trusted and respected in the councils of my party and has rendered long and lasting service in it.

Mr. President, I join my colleagues in expressions of deep regret that he is leaving this Chamber.

I cannot help but recall—to strike a personal note in closing—that I entered this body during the service of the great Senator from the North, Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan; and it was also my good fortune to serve in this body during the period of service of the late distinguished Senator Robert Taft, of Ohio, and other Senators. This year, on another occasion, we were made aware of the decision of a great southern statesman, the distinguished Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], to close his career in the Senate. And now we have the announcement that GENE MILLIKIN, of Colorado, will leave the Senate at the end of this session. We all feel a great sense of loss to this Nation and the Senate.

Mr. President, one of the greatest things I can look back upon is my association in the Senate with men like GENE MILLIKIN. I admire and respect him for what he is, what he has always stood for, and the inspiration he has given us in serving our States and the Nation.

Mrs. Schoeppel and I wish for both Senator MILLIKIN and Mrs. Millikin many years of happiness to come.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, knowing full well my inadequacy to cover this farewell subject as it should be covered, nevertheless I cannot refrain from associating myself with the expressions of those who have spoken, nor from imposing upon my colleagues long enough to voice my sentiments, because I venture to say that I have known GENE MILLIKIN longer than has any other Member of the Senate.

I remember GENE MILLIKIN when he was a student at the University of Colorado in Boulder, Colo., and I was an editor—shall I admit it?—of a Republican newspaper in the town of Boulder. Of course I was paid a salary for writing Republican editorials.

Upon occasion I was invited to go to the campus of the university. The first of those invitations came to me through GENE MILLIKIN, because he was the head of a student group that was interested in public affairs, and for some reason they felt that the editor of the Republican newspaper should be invited to come. They did not know that I was a Democrat at heart—as most Republicans are, and as I think GENE MILLIKIN always has been.

I went there. I shall never forget the occasion; because after I had made my preliminary remarks, GENE MILLIKIN, a young man, wearing the clothes worn in those days by young men, rose and timorously asked, "Mr. O'MAHONEY, are you willing to answer questions?"

I replied, "Mr. MILLIKIN, if I was willing to come here to talk with this group, surely I should be willing to answer questions."

Then I was initiated to the qualities of this man as a cross-examiner and an interrogator, because he knew that although I was employed by a Republican newspaper, I really was a Democrat and held Democratic views—which I did not hesitate to express, although I did not have the opportunity to have them printed in the newspaper for which I was working.

But in those days, Mr. President, as in the present days, I knew Gene just as his colleagues here have known him. He was frank; he was intelligent; he was a good fellow. By that, I mean that he was a young man—just as he is now, a man of the same period as the rest of us here—who was one who knew how to get along with people. He understood human relations better than almost any person I have known.

I remember distinctly when, having just received his law degree, he became secretary to the district attorney for the district of Colorado in which Boulder was situated. That was George Carlson. Gene became his secretary and then successfully managed his campaign to become Governor of the State of Colorado.

Gene early learned ways of getting along with people; and by the humor and by the intelligent grasp of affairs which he has demonstrated here, by his legal ability, and by the speed with which he could penetrate the center of every problem that arose, he soon became a leader in the Republican Party of Colorado, as he has since become a leader in the United States Senate. He is a man of perspicacity, a man of vision, a man of intelligence and integrity. He is a man of industry, who will be sadly missed in this body.

I regret as much as I regret anything that it has fallen to my lot to participate in this session this afternoon, in which we must acknowledge that he has reached the decision no longer to stand for election to this body.

Gene, along with the rest of our colleagues, I wish you Godspeed. I will always hold you in fond memory and deep affection. It has been a long and very pleasant association.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, ever since Senator MILLIKIN came to the Senate in 1941 I have been one of his followers and admirers. I wish to say today publicly what I have said many times privately; GENE MILLIKIN possesses one of the greatest minds ever to serve in the Congress.

I further pay tribute to him because of the fact that he has kept the faith. GENE MILLIKIN has been true to the people back home, to their ideas and their ideals, and their economic philosophy. He has been true to our basic American system, and the Americanism he holds dear.

I hope that GENE MILLIKIN and Mrs. Millikin will have a future in which every day will be bright.

Mr. FREAR. Mr. President, the junior Senator from Delaware is one of the more fortunate Members of this body. He has been privileged to serve on the Finance Committee during the chairmanship of the senior Senator from Georgia, the senior Senator from Colorado, and now the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD]. I think there is no committee of the Senate whose leadership surpasses the quality of those three men who have served as its chairmen.

Six years ago, about this time of the year, I was in the city of Denver, Colo. The headquarters of the senior Senator from Colorado for nomination on the Republican ticket were in the hotel at which I was staying. As a Democrat, I went to visit the office of the Republican candidate. My experience was similar to that which has been described by the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY]. I was very courteously received. I informed him that I could not vote in Colorado, but that I thought the State of Colorado was quite well represented by its senior Senator.

I also recall the afternoon, of which we were reminded by the Senator from Florida [Mr. HOLLAND], when the famous expression "BD" was coined—meaning "before Douglas." That also gave me a great deal of pleasure.

Esther and I wish to extend to Senator MILLIKIN and Mrs. Millikin our very best wishes for many, many days of happy life to come. For many years Mrs. Millikin has shared Senator MILLIKIN with the Senate of the United States, and with the people of the Nation, as well as of the world. She deserves to have his companionship, and I know they will enjoy being together.

Mr. FLANDERS. Mr. President, I wish to speak very briefly, and somewhat personally, about the years during which I have known Senator MILLIKIN and have become familiar with his work.

When I succeeded Warren Austin as a Senator from Vermont, he took occasion to meet with me and to go over, in a few words, some of the characteristics and abilities of the men whom I would meet in the United States Senate. Of all those men, the one he most wanted me to become acquainted with was Senator MILLIKIN, of Colorado. I had not been here many years before I realized that the judgment of my predecessor in the Senate could not be gainsaid.

Senator MILLIKIN is a phenomenon. He is a most delightful combination of ability, intellect, and humor. Who would imagine that guiding tax bills through the United States Senate could be a delightful and stimulating experience? We have all seen Senator MILLIKIN walking up and down the center aisle, exhibiting, alternately, drama, humor, and keen intellectual analysis; and we have seen objections fade away like the snow in the springtime.

We shall not see that again. We shall see many fine things in the Senate, but that we shall not see again; and we are the poorer for the loss of that experience.

I wish to mention one further thing. It so happens that for many years, in the private dining room frequented by Republican Senators, Senator MILLIKIN and I have sat across the table from each other at luncheon. Those luncheons are rare memories. They were experiences the memory of which I shall carry with me to my dying day.

Someone has mentioned the wit of the Senator from Colorado. He does have wit; but he has, to a beautiful and wonderful degree, a sense of humor. It is a real sense of humor, because he enjoys it even if it happens to be directed at himself. That is the test of a real sense of humor.

Senator MILLIKIN, the Senate will be poorer with you gone. It will take all the rest of us to make up for the gap which you leave behind you.

Mr. KEFAUVER. Mr. President, I cannot allow this occasion to pass without expressing my appreciation for the wonderful public service of Senator MILLIKIN, and for his kindness to me. He is always thoughtful and considerate of all Members of the Senate, Democrat as well as Republican. I certainly agree that he is one of the great lawyers of the United States Senate. I have had the privilege of visiting in Colorado on a number of occasions, on committee hearings and on other business. Senator MILLIKIN always looks up his colleagues and extends to them great courtesy and thoughtfulness whenever they visit his beautiful State. I consider him a man whose service and work and integrity have been in the best traditions of this high legislative body. I wish for him and Mrs. Millikin many happy years, and for him many years of service and useful life in his own State.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, as I studied the record of the Senate, even before I became a Member of it, I came to admire Senator MILLIKIN. When I was privileged to come to the Senate as a junior Member, I found that Senator MILLIKIN had the faculty of making one feel important even though one knew he was not important as a junior Member of the Senate. Over the years of service in the Senate, I have come not only to admire but to respect the ability of Senator MILLIKIN. He is a great statesman, a great legislator, and a great leader. The Senate will long remember Senator MILLIKIN, and the time will be remote when it will have among its Members one who can render more devoted and able service than Senator MILLIKIN has rendered the Senate and the country.

At the close of the session the Senate will lose two extremely able men. They are Senator MILLIKIN and Senator GEORGE. Many of us will have to work much harder than we have in the past if we are to render the Nation the type of service Senator MILLIKIN and Senator GEORGE have rendered this Nation.

Senator MILLIKIN, I can only wish for you and Mrs. Millikin the rest and the enjoyment which will come when you are freed from the heavy schedule that you have had to face here. I know that we shall always remember our association with you, and we shall always strive to render the kind of service that you rendered, and to set the type of example you set for all men in public service in your career as a Member of the Senate.

Mr. BARRETT. Mr. President, I would be remiss, indeed, if I did not rise this afternoon and express my admiration and affection for Senator EUGENE D. MILLIKIN. It was with deep regret that I learned this morning of his decision to retire from public life come next New Year's Day. His retirement will be a great loss to Colorado. It will be an even greater loss to the Western States. He has been a tower of strength in the promotion of policies beneficial to the West.

He occupied a powerful position both before committees and on the floor of the Senate. He possesses a keen intellect and in the profession he is known as a lawyer's lawyer. He has led the fight in every battle for western development. GENE MILLIKIN was ready and willing on every occasion to advocate those policies that were necessary for the welfare of western industries. He was in the forefront in the consideration of legislation affecting mining, oil and gas, sheep and cattle, reclamation, and related western problems.

On behalf of the people of my State I desire to express my deep gratitude to a great American, EUGENE D. MILLIKIN, for his long and faithful service to the people of his State and his country. I trust that in the years that lie ahead he and his good wife will enjoy many happy years of well deserved retirement.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. President, I should like very much to associate myself with the felicitations paid by my colleagues to GENE MILLIKIN, and to reaffirm my support of all the tributes which have been paid to his great ability, his high qualities of citizenship, his capacity as a great Senator of the United States, and as a great leader from the West.

Mr. President, I believe all of us can utilize occasions such as this to sort of check the experiences and records of great men like WALTER GEORGE and GENE MILLIKIN against the records which each of us endeavors to write in the book of the Senate. From it I believe we can learn one significant lesson which needs to be badly learned, and that is that the effectiveness of senatorial speech is not measured by its quantity, but by its quality. We have not heard so frequently from WALTER GEORGE and GENE MILLIKIN, and we have not heard from them with as much fervency, as from others. But, when they speak, they speak with attachment for fact and with accuracy which I believe is a happy model for all of us occasionally to review.

So, in addition to all the other great qualifications, I commend those two great men for having placed before us an example, which, if we can follow it, will make for better action on the part of the Senate, for better legislative records, and for more expeditious effort.

I have never seen GENE MILLIKIN, in the years I have served with him in Congress, engage in a single irresponsible act; nor have I heard him make a reckless statement in senatorial debate. Integrity like that, succinctness like that, and adherence to the facts such as he has persistently and constantly exemplified, have served, among his other great mental qualifications and personal characteristics, to mark him as a man apart in senatorial service.

I wish for Gene and his lovely lady all the happiness in the world, and again assure him that those of us who have known him for so long will continue to consult with him whenever opportunity presents itself as we confront the prodigious problems of the future.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, once before in this year we were confronted with the almost impossible task of trying to imagine a United States Senate in the future without one of its valued Members. Today we are confronted again with that hurdle. With GENE MILLIKIN announcing today that he will retire to the beautiful State which, in part, he so ably represents, we are faced with the unhappy prospect of being without both Senator GEORGE and Senator MILLIKIN in the coming year.

I have known GENE MILLIKIN for many years. I knew him before I ever thought of becoming a Member of the United States Senate. I have known him to be a man of high honor, a man of clear mind, and a man of great courage. I have always known him to be a man with extreme ability to express himself clearly and honestly and quickly.

However, I believe one attribute of this distinguished man has been overlooked in the eulogies which have been paid to him today. It is his willingness to help the younger Members of the Senate.

I recall that when I came to the Senate GENE MILLIKIN was the first man I called upon to ask for assistance, and all during my membership in the Senate I have gone to him religiously to ask his help on problems which confronted me. I know I speak for all the younger Members of this body when I speak in that vein. His helpfulness has meant much to the States of the West, but particularly to the State which I am happy to represent along with my senior colleague [Mr. HAYDEN].

I know Members will recall the fight which went on on this floor and in the committee to obtain water from the Colorado River for the southern part of Arizona, the realization of which we have not yet come to but which we look for in the future. Senator MILLIKIN was a bulwark of strength to my State all through that fight, and we in Arizona shall be eternally grateful to him for all he did for us.

Senator MILLIKIN's name will be engraved on many important legislative monuments which will help to build the future of the West. His constant interest in the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee of the Senate has resulted in important laws being placed on the books having a beneficial effect not only on the West, but on the entire Nation.

Lastly, Mr. President, but certainly most important of all, Senator MILLIKIN has been a great help to his country at a time in our history when honesty has been needed, when clearness of vision and expression has been needed, and when adherence to American principles has been needed. This man from the great State of Colorado has been like a great rock to which we could tie our ropes and pull ourselves up in ever-increasing efforts to better ourselves and our country.

It will be difficult to envision the Senate without the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] and the Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN].

In closing, Mr. President, I merely wish to express to Gene the wishes of Peggy and myself for him and his wife that they may have long happiness in the delightful State of Colorado.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I am sure that I cannot embellish the eloquent testimony which has been given by my colleagues regarding the service of Senator MILLIKIN to the people of the United States, but I should like to express to him, in the presence of his colleagues, a personal tribute of gratitude for his faith in me. As a new Senator newly come to the great Finance Committee, and during the 4 years I have served with him on that committee, he has given me a number of important personal assignments, important to me, certainly, and apparently important to him and to the people of his State. He has had the faith to trust me to carry out those assignments. I wish for nothing higher than the commendation I have received from him for whatever success I have had. I wish him to know as he departs from the Senate, that if I should return I shall be buoyed up by the knowledge of the faith, the trust, and the strength he gave me.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I think no one realizes more than does the senior Senator from Colorado that all the 96 Senators cannot make speeches today, but I wish to say to him that I want him to multiply many, many times all the nice, wonderful, and truthful things that have been said about him this afternoon and to believe me when I tell him that is the way I feel about him. We are going to miss him very much, and we hope he will come back and visit us.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, I wish to associate myself with the other Members of the Senate who have said so many kindly things about the Senator from Colorado which I know were deserved and merited. He is my next-door neighbor, and he knows how I feel personally about him. I would say amen to everything that has been said about him. But the greatest tribute which has been paid today to the Senator from Colorado is that the House Rules Committee has this day approved a rule so that one piece of legislation which he sponsored, the Arkansas-Fryingpan project, which means so much to the West, can be approved. I think that is the greatest tribute which could have been paid to the Senator from Colorado.

Again, I wish to say amen to everything that has been said about my good friend Senator MILLIKIN.

Mr. CARLSON. Mr. President, I wish to express my appreciation of the opportunity of having served with this great American, this great citizen, this great United States Senator. He is our neighbor and our friend. He is not only going to be missed by the State of Colorado, but his service in the United States Senate will be missed by the people of Kansas and all America. It has been my privilege to serve on the Finance Committee with him, and I have on several occasions stated that whenever the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], and the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN] were agreed on a piece of proposed legislation, there was no doubt of its outcome in the Senate.

There was never any doubt in my mind or in the mind of the people of the country as to the thorough analysis which had been given that piece of proposed legislation.

It is a genuine privilege to me to have had an opportunity to serve with Senator MILLIKIN. He is a great student of our tax structure, and a man who analyzes problems thoroughly and correctly. His brilliant leadership and knowledge carried the Finance Committee through many knotty problems. I have observed him as chairman of the Republican conference on occasions when things were extremely tense, and it was his fine mind and kindly hand that drew us all together and carried us through.

The people of Kansas are going to miss his presence in the Senate, and I shall miss the privilege of serving with him. I wish him many years of well-deserved and well-earned rest.

Mr. HICKENLOOPER. Mr. President, I shall speak but a few minutes in paying my tribute to Senator MILLIKIN. I, like other Senators associate myself wholeheartedly with all the fine things which have been said about him on this floor.

It has been remarked repeatedly that this year the Senate is losing the services of two great statesmen, of two great Americans, by their own decisions. It is the loss of the Senate and of the United States that their services will not hereafter be available on the floor. But that, Mr. President, is their own choice and their own determination; it is the choice of Senator WALTER GEORGE and the choice of Senator GENE MILLIKIN.

I have been associated with Senator MILLIKIN on one committee for approximately 10 years. That is the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy. He and I were members of the original Senate committee which was created to write the Atomic Energy Act of 1946. We have served on that committee ever since. I have seen many instances where the clear perception and the sound and irrefutable logic of the senior Senator from Colorado has saved situation after situation, when a wrong decision by that committee might have been highly prejudicial to the atomic energy leadership of this country, and therefore to the security of the country and its progress in atomic science. I mention this because of the intimate association Senator MILLIKIN and I have had during the last 10 years in that particular field.

I repeat once more, although perhaps not in such an impressive way as others have said it, that the clear logic of Senator MILLIKIN and his incisive grasp of the public measures which have come before the Senate during his service here mark him as one of the great Senators of the United States and one of the great Americans in this country's history.

We shall miss him. I shall miss his counsel and advice. But I hope our association and friendship may continue in the years which will follow. I, together with my colleagues, wish for Senator MILLIKIN and his lovely wife, Elsie, all the best things in life, and I express the hope that happiness may continue to be theirs in the future as it has been in the past.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. President, the distinguished senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICKER] has already spoken for our State of Ohio, of the esteem in which the distinguished statesman from Colorado is held. It is rather unusual that a man in his lifetime hears the tributes paid to him as, first, Senator GEORGE, and now Senator MILLIKIN, are hearing.

A poet once wrote:

If with pleasure you are viewing
Any work a man is doing,
If you like him or you love him,
Tell him now.
Don't withhold your approbation
Till the priest makes his oration
And he lies with snowy lilies on his brow.
For no matter how you shout it
He'll not know about it
For he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead.

It is indeed fortunate for a man who has rendered such distinguished service to hear the fine tributes paid to him today, even from some of the newest members of this body.

It has been my privilege to know Senator MILLIKIN ever since I first came to Congress in 1938, and even before that. He has been a source of encouragement to young men. He has a keen sense of humor. He has learned what "rule VI" means. "Rule VI" is:

Never take yourself too seriously.

Mr. President, I have always carried in my pocket a little card which reads:

MY PRAYER FOR TODAY

Dear God, please help me to keep my big mouth shut until I know what I am talking about.

I know what I am talking about today. I am talking about a good man. I am talking about a man of character, a man of conviction, a man who deserves all the nice things which have been said about him.

Since I am on the floor today, I would not feel right if I did not add this word to the word of the senior Senator from the State of Ohio in tribute to Senator MILLIKIN.

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. President, I have already expressed my appreciation for the wonderful work of Senator MILLIKIN in connection with our problems in the West on the occasion of the passage by the Senate of the Fryingpan-Arkansas bill. However, I wish to join with my colleagues today in their eloquent and splendid expressions of appreciation of the Senator's example of life and the great service he has rendered to the Nation. I feel there is very little I can add to the statements which have been made.

I met Senator MILLIKIN for the first time at the Republican convention in Chicago in 1944. I had the high privilege of serving with him on the committee on platform and resolutions of that convention. I learned by his example how things ought to be done in the writing of a platform. Senator MILLIKIN, I think, was the chief draftsman of many of the planks in that platform, particularly the one which related to the problems of the West. His work was done in such a way that when he had finished, the platform contained a comprehensive statement, in a few very simple words which anyone could understand, of the numerous programs and problems of the West.

It has been my privilege to serve with Senator MILLIKIN on the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs for 10 years, and for about the same length of time as a member of the Subcommittee on Irrigation and Reclamation. But I have already spoken of his services there.

In behalf of the people of the State of Utah, a State which has many problems in common with her sister State of Colorado, I desire to express deep appreciation for the great service which Senator MILLIKIN has rendered the people of this country, but particularly the people of the West and of my own State.

We in Utah have great respect and admiration for Senator MILLIKIN. We hope he will have many years of happy life on earth. We extend to him our sincere thanks for the things he has done for us and for the people of the country.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, I wish to associate myself with the many fine things which have been said about the senior Senator from Colorado. I do not know that I can add much to the statements which have been made about his career in the Senate; they are very well known.

But I have had a rather unusual opportunity to visit with him personally, having lived in the same apartment house with Senator MILLIKIN and his lovely wife, Elsie, for a number of years. I know him to be, in addition to being a great leader of his party and of this body, a delightful individual having a keen sense of humor. He is a most interesting conversationalist and one of the best informed men I have ever known in Washington.

Mrs. Fulbright and I wish for Senator and Mrs. Millikin great happiness in the years to come.

Mr. DWORSHAK. Mr. President, I wish to join my colleagues in paying tribute to a great American. I recall as a freshman Senator, when I was assigned to the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee in the 80th Congress, it was a real inspiration to have the counsel and guidance of Senator MILLIKIN. I was profoundly impressed by his extensive knowledge of the problems which vitally concern the States of the West, and also by his sympathetic understanding and his constant willingness to help his associates on that committee in solving many of the problems before it. Probably the fact which most impressed me was that he never indulged in partisanship. He seemed to sense the need of having a common front and the need for joining together in the committee in order to report constructive proposed legislation.

Senator MILLIKIN's ideas were always sound, and because of his extensive legal experience prior to his becoming a Member of the Senate, I know he had a firm grasp of problems which affected the West—irrigation, reclamation, mining, and all the various activities and industries which are so vital to the economy of our country.

So, Mr. President, on behalf of the people of the State of Idaho, I desire to express our gratitude and appreciation for the fine service which Senator MILLIKIN has rendered not only to his own

State but to the Nation. I sincerely hope he and Mrs. Millikin may enjoy many years of happiness.

Mr. EASTLAND. Mr. President, I desire to join my colleagues in the statements they have made about our distinguished friend, the senior Senator from Colorado. Senator MILLIKIN is one of the ablest men who ever sat in the United States Senate. He is one of the most influential Members of this body. I do not think the statement would be contradicted if I said he is one of the most influential men who ever sat in the United States Senate. He has made a very effective Senator. He is a man of unimpeachable integrity. He is one of the most popular Senators among his colleagues.

I think all Americans, from every section of the country, owe a deep debt of gratitude to him for the very distinguished service he has rendered his country. I shall certainly miss him in the future.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I should like to associate myself with my colleagues in expressing regret at the departure of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN]. He has two qualities in great degree. One is his complete knowledge of all the subjects he discusses. The second is the courtesy with which he treats his colleagues on both sides of the aisle, particularly those of us who are a great many years junior to him in service.

The Senator from Colorado was made a member of the committee to select the five greatest Senators who have sat in the Senate. I know his advice on that subject would be invaluable. As chairman of that committee, I am particularly sorry that we shall not have the benefit of his advice. I think it can be said of him, as was said of a great Governor of Massachusetts, "He dwelt an arrow's flight beyond them all."

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, 3 years ago I was confined to a hospital in Denver, Colo., for about 5 weeks. One morning I picked up a newspaper and read that the distinguished Senator from Colorado had come back to Denver, and that early in the morning 600 citizens had gone to the train to meet him. It was a magnificent tribute. I thought that sometime during the day I would hear from GENE MILLIKIN. Sure enough, in the afternoon, busy as he was with his friends, he called up to find out how I was getting along in the hospital.

Mr. President, one of the finest debates I heard on the floor of the Senate was the one between Tom Connally, of Texas, and the distinguished Senator from Colorado. All of us oldtimers are familiar with the way that Tom Connally, just by shrugging his shoulders, could disable an enemy in debate.

On that day we learned GENE MILLIKIN could shrug his shoulders even more expressively and suggestively than could Tom Connally, of Texas.

One time I won a bet from a constituent of mine from North Dakota. I told my constituent that if we went over and shook hands with Senator MILLIKIN, he would say, "How's the old kid?" Sure enough, I won the bet.

In closing, Mr. President, I wish to say that when I meet this great man in heaven, I am sure he will say, with a beautiful smile, "How's the old kid?"

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. President, I should like to be permitted to join my colleagues in paying my deep respects and expressing my affection for the distinguished Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN]. He is not only a neighbor to us in Oklahoma, but I have had the distinguished pleasure of having my name called immediately after his on calls of the roll during my service in the Senate. While I cannot say he has ever influenced my vote, I will say that in not winning my vote, he won my heart, my affection, and my respect, for, to the fullest degree, he is indeed a Senator after whose conduct all of us can pattern our own conduct. Through many years, he has contributed his ability and service to this Nation.

We are going to miss him deeply. Above all, we shall miss the glorious sense of human he displayed so often in the United States Senate.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I, of course, wish to add an expression of my feelings to what has already been said about GENE MILLIKIN. I have served with him in the Senate for a long time. So much has been said in tribute to him that if there were any other adjectives in Webster's dictionary, I would use them. I know that he will leave the Senate with the affection of all of us. I wish for him great happiness and I pray for his good health for many years to come.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, one of the most facile intellects, one of the greatest debaters, one of the most lovable personalities to grace this body has been the senior Senator from Colorado, the Honorable EUGENE MILLIKIN. To hear him in debate has been a treat, even to those who disagree with him, unless, of course, one was the victim of his devastating sarcasm, even though it would leave no sting. He is a man who is beloved and respected by every Member in a body in which the personal equation is more important than it is in any other legislative body in the world.

Mr. President, I join with other Senators in wishing for Senator MILLIKIN, in his retirement, the fullest measure of happiness and joy. I know that his recollection of his triumphs and his service in the Senate will add to his joy.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I should like to join my colleagues today in expressing the high esteem all of us have for the distinguished Senator from Colorado.

As a Senator from the State of Montana, on the northern edge of the Rocky Mountains, I am happy to join with my other colleagues from that region, as well as with those from the rest of the United States, in expressing how we feel about a man who has distinguished himself through his ability, through his integrity, through his sense of humor, and through his sense of tolerance and understanding.

All of us will miss Gene. But because of having had the chance to know him—limited though it may have been, in the case of some of us—I believe that all of us will be better because of the friendship he has so freely extended.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. Mr. President, I wish to say just a few words of personal friendship and admiration for the very distinguished and able senior Senator from Colorado, Mr. MILLIKIN.

When I became a United States Senator and was privileged to engage in debate in the Senate, one of my first experiences was in connection with consideration of the tax bill by the Senate. Let me say that during that debate I received quite an education from the professor of the Finance Committee, the able, brilliant, genial, and unbelievably effective Senator from Colorado, now its senior Senator, Mr. MILLIKIN. However, I wish to note for the RECORD that although his arguments are devastating and, in terms of the votes taken, persuasive, he is always kindly and always, let me say, most amusing, even though he is giving a very serious message or note of admonition to his much younger colleague.

Senator MILLIKIN and Mrs. Millikin have been good friends of the HUMPHREYS. We are honored by their friendship.

As has been stated by his other colleagues, the senior Senator from Colorado is one of the truly brilliant debaters of this Congress or any other Congress. I only wish that those great talents, that genial personality, that kindly spirit, and that agile and productive mind could always have been on this side of the aisle, because if that had been the case, the record of this side of the aisle—good as it has been—would have been ever better.

But, Mr. President, it is always good, under the two-party system, to have capable talents on both sides.

The Senator from Colorado is surely a giant on the side of the forces and the views and the causes which he and his party represent.

Let me conclude by saying that not only is the senior Senator from Colorado an effective and an honorable partisan, but he is better than that: He is a great American, a truly fine and noble citizen. He does honor to his State. He has brought great honor to his party. He has given even greater service to his country.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, I wish to associate myself with the views of my colleagues who already have spoken in expressing their admiration and affection for the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN].

It was with regret that, this morning, I learned that he is retiring from the Senate at the end of his present term.

Senator MILLIKIN is not only one of the most brilliant Members of the United States Senate, but he is thorough, devoted, industrious, and, above all things, wise. I know of no man whose judgment is sounder in regard to the matters coming under his cognizance and jurisdiction.

I also know that the senior Senator from Colorado is one of the finest debaters in the Senate. He is most incisive in his approach to all matters and in his expressions. He is always kindly, and he never has deliberately hurt anyone in opposition to him.

Surely, even though Senator MILLIKIN is retiring from the Senate, he will serve in many useful activities in the years which lie ahead.

I hope very much indeed that we shall soon hear of his great improvement in health and, ultimately, of his complete recovery.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. President, certainly there is little that I could add to the very eloquent and highly deserved words of tribute which have been spoken here this afternoon regarding a very outstanding and most capable American, Senator EUGENE MILLIKIN.

I simply wish to say that it has been one of the greatest joys of my life to have had the opportunity to serve in the United States Senate with Senator MILLIKIN and to be able to seek his counsel and advice on many, many occasions.

As I stand here this afternoon and see on my left the distinguished senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] I should like to state—if it is permissible for me to do so—that even though I happen to be a Republican, there are in the Senate two Members to whom I have looked to provide the type of leadership which in my younger days I always hoped would be in the minds and hearts of those serving in this body. Those two men are Senator EUGENE MILLIKIN and Senator WALTER GEORGE. Frankly, Mr. President, there have been many times when not only have I followed the leadership of Senator MILLIKIN, but I have likewise turned to the guidance and leadership of Senator GEORGE on matters which he was debating on this floor, and in connection with which he was taking the lead, and I have supported the position he has taken, because in my opinion both of these men stand for everything that is great and good in the interests of this country and all of its people.

To both of them I wish every success and happiness in the world.

I hope that GENE MILLIKIN will have an opportunity to return to his great State of Colorado, and there to breathe the invigorating air of that great State. I wish him to know that the many people of Maine, among whom he has many very great and fond admirers, wish for him and Mrs. Millikin everything good in the years they will have together in the times ahead.

Mr. ERVIN. Mr. President, I merely wish to say a hearty and sincere amen to everything the Senator from Maine has just said in respect to the distinguished senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] and in respect to the distinguished senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN].

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, one of the great privileges which has been mine during the last 4 years has been the friendship of the distinguished senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN]. Similarly, Mr. President, while my wife has been in the city of Washington, she has counted as one of her great privileges the friendship of Mrs. Millikin.

In times of doubt—as one has during service in the Senate—I have turned more often to Senator MILLIKIN for advice than I have to any other Member of the Senate. Never once has he given me advice which was not sound. I think I can say that in almost every case in which I have asked him for advice, I have followed the advice he gave.

I have enjoyed his friendship. I have enjoyed his wit and his companionship, but most of all I have respected his intellect and his great integrity as a statesman.

So, Mr. President, I join my colleagues today in paying tribute to this great American. I hope that when he returns to his home, he will live happily with his lovely wife for many years to come.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, I am very happy to have the privilege of joining my colleagues today in paying tribute to the distinguished Senator from Colorado.

I have had the good fortune to be very closely associated with him for a number of years on the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs. He was the ranking member on the Republican side in that committee, and I found him to be a very valuable member. He is one of the best informed Members of the United States Senate on the subjects of water conservation, flood control, power development and problems of that character which come before our committee.

I always looked to him for advice and direction in our studies and I must say that he cooperated fully with me as chairman of that committee. Made it possible for our committee in this session of Congress to make one of the finest records ever made by that committee in the matter of power and reclamation projects of great value to our country.

I am very pleased indeed to be here today to hear many fine tributes paid to him on the record of his service here. I am in accord with everything that has been said about him, concerning his fine personal traits of character which have endeared him to his colleagues. I also wish to associate myself with all that has been said concerning my distinguished friend, the Senator from Georgia.

I feel very proud that I have served in this body during the time these great Senators were here, and that I have had the opportunity of hearing them in debate and committee work and observing their great fairness, and their desire to do what is right and for the best interests of the welfare of our country.

I am very happy today to pay this sincere tribute of respect and regard to both the Senator from Colorado and the Senator from Georgia. May they enjoy many more years of health and happiness is my sincere wish.

Mr. KUCHEL. Mr. President, I would not want the comments by my brethren to conclude without having an opportunity to tell a very distinguished American that he has the respect, the admiration, and the friendship of every Member of this body as he announces his decision to retire from the Senate. We wish him Godspeed.

For the past 3½ years I have been a member of the Senate Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, on which Senator GENE MILLIKIN has been the ranking Republican. During that time, like so many others among my colleagues, I have sought his counsel and assistance, which he freely gave, and for which he has not only the gratitude of the junior Senator from California, but the gratitude of the people whom I represent in the Senate.

Time and time again projects of interest to California were before that committee, and time and time again it was only through the patient, friendly, and understanding assistance of the senior Senator from Colorado that legislation came from the committee, passed the Senate, and went on its way to becoming law.

I value and treasure a great friendship for GENE MILLIKIN, and I flatter myself that he returns that friendship.

Those who, like myself, are new in the Senate, but who have always respected, and in many ways have attempted to follow, his own high type of courage and leadership in his public service, are honored to pay tribute to him.

My wife would want me to say also that both of us bid Godspeed to the Millikin family. We very much hope that in the years ahead it will be our privilege upon many occasions to see each of them.

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. Mr. President, I have had the privilege of observing the statesmanship of GENE MILLIKIN from two vantage points. While serving in the House of Representatives, I was a member of the House Ways and Means Committee. From there I looked across the Capitol to witness the stature and the brilliance of Senator MILLIKIN. Two years ago I came to the Senate, and I have been able to view from a closer point of observation the character of GENE MILLIKIN. I learned, as other Senators have learned, that the closer one is to Senator MILLIKIN, the more one respects and admires him.

I have another association with GENE MILLIKIN of which I am very proud. During my service on the Committee on Military Affairs in the House, I became particularly interested in the field of stockpiling of strategic materials. In that capacity I grew to appreciate the understanding and comprehension of the problems of national defense and metals and minerals that was GENE MILLIKIN'S.

Mr. President, a man's deeds live after him. By this token will GENE MILLIKIN be long remembered and admired. Mrs. Martin and I wish to Senator and Mrs. Millikin the long years of happiness and contentment they so richly deserve.

The VICE PRESIDENT. There is very little to be added to the eulogies to Senator MILLIKIN which he has heard today from his colleagues on both sides of the aisle.

The Chair would like to add a personal note. In the past 10 years the present occupant of the chair has attended many meetings in which Senator MILLIKIN has participated. There has never been one which was not better by reason of his presence.

There is understandably some sadness as this session draws to a close, because we realize that in the services of Senator MILLIKIN and Senator GEORGE, we have enjoyed a rare privilege—the privilege of having two giants in our midst on the floor of the Senate. They are giants in intellect, giants in devotion to duty, and giants in courage.

But there is also a happy note on this occasion. So great has been the stature of these two men that few have dared to tangle with them, and those who did invariably came out second best. They were, and they are, champions; and we are happy to note that, like the greatest of champions, they retire undefeated, untied, and unscarred.

ORDER FOR RECESS AT 5 O'CLOCK TOMORROW AFTERNOON—RECEPTION FOR SENATOR AND MRS. MILLIKIN

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that it be in order for the Senate to take a recess tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock subject to the call of the Chair. It is planned at that time to have a reception in honor of the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN].

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THEATER ADMISSIONS TAX

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, the distinguished minority leader and I have prepared a proposed unanimous-consent agreement on the theater admissions tax bill, which may be called up. The unanimous-consent agreement is at the desk, and I ask that it be read for the information of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The proposed unanimous-consent agreement will be read for the information of the Senate.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT

Ordered, That during the consideration of the bill (H. R. 9875) on theater admissions tax, debate on the passage of the said bill shall be limited to 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled, respectively, by the majority and minority leaders.

Ordered further, That the committee amendments be agreed to en bloc, without debate: Provided further, That no other amendments to the bill shall be in order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the proposed unanimous-consent agreement?

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, I regret that I did not hear the agreement read.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. It provides for a limitation of debate on the theater admissions tax bill. The proposed agreement has been cleared with the minority leader.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the unanimous-consent agreement is entered.

ORDER FOR RECESS TO 10:30 A. M. TOMORROW

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate concludes its business today, it stand in recess until 10:30 a. m. tomorrow.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

WAIVER OF REQUIREMENT FOR COMMITTEE REPORTS TO LIE OVER A DAY

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I should like to make an announcement, which I have cleared with the minority leader.

Because of the fact that we are in the last days of the session, I ask unanimous consent, on behalf of the minority leader and myself, that the requirement that committee reports lie over a day be waived on all bills which we have heretofore announced we would take up.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF LATE SESSION TONIGHT

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I should like all Senators to know that it is planned to have a late session this evening. We hope to be able to take up the auto dealers bill after we dispose of the pending business. We hope to proceed to the consideration of the supplemental appropriation bill, and complete action before we conclude the session tonight. We may act on the theater admission bill before the evening is over, because it is desired to clear as much legislation as possible before the week is over.

THE DEPRESSED AREA BILL—UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I send to the desk a unanimous-consent request and ask that it may be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The unanimous consent request will be read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT

Ordered, That after the adoption of this agreement, it shall be in order to move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of S. 2663, the so-called depressed area bill; that no amendment to the committee substitute shall be in order, except certain amendments to be proposed by Mr. FULBRIGHT, Mr. SMITH of New Jersey, Mr. FLANDERS, and Mr. DIRKSEN, respectively; that on the amendments to be proposed by Mr. FULBRIGHT, which shall be considered and voted upon en bloc, debate shall be limited to 30 minutes, and upon the other amendments to be proposed a 30-minute limitation also shall be allowed respectively; that the time on the above amendments shall be equally divided and controlled, respectively, by the mover of such amendments and the majority leader: Provided, That in the event the majority leader is in favor of any such amendment or motion, the time in opposition thereto shall be controlled by the minority leader or some Senator designated by him: Provided further, That no amendment that is not germane to the provisions of the said bill shall be received.

Ordered further, That after the disposition of the above amendments, the committee amendment, whether amended or not, shall be voted upon without further debate; and that on the question of the final passage of the said bill debate shall be limited to 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled, respectively, by the majority and minority leaders: Provided, That the said leaders, or either of them, may, from the time under their control on the passage of the said bill, allot additional time to any Senator during the consideration of any amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent request?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I wish to make sure that in case any difficulty arises I may reserve the right——

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. The Senator's amendment is covered.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I know; and I think that is all correct. I merely wanted to be certain.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. The chairman has told me that he would accept the Senator's amendment.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. With that understanding, I will not object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

AWARD FOR INJURIES TO CERTAIN MILITARY PERSONNEL—UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the clerk may state a proposed unanimous-consent agreement.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the proposed unanimous-consent agreement.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

Ordered, That when the Senate proceeds to the consideration of H. R. 2845, providing a statutory award for injuries to certain military personnel, no amendments shall be in order, and debate on the said bill shall be limited to 30 minutes, to be equally divided and controlled by the majority and minority leaders, respectively.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent agreement? Without objection, the agreement is entered.

THE SOUND FREE-ENTERPRISE POSITION OF VENEZUELA

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, the newspapers of the past few days have reported two contrasting actions which I think well deserve the attention of my colleagues in the Senate.

Both of these actions relate to a great resource of the free world—the petroleum resource—a resource on which I have previously commented on March 21, 1956. Both of these actions involve countries which are our good friends, and for whom we rightly have a high regard.

The one action—in the Old World—involves Italy; the other action is in the New World, and involves Venezuela.

In the one newspaper report, we learned that the Italian Parliament is, unfortunately, approving highly restrictive legislation with regard to the development of Italy's oil resource. Indeed, the law is reported to be so rigid as to make it perhaps virtually impossible for foreign capital to come in, to make a fair return on its investment, and to help develop the oil resource as it should be developed.

The other news reports convey more welcome news. The news is that the Government of Venezuela through its regular bid and award procedure, is in the process of developing the vast additional petroleum resources with which that great country is blessed.

Thus, on the one hand, additional foreign capital will pour into Venezuela; on the other hand, unfortunately, foreign capital may be completely frozen out of Italy's oil industry.

I do not like to draw this contrast, and I certainly do not do so to reflect upon our good Italian friends.

Of course, what a government does inside its own boundaries is its own prerogative. We shall continue to have the warmest sentiments of friendship for the Italian Government and people. But we are forced to the reluctant conclusion that, in this instance, in our frank appraisal, our Italian friends are not following a policy which will best serve the interest of Italy itself. That, I repeat, however, is their prerogative, if they are so inclined.

On the other hand, I want to say the warmest word of commendation for the Government of President Marcos Perez Jimenez of Venezuela. That Government has welcomed foreign capital. It has treated foreign capital in a fair, friendly, sound, and equitable manner.

Let me state quite clearly that the Venezuelan Government has amply protected the sovereign rights of the people of Venezuela. There is no so-called "exploitation" by foreign interests; on the contrary, there is genuine partnership, genuine teamwork, between foreign and Venezuelan interests. As a result, there is prosperity for Venezuela and prosperity for the United States and for the rest of the free world.

The free nations will get equitable benefit from the present tapped and untapped reserves of Venezuela. The Venezuelan people in turn benefit, because payments received for the oil are plowed back—sown back—into the land, so to speak. The result is a huge program of internal development and modernization in Venezuela. That program has set a breathtaking example for the rest of the hemisphere and the world—an example of how a people's mineral resource can be constructively applied for their own benefit. Within the space of but a few years, Venezuela has literally been transformed. Standards of living have been elevated, and foreign capital has proven what private enterprise can accomplish.

I should like now to quote from a message which I think expresses sentiments felt here in the Congress. The message is from Mr. Joseph Davidson, of Washington, D. C., who for 35 years has been active in petroleum affairs in Latin American countries, particularly in Venezuela. It reads in part:

JULY 25, 1956.

HON. ALEXANDER WILEY,
United States Senate, Ranking Republican, United States Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR: I recall with pleasure your many fine statements to others and myself, as well as on the Senate floor, on the issue of free-enterprise development in the Western Hemisphere.

I thought, therefore, I would drop this little note to you on the occasion of the news from Venezuela, so welcomed by the free world, indicating the further splendid and equitable cooperation with foreign capital, on the part of the administration of Gen. Marcos Perez Jimenez, one of the most brilliant men to appear on the Western Hemisphere scene in the past century.

You, Senator WILEY, have frequently pointed out how a friendly climate for foreign capital can result in mutual prosperity for the country which welcomes the foreign capital and for the country from which the capital comes.

Venezuela is the most dramatic single instance, confirming the unparalleled benefits for a nation and a people—benefits which a favorable climate for free-enterprise capital can achieve. In that friendly climate, maximum national initiative has been stimulated inside Venezuela, and the genius, know-how, and resources of America's own great petroleum industry have been fully utilized.

It is the hope, I know, of the petroleum industry, and, yes, of other United States industries, that other countries may be encouraged similarly to welcome foreign capital, as Venezuelan President Gen. Marcos Perez Jimenez has done so wisely and effectively. Your own additional fine efforts toward that goal will, I know, be appreciated. Your endeavors will be applauded by all those who believe in the free-enterprise system—in our land, among our good neighbors to the south, particularly in Venezuela, in Canada to the north, and throughout other friendly nations.

With assurance of personal esteem, I am
Sincerely yours,

JOSEPH DAVIDSON.

Mr. President, I do indeed pledge my own continued effort for this purpose; and I know that, as Mr. Davidson indicated, I am joined by Members of the Congress who so firmly believe in the value of free-enterprise development.

THE A. S. KAY CONVALESCENT CENTER FOR THE DISABLED VETERANS OF ISRAEL

Mr. WILEY. Mr. President, I am always pleased to note humanitarian activities performed by generous American philanthropists on behalf of the fulfillment of needs at home and abroad.

Certainly, there are few groups more deserving of assistance than those who, on the field of battle have risked their lives in the interest of preserving their country's freedom and independence. That is why I have noted with pleasure the fine work of the World Veterans' Federation.

It is why, too, right here at home, I am a vigorous supporter of legislation to improve the veterans' pension program in our own Nation. It is why I have urged the Senate Finance Committee to take action on the numerous veterans' bills which the House of Representatives has passed, and which now lie before the committee on our side of the Hill.

But certainly the heart of America is big enough and warm enough to do our part, if only in a small way abroad, to help others fulfill foreign needs, as well. Our basic interest is, of course, in looking after the needs of our own people, first and foremost; but America's sympathies do not stop at our borders.

So many Americans have noted with gratification the generous action of Mr. A. S. Kay, long prominent in the construction industry in our Nation's Capital, in donating funds for the construction of a 150-bed center for the disabled veterans of Israel, at Nahiryah, between Haifa and Acre, on the Mediterranean. This great pioneering project will fulfill the needs of the presently handicapped men and women who fought so heroically against overwhelming odds in Israel's war of independence, when invading armies poured in from every side, and when only the courage of an ancient people stood between survival and utter destruction.

The cornerstone for the buildings was laid by Mr. Kay on May 7, 1955. Actual construction, I understand, will be completed in the spring of next year. It will be an inspiring day—for Israel, which donated the land for the buildings; for the veterans and their loved ones; and for Mr. Kay, himself, a veteran of our own forces in the First World War.

The center will prove an additional measure of gratitude to those who performed deeds of gallantry. The gratitude of whom? The gratitude of the Israeli Government and people. The gratitude of Jewish coreligionists abroad, and of men and women of good will—of all religions—who admire the democratic bastion of Israel.

As we all know, our own country is, of course, the richest in the world, and can well afford a comprehensive program for our exservicemen.

However, other lands with meager resources, cannot. This is particularly so in the case of a relatively poor land like Israel, whose population has been swollen by the ingathering of exiles, and whose borders are still menaced, thus requiring considerable outlays for defense purposes. So, regrettably, Israel, with her heavy defense and other commitments, can hardly afford all that she might otherwise gratefully do for her exservicemen—particularly for their convalescence and rehabilitation.

So I commend this philanthropic step by Mr. Kay. I hope that other generous-hearted individuals will follow in the splendid path which he and others have now set, and I congratulate him on this most excellent service in the name of humanity.

ALASKA INTERNATIONAL RAIL AND HIGHWAY COMMISSION

strike out "six" and insert "seven"; on page 2, after line 14, insert:

(d) The appointment of an officer of the Army on the active list as a member of the Commission is authorized as an exception to section 1222, Revised Statutes (10 U. S. C. 576), and does not vacate his appointment as a commissioned officer of the Army.

And on page 3, line 7, strike out all after "Alaska" down through and including "trench" in line 8.

Mr. MANSFIELD. I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

ESTABLISHMENT OF CIVIL AIR PATROL AS CIVILIAN AUXILIARY OF THE UNITED STATES AIR FORCE

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1135) to amend the act entitled "An act to establish Civil Air Patrol as a civilian auxiliary of the United States Air Force and to authorize the Secretary of the Air Force to extend aid to Civil Air Patrol in the fulfillment of its objectives, and for other purposes", which were on page 2, strike out lines 11 through 22 and insert:

"(b) In administering that act for Members covered by this section—

"(1) the monthly pay of such a member shall, for the purpose of computing compensation for disability or death, be considered to be $300;

"(2) the percentages applicable to payments under section 10 of that act are—

"(A) 45 percent for clause (C) of that section, in any case where the member died fully or currently insured under title II of the Social Security Act, with no additional payments for a child or children so long as the widow or wiower remains eligible for payments under that clause;

"(B) 20 percent for clause (D) of that section, for one child and 10 percent additional for each additional child, but not more than a total of 75 percent, in any case where the member died fully or currently insured under title II of the Social Security Act; and

"(C) 25 percent for clause (E) of that section, if one parent was wholly dependent for support upon the deceased member at the time of his death and the other was not dependent to any extent; 16 percent to each, if both were wholly dependent; and if one was, or both were, partly dependent, a proportionate amount in the discretion of the Secretary of Labor;

"(3) no payments may be made under clause (F) of that section;

"(4) the term 'performance of duty', as used in that act, means only active service, and travel to and from such service, rendered in performance or support of operational missions of the Civil Air Patrol, under direction of the Department of the Air Force, and under written authorization by competent authority covering a specific assignment and prescribing a time limit for such assignment; and

"(5) the Secretary of Labor, or his designee, shall inform the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare whenever a claim is filed and eligibility for compensation is established under clause (C) or clause (D) of section 10 of that act, and that Secretary shall then certify to the Secretary of Labor as to whether or not the member concerned was fully or currently insured under title II of the Social Security Act at the time of his death."

And on page 4, after line 11, insert:

SEC. 2. (a) Section 760 of title 14, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking out "$150" in subsection (a) and inserting "$300" in lieu thereof; and

(2) by adding the following subsection at the end thereof:

"(e) In administering the Federal Employees' Compensation Act for persons covered by this section—

"(1) the percentages applicable to payments under section 10 of that act are—

"(A) 45 percent for clause (C) of that section, in any case where the member died fully or currently insured under title II of the Social Security Act, with no additional payments for a child or children so long as the widow or widower remains eligible for payments under that clause;

"(B) 20 percent for clause (D) of that section, for one child, and 10 percent additional for each additional child, but not more than a total of 75 percent, in any case where the member died fully or currently insured under title II of the Social Security Act; and

"(C) 25 percent for clause (E) of that section, if one parent was wholly dependent for support upon the deceased member at the time of his death and the other was not dependent to any extent; 16 percent to each if both were wholly dependent; and if one was, or both were, partly dependent, a proportionate amount in the discretion of the Secretary of Labor;

"(2) no payments may be made under clause (F) of that section; and

"(3) the Secretary of Labor or his designee shall inform the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare whenever a claim is filed and eligibility for compensation is established under clause (C) or clause (D) of section 10 of that act, and that Secretary shall then certify to the Secretary of Labor as to whether or not the member concerned was fully or currently insured under title II of the Social Security Act at the time of his death."

(b) The amendments made by this section apply only to benefits for months beginning after the month in which it is enacted.

(c) The entitlement of any person to benefits under the Federal Employees' Compensation Act as it was in effect before the enactment of this section is not affected by this section.

Mr. ERVIN. Mr. President, the effect of the House amendments to S. 1135 is—

First. To modify the Federal Employees Compensation Act benefits payable to survivors of Civil Air Patrol members so that they are consistent with benefits that may be paid survivors of persons in the lowest military commissioned grade under the Survivor Benefits Act; and Second. To raise from $150 to $300 the assumed monthly wage on which benefits under the Federal Employees Compensation Act would be paid to survivors of members of the Coast Guard Auxiliary.

The House amendments were considered by the Committee on Armed Services on July 19 and the committee recommends acceptance of the amendments.

Mr. President, I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF COMMUNICATIONS ACT OF 1934

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1456) to amend sections 212, 219 (a), 221 (a), and 410 (a) of the Communications Act of 1934, as amended, which were on page 2, line 17, after "219" insert "(a)"; on page 2, line 20, strike out "the section" and insert "such section 219 (a)"; on page 4, line 2, after "agreements" insert ", arrangements, or contracts affecting the same, as the Commission may require", and on page 5, lines 10 and 11, strike out "the section" and insert "such section 410 (a)."

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, the amendments added by the House are of a perfecting nature.

I move that the Senate concur in the House amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

REGULATION OF INTERSTATE TRANSPORTATION OF MIGRANT FARMWORKERS

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 3391) to provide for the regulation of the interstate transportation of migrant farmworkers, which were on page 2, after line 18 insert "Such requirements shall apply to any such carrier only in the case of transportation of any migrant worker for a total distance of more than 75 miles, and then only if such transportation is across the boundary line of any State, the District of Columbia, or Territory of the United States, or a foreign country.", and on page 3, line 4, strike out "section 2 of this act" and insert "section 204 (a) (3a) of the Interstate Commerce Act."

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, one of the House amendments is of a technical perfecting nature. The other House amendment provides that the reasonable requirements to be established by the Interstate Commerce Commission for the transportation of migrant farm workers shall apply only in the case of transportation for a total distance of more than 75 miles, and then only if such transportation is across the boundary line of any State, the District of Columbia, or Territory of the United States, or a foreign country.

I move that the Senate concur in the House amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF ACT OF MARCH 3, 1901, RELATING TO THE USE OF THE WORKING CAPITAL FUND BY NATIONAL BUREAU OF STANDARDS

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2060) to amend the act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. 1449), as amended, to incorporate in the Organic Act of the National Bureau of Standards the authority to use the working capital fund, and to permit certain improvements in fiscal practices, which were on page 2, line 6, strike out "subect" and insert "subject"; on page 2, line 6, strike out "adustment" and insert "adjustment"; and on page 3, line 7, strike out "the act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. 1449)" and insert "this act."

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, the amendments added by the House correct typographical errors in the bill and make minor perfecting changes.

I move that the Senate concur in the House amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Washington.

The motion was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF MERCHANT MARINE ACT OF 1936, AS AMENDED

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 1833) to amend the Merchant Marine Act of 1936, as amended, which were on page 2, line 5, after "valuation" insert "(exclusive of National Defense features paid for by the Government)"; on page 2, line 10, after "vessel," insert "for the period of insurance prior to requisition for title or use,"; on page 2, line 14, after "features)" insert ", and for the period of insurance after requisition for use the valuation so determined shall not exceed the amount which would be payable under section 802 in the case of requisition for title or use; on page 2, lines 18 and 19, strike out all after "valuation," down through and including "policy" in line 20 and insert "and shall pay, at the rate provided for in said policy, premiums upon such asserted valuation as the insured shall specify at the time of rejection, but such asserted valuation shall not operate to the prejudice of the Government in any subsequent action on the policy"; on page 3, line 10, after "compensation" insert "for any period of insurance prior to actual requisition for title or use of the vessel", and on page 3, line 14, after "features)" insert ", and for any period of insurance after actual requisition for use, the valuation determined by the court shall be the amount which would have been payable under section 802 in the case of requisition for title."

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, the amendments added by the House are of a perfecting nature. They were suggested by the Comptroller General of the United States who informed the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries that he offered no objection to the legislation if the amendments were incorporated therein.

I move that the Senate concur in the House amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Washington.

The motion was agreed to.

TOWN OF CLAYTON, N. MEX.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 218) for the relief of the town of Clayton, N. Mex., which were, on page 1, line 11, after "shall", insert "for the sole purpose of releasing the town of liability based upon those costs," and on page 2, strike out lines 4 through 13.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, the House made two changes in the Senate bill. First, it added a provision to make it clear that the town was to be relieved of liability only for the costs of the construction described in the bill. The second amendment was to strike from the bill section 2, which would have authorized payment to the town of the sum of approximately $4,000 covering specific project costs. The House apparently felt this might result in a duplicate payment of this amount and deleted the section. In view of the fact that we are in the closing days of the session and there is probably not time for a conference, the sponsor of the legislation has suggested that we accept the House amendments. Accordingly, I move that the Senate concur therein.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Washington.

The motion was agreed to.

ACCEPTANCE OF GIFT FROM ERICSSON MEMORIAL COMMITTEE

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 93) authorizing the acceptance of a gift from the Ericsson Memorial Committee of the United States, which were on page 2, line 8, strike out "public or private,"; on page 2, lines 9 and 10, strike out "reimburse the United States for amounts expended under" and insert "carry out", and on page 2 strike out lines 11 through 16.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, the joint resolution deals with Leif Ericsson Memorial. We have finally been able to get an agreement on it.

I move that the Senate concur in the House amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Washington.

The motion was agreed to.

INTERNATIONAL FOOD AND RAW MATERIALS RESERVE

Mr. MARTIN of Iowa. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks a statement which I have prepared relating to the establishment of an international food and raw materials reserve under the auspices of the United Nations.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR MARTIN OF IOWA

When the Senate passed the Mutual Security Act of 1956 it added a new section 11 (d), expressing the sense of the Congress that the President should explore with other nations the establishment of an international food and raw materials reserve under the auspices of the United Nations. This reserve was to be organized with a view to (1) preventing extreme price fluctuations in the international market in these commodities; (2) preventing famine and starvation; (3) helping absorb temporary market surpluses of farm products and other raw materials (exclusive of minerals); and (4) economic and social development programs formulated in cooperation with other appropriate international agencies.

The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations in a study entitled "Functions of a World Food Reserve—Scope and Limitations" shows that these four objectives are contradictory and cannot be incorporated in one package. At the very time this bill was before the Senate our delegation to the United Nations Economic and Social Council was on its way to Geneva to oppose this concept. Fortunately, the final version of the Mutual Security Act of 1956 does not contain this provision. The entire section dealing with the international food and raw materials reserve was dropped in the House-Senate conference.

The international food and raw materials reserve provisions described above were also presented to the Senate in Senate Resolutions 85 and 86. A complete list of the witnesses who had appeared before the Subcommittee of the Foreign Relations Committee having jurisdiction of Senate Resolutions 85 and 86 is given on page 54 of Senate Report 2273 on the Mutual Security Act of 1956. The only farm organization listed was the National Farmers Union. The American Farm Bureau Federation was conspicuous by its absence. The leaders of that great organization, however, were not unaware of the stake that American agriculture had in this proposal. I include a short article which appeared in the American Farm Bureau Federation's Official News Letter of July 16, 1956, entitled "Farm Bureau Wins Victory on MSA Bill."

"FARM BUREAU WINS VICTORY ON MSA BILL

"The American Farm Bureau Federation scored an important victory—virtually single handedly—before congressional passage of the mutual security authorization bill.

"The measure is now awaiting a Presidential signature at the White House.

"When the bill was up for Senate consideration, an amendment was inserted following a brief hearing to which many organizations, including the AFBF were not invited. The amendment would have required President Eisenhower to consult with other nations on the possible development of a world food bank plan.

"Farm Bureau has warned that such a plan, not carefully considered, might have grave implications for the Nation and for United States agriculture. It would give a world organization the right to tap United States surplus resources of farm commodities. At the same time it might deprive this Nation of proper control of distribution.

"When conflicting House and Senate versions of the legislation went to a conference committee, Farm Bureau persuaded the conferees that world food bank plans would be given congressional study. And the amendment was stricken from the authorization bill finally enacted."

On July 6, I placed in the Appendix of the RECORD an article which appeared in the magazine U. S. A. by its editor, Alice Widener. In inserting this article I was not endorsing her characterizations of any of the individuals mentioned. I inserted the article because it clearly showed that the witnesses who appeared on behalf of Senate Resolutions 85 and 86 were not averse to Government interference in free markets. Such a point of view obviously does not make one a Communist, and I did not suggest that any of the persons mentioned were Communists. I believe that their own writings which Mrs. Widener assembled to furnish valuable information to assist the Senate in weighing the evidence they submitted to the Senate committee.

In the July 13 issue of U. S. A. Mrs. Widener has written another article entitled "As Time Goes By." This article contains information which explains why the Farmers Union would not necessarily be opposed to a measure which the American Farm Bureau Federation warns "might have grave implications for the Nation and for United States agriculture." I believe the information she has assembled should be a part of the record which will be before us when this proposal once again comes before the Congress in future years as I am sure it will. This article is useful as it reminds us of the social and political climate in which we lived only a few years ago. She reconstructs the activities of George Marshall (not to be confused with Gen. George Marshall) who was the head of the Civil Rights Congress and of the Robert Marshall Foundation, one of the main sources of funds for the Communist Party.

It is sometimes necessary, though unpleasant, to be reminded of the past. Almost coincidentally, the New York Times in its book review section of July 1, 1956, announced a new book by the late Robert Marshall entitled "Arctic Wilderness." It is edited and contains an introduction by George Marshall who is a brother of the late Robert Marshall and whose actiivties Mrs. Widener describes fully in As Time Goes By." From the New York Times review, one would get the impression that the Marshalls are great patriots and only interested in the preservation of wildlife. The last sentence of the review in the New York Times makes me apprehensive. It said:

"The present-day invasion of Alaska's remote wilderness areas for defense purposes makes this appeal of Bob Marshall for their preservation timely and even urgent."

I wonder whether this is another disguised attempt to weaken our Arctic defenses.

I include excerpts from the article entitled "As Time Goes By," by Alice Widener, with my remarks at this point:

"As time goes by, we are able to take a longer view of the years of our century and to gain a clearer perspective of human events.

"U. S. A. believes that the main threat to our country now lies in the Socialist effort to destroy the free economy of capitalism. During the 5 fateful months of July–November 1956, when the United States will hold its 46th presidential election and the United Nations will initiate its 11th General Assembly, we can try to assess the * * * damage done to America in the last 50 years. * * *

"The article, A Key Resolution, in our issue of June 29, 1956, set forth facts concerning the dangerous Senate Resolution 86, which is sponsored by 23 Senators and would express the 'sense of the Senate' that the President of the United States should enter into negotiations through the United Nations to establish an international food and raw materials reserve. Such a scheme would replace a free, competitive market in the world's basic materials with a system of bureaucratic controls. Of necessity domestic controls would have to be established to implement the scheme of the world planners. Such controls are completely at variance with our system of private enterprise.

"SENATOR BRIDGES STOOD WATCH

"Among the witnesses in favor of Resolution 86 at hearings conducted by a subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, May 28–29, 1956, was James G. Patton, president of the National Farmers Union. This is an organization through which the Communists hoped to gain control over agriculture in our country, a fact pointed out by Senator STYLES BRIDGES, Republican, New Hampshire, on September 7, 1950.

"In a well-documented speech largely based on correspondence between James Patton and Gardner Jackson (a former official of the National Farmers Union and an original trustee of the Robert Marshall Foundation) Senator BRIDGES quoted as follows from a House report:

" 'The Farmers Educational and Cooperative Union has been handsomely subsidized by the Robert Marshall Foundation. The monthly contribution to the Farmers Union from the Robert Marshall Foundation has been $7,500.'

"Apparently the go-between for James Patton of the Farmers Union and the Marshall fund was Mr. Lement Harris. When he testified at hearings on Communist activities among farm groups held by the House Committee on Un-American Activities, February 28, 1951, Mr. Harris several times invoked the fifth amendment. Concerning George Marshall, president of the Robert Marshall Foundation, and James Patton of the National Farmers Union, there was the following testimony:

" 'Mr. TAVENNER (counsel for the committee). My question now is, Was a contribution made from the Marshall fund to the operation of the Farmers Union?

" 'Mr. HARRIS. It was general knowledge in Farmers Union circles that the Marshall fund made a contribution. To the best of my memory it appeared on the statement which would be passed out by the proper authorities at the Farmers Union conventions.

" 'Mr. TAVENNER. Was your knowledge of it purely from that source, general information on the subject, or did you have some connection with obtaining funds from the Marshall fund?

" 'Mr. HARRIS. On the latter part of your question, the obtaining of the funds, I think that brings us again into an area that could involve jeopardy to me and self-incrimination, so I won't answer that question. I would like to give it some thought.

" 'Mr. TAVENNER. I didn't mean to infer that you put any pressure on anybody, and I don't think the text of the letter implies it. But did you have a conversation with James G. Patton regarding the remaining funds of the Marshall Foundation?

" 'Mr. HARRIS. I have met Mr. Patton a few times. Never had any long conversations with him. The nearest to this that I can recall in rather a vague way is that at some time Mr. Patton expressed his warm feeling toward Mr. (George) Marshall. He probably said: "He is a fine person," with which I believe I agreed.'

"SOCIALISM SUBSIDIZED

"The Robert Marshall Foundation (established by the will of the late Robert Marshall) provided funds for furthering doctrinaire Marxism in our country through 'the education of the people of the United States of America to the necessity and desirability of the development and organization of unions of persons engaged in work or of unemployed persons, and the promotion and advancement of an economic system in the United States based upon the theory of production for use and not for profit.'

"Robert Marshall's brother, George, became administrator of the foundation. Mr. George Marshall has a most interesting background. He supplied $20,000 bail for Communist Gerhart Eisler. As chairman of the subversive Civil Rights Congress, George Marshall directed the raising of a $250,000 defense fund for the Communist leaders convicted under the Smith Act in Judge Medina's court. On June 5, 1950, George Marshall received a 90-day jail sentence for contempt of Congress.

"George Marshall married Miss Elizabeth Dublin whose sister, Mary, is married to Leon Keyserling, Chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under former President Truman.

"During the Truman administration, Mary Dublin Keyserling served as Chief of the Special Programs Branch, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce in the Department of Commerce. Prior to her marriage to Leon Keyserling, Mary Dublin and her brother-in-law, George Marshall, participated in activities of the following organizations cited by the House Committee on Un-American Activities: American Committee for Democracy and Intellectual Freedom, American Committee To Save Refugees, American Council on Soviet Relations, Conference on Constitutional Liberties in America, Signers of the Open Letter to American Liberals.

"The open letter to American liberals—signed by Mary Dublin, George Marshall, and many other leftwingers—was an attack on so-called Trotskyites who questioned the validity of the Moscow trials in the 1930's. * * * Recent public statements made by Khrushchev lend added significance to the following excerpts from the open letter:

" 'A number of persons joined the Trotsky defense committee (headed by John Dewey) for the purpose of defending the right of asylum for Trotsky and to provide him with "the fullest opportunity to state his case." Since Trotsky is now safely domiciled in Mexico, the right of asylum is no longer an issue. The Mexican Government and the American press have certainly allowed him full freedom of expression in his own defense.

" 'Under these circumstances it is proper to inquire into the nature of the further activities of the committee, since we believe it likely that these were not endorsed by its liberal members.

" 'Its publications have included not only violent attacks on the Moscow trials, but bitter denunciations of the Soviet Government. Speakers at meetings sponsored by the committee have not merely defended Trotsky and his theories, but have gone so far in their attacks on the Soviet regime as to advocate armed uprising.

" 'One of the announced purposes of the committee is the organization of "a complete and impartial investigation of the Moscow trials." The 33 defendants in the trials under attack all confessed fully the crimes of high treason of which they were convicted. Impartial observers and newspaper correspondents present at the trials have reported that the trials were properly conducted and the accused fairly and judicially treated.

" 'The committee has offered no shred of evidence to the contrary. The demand for an investigation of trials carried on under the legally constituted judicial system of the Soviet Government can only be interpreted as political intervention in the internal affairs of the Soviet Union with hostile intent.

" 'We believe that it is imperative, in the interest of separating liberal ideas from active hostility against the Soviet Union, that liberal members of the committee, who presumably have no hostile intent against that nation but whose names are being used to further these hostile purposes, should clarify their position on the following questions:

" 'Are you willing to ally yourselves, even incidentally, with the internal political movement which has opposed the progressive movement undertaken by the Soviet Union under the 5-year plan, and the Soviet foreign policy of peace and international understanding and other achievements which have commanded the respect of liberals throughout the world?

" 'Should not a country recognized as engaged in improving conditions for all its people, whether or not one agrees with all the means whereby this is brought about, be permitted to decide for itself what measures of protection are necessary against treasonable plots to assassinate and overthrow its leadership and involve it in war with foreign powers?'

"Mary Dublin, who endorsed the foregoing statements, was also on the board of editors of the League for Industrial Democracy, an organization completely dedicated to the promotion of socialism.

* * * * *

"In her job as a United States Government employee, Mary Dublin reported to Thomas C. Blaisdell, Jr., Assistant Secretary of Commerce under the Truman administration until his resignation at the end of 1950. Secretary Blaisdell's wife, Catherine, and his father were witnesses to the last testament of Robert Marshall establishing the Robert Marshall Foundation to promote * * * production for use and not for profit in America.

"The record of times gone by reveals that from 1935 to 1939 Thomas C. Blaisdell, Jr., was a member and then chairman of the Industrial Committee of the National Resources Committee established in 1935 by President Roosevelt. Among the members of his Industrial Committee during those 4 years were Isadore Lubin, Lauchlin Currie, and Harry Dexter White.

"In 1939, the name National Resources Committee was changed to National Resources Planning Board. Mr. Blaisdell retained his post as chairman of the Industrial Committee, and Messrs. Lubin, Currie, and White remained members, as is shown in the official report to the President dated June 1941.

"The close association * * * is also revealed in the book Redirecting Education, by Thomas C. Blaisdell, Jr., Leon Keyserling, and Rexford G. Tugwell. The following typical passages were written by Mr. Keyserling, who played such an important part in shaping the economic policies of the Truman administration:

" 'Meditation convinces one that the present college mirrors as accurately as its predecessors the social philosophy and the aspirations of American life. The elective system does so in two respects. In the first place, it is subservient to the doctrines of individualism and laissez faire * * *. In addition, the needs of business, individualistically conceived, are so varied that no prescription could hope to succeed. The theory of the elective system is thus a concomitant of the theory of business enterprise. Secondly, belief in the elective system parallels the unbounded confidence in quantitative production without organized control or reference to defined goals. * * *

" 'The athletic and social impediments of the college also recruit their chief apologists from the ranks of those who accept uncritically the entire scale of values descending from the late nineties. The typical American businessman supports competitive intercollegiate athletics not purely because he enjoys a football game, but because he believes that carrying a pigskin builds the qualities he values most in the world. And he is correct. The victory which can be won only by pulverizing an opponent, the drive toward the goal merely because it is designated as such, the rigid subordination to a kind of crude discipline, all earn big rewards in an acquisitive society.

" 'The same thing is true in a large way of collegiate social life. Social intercourse should be the external trapping of friendship, and friendship cannot be competed for. But under present conditions a great deal of college society is on the fraternity basis. This means it is on the "rushing" basis, or the competitive basis—an impeccable preparation for the businessman's civilization, where clients may be met or customers won over by ingenuity in entertainment. Success in one area implies aptitude for the other, and thus the apotheosis of the "go-getter" continues.

" 'It is interesting to note that the system is deemed true to its function even when it encourages a full measure of idlers. It is claimed that the machine age will put us all at ease, and that we must learn to use our leisure. But at this particular moment it should not be necessary to labor the point that man cannot master the machine by learning how to use leisure, and that until he gains this mastery, leisure will remain the gift of society to the unemployed.

" 'This summary analysis indicates that American educational ideals, today as completely as at any other time, stem from the thoughts and aspirations of the people, which are framed in a current ideology. The favored dogma at present involves belief in societal perfection by means of individualism, laissez faire, and an unguided prolific productivity, all set directly in the context of business success.

" 'The direction of educational enterprise might be altered if that favored dogma were abandoned or modified. On the social and economic side, laissez faire is demonstrably a failure. It does not guard against the two great menaces of the age—poverty and war. Conjunctive activity of some sort is necessary for a frontal attack upon these evils. An educational process which does not relate to new social goals, which remains the outcome of the 19th-century view of things, must be an impediment rather than an implement. It cannot justify itself by reciting ideals which have lost their setting.'

"HINDSIGHT LEADS TO FORESIGHT

"The study of 20-year-old documents may seem to some persons a mere matter of trying to exercise destructive political and economic hindsight. But commonsense tells us that it is difficult to know where we actually are if we don't know where we have been. 'No man who is correctly informed about the past,' wrote Thomas McCaulay, 'will be disposed to take a morose or desponding view of the present.'

* * * * *

"Aware of the record, Americans will know that resolution 86 is favored by long-time * * * associates in the National Farmers Union, United Automobile Workers, Americans for Democratic Action, and other * * * organizations.

"Only 2 years ago, there appeared in the press the following news item:

" 'KEYSERLING HIRED

" 'DENVER.—Leon H. Keyserling, who was Chairman of former President Truman's Council of Economic Advisers, was hired Saturday by the National Farmers Union as economic consultant.'

"Thus Messrs. Leon Keyserling and James G. Patton are working closely together in the Farmers Union and also in the executive committee of a new organization—known as the Conference on Economic Progress—which includes Walter P. Reuther, president of the UAW, and M. W. Thatcher, president of the National Federation of Grain Cooperatives. Mr. Thatcher used to be chairman of the national legislative committee of the Farmers Union.

"The new Conference on Economic Progress has published a number of studies. * * * The conference has announced its intention to consider the subjects of technology, productivity, automation, social security, education, and housing.

"Who are the persons chosen to make these studies?

"Of course the Conference on Economic Progress studies will be made by Leon H. Keyserling and his wife, Mary Dublin Keyserling."

AMENDMENT OF MERCHANT MARINE ACT TO FACILITATE PRIVATE FINANCING OF MERCHANT VESSELS

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, as the Senator from Maryland [Mr. BUTLER] has suggested, the matter to which I am about to refer can be taken care of in about a minute. There is on the calendar, Order No. 2677, H. R. 11554, which is a bill to amend certain provisions of the Merchant Marine Act regarding facilities for private financing of merchant vessels in the interest of national defense, and for other purposes.

The bill has been discussed with the senior Senator from Delaware [Mr. WILLIAMS]. He has stated that any objections he had to the bill have been removed. He has discussed the matter with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. BUTLER]. It is a very important bill. It provides for 100-percent insurance features for vessels for special purposes, and was unanimously reported by the committee.

Mr. FREAR. Mr. President, did I understand the Senator from Washington to say that he had talked with the Senator from Maryland, who had talked with the Senator from Delaware?

Mr. MAGNUSON. That is correct.

Mr. FREAR. And the senior Senator from Delaware has concurred in this proposal?

Mr. BUTLER. I was about to address myself to that point. I had a conversation with the senior Senator from Delaware, and he has stated to me that he would not insist upon his amendment; nor would he object to the disposal of the bill.

Mr. MAGNUSON. That is my understanding.

Mr. BUTLER. I have also talked with the minority leader, and I believe the minority leader talked with the majority leader about the bill. There is no objection to the bill.

Mr. FREAR. That being the case, I certainly offer no objection.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I shall ask unanimous consent to have the report on the bill printed in full in the RECORD.

Mr. DWORSHAK. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, has the senior Senator from Delaware been advised of the fact that the bill would be called up at this time? He is not on the floor.

Mr. BUTLER. The senior Senator from Delaware has just entered the Chamber. I have heretofore talked to him about the bill. He said any objection he had to it had been removed.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President——

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I object. No one has cleared the bill with me.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. MAGNUSON. May I ask the majority leader whether he will agree to have the bill considered at this time?

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. The majority leader will be glad to consider it in the regular order. We have two bills pending now. The bill the Senator referred to has not been cleared by the minority committee. The Senator from Delaware is entitled to be notified before the bill is taken up.

Mr. BUTLER. The senior Senator from Delaware is here now.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. It will not be taken up now.

Mr. MAGNUSON. May we have the assurance of the majority leader that it will be taken up?

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. The majority leader will be glad to discuss it with the minority leader.

Mr. BUTLER. I have talked to the Senator from Delaware about the bill, and it was my understanding that the minority leader would talk with the majority leader about it. I do not want any implication left on the RECORD of the Senate that there is anything improper about bringing the bill up at this time.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. There is something improper about not clearing it with the majority leader. I am objecting because it has not been cleared. I will object to any other bills which have not been cleared. The minority leader has not asked me to bring it up.

Mr. BUTLER. I am sorry that the minority leader did not talk to the Senator about it.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I will discuss the bill with the majority leader.

Mr. BUTLER. The RECORD should be clear that I talked about it with the Senator from Delaware and with the minority leader.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I will discuss it with the majority leader.

CONVEYANCE OF CERTAIN LANDS TO TOWN OF NORTH KINGSTOWN, R. I.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 3195) to authorize the Administrator of General Services to convey certain lands in the State of Rhode Island to the town of North Kingstown, R. I., which were on page 1, line 7, after "town" insert ", upon payment by said town of the fair market value of said property as determined by said Administrator after competent appraisal and upon such terms and conditions as may in the determination of said Administrator be necessary to protect the interest of the United States", and on page 2, strike out line 20 over through and including line 3 on page 3.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Minnesota.

The motion was agreed to.

CONVEYANCE OF CERTAIN PROPERTY TO CITY OF ROSEBURG, OREG.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 3316) authorizing the Administrator of General Services to convey certain property which has been declared surplus to the needs of the United States to the city of Roseburg, Oreg., which was to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the Administrator of General Services is authorized and directed to convey, without consideration therefor, to the city of Roseburg, Oreg., all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the following described properties, real and personal: The dwelling house located on lot 5, block 29, in the said city of Roseburg, Oreg., together with furniture, personal effects, and jewelry stored in said dwelling house or elsewhere which has been designated by said Administrator as "lot A personalty," all of said property being a part of the estate of Lillie Lela Moore devised to the United States by said Lillie Lela Moore under provisions of her will probated in 1940 which has since been declared surplus to the needs of the United States.

Such conveyance, in addition to being subject to such terms and conditions as may be considered by said Administrator to be necessary to protect the interest of the United States, shall be expressly conditioned upon an undertaking by the city of Roseburg, Oreg., that such dwelling house, together with said items of personal property, shall, within a reasonable period of time as determined by said Administrator, be transferred by the city of Roseburg to the Douglas County Historical Society and removed from said land without cost to the United States.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. Mr. President, I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Minnesota.

The motion was agreed to.

SAFEGUARDS AGAINST MERGERS AND CONSOLIDATION OF BANKS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 3911) to amend the Federal Deposit Insurance Act to provide safeguards against mergers and consolidation of banks which might lessen competition unduly or tend unduly to create a monopoly in the field of banking.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, I wonder whether we cannot proceed to dispose of the pending business. I understand that the Douglas amendment is pending. I wonder whether we cannot dispose of that amendment and then proceed to dispose of the bill. We have been waiting for a long time. If there are no more speeches to be made on it, perhaps we could vote on the amendment and then on the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DOUGLAS] for himself and the Senator from New York [Mr. LEHMAN].

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to amendment. If there be no amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill (S. 3911) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subsection (c) of section 18 of the Federal Deposit Insurance Act is amended by striking out the third sentence thereof and substituting in lieu thereof the following: "No insured bank shall merge or consolidate with any other insured bank or, either directly or indirectly, acquire the assets of, or assume liability to pay any deposits made in, any other insured bank without the prior written consent (i) of the Comptroller of the Currency if the acquiring, assuming, or resulting bank is to be a national bank or a district bank or (ii) of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System if the acquiring, assuming, or resulting bank is to be a State member bank (except a district bank), or (iii) of the Corporation if the acquiring, assuming, or resulting bank is to be a nonmember insured bank (except a district bank). In granting or withholding consent under this subsection, the Comptroller, the Board, or the Corporation, as the case may be, shall consider the factors enumerated in section 6 of this act. In the case of a merger, consolidation, acquisition of assets, or assumption of liabilities, the appropriate agency shall also take into consideration whether the effect thereof may be to lessen competition unduly or to tend unduly to create a monopoly, and, in the interests of uniform standards, it shall not take action as to any such transaction without first seeking the views of each of the other two banking agencies referred to herein with respect to such question; and in such a case the appropriate agency may also request the opinion of the Attorney General with respect to such question."

AMENDMENT OF INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT, RELATING TO REGULATION OF CERTAIN MOTOR CARRIERS

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 898) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, with respect to the authority of the Interstate Commerce Commission to regulate the use by motor carriers (under leases, contracts, or other arrangements) of motor vehicles not owned by them, in the furnishing of transportation of property, which were on page 3, line 11, strike out "(17)," and insert "(17)", and on page 3, line 12, strike out all after "of" down to and including "(6)" in line 14, and insert "property of a character embraced within section 203 (b) (6) or perishable products manufactured from perishable property of a character embraced within section 203 (b) (6)."

Mr. SMATHERS. Mr. President, the House amendments were discussed at a meeting of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and it was the unanimous view of the committee that the Senate should agree to them. I therefore move that the Senate concur in the House amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Florida.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SMATHERS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be printed in the RECORD at this point a statement concerning S. 898.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR SMATHERS

S. 898, as originally passed by the Senate, provided for trip leasing of motor vehicles owned by farmers, cooperative associations and vehicles of private carriers. The bill included a restriction that private vehicles to be eligible for trip leasing must be "used regularly in the transportation of processed or manufactured perishable commodities or products of the character referred to in section 203 (b) (6)" of the Interstate Commerce Act. (This section of the act sets forth the agricultural exemption and removes from economic regulation of the Commission motor vehicles used in carrying ordinary livestock, fish, including shellfish, or agricultural commodities but not including the manufactured products thereof.)

Thus, in addition to exempting vehicles used for moving farm products the intent of the bill as passed by the Senate was to limit trip leasing by private carriers to those carriers carrying perishable agricultural products or perishable products manufactured therefrom.

The House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee reported the bill to the House with the purpose of providing exactly the same regulation for which the Senate bill provided. Aside from a single change in punctuation, the only change made by the House Committee was a slight modification in wording concerning private carriers subject to trip leasing. The wording was changed to provide that private vehicles to be eligible for trip leasing must transport "property of a character embraced within section 203 (b) (6) or perishable products manufactured from perishable property of a character embraced within section 203 (b) (6)." The House passed the bill with that amendment.

In my opinion, the House version contains clearer wording than does that of the Senate. The aim of the legislation is exactly the same. Therefore, I recommend that the House language be adopted.

ESTABLISHMENT OF STATE COMMITTEES ON EDUCATION BEYOND THE HIGH SCHOOLS

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, on last Monday the Senate passed S. 4211, to encourage and assist the States in the establishment of State committees on education beyond the high school, and for other purposes.

On the same day, the House passed H. R. 12237, on the same subject.

I ask unanimous consent to reconsider the vote by which Senate bill 4211 was passed, and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the House bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate a bill coming over from the House of Representatives.

The bill (H. R. 12237) to encourage and assist the States in the establishment of State committees on education beyond the high school, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Alabama?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 12237) was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senate bill S. 4211 be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senate bill is indefinitely postponed.

SUPPLEMENTATION OF ANTITRUST LAWS

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KENNEDY in the chair) laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 3879) to supplement the antitrust laws of the United States, in order to balance the power now heavily weighted in favor of automobile manufacturers, by enabling franchise automobile dealers to bring suit in the district courts of the United States to recover compensatory damages sustained by reason of the failure of automobile manufacturers to act in good faith in complying with the terms of franchises or in terminating or not renewing franchises with their dealers, which were to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That as used in this act—

(a) The term "automobile manufacturer" shall mean any person, partnership, corporation, association, or other form of business enterprise engaged in the manufacturing or assembling of passenger cars, trucks, or station wagons, including any person, partnership, or corporation which acts for and is under the control of such manufacturer or assembler in connection with the distribution of said automotive vehicles.

(b) The term "franchise" shall mean the written agreement or contract between any automobile manufacturer engaged in commerce and any automobile dealer which purports to fix the legal rights and liabilities of the parties to such agreement or contract.

(c) The term "automobile dealer" shall mean any person, partnership, corporation, association, or other form of business enterprise resident in the United States or in any Territory thereof or in the District of Columbia operating under the terms of a franchise and engaged in the sale or distribution of passenger cars, trucks, or station wagons.

(d) The term "commerce" shall mean commerce among the several States of the United States or with foreign nations, or in any Territory of the United States or in the District of Columbia, or among the Territories or between any Territory and any State or foreign nation, or between the District of Columbia and any State or Territory or foreign nation.

(e) The term "good faith" shall mean the duty of each party to any franchise, and all officers, employees, or agents thereof to act in a fair and equitable manner toward each other so as to guarantee the one party freedom from coercion, intimidation, or threats of coercion or intimidation from the other party: Provided, That recommendation, endorsement, exposition, persuasion, urging or argument shall not be deemed to constitute a lack of good faith.

SEC. 2. An automobile dealer may bring suit against any automobile manufacturer engaged in commerce, in any district court of the United States in the district in which said manufacturer resides, or is found, or has an agent, without respect to the amount in controversy, and shall recover the damages by him sustained and the cost of suit by reason of the failure of said automobile manufacturer from and after the passage of this act to act in good faith in performing or complying with any of the terms or provisions of the franchise, or in terminating, canceling, or not renewing the franchise with said dealer: Provided, That in any such suit the manufacturer shall not be barred from asserting in defense of any such action the failure of the dealer to act in good faith.

SEC. 3. Any action brought pursuant to this act shall be forever barred unless commenced within 3 years after the cause of action shall have accrued.

SEC. 4. No provision of this act shall repeal, modify, or supersede, directly or indirectly, any provision of the antitrust laws of the United States.

SEC. 5. This act shall not invalidate any provision of the laws of any State except insofar as there is a direct conflict between an express provision of this act and an express provision of State law which cannot be reconciled.

And to amend the title so as to read: "An act to supplement the antitrust laws of the United States, in order to balance the power now heavily weighted in favor of automobile manufacturers, by enabling franchise automobile dealers to bring suit in the district courts of the United States to recover damages sustained by reason of the failure of automobile manufacturers to act in good faith in complying with the terms of franchises or in terminating or not renewing franchises with their dealers."

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Am I correct in understanding that the order of business is the consideration of the House amendment to the Senate bill dealing with the automobile dealers' day in court?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I promised the minority leader that a quorum call would be had so that the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICKER] might be notified. So, Mr. President, pending notification of the Senator from Ohio, I should be glad to have the Senator from Utah [Mr. BENNETT] make a statement.

I may say, however, before he takes the floor, that on behalf of the Judiciary Committee and the members of the subcommittee which handled the hearings on this day-in-court bill, I intend to move that the Senate agree to the House amendment. I am ready to discuss the amendment, but I yield to the Senator from Utah to make a preliminary statement.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I am sure that many automobile dealers in the United States are in accord with the position I take. I agree that the dealers want some help, but I am greatly concerned about the form in which this bill has come before us. The automobile dealers of the United States face many other problems, two of which bother them particularly, one, being the fear that their franchise can be canceled arbitrarily. It is the purpose of this bill to prevent such arbitrary cancellation. The other problem is the realization that there has developed in the past few years in the business a system of distribution which we call in the industry bootlegging.

My fear of the bill in the form in which it has come from the House is that while it will make it harder for the manufacturers to cancel dealers' contracts, it will permanently freeze into our automobile distribution pattern a bootlegging process and make it practically impossible for the manufacturer to move against the dealer who wants to be a bootlegger.

Most of the dealers tell us they want this bill, but they know it only by name. They do not realize the changes which have been made in it, both on the floor of the Senate and in the House. Among those changes, Mr. President, is the fact that the amendment which was written into the bill by the Senate, which would require good faith both on the part of the dealer and the manufacturer, has been deleted by the House, and now the dealer is not required to deal with the manufacturer in good faith. The manufacturer could allege his good faith as a defense, but he could not demand specific good faith on the part of the dealer.

Mr. President, I notice the Senator from Wyoming is on his feet. Do I read the bill incorrectly?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I believe the Senator does, and I shall be very glad to explain it at greater length when the Senator concludes.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, so far as I am concerned, that is not the chief objection, and I shall listen with a great deal of interest to the Senator from Wyoming when he makes his explanation.

The thing which bothers me most is contained in two paragraphs of the House report. I should like to read to my colleagues these two paragraphs. As I read them, some may say, "Those are only paragraphs in the report. They are not the law. No court will pay any attention to them."

But this is a statement of legislative intent. I read from page 10 of the House report:

> The manufacturer's obligation to act in good faith extends to all of his franchised dealers, including dealers who sell automobiles to other dealers, franchised or not, for resale to the public; dealers who sell outside of a "zone of influence" or "territory"; and dealers who sell automobiles at less than the manufacturers' suggested resale prices.

In this bill, Mr. President, the manufacturer is required to have the same attitude of good faith toward the dealer who supplies cars to the bootleg market as to the dealer who is injured by the bootleg market, as I read this statement. I read further:

> Contract provisions restricting an automobile dealer from transacting business with customers of his choice or from selling outside a specified territory could violate the antitrust laws. Any restriction on a dealer's right to sue based on the fact that he is willing to sell to another dealer, franchised or not, for resale to the public or based on the fact that he sells outside of a territory or sells at cut rates would contravene the congressional purposes underlying section 4 of this bill which provides that this measure shall not repeal, modify, or supersede, directly or indirectly, any provision of the antitrust laws.

The second paragraph is more explicit, I think, in stepping up the permanent pattern of bootlegging in the automobile industry:

> Similarly, a manufacturer, in a dealer's suit for damages stemming from a manufacturer's refusal to supply adequate cars, could not set up by way of defense, as lack of good faith, the fact that the dealer sold new cars to other new- or used-car dealers for resale to the public. Also, a dealer located near another franchised dealer who has sold new cars to used-car dealers for resale would not be authorized under this measure to sue a manufacturer for supplying dealers who sell cars to other dealers for resale.

In other words, Mr. President, the manufacturer dare not attempt to make it difficult for a particular dealer who is selling into the bootleg market to get the automobiles he wants to sell in such market, because he immediately lays himself open to the kind of suit which this bill makes possible.

There are many small men in the automobile business, and there is a great deal of money available at the retail level. I think, as the only automobile dealer in the Senate, I may be pardoned for the feeling that I am a little more sensitive to this program than are some of my colleagues. Over the years the industry has eliminated very largely the wholesaling process in the distribution pattern, but this bill would make it possible to set it up again on an interesting new basis. A dealer with an investment in parts and service facilities, so he would have the greatest flexibility, and located at a strategic point from which he could ship to many parts of the United States, could, in fact, immediately become a great wholesaler. He could establish a string of used-car properties, if you please, or used-car agents, all over the United States and undertake to supply them with any automobile they wanted. Under this bill, the manufacturer would not dare refuse, or he would not carry on his business. Pretty soon we would find a parallel automobile distribution protected by the bill through which the used-car dealers would, in fact, fast become new-car dealers, and the very dealers whom this bill is supposed to protect through their investment in service facilities and their legitimate franchise from the manufacturer would not be protected because the manufacturer would be powerless to protect them.

It may be said that this is a wild figment of the imagination, but I am willing to make the prediction that if this bill passes and is not vetoed, in the new-model period which will arrive in the next few months we shall see several such distribution systems set up in the United States with the impetus which will come from the introduction of new models.

As a retail automobile dealer, I know that over the past 2 or 3 years the used-car dealers in my town have had new models for sale on used-car lots as soon as the new-car dealers have had them in any quantities to take care of their customers.

I realize that the bill probably will pass. The Senate is in a hurry. We have not, obviously, time to send the bill back to conference, if the report is to be adopted today. I realize that there is a great push on to get a bill—any bill—so that the automobile dealers can say, "We have had legislative success."

But I have made this prediction. I am certain that my fellow automobile dealers—40,000 of them—within a year after the bill becomes law, will be back asking Congress to modify it to protect them from the bootleg system which the bill will create, and to protect them against any action on the part of the manufacturers to destroy it or eliminate it.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BENNETT. I am glad to yield.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I believe the Senator has misunderstood the language in the report. But as I read it myself, I can see why the Senator has drawn from it the conclusion he has drawn.

I recall to his mind that he was on the floor of the Senate when, on behalf of the Committee on the Judiciary, I explained the bill, which had been reported from that committee, and which the committee had recommended that the Senate pass. The Senator from Utah will recall, I feel certain, that he was under obligation that day and had his reservations to fly home to Utah.

Mr. BENNETT. That is correct.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I envied him in the flight out West. The Senator explained to me that he wanted to vote for the bill, but he was in such a hurry that he wondered if the vote would be taken before he had to meet his reservation.

Mr. BENNETT. That is correct.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Unfortunately, the vote could not be taken before the Senator left, because I was asked many questions about the bill from all quarters of the Senate. One of the questions related to bootlegging.

During that debate, before we had the vote of 75 to 1 in favor of the bill, I made it clear that there was nothing in the bill which would stimulate bootlegging; and I assure the Senator now, as the bill has come back, amended by the House, there is nothing in it which will stimulate bootlegging.

The language that alarms the Senator is the language that is found in the committee report.

Mr. BENNETT. That is correct.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Not a word is contained in the amendments added by the House which changes the objective of the bill as it passed the Senate. That is why I am so ready to move the adoption of the House amendments.

The Senator from Utah himself introduced a bill with reference to this problem, of which I thought a great deal. The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY], the Senator from Maine [Mr. PAYNE], the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. DUFF], and other Senators whose names I shall place in the RECORD, joined in sponsoring a bill which has just been reported by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. That bill deals with bootlegging.

The bill now before the Senate, however, is the bill which was designed to accomplish one purpose, and one purpose alone, namely, to give the dealer his day in court whenever a big company, by reason of its preponderant wealth, its great power, its national aspect, could force a dealer, by coercion and intimidation, into the performance of economic acts which he did not believe he should do.

If an automobile manufacturer, in order to coerce a dealer, should sell cars to a used-car lot merely to force the dealer to follow a policy, the manufacturer would be liable under the language of the bill.

Mr. BENNETT. The condition last described by my colleague from Wyoming is so rare as to be almost impossible.

The bill which was introduced by the Senator from Wyoming was to handle the day-in-court problem. But there is an old saying: "If you save at the spigot, you lose at the bunghole."

While the bill gives a dealer his day in court, it also fixes the pattern of bootlegging and makes it impossible for the manufacturer to proceed against the bootlegger.

The source of bootlegged automobiles is not the direct sale by a manufacturer to a used-car dealer. It is a franchised dealer who sees an opportunity greatly to expand the number of cars he can distribute, and who insists on having the manufacturer supply those cars to him for resale to used-car dealers.

The bill would say that no dealer can complain that that is going on, and that the manufacturer cannot refuse to sell those cars to the man who is supplying the bootleg market.

The Senator from Wyoming is a lawyer; the Senator from Utah is only an automobile dealer. But the language in the second paragraph, I think, is very clear.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. But it is not in the law.

Mr. BENNETT. The Senator from Wyoming can be certain that this is a statement of legislative intent.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Very well. It is for that reason that I have written, in plain language, the legislative intent of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, to let it be compared with that language in any court; and I do not believe that any court will deprive an automobile dealer who is being coerced by a manufacturer——

Mr. BENNETT. No, no; that is not the problem. The problem is that of a franchised automobile dealer, the X Motor Co., in a little town in Ohio, who suddenly finds that a used-car dealer on a corner is selling cars which the franchised dealer has a franchise to sell, but who is selling them at a price lower than that at which the franchised dealer can sell.

When he goes to the manufacturer, the manufacturer will have to say, "I cannot refuse to sell to the dealer who is supplying these cars on the bootleg market, under the language in the House report, because the report reads:

> Similarly, a manufacturer, in a dealer's suit for damages stemming from a manufacturer's refusal to supply adequate cars could not set up by way of defense, as lack of good faith, the fact that the dealer sold new cars to other new- or used-car dealers for resale to the public.

To me, that is just as clear as crystal.

The report is referring to a dealer who intends to sell his cars in a bootleg market, and who says to the manufacturer, "I want 500 cars." The manufacturer says, "Last year you sold only 100."

The dealer replies, "Well, I have a market for them."

Mr. O'MAHONEY. But I say again to the Senator from Utah that that is simply language in a report. The language in the law does not support that argument. By the time the record is complete here, I think it will be clear.

What I most emphatically wish to impress upon the Senator is that a subcommittee of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, under the leadership of the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY] conducted a long investigation into the bootlegging problem, and has reported a bill on that phase of the matter to the Senate.

Mr. BENNETT. But I point out to the Senator from Wyoming that the bill in its final form was based primarily upon the assumption that cars got into bootleg channels because dealers had overbought and had no other way to get rid of them.

I know from sad experience that most cars get into bootleg channels because a particular dealer sees a chance greatly to increase his distribution of cars. He does not find himself with distress merchandise. He deliberately goes out and buys the automobiles, so that he can spread them all over the United States, or in a particular area.

The Senator from Utah has made himself abundantly clear. I do not wish to delay the Senate further. The Senator from Wyoming and I have different points of view on this particular subject. I do not think either of us can change the mind of the other but I appreciate his friendly attitude.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. All I wish to do is make the legislative record clear on the part of those of us who have been working day after day and week after week on the bill. Let me read into the legislative record a carefully written statement to describe what we are trying to do:

> I made it clear at the time this measure was debated on the floor of the Senate that the bill was not concerned with the problem of bootlegging. The problem of bootlegging was dealt with specially in S. 3946, a bill introduced by Senator MONRONEY and others. Extensive hearings were conducted by the Select Committee on Automobile Marketing Practices of which Senator MONRONEY was chairman and the problem of bootlegging was thoroughly analyzed at that time.
> Dealers do not have a right of action in this bill against the manufacturer because the manufacturer was selling to a bootlegging dealer unless this can be construed as a device to coerce or intimidate a dealer. However, in a suit by the dealer, a manufacturer should be free by way of defense to introduce all relevant evidence bearing upon the lack of good faith on the part of the dealer, including evidence of bootlegging by the dealer if this can be shown to constitute coercion or intimidation or threats of same. The basic issue for the court in a suit under this bill is the good faith of the manufacturer or the dealer. The court should consider any evidence introduced by either party in support of its contention that there was that lack of good faith which constituted coercion or intimidation.

Let me add that I have yet to meet a person who has appeared before either committee, a person familiar with the automobile business, who has not said that the automobile manufacturers themselves could do much by independent action to eliminate bootlegging. What we are trying to do in the bill is take a first step toward allowing the dealer an opportunity which he has not heretofore had, because of the difference in size between the dealer and the manufacturer, to take his case into court and to secure a better franchise.

That this was a good bill in itself was demonstrated by the fact that during the very time the hearings were being conducted, the General Motors high command immediately announced a change in granting franchises from yearly franchises to 5-year franchises. Then by the time representatives of General Motors appeared before the committee of the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY], Mr. Curtice testified that about 15 or 16 new changes were being made in dealerships. What I am saying to the Senate and to the Senator from Utah is that the passage of the bill is going to nail down the concessions which were won because the bill was introduced and because it was certain to be passed.

I shall try to make a prediction, as the Senator from Utah has. I venture to say that after the bill has gone to the White House and has been signed, because the Department of Justice has said it is constitutional, the big manufacturers will again make some concessions to the dealers.

Mr. BENNETT. I stand on my prediction.

Mr. President, I should like to yield the floor, but I am willing to yield for a question.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, I want to confirm what the Senator from Wyoming has said. There was a most complete investigation. A copy of the bill was sent to every automobile dealer in the State of North Dakota, particularly to George M. Dixon, who is the executive head of the automobile dealers of North Dakota. I asked him to go over it with his lawyer. Mr. Dixon wired a message that he is entirely satisfied with the bill.

Mr. BENNETT. Did the Senator from North Dakota send him the original bill?

Mr. LANGER. The original bill.

Mr. BENNETT. The House has changed it.

Mr. BRICKER. Mr. President, I hesitate to state my objection at this late hour, but I think this is bad legislation. I believe the Senate is being asked to pass a bad bill. It has not been thoroughly considered by the committee. The bill which has been reported by the House committee and passed by the House should properly have been considered by the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee. There is no amendment of the antitrust laws involved. There is no attempt to affect them in any way. As a matter of fact, the contrary is true. The question involved is one of distribution of automobiles in interstate commerce. There is no distinction between distribution of automobiles and distribution of radios, washing machines, or other products, which might change the contractual relationship between manufacturer and distributor.

Some 4 years ago the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce started to consider proposed legislation dealing with the bootleg problem, which was an acute problem at that time.

In spite of what the proponents of the bill have stated to the Senate, in my judgment, this bill freezes the bootlegging principle in the automobile business and prohibits the manufacturer or the dealer himself from doing anything about it.

That is definitely set out, as the Senator from Utah stated a moment ago, in the last two paragraphs of the report, on page 10, which states, in effect, that nothing can be done about bootlegging on the part of the manufacturer. The manufacturer must furnish automobiles for that market, if they are sought by a distributor.

So not only do we not achieve the aim we started out to achieve, but we negate the principle sought by the dealers in the very beginning of the campaign for legislation.

This bill assumes to be in the field of antitrust legislation. I do not think it is properly so. I do not think it affects the antitrust laws, unless as it might nullify some of the vital provisions of the antitrust laws.

I remind Senators that it is a very sacred right of citizens to enter into a contract and fix terms thereof and abide by them. The matter of good faith is written into every contract. Here there is an attempt to change the rule of good faith which is written into every contract.

I think section 2 as it comes from the House is a poorer provision than that which was proposed by the Senate. I now read that section:

An automobile dealer may bring suit against any automobile manuacturer engaged in commerce, in any district court of the United States in the district in which said manufacturer resides, or is found, or has an agent, without respect to the amount in controversy—

That eliminates the amount in controversy which gives eligibility for suit in Federal courts—and shall recover the damages by him sustained and the cost of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee, by reason of the failure of said automobile manufacturer to act in good faith in conforming or complying with any of the terms or provisions of the franchise—

Not only does good faith run to the distributor, but it runs to the manufacturer at the present time. Good faith in a contract is implied in both parties participating therein. But the further wording in this section reads:

Or in terminating, canceling, or not renewing the franchise with said dealer.

That is an invitation to every dealer in the automobile business in this country to go into court if there is an attempt made to change the franchise, or to give somebody else the franchise, or in any way give a franchise to a new distributor in the territory. It means that every dealer's franchise is in fact given in perpetuity if the dealer desires.

The same right is not given to a manufacturer who acts in good faith; the manufacturer is not given a right to sue for violation of a contract entered into in good faith. No obligation to proceed in good faith is placed on the dealer at all, insofar as filing a suit is concerned. Instead, the provision is that in the case of such a suit by the distributor, the manufacturer can use a lack of good faith on the part of the distributor by way of defense.

Mr. President, without delaying the debate further let me say that I doubt very much whether such a provision is constitutional. We have been given no time to brief the question.

In the first place this legislation is a violation of a right of contract on the part of the citizens of the United States; and, in the second place, it negates the very thing we attempted to do at the very beginning of our consideration of this problem; namely, to eliminate the bootlegging of automobiles, which was doing so much to disturb the proper distribution of automobiles in the United States.

Mr. President, this measure is bad legislation. I suppose what I have said has been spoken in vain, because much bad legislation is passed under pressure during the last few weeks of the session.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I shall not undertake to debate this matter at length. I think the Senate well knows the issues involved.

I wish to have printed in the RECORD, as a part of my presentation, a statement which analyzes each one of the amendments adopted by the House of Representatives, and shows clearly that the amendments adopted by the House, and now before us, do not lead down the road to disaster, as predicted by the Senators who have just spoken.

This is the first step toward the balancing of little business with big business. In my judgment, this measure will be a great contribution to the maintenance of the basic principle of free enterprise.

Mr. President, I send to the desk the statement to which I have referred, and ask unanimous consent that it be printed at this point in the RECORD, as a part of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NEUBERGER in the chair). Is there objection?

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR O'MAHONEY

S. 3879, passed by the Senate on June 19, 1956, was passed by the House on July 24, 1956, with some change in wording. The two bills are identical in concept, but the House of Representatives did change wording which, in my opinion, aids in the clarification of the Senate bill. The changes are as follows:

Section 1 (a) in the bill as passed by the Senate is as follows:

"The term 'automobile manufacturer' shall mean any person, partnership, corporation, association, or other form of business enterprise engaged in the manufacturing or assembling of passenger cars, trucks, station wagons, or other automotive vehicles, including any person, partnership, or corporation which acts for such manufacturer or assembler in connection with the distribution of said automotive vehicles."

The House amendment to the above excludes transactions involving buses, tractors, motorcycles, and other transportation vehicles propelled by power. This accomplishes two purposes: first, it avoids any ambiguity resulting from use of the phrase "or other automotive vehicles,"; second, it restricts the bill to those areas of automotive distribution in which congressional committees ascertained a present need for remedial legislation.

Section 1 (b) of the Senate version is as follows:

"The term 'franchise' shall mean the agreement, contract, understanding, or arrangement between any automobile manufacturer and any automobile dealer which purports to fix the legal rights and liabilities of the parties to such agreement, contract, understanding, or agreement."

The changes made by the House in this section of the Senate bill are extremely minor, consisting of the word "written" preceding the word "agreement" on line 5 of the Senate bill.

Section 1 (c) of the Senate version is as follows:

"The term 'automobile dealer' shall mean any person, partnership, corporation, association, or other form of business enterprise operating under the terms of a franchise and engaged in the sale or distribution of passenger cars, trucks, station wagons, or other automotive vehicles."

The House has changed the above provision by striking out the words "other automotive vehicles" in the last line of the section to make it conform to section 1 (b). This section was further amended by the House so as to limit the right to bring suit in the district courts of the United States to dealers resident in the United States, or its Territories, or the District of Columbia only. The committees heard no testimony concerning manufacturers and their dealers in foreign countries.

Section 1 (d) of S. 3879 dealing with the definition of commerce remains unchanged in the House version.

Section 1 (e), the "good faith" provision of the Senate bill, was as follows:

"The term 'good faith' shall mean the duty of each party to any franchise, and all officers, employees, or agents to act in a fair, equitable, and nonarbitarary manner so as to guarantee such other party freedom from coercion, intimidation, or threats of coercion or intimidation, so as to preserve all equities of such other party which are inherent in the nature of the relationship between such parties by such franchise."

The House has changed the wording of this "good faith" provision in several respects. However, the intent of the term "good faith" remains the same in both versions of the bill.

The House committee's amendment to this paragraph has four purposes. First, it makes clear that the manufacturer is obligated to protect his dealer only from coercion by the manufacturer or persons subject to his control. The House version, in my opinion, spells out the problem in more concrete terminology. Second, the word "nonarbitrary" is stricken from the Senate bill for being vague and indefinite. Third, the House deleted the provision which would require a party to a franchise to preserve all the equities of the other parties which are inherent in the nature of the franchise relation. This was done to preclude any interpretation inconsistent with antitrust principles. The House concern for other antitrust legislation is well taken and this change obviates the possibility of conflict between this act and prior antitrust legislation on the statute books. Fourth, a proviso has been added to affirm that normal sales persuasion and recommendation by themselves are consonant with good faith. The committee added this proviso to assure that recommendation, endorsement, persuasion, urging, or argument of the kind that is normal in competitive relationships is not to be deemed in and of itself to constitute a lack of good faith.

Section 2 of the Senate version is as follows:

"An automobile dealer may bring suit against any automobile manufacturer engaged in commerce, in any district court of the United States in the district in which said manufacturer resides, or is found, or has an agent, without respect to the amount in controversy, and shall recover the damages by him sustained and the cost of suit, including a reasonable attorney's fee, by reason of the failure of said automobile manufacturer to act in good faith in performing or complying with any of the terms or provisions of the franchise, or in terminating, canceling, or not renewing the franchise with said dealer: Provided, That in any such suit the manufacturer shall not be barred from asserting in defense of any such action the failure of the dealer to act in good faith."

Section 2 of the House bill differs in several respects from the corresponding section of the Senate bill. In the House bill, only activities by the manufacturer which occur from and after the passage of this legislation are actionable. The purpose of this change is to avoid liabilities based on past actions which were not illegal when committed. The committee has no objection whatsoever to this amendment.

The House deleted under section 2 the right to recover reasonable attorney's fees. The House has added sections 3, 4, and 5. These are all mechanical provisions strengthening the legislation. Section 3 embraces the 3-year statute of limitations on such actions. Section 4 assures that this act will not modify, repeal, or supersede any provision of existing antitrust law. Section 5 provides that this act does not invalidate any State laws unless there is a direct conflict between an express provision of State law and an express provision of this act which cannot be reconciled.

This bill as amended by the House makes clear that the automobile manufacturer has an obligation of the highest magnitude to act toward his dealer so as to guarantee him freedom from coercion, intimidation or threats of coercion and intimidation. This is not simply a prohibition against coercion or intimidation. It is a statutory obligation to observe the highest degree of good faith necessary to insure the dealer complete freedom from coercion or intimidation.

While it is true that the principal thrust of the bill in its present form is directed against coercion or intimidation, the House report emphasizes that dealers obtain extensive rights under this bill. An amendment was added in the House to the Senate bill to provide that normal sales efforts by the manufacturer do not constitute a lack of good faith. However, the House report emphasizes that the issue of fact in each case is whether the evidence discloses such pressure as would constitute coercion or intimidation. Whether or not the manufacturer's sales activities were normal competitive measures or constituted that kind of pressure which amounts to coercion is the principal issue. For that reason, any evidence bearing upon the sales techniques of the manufacturer will be admissible in determination of this issue. Normal sales methods are in themselves unobjectionable, but when combined with other factors as part of a course of conduct, they might in some circumstances constitute coercion or intimidation.

The principal purpose of the House bill is to prevent coercion or intimidation by the manufacturer in whatever form this might appear. Therefore, the dealer obtains a right of action under this bill whenever there has been coercion or intimidation by the manufacturer in connection with any of the transactions relating to the distribution of automobiles under the franchise. Thus, in explaining the type of coercion which is actionable by the dealer, the House report states, "For example, manufacturer pressure, direct or indirect, upon a dealer to accept automobiles, parts, accessories, or supplies which the dealer does not need, want, or feel the market is able to absorb, may in appropriate instances constitute coercion or intimidation." Again the report states on page 9: "Similarly, coercion or intimidation may be found where the manufacturer attempts to require the dealer to handle exclusively, or sell a specified quota of, parts, accessories, and tools made or approved by the manufacturer." Thus, any activity by the manufacturer which in fact constitutes coercion or intimidation in the course of the business relationship between the parties becomes an actionable wrong.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, the pending question is merely on agreeing to the amendments adopted by the House of Representatives, and thus averting a conference.

I hope the Senate will agree to the amendments of the House.

Mr. ALLOTT. Mr. President, in respect to this measure, I have heard—as is true in the case of all other Senators—from a great many of the automobile dealers in my State. Most of those communications have been in favor of legislation of this type, although some have been opposed. The communications in opposition were received from persons who had had an opportunity to examine the bill and consider it.

Mr. President, it occurs to me that if we agree to the motion of the Senator from Wyoming to concur in the amendments adopted by the House of Representatives, we should be sure of what we are doing.

At this time I should like to refer to page 4, line 11:

> An automobile dealer is any person, partnership, corporation, association, or other form of business enterprise resident in the United States or in any territory thereof or in the District of Columbia, operating under the terms of a franchise and engaged in the sale or distribution of passenger cars, trucks, or station wagons.

When I compare that paragraph with the last 2 paragraphs on page 10 of the report of the House committee—Report No. 2850—the only conclusion I can reach is that we shall be freezing the rights of those who now are making bootlegging of automobiles possible.

All of us are opposed to bootlegging, and I suppose that almost every Member of this body has met at one time or another with the automobile dealers in his State, in an attempt to cure this problem, which causes them so much trouble.

Yet, Mr. President, although this question was discussed on the floor of the Senate at very great length 2 or 3 weeks ago, when the bill was previously before us, and although at that time it was pointed out in great detail by the senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. BRICKER] that this bill would, in fact, make bootleggers the recipients of the greatest rights to be received under the bill, nevertheless at this stage we have before us a measure which does not cure that difficulty. Therefore, under the provisions of section 2 and the provisions of subsection (c) of section 1, a bootlegger himself would have his right to continue bootlegging frozen, and he could sue a manufacturer for a breach of good faith.

I am aware, as I am sure all other Senators are, of the problems which beset the automobile dealers. But certainly, Mr. President, in the case of persons who already are causing a great deal of trouble, it will be no cure to freeze the rights they now are enjoying, and also to give them a legal right to sue under a good-faith contract—and to do that in a bill passed by the Congress.

Therefore, Mr. President, much as I have favored legislation of this general type to cure this trouble, I am afraid that I shall have to oppose this measure, because we have had an opportunity to correct the bill; but after 3 weeks we have not corrected the fundamental thing that is wrong with it, and that is causing most of the trouble.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Wyoming that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

OPERATIONS OF THE MISSOURI STATE AGRICULTURAL STABILIZATION AND CONSERVATION COMMITTEE

Mr. SYMINGTON. Mr. President, the farmers of Missouri would not want the 84th Congress to draw to a close without expressing their deep appreciation of the fine work done by the members of the Subcommittee on Administration of Farm Programs, especially its chairman, the junior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. HUMPHREY].

During the past 3 years, my senior colleague [Mr. HENNINGS] and I, along with Members of the House representing Missouri farm areas, have received a great many complaints about the operations of the Missouri State Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee.

On a number of occasions this unfortunate situation has been discussed on the floor of the Senate. It has received a great deal of attention before the Humphrey subcommittee of the Senate Agriculture Committee. It has also received much attention in the House of Representatives.

Over the past 3 years, 55 farmer-elected committeemen have been either suspended or dismissed in Missouri, out of a total of only 220 dismissals in the entire United States. In no other State have more than 16 county committeemen been suspended or removed by the State committee.

Because of the extraordinary number of suspensions and dismissals in Missouri, many of them without any statement as to cause, and many without hearings, we repeatedly asked for a full investigation of this matter by the Department of Agriculture. When the Department did not act, we asked, and received, the attention of the Humphrey subcommittee.

On November 14 and 15, 1955, Chairman HUMPHREY and the senior Senator from Kansas [Mr. SCHOEPPEL] came to Jefferson City, and held hearings for 2 days. The hearings started at 9 o'clock in the morning, and lasted until well after midnight. More than 220,000 words of sworn testimony, covering 26 counties, were taken. Nevertheless, it was not possible to hear all of the Missouri farm people who came to protest these dismissals.

In December of last year, the record of those hearings was forwarded to the Department of Agriculture. Nevertheless, in 1956, the Missouri State ASC chairman, Mr. Murray Colbert, the man primarily responsible for these conditions in my State, was reappointed by Secretary of Agriculture Benson for the fourth straight year. This was done without consultation with the farm leaders of our State, and without the recommendation of the 2 men in the Department of Agriculture, Earl Hughes and H. L. Manwaring, who are directly responsible for this program.

The Humphrey subcommittee held additional hearings on this subject in Washington in June of this year.

Following these hearings, I wrote Secretary Benson, presenting the fact that the 3 regular members of the Boone County ASC committee had been charged with "obvious manipulation of normal wheat yields," and that as a result the character of these fine Missouri citizens had been blackened in a telegram of accusation which was signed by Secretary Benson himself.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at this point in the RECORD my letter of June 14 to the Secretary be inserted.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

JUNE 14, 1956.

Hon. EZRA TAFT BENSON,
United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. SECRETARY: I regret very much you did not consider it important enough to appear before the Senate Subcommittee on the Farmer-Committee System.

Chairman HUBERT HUMPHREY postponed the date to meet your convenience; and I, in turn, postponed 2 days of the airpower inquiry to do the same.

On November 1, 1955, you sent me a telegram which read as follows:

"Three regular members of Boone County Agricultural Stabilization Committee were removed from office by unanimous action of Missouri State ASC Committee October 14, 1955. Basis for their removal was the obvious manipulation of normal wheat yields on farms having excess wheat so those producers would be excused from paying proper penalties on their farm marketing excess. Decision to remove the Boone County committee was made by the Missouri State ASC Committee on the basis of evidence in their possession. Washington representatives of Commodity Stabilization Service concurred with State committee's action.

"EZRA TAFT BENSON."

On the basis of that telegram, the character of these men has been blackened.

But the facts most certainly do not bear out this blanket accusation on your part.

I was anxious to have you appear to see, to listen, and if you so desired, to question these convicted men.

This Boone County case is only one of many in Missouri which appear totally unjustified. I refer to other arbitrarily discharged committeemen. As you know in my State there have been 55, 29 percent of all those discharged in the Nation during the past 3 years.

There was considerable talk at the hearing about the heavy workload of those in the Department of Agriculture; and I can understand that, based on some previous experience in the executive branch.

No workload I have ever had anywhere, however, compares with that incident to the work of a Senator; and in the case of this hearing, we had adjusted our plans to suit yours.

In my opinion, no democratic form of government should become so big that in turn it becomes casual about the unwarranted destruction of the reputation of people.

If these Missourians are guilty, this attack on their character is one thing. But if they are not, no matter what the relative size of their position in life as against that of others, it is only decent and right that you should exonerate them.

Otherwise, what is our way of life all about?

I talked with Under Secretary of Agriculture Morse concerning this matter, believe he now has a better understanding of it, and would appreciate your discussing it with him.

Sincerely,

STUART SYMINGTON.

Mr. SYMINGTON. On June 28, Secretary Benson replied. I quote the last paragraph of his letter:

I strongly commend the efforts of Senator HUMPHREY'S subcommittee in focusing attention on situations in the farmer-committee system which warrant scrutiny. I wish to see the operations of farmer committees continue in sound condition as a vital part of the administration of national agricultural programs.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at this point Secretary Benson's full reply be made part of the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE,
Washington, D. C., June 28, 1956.

Hon. STUART SYMINGTON,
United States Senate.

DEAR SENATOR SYMINGTON: I have your letter of June 14, 1956, with reference to the recent hearing by the Subcommittee on the Farmer-Committee System of the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

The Department gave most careful attention to the hearing and Under Secretary Morse devoted 2 full days to the hearing and General Counsel Farrington and several other Department officials spent all or virtually all of such time in addition to careful preparation to comment upon or answer questions.

I regret that I was unable to be present at the hearing. However, I have been fully informed as to the problems considered and as you were informed Under Secretary Morse was authorized to speak for me at the hearing. I do not feel that the Department has in any way failed to give adequate attention to the hearing or the issues there involved.

Concerning the matter of the removal of the Boone County Agricultural Stabilization Committee, the telegram quoted by you of November 1, 1955, in response to your request stated the reason which the State committee had used for the removal action. This reason was correctly repeated in the telegram and was not intended to state my personal judgment on this case nor to foreclose the review of the case on appeal. I am informed that the former committee members of Boone County have recently presented their appeal under the regulations, that this appeal was heard and that a decision therein is to be made shortly.

I strongly commend the efforts of Senator HUMPHREY'S subcommittee in focusing attention on situations in the farmer-committee system which warrant scrutiny. I wish to see the operations of farmer committees continue in sound condition as a vital part of the administration of national agricultural programs.

Sincerely yours,

E. T. BENSON,
Secretary.

Mr. SYMINGTON. Mr. President, on July 11, Mr. Clay H. Stackhouse, Acting Deputy Administrator, Production Adjustment, ruled on the appeal of the Boone County ASC committee, and I call attention to his final paragraph:

It is my conclusion after reviewing all of the facts and evidence available that the State committee did not have a supportable basis for their removal action at the time it was taken and therefore the charge of "obvious manipulation" is not sustained. Messrs. Lynn Drane, Arcie Nichols, and E. S. Wilcoxon are returned to their offices as chairman, vice chairman, and regular member of the Boone County (Missouri) ASC Committee effective upon their receipt of this decision. Messrs. Spiva and Brushwood will resume their status as alternates and Mr. E. R. Smith, who was specially elected because of the removal action, is hereby relieved as a committeeman.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the complete text of the decision on the appeal of Lynn Drane, Arcie Nichols and E. S. Wilcoxon, duly elected county committeemen of Boone County, Mo., be inserted at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the decision was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DECISION ON THE APPEAL OF LYNN DRANE, ARCIE NICHOLS, AND E. S. WILCOXON FROM THEIR REMOVAL FROM THE BOONE COUNTY (MO.) ASC COMMITTEE BY THE MISSOURI ASC STATE COMMITTEE

This decision is made under the provisions of section 7.33 of the Regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture governing ASC County and Community Committees (7 CFR 7.33), upon the appeal of Lynn Drane, Arcie Nichols, and E. S. Wilcoxon from their removal from the Boone County (Mo.) ASC Committee by the Missouri ASC State Committee in October 1955.

Mr. Lynn Drane was elected chairman, Arcie Nichols, vice chairman, E. S. Wilcoxon, regular member, Robert Spiva, first alternate, and Ervin Brushwood, second alternate, of the Boone ASC County Committee in the 1955–56 elections and the committee entered on duty on September 1, 1955. The ASC State Committee in individual letters dated October 14, 1955, to Messrs. Drane, Nichols, and Wilcoxon removed them from office effective upon receipt of the letters. In accordance with the rules of succession Robert Spiva then became chairman, Ervin Brushwood, vice chairman, and in a specially called county convention, Mr. E. R. Smith was elected regular member.

These actions were taken by the State committee in accordance with the provisions of section 7.33 (a) of the Secretary's regulations which provided as follows:

"Any member of a county or community committee or alternate to such office or any member of a community election board who becomes ineligible for office under the provisions of section 7.29 or who fails to perform the duties of his office or who is incompetent or commits, or attempts or conspires to commit, fraud, shall be removed by the State committee, or if it appears that he may be subject to such removal, he may be suspended by the State committee pending an investigation. The State committee may also suspend pending investigation or remove any county or community committeeman or alternate, if such action is determined by majority vote of the State committee to be necessary for the success of any program administered by the county committee."

The reason given by the State committee for their unanimous action was that the county committee manipulated normal wheat yields which they established for farms having excess wheat acreage under the wheat acreage allotment and marketing quota program so that producers would be excused from paying proper penalties on their farm marketing excess. There were 21 cases in which the county committee established wheat normal yields and in no instance was a yield established which was equal to or greater than the normal yield established for Boone County.

Section 728.553 (b) and (c) of the 1955 Wheat Marketing Quota Regulations provides:

"Yields based on reliable records: Where reliable records of the actual average yield per acre for all of the 10 calendar years immediately preceding the calendar year in which the yield is determined are presented by the farmer or are available to the county committee, the normal yield per acre of wheat for the farm shall be determined to be the average of such yields, adjusted for abnormal weather conditions and trends in yields.

"Appraised yields: If for any year of such 10-year period records of the actual average yield are not available, or there was no actual yield, the normal yield per acre of wheat for the farm shall be appraised by the county committee, taking into consideration abnormal weather conditions, the normal yield for the county, and the yields in years for which data were available. Where the normal yields for the county is not considered representative of the normal yield for the farm, the county committee in appraising the normal yield for the farm shall take into consideration in lieu thereof the yields obtained on farms in the same locality which are similar with respect to types of soil, topography, and farming practices associated with the production of wheat."

We have examined the farm folders containing the records on which the county committee established the normal yields for the farms in question and it appears that the regulations were not followed because the proper adjustments for trends in yields were not made as required, the procedure for appraising yields for farms on which there were no reliable yield records for the 10 preceding years was not properly applied, and the cases were not properly documented. However, the record also shows that the farms in question were not located in the major wheat-producing areas of Boone County, the wheat in question in most cases was planted primarily for pasture or cover-crop, the farms in question did not fertilize as heavily as a farmer producing wheat for market would have fertilized, or did not fertilize at all, and that the farms in question undoubtedly had a lower average 10-year yield than that for the entire county. The county committee claims, and it has not been disputed, that they used the same method of establishing normal yields under the 1955 program as they did for 1954. While this does not make the county committee action correct with respect to the 1955 program, it does indicate that the State committee did not discover the improper actions at an earlier time and did not take remedial action at least before the 1955 yields were set. The county committee on several occasions stated that they were doing the best job they could, that they were never apprised by a State committee representative of any deficiency on their part in setting normal yields, and that they would have been willing and anxious to follow the proper method and to take any corrective action necessary to obtain proper administration of the wheat program.

It is true that two representatives of the Commodity Stabilization Service from Washington, D. C., informed the chairman of the Missouri State committee that it would be proper for the State committee to remove the Boone County Committee if they had in their possession clear, documented evidence of willful manipulation of normal yields by the county committee to support the removal action. All of the documented evidence supporting the removal is dated June 7, 1956—approximately 8 months after the removal took place.

It is my conclusion after reviewing all of the facts and evidence available that the State committee did not have a supportable basis for their removal action at the time it was taken and therefore the charge of "obvious manipulation" is not sustained. Messrs. Lynn Drane, Arcie Nichols, and E. S. Wilcoxon are returned to their offices as chairman, vice chairman, and regular member of the Boone County (Mo.) ASC Committee effective upon their receipt of this decision. Messrs. Spiva and Brushwood will resume their status as alternates and Mr. E. R. Smith, who was specially elected because of the removal action, is hereby relieved as a committeeman.

CLAY H. STACKHOUSE,
Acting Deputy Administrator,
Production Adjustment.

JULY 11, 1956.

Mr. SYMINGTON. Mr. President, I now present the reaction to this decision of the Missouri State ASC Chairman, Mr. Murray Colbert, as reported by the Missouri press. Kindly remember again that this Federal appointee in our State was reappointed this year by Secretary Benson for his fourth term.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that an article in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch of July 18, headed "Colbert Hits at United States Ruling on Boone ASC," be inserted at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COLBERT HITS AT UNITED STATES RULING ON BOONE ASC—CALLS DECISION DISTURBING—ATTORNEY REPLIES TO COMPTON WIRE TO BENSON

COLUMBIA, Mo., July 17.—Murray C. Colbert, chairman of the State Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, today criticized the Federal ruling restoring the Boone County ASC Committee, which he had dismissed earlier.

Colbert indicated he was "not pleased" and commented:

"The decision is disturbing and makes us wonder what's going on in Washington."

Colbert was not in Columbia yesterday when the old committee took over the local ASC office, but he said he had an intimation of the Federal action Friday.

Colbert said a letter to E. R. Smith, one of the committee members displaced by the Federal action, was opened in the State ASC office by mistake, and gave State officials a hint of what was coming.

ATTORNEY REPLIES

Warren D. Welliver, a Democrat and attorney for the restored county committee, took exception today to a protest made yesterday by Perry Compton, State Republican chairman, on the Federal ruling. Welliver, in telegrams to Senator SYMINGTON of Missouri and Senator HUMPHREY of Minnesota, both Democrats, said:

"We submit that the (Compton's) telegram on its face specifically identifies the sender, Compton, neighbor of State ASC Chairman Colbert, as the moving force behind the political manipulation of the ASC program and ASC personnel in Missouri.

"The telegram shows Compton's complete disregard and disrespect for the administrative tribunal which has acquitted these loyal Boone County farmers and the libelous nature of the text of the telegram shows the sender's malicious political intent to smear the names of the acquitted committee members and to further make the farm program a political football.

"We urge your continuous effort toward putting the farm program back in the hands of the farmers and removing it from the control of such men as Chairman Compton and his handpicked political appointees."

DEMANDS THREE BE FIRED

Compton's telegram, addressed to Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson, demanded that Benson fire three of his employees for "condoning fraudulent practices" in the national farm program. It protested against reinstatement of the Boone County ASC Committee.

Compton said he specifically was demanding the discharge of H. L. Manwaring, of Washington, D. C., deputy administrator of production adjustment; Clay Stackhouse, Manwaring's assistant, and Lester E. Leigh, also of Washington, Midwest area director of the ASC program.

"I think these fellows are leaning over backward to let SYMINGTON tell them what to do," Compton said later at Jefferson City.

DIFFICULT TIME TO SHIFT

Colbert said the changeover in Boone County administration comes at a bad time when the work load is heavy, since farmers must be signed up for the soil bank by Friday.

"My only fear," Colbert said, "is that the farmers won't be taken care of. The State office will do everything it can to give assistance so Boone County farmers won't suffer."

The restored Boone County committee hired Smith and Robert Spiva, another member of the displaced committee, to help them with the work.

Colbert was outspoken about the situation of E. L. Cunningham, who was once fired by the restored committee and who resigned as soon as he heard about the Federal ruling.

Colbert said he would recommend Cunningham highly, would give the man a job in the State ASC office if Cunningham could qualify under civil service.

Colbert said the former office manager was "capable, sincere, and has done a good job."

OTHER MISSOURI APPEALS

Department of Agriculture officials at Washington said two other appeals besides the Boone County case have been made by county committees in Missouri against ouster orders of the State committee.

"One was by the Henry County committee, which lost its appeal. The Department upheld action of the State committee in removing members of the county committee for alleged violation of regulations in carrying out a wheat control program."

The other appeal was by the Callaway County committee, also ousted on similar charges. No action has been taken on this appeal. Members of the ousted committee were said to have indicated they intend to ask for a formal hearing before a Department official.

Mr. SYMINGTON. Mr. President, I also ask that an article from the St. Louis Globe-Democrat of July 17, headed "Perry Compton Blasts Three ASC Reinstatements in Protest to Benson," and also an editorial, A Touch of Politics, from the Springfield Leader and Press of July 18, be printed at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the items referred to were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat of July 17, 1956]

PERRY COMPTON BLASTS THREE ASC REINSTATEMENTS IN PROTEST TO BENSON

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., July 16.—Perry Compton, Republican State chairman, protested to Agriculture Secretary Benson today at the reinstatement of three Boone County ASC committeemen.

Compton, in a telegram to Benson, demanded that the reinstatement be rescinded and "employees in your department who condone such fraudulent practices by ordering the reinstatement" be fired.

"The millions of voters disgusted with the Hisses, the Youngs, the Finnigans, the Caudles, the Connollys, who supported Eisenhower in 1952 are being slapped in the face with this reinstatement," Compton wired.

The three members of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee who were suspended last winter for alleged manipulation of wheat-yield figures are Chairman Lynn Drane, of Harrisburg, Arcie

Nichols, of Ashland, and E. S. Wilcoxon, of McBaine. The United States Department of Agriculture and a Senate subcommittee held hearings on the case. The men were ordered reinstated Saturday.

Compton told the Secretary of Agriculture the three had been discharged by unanimous vote of the State ASC committee on the recommendation of H. L. Manwaring, Deputy Administrator for Production Adjustments; Lester E. Leigh, Midwest area Director of the ASC program, and Sylvester J. Coe, Adminstrative Officer for the Midwest area.

The three were cleared of wrongdoing by Clay Stockhouse, the Agriculture Department's Assistant Deputy Administrator for Production Adjustment. He had heard their appeal from their dismissal by the State SCC. The Boone County case was a bone of contention at recent hearings by a Senate Agriculture Subcommittee in Jefferson City and in Washington.

Senator SYMINGTON, Democrat, of Missouri, charged that the three had been disgraced by the treatment accorded them by the Department of Agriculture and urged that their names be cleared so they "can go back to their neighbors and friends."

[From the Springfield Leader and Press of July 18, 1956]

A TOUCH OF POLITICS

In taking angry issue with Secretary of Agriculture Benson, Perry Compton, Missouri Republican chairman, is doing nothing to heal the schisms already painfully apparent in party ranks in Missouri.

Compton fired a hot telegram to Benson this week, "demanding" that three of the USDA chief's aids be fired for "condoning fraudulent practices"

What really irks Compton is not alleged "fraudulent practices," but the reinstatement of the Boone County Agricultural Stablization and Conservation Committee, which went back in office at the order of Secretary Benson, after a hearing in Washington on the summary firing of the three members by Missouri ASC boss Murray Colbert.

And behind that is anger at the resistance of Missouri ASC members. Both Republican and Democratic, who fought to a standstill the attempt of certain politicians, such as Compton and Colbert, to take over the ASC as a political plum in the State.

Because resistance has been something beyond party lines is the reason that Compton's brassy challenge is dangerous. That rebellion of the past 3 years was not politically inspired, and many Republicans were just as angry as some Democrats. It stands to reason that something must have been gravely wrong in Missouri when this State was almost alone in the furor created over ASC changes. Missouri probably had more protests filed in Washington and more columns of newspaper criticism than all other States combined.

Now the gates are opened by the Boone County committee's victory. Two other cases already had been appealed. One was the Henry County committee, which lost its appeal; the other the Callaway County committee, whose appeal is still pending.

With the reinstatement of the Boone County ASC, it is expected that Callaway and other counties will press their cases in Washington. If all do, there will be more than a score filed.

None of this will make Compton's protest look good in national Republican administration eyes.

Maybe the little man should pull in his neck.

Mr. SYMINGTON. Mr. President, again I point out that Murray Colbert is the hired employee of the United States Department of Agriculture appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture and responsible to the Secretary.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have inserted at this point in the RECORD a telegram from Mr. Warren D. Welliver, attorney for the once discharged, and now reinstated, Boone County ASC Committee.

There being no objection, the telegram was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COLUMBIA, MO., July 17, 1956.

Senator STUART SYMINGTON,
United States Senate Agriculture Subcommittee, Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.:

Yesterday, July 16, Perry Compton, Missouri State Republican chairman, released to the local press the text of a telegram to Secretary of Agriculture Benson virtually libeling the reinstated Boone County ASC Committee and demanding that the order reinstating them should be rescinded and that the employees who reinstated them should be discharged from the Department of Agriculture.

We respectfully request and strongly urge that your committee secure the full text of the telegram from Secretary Benson for consideration by your committee. We submit that the telegram on its face specifically identifies the sender, Compton, neighbor of the State ASC Chairman Colbert, as the moving force behind the political manipulation of the ASC program and ASC personnel in Missouri. The telegram shows Compton's complete disregard and disrespect for the administrative tribunal which has acquitted these loyal Boone County farmers, and the libelous nature of the text of the telegram shows the sender's malicious political intent to smear the names of the acquitted committee members, and to further make the farm program a political football. We urge your continued efforts toward putting the farm program back in the hands of the farmers and removing it from the control of such men as Chairman Compton and his handpicked political appointees.

WARREN D. WELLIVER,
Attorney for Boone County ASC Committee Members.

Mr. SYMINGTON. This record is crystal clear.

Every farmer in Missouri, and every fair-minded person in America, now hopes the Secretary of Agriculture will institute investigations to right the wrong done so many committeemen in other Missouri counties, just as he has now done, most commendably, in taking the necessary steps to clear the good name of these three citizens of Boone County.

Again I wish to express my appreciation to the distinguished junior Senator from Minnesota [Mr. HUMPHREY] for helping to bring some light into this unfortunate situation, in the interest of Missouri farmers.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SYMINGTON. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. First, let me say to the Senator from Missouri that, once we made a preliminary examination, the situation brought to the attention of the Senate about 2 years ago by the two Senators from Missouri was one which clearly necessitated the most careful scrutiny by the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry or a subcommittee thereof.

I think the RECORD should be made clear, that the communications of the Senator from Missouri, along with those of his colleague [Mr. HENNINGS] were unanswered for weeks. Only one of them, as I recall, was ever answered by the Secretary himself.

I say this to the Senator in relation to his present remarks: The telegram of the State Republican chairman to the Secretary of Agriculture, Mr. Benson, as reported in the Missouri press, underscores the complaint of a number of witnesses at the time of the hearings at Jefferson City, namely, that the Missouri ASC committee was a political tool, or, let me say, was being changed or altered into a political tool, for the State chairman of the Republican Party. The transcript of the Missouri hearings includes many sworn statements substantiating this fact.

Mr. SYMINGTON. The Senator is entirely correct. He has had a great deal of experience as an administrator. He was a great mayor, and he has become a great Senator.

The Department of Agriculture officially decided that the farmer elected Boone County ASC Committee should be reinstated and their good name restored. Now, is it not almost inconceivable that one of the appointees of the Secretary of Agriculture, a man appointed for a fourth term despite the protests of many of us about his mistreatment of farmer elected county committeemen should state, "This makes us wonder what is going on in Washington"?

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. SYMINGTON. I am glad to yield.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. I should like to say to the Senator and to our colleagues that I have sat through a number of hearings as a United States Senator. I have listened to a great deal of testimony, but I have never heard anything in my life that was so unbelieveable, that was so beyond the norm of decent political and administrative conduct, as the operation of the Missouri State ASC committee. I want Members of the Senate to read those hearings. The testimony was taken under oath. I want Members of the Senate not only to read the hearings, but to read the affidavits. I hope Members of the Senate will read the testimony of the Department of Agriculture officials. Then I hope they will read the comments of Mr. Colbert, State ASC chairman, when the Department of Agriculture reinstated the Boone County Committee, and when the State ASC chairman himself rebuked the Department of Agriculture for that reinstatement.

I wish to compliment the junior Senator from Missouri for his great public service on behalf of the citizens of his State and his constituents. Many of those constituents were maligned and falsely accused and humiliated by the Government of the United States. When a government cannot be just, it is undeserving of respect. The Department of Agriculture was unjust, unkind, and unsavory, and therefore is unworthy of respect in this instance.

Mr. SYMINGTON. I thank the Senator.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, its reading clerk, announced that the House had passed, without amendment, the bill (S. 4221) to amend the International Wheat Agreement Act of 1949.

SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS, 1957

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NEUBERGER in the chair). Pursuant to a previous order, the Chair lays before the Senate, House bill 12350, the second supplemental appropriation bill.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 12350) making supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1957, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Appropriations with amendments.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, as this bill passed the House of Representatives it carried appropriations totaling $1,941,895,000. As reported by the committee it includes appropriations that total $2,311,391,438, which is an increase of $369,496,438 over the amount approved by the House. However, I call the attention of the Members of the Senate to the fact that the committee considered estimates that total $453,458,038 that were not considered by the House.

The estimates considered by the committee total $2,365,553,038. The recommendations of the committee, totaling $2,311,391,438, is a decrease of $54,161,600 below the budget estimates.

I ask unanimous consent that the committee amendments be considered and agreed to en bloc, and that the bill as thus amended be considered for the purpose of amendment as original text, provided that no point of order against an amendment shall be deemed to have been waived by the adoption of this agreement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendments agreed to en bloc are as follows:

At the top of page 2, to insert "Chapter I".

On page 2, after line 1, to insert:

"DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I have an amendment at the desk, which I ask to have stated.

Mr. KERR. Mr. President, have the committee amendments been agreed to en bloc, as requested by the Senator from Arizona?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The committee amendments have been agreed to.

The amendment offered by the Senator from Texas will be stated for the information of the Senate.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 20, after line 6, it is proposed to insert:

COAST GUARD

For an additional amount for "Acquisition, construction, and improvements," Coast Guard, for the construction of three patrol vessels, $6 million.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, this amendment would appropriate an additional $6 million for the Coast Guard for the purpose of constructing three patrol boats. These ships are urgently required to enable the Coast Guard to continue its patrol activities in the Gulf of Mexico in relation to the protection of American fishing boats.

The State Department has indicated the urgent necessity for this appropriation by underscoring the fact that unless the patrol activities are maintained, a serious international incident could occur.

The Government of Mexico has for some time been seizing American fishing boats which they claim have been operating inside their jurisdiction limits. The operators of the vessels have claimed with equal force that the ships were outside the 9-mile limit claimed by Mexico. In order to furnish official protection and observers, the Coast Guard has been operating a patrol in these waters.

The construction of these three patrol vessels at the earliest time is of the greatest importance to the continued patrol activity which the State Department considers essential in this area.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, it is a very worthwhile amendment, and it should be adopted. I am willing to take it to conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas [Mr. JOHNSON].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, I send forward an amendment and ask that it be stated for the information of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 6, after line 9, it is proposed to insert:

PRESIDENT'S ADVISORY COMMISSION ON PRESIDENTIAL OFFICE SPACE—SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For expenses necessary for the President's Advisory Commission on Presidential Office Space, $50,000: Provided, That this paragraph shall be effective only upon enactment into law of S. 4228, 84th Congress, or similar legislation.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, I wish to make a brief explanation of the amendment. I have given a copy of it to the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, the Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN], and to the ranking minority member, the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES].

S. 4228 and H. R. 12025 would authorize the creation of a President's Advisory Commission on Presidential Office Space. S. 4228 passed the Senate, July 21. H. R. 12025 was reported favorably to the House, July 20, and is on the calendar.

The only difference between the bill passed by the Senate and the one reported by the House is in the funding provision. S. 4228 reads "Appropriations to the President for 'Expenses of Management Improvement' shall be available for necessary expenses of the Commission, and there are hereby authorized to be appropriated such additional sums as may be necessary for such expenses." H. R. 12025 as reported reads "There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this act."

By floor amendment the House included $50,000 in the first supplemental bill for 1957 for expenses of the Commission. The Senate Appropriations Committee deleted the $50,000 pending appropriate legislative authorization. Conference confirmed the Senate committee's action.

The second supplemental bill for 1957 has now passed the House and been reported out of the Senate Appropriations Committee. It contains no appropriation for the Commission.

However, to insure that the funds will be available, it is recommended that the amendment be agreed to. I ask the chairman of the committee if he will accept the amendment.

Mr. HAYDEN. I will be glad to accept the amendment. It is a reasonable request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from California [Mr. KNOWLAND].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I offer an amendment on behalf of myself, the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. KERR] and the distinguished junior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. COTTON].

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated for the information of the Senate.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 12, after line 5, it is proposed to insert the following new section:

Payments to school districts: For an additional amount for "Payments to school districts," $34,050,000.

Mr. BRIDGES. This is an amendment for the benefit of the so-called impacted area.

Mr. HILL. I should like to say to the distinguished Senator that on Monday a bill was passed which authorizes the appropriation. The amendment should be adopted.

Mr. HAYDEN. I shall be glad to accept it.

Mr. BUTLER. I should like to associate myself with the Senator from New Hampshire and other Senators as a cosponsor of the amendment.

Mr. BRIDGES. I am glad to have the Senator do so.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. I should like to join in what has been said by the Senator from New Hampshire and the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. BRIDGES. I am happy to have the Senator join us.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] for himself and other Senators.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I send another amendment to the desk and ask to have it stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated for the information of the Senate.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 13, after line 3, it is proposed to insert the following new section:

Salaries and expenses: "For 'Salaries and expenses' for the President's Committee on Education Beyond the High School, including services as authorized by section 15 of the act of August 2, 1946 (5 U. S. C. 55a) and expenses of attendance at meetings, $300,000.

Mr. BRIDGES. I realize that there was a difference of opinion on this amendment in committee. I understand that the distinguished Senator from Alabama was in favor of it in committee.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, I was not present when that item was discussed, but from the information which is at hand, I believe it is essential to have the money appropriated to proceed in the direction indicated.

Mr. BRIDGES. I believe the original request was for $650,000. My amendment would appropriate $300,000.

Mr. HILL. I hope the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Appropriations will accept the amendment. The distinguished Senator from New Hampshire said I offered a similar amendment in committee. He is correct. I hope the chairman will accept the amendment.

Mr. HAYDEN. I was in favor of the amendment when it was considered in committee. I shall be glad to accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, there are several amendments relating to the Atomic Energy Commission, and I hope we may be able to consider them at one time, not necessarily en bloc, but in sequence.

First of all I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point a letter and statement sent to the chairman of the Appropriations Committee by the Chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, Mr. Lewis Strauss, discussing the amendment and submitting a justification for it.

There being no objection, the letter and statement were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED STATES ATOMIC ENERGY COMMISSION,
Washington, D. C., July 25, 1956.

Hon. CARL HAYDEN,
Chairman, Committee on Appropriations, United States Senate.

DEAR SENATOR HAYDEN: The House of Representatives on yesterday passed H. R. 12350, "An act making supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year 1957, and for other purposes," which included appropriations necessary to finance the activities of the Atomic Energy Commission for the fiscal year 1957.

The appropriations for the Atomic Energy Commission included in the bill as passed by the House total $1,938,700,000, which is $40,000,000 more than was requested by the President. As indicated by the House report, this additional amount was provided for acceleration of the power reactor development program.

In the action on the bill in the House, some of the provisions contained in the Commission's proposed appropriation language were eliminated on the basis of a point of order. The enactment of certain of these provisions is essential to enable the Commission to carry out its proposed program for the fiscal year 1957, and I am submitting herewith 17 copies of a statement which sets forth the proposed amendments and the necessity therefor.

In addition to the provisions included in the proposed amendments, the House eliminated two limitations which have been included in appropriation acts for the past several years. The first provision limits amounts to be paid as fees to contractors for the operation of certain community facilities, and the second provision requires security clearances for persons receiving payments under fellowships granted by the Commission. The Commission feels that the inclusion of these limitations in the 1957 Appropriation Act is a matter for determination by the Congress.

Sincerely yours,

LEWIS STRAUSS,
Chairman.

AMENDMENTS TO BILL

(1) Page 16, line 7, before the first semicolon insert the following: ", including the employment of aliens."

(2) Page 16, line 21, before the period insert the following: ", together with the unexpended balances, as of June 30, 1956, of prior year appropriations made available under this head to the Atomic Energy Commission, and, in addition, any moneys (except sums received from disposal of property under the Atomic Energy Community Act of 1955 (42 U. S. C. 2301)) received by the Commission, notwithstanding the provisions of section 3617 of the Revised Statutes (31 U. S. C. 484): Provided, That of such amounts $100,000 may be expended for objects of a confidential nature and in any such case the certificate of the Commission as to the amount of the expenditure and that it is deemed inadvisable to specify the nature thereof shall be deemed a sufficient voucher for the sum therein expressed to have been expended: Provided further, That from this appropriation transfers of sums may be made to other agencies of the Government for the performance of the work for which this appropriation is made, and in such cases the sums so transferred may be merged with the appropriation to which transferred."

"GENERAL PROVISIONS

"Any appropriation available under this or any other act to the Atomic Energy Commission may initially be used subject to limitations in this act during the fiscal year 1957 to finance the procurement of materials, services, or other costs which are a part of work or activities for which funds have been provided in any other appropriation available to the Commission: Provided, That appropriate transfers or adjustments between such appropriations shall subsequently be made for such costs on the basis of actual application determined in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles.

"Not to exceed 5 percent of any appropriation under this title may be transferred to any other such appropriation, but no such appropriation shall be increased by more than 5 percent by any such transfers, and any such transfers shall be reported promptly to the Appropriations Committees of the House and Senate."

HOUSE REPORT

PUBLIC WORKS—ATOMIC ENERGY COMMISSION

Operating expenses

Appropriations, 1956	[1] $575,000,000
Estimates, 1957	1,740,400,000
Recommended, 1957	1,780,400,000
Comparison:
Appropriations, 1956	+1,205,400,000
Estimates, 1957	+40,000,000

[1] An additional $481,400,000 transferred from prior year appropriations under the head "Plant and equipment."

The committee recommends an appropriation of $1,780,400,000, an increase of $40 million over the budget estimate of $1,740,400,000 and an increase of $1,205,400,000 over the 1956 appropriation.

Funds for the reactor-development program have been increased by $40 million. This $40 million and the $10 million in the budget estimate for "Increase for power reactors demonstration program" together with the $15 million in the budget estimate for power reactor acceleration will make a total of $65 million available for acceleration of the power-reactor program. It is the understanding of the committee that these funds will be available for any research and development work which may be necessary in connection with the civilian atomic power acceleration program provided for in the plant acquisition and construction appropriation.

Plant acquisition and construction

Appropriations, 1956	$259,227,000
Estimates, 1957	158,300,000
Recommended, 1957	558,300,000
Comparison:
Appropriations, 1956	+299,073,000
Estimates, 1957	+400,000,000

The committee recommends an appropriation of $558,300,000, an increase of $400 million over the budget estimate of $158,300,000 and an increase of $299,073,000 over the 1956 appropriation. This increase is for the purpose of implementing the provisions of H. R. 12061 for a civilian atomic power acceleration program. Language authorizing this program has been included in the bill.

EXPLANATION OF PROPOSED AMENDMENTS

The Commission proposes no amendments with respect to the amounts of the appropriations provided in the bill. The following amendments as proposed herein are to reinstate certain provisions in appropriation language which were recommended by the House Appropriations Committee in its report on the bill but which were stricken by the House during its consideration on the basis of points of order. In addition to the provisions covered by the proposed amendments, the House action has resulted in the elimination of two limitations which have been included in appropriation acts in 1956 and prior years. The first of these is the limitation on the amount to be paid as fees to contractors for the operation of certain community facilities. The second provision requires a loyalty determination regarding persons receiving fellowship payments from the Commission. The Commission feels that the inclusion of these limitations in the 1957 Appropriation Act is properly a matter to be determined by the Congress.

Amendment (1) would restore authority to the Commission to employ aliens. From time to time it is highly desirable to employ outstanding and talented scientists for research work in the Commission's laboratories. Such persons have made very significant and valuable contributions to our program. If this amendment were not adopted it would be necessary to immediately terminate the employment of such persons now working on the program. This authority has been available to the Commission since 1948.

Amendment (2) would reinstate the following provisions:

(a) Provide for the reappropriation of unexpended balances of prior year appropriations and the merger of such balances with the current appropriation.

The budget estimates for the fiscal year 1957 reflect the application of an estimated unobligated balance of $40 million as a reduction in the amount of new appropriations for the fiscal year 1957. The elimination of this provision therefore would have the effect of reducing amounts available for obligation in the fiscal year 1957 by $40 million. Furthermore, the provision which authorizes the merger of unexpended balances has been included in appropriation acts since the adoption of the cost performance budget system in 1951. This has enabled the Commission to simplify its accounting and budget procedures and to relieve contractors of a complicated identification of each payment with the year or years of obligation. This provision has the approval of the Comptroller General.

(b) Allow the AEC to retain, for application to its cost of operations, cash receipts which otherwise would be deposited to the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

This proviso would authorize the Atomic Energy Commission to retain and apply, against its costs of operations, receipts which otherwise would be returned to the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts. At the present time, collections made by AEC (representing 15 percent of all collections) must be deposited to the Treasury, but collections made by contractors (representing 85 percent of all collections) may be applied against their cost of operation. This proviso would enable the AEC to treat all collections (except those received under the Atomic Energy Community Act of 1955) on a uniform basis, irrespective of whether the AEC or the contractors made the collection. The Comptroller General, in a letter to the chairman of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy dated June 2, 1955, reported that AEC's budget and accounting procedures provide adequate control over the receipt and disposition of collections made by contractors. Since the credit for these revenues has been applied in determining the appropriation required for fiscal year 1957 the elimination of this proviso would have the effect of reducing amounts available to the Commission.

(c) Authorize the use of not to exceed $100,000 for confidential expenditures.

Section 261 of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 provides that acts appropriating funds for the Atomic Energy Commission "may appropriate specified portions thereof to be accounted for upon the certification of the Commission only." The proposed amendment is necessary to make funds available to the Commission to make confidential payments for security and intelligence purposes.

(d) Authorize the transfer of funds to appropriations of other Government agencies for performance of work for the Atomic Energy Commission.

This authority has been available to the Commission since 1948 in order to provide a means of having work done by other agencies which for security reasons, should not be identified as being related to the atomic energy program.

Amendment (3) would reinstate the following provisions:

(a) Make funds appropriated for plant acquisition and construction available until expended.

Appropriations for plant construction have been on a no-year basis since the establishment of a separate appropriation for this purpose in the fiscal year 1953. This follows the general appropriation practice (of making appropriations on this basis) for all major construction programs of the Government. Since construction on many of these projects continues for several years it is difficult to determine precisely when each phase of the work will require obligation of funds. If this provision is not inserted the funds appropriated for construction would not be available for obligation after June 30, 1957. If portions of the program were not covered by obligations as of that date it would be necessary to request new appropriations to complete the work despite the fact that the Congress had previously made appropriations for such purposes.

(b) Permit the transfer of obligated balances as of June 30, 1956, for equipment not included in construction projects to the appropriation for operating expenses.

The appropriation language enacted by the House provides that, effective July 1, 1956, funds for equipment not included in construction projects are included in the operating expenses appropriation, whereas heretofore they were included in the plant and equipment appropriation. The proposed language deleted by the House provided that obligated balances of such equipment remaining in the plant and equipment appropriation as of June 30, 1956, were to be transferred to the operating expenses appropriation. This amendment is necessary so that all costs and expenditures for equipment made during the fiscal year 1957 can be accounted for under one account providing for an orderly transition in accounting for such equipment under the new appropriation structure.

(c) Authorize the merger of balances of prior year appropriations for construction made under the title "Plant and Equipment" with those to be appropriated in 1957 for the same purpose under the title "Plant Acquisition and Construction."

The inclusion of this provision is necessary because of the change in the title of the appropriation made to reflect the transfer of equipment to the operating expense appropriation.

(d) Authorize the transfer of funds to the operating expenses appropriation if additional feed materials capacity is constructed by private industry with its own funds.

The appropriation passed by the House for plant acquisition and construction includes funds for the construction of additional feed materials facilities. Proposals from private industry are being considered by AEC whereby private industry would construct the facilities with its own funds and AEC would enter into unit price contracts for the procurement of feed materials. If these proposals are accepted, funds would not be required for construction, but would be required under operating expenses to cover long term liabilities under the contracts for procurement of the concentrates under unit price contracts.

(e) Authorize adjustments between appropriations to the Atomic Energy Commission on the basis of cost.

This authority has been available to the Commission since 1951 when the Commission first presented its budget on a cost basis. It enables the Commission to reflect charges to appropriations on the basis of ultimate use rather than on the manner of obligation. This language is especially valuable in the purchase of stores inventories, where, at the time of purchase, the use of the stores as between the two appropriation accounts is not precisely known.

(f) Authorize the transfer of not to exceed 5 percent between appropriations.

This authority is required to enable the Commission to proceed with certain new activities in a manner which is most advantageous to the Government.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, I call up the first amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 16, line 21, it is proposed to strike out "$1,780,400,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$1,740,400,000."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, this would bring the appropriation up to the amount of the budget estimate. There was added $40 million in the committee. It was agreed to in the Senate, but killed in the House yesterday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment offered by the Senator from New Mexico is agreed to.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, I call up my next amendment and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from New Mexico will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, on page 17, line 7, before the first semicolon, to insert the following: "including the employment of aliens."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, the Atomic Energy Commission finds it necessary to employ aliens, and I, therefore, deem the amendment important. It is in language which has heretofore been carried in the atomic energy bill, which was stricken by the House.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I see no reason why I should not accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment offered by the Senator from New Mexico is agreed to.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, I call up my next amendment and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from New Mexico will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed on page 16, line 21, after the sum insert: ", together with the unexpended balances, as of June 30, 1956, of prior year appropriations made available under this head to the Atomic Energy Commission, and, in addition, any moneys (except sums received from disposal of property under the Atomic Energy Community Act of 1955 (42 U. S. C. 2301)) received by the Commission, notwithstanding the provisions of section 3617 of the Revised Statutes (31 U. S. C. 484): Provided, That of such amounts $100,000 may be expended for objects of a confidential nature and in any such case the certificate of the Commission as to the amount of the expenditure and that it is deemed inadvisable to specify the nature thereof shall be deemed a sufficient voucher for the sum therein expressed to have been expended: Provided further, That from this appropriation transfers of sums may be made to other agencies of the Government for the performance of the work for which this appropriation is made, and in such cases the sums so transferred may be merged with the appropriation to which transferred: Provided, further, That no part of this appropriation shall be used in connection with the payment of a fixed fee to any contractor or firm of contractors engaged under a cost-plus-a-fixed-fee contract or contracts at any installation of the Commission, where that fee for community management is at a rate in excess of $90,000 per annum, or for the operation of a transportation system where that fee is at a rate in excess of $45,000 per annum."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, that is a provision which has been contained in appropriation bills for several years.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I think the language should be in the bill, and I see no reason why I should not take the amendment to conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment offered by the Senator from New Mexico is agreed to.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. President, I have a further amendment which I ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from New Mexico will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, on page 17, line 4, after the sum to insert:

Provided, That the obligated balance as of June 30, 1956, of amounts included in appropriations to the Atomic Energy Commission for "Plant and equipment", for the activity "Equipment not included in construction projects", shall be transferred to and merged with the appropriation for "Operating expenses", and the remaining balance of such appropriations shall be merged with this appropriation: Provided further, That, in the event additional feed materials capacity is constructed by private industry with its own funds, the amounts included in this appropriation for such construction may be transferred to the appropriation for "Operating expenses."

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Any appropriation available under this or any other act to the Atomic Energy Commission may initially be used subject to limitations in this act during the fiscal year 1957 to finance the procurement of materials, services, or other costs which are a part of work or activities for which funds have been provided in any other appropriation available to the Commission: Provided, That appropriate transfers or adjustments between such appropriations shall subsequently be made for such costs on the basis of actual application determined in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles.

Not to exceed 5 percent of any appropriation under this title may be transferred to any other such appropriation, but no such appropriation shall be increased by more than 5 percent by any such transfers, and any such transfers shall be reported promptly to the Appropriations Committees of the House and Senate.

No part of any appropriation herein made to the Atomic Energy Commission shall be used to confer a fellowship on any person who advocates or who is a member of an organization or party that advocates the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence or with respect to whom the Commission finds, upon investigation and report by the Civil Service Commission on the character, associations, and loyalty of whom, that reasonable grounds exist for belief that such person is disloyal to the Government of the United States: Provided, That any person who advocates or who is a member of an organization or party that advocates the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence and accepts employment or a fellowship the salary, wages, stipend, grant, or expenses for which are paid from any appropriation contained herein shall be guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than 1 year, or both: Provided further, That the above penal clause shall be in addition to, and not in substitution for, any other provisions of existing law.

Mr. ANDERSON. That, again, Mr. President, is a standard provision which has been in the law for several years. I think it should go to conference.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I think the language should be restored.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment offered by the Senator from New Mexico is agreed to.

Mr. KERR. Mr. President, I call up the amendment, which I laid on the desk, and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Oklahoma will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, on page 12, line 19, to insert the following new section:

CHAPTER II

LEGISLATIVE BRANCH

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Contingent Expenses of the House

Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation: For an additional amount for the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, $50,000.

Mr. KERR. Mr. President, the Joint Committee on Revenue Taxation which was created under the Revenue Act of 1926 was authorized by law to investigate the operation and effect of internal revenue taxes.

Since the staff has undertaken new studies at the direction of the chairman relating to the internal revenue laws pursuant to the authority vested in the committee by the statute, it is necessary that sufficient funds be available to permit the carrying on of the studies. I hope the distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Committee will accept the amendment.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, the committee under the chairmanship of the senior Senator from Virginia has rendered very fine service. I think it is entirely proper that I accept the amendment and take it to conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment offered by the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. KERR] is agreed to.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, on page 11, line 9, to strike out "1947" and to insert in lieu thereof "1957."

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, may I say to the chairman of the committee and to the Members of the Senate that this amendment simply corrects a clerical error.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, there is no objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama is agreed to.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, I offer the amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have stated. It is my amendment No. 3.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 13, after line 3, it is proposed to insert the following:

OFFICE OF VOCATIONAL REHABILITATION

For an additional amount for "Grants States, and other agencies," $1 million, for grants for special projects under section 4 (a) (2): Provided, that not more than $2 of these funds shall be expended for any project for each $1 that the grantee or the grantee and the State, expends for the same purpose: Provided, further, That this paragraph shall be effective only upon enactment of S. 3875, 84th Congress.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, at the time the Senate Appropriations Committee considered the bill there was a proposal for extending vocational rehabilitation. This amendment is merely to make an appropriation of $1 million to carry out that extension.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I have no objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama is agreed to.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated. It is No. 4.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 14, it is proposed to strike out lines 8 through 16, and insert in lieu thereof:

Operating expenses, National Institutes of Health: An additional amount for "Operating expenses, National Institutes of health", $200,000, for administration of the Health Research Facilities Act of 1956: Provided, That this paragraph shall be effective only upon enactment of S. 849, 84th Congress.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, when the Senate Committee on Appropriations considered this item it was agreed that $200,000 should be appropriated, but instead of appropriating it some language was put into the bill providing for the transfer of certain funds. Since agreeing on the transfer of funds the Senator from Alabama has been advised by representatives of the House Committee on Appropriations that they will not agree to the transfer of funds but will agree to an appropriation, because they feel it should be made. What this amendment does is to make the appropriation of $200,000 just as the committee thought it should be made, a direct appropriation.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, under those circumstances I will accept the amendment and take it to conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama is agreed to.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, I call up my last amendment, No. 5, and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 15, it is proposed to strike out the words, beginning in lines 10 and 15, "to be derived by transfer from funds available to the National Institutes of Health as determined by the Surgeon General."

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, What I stated about the transfer of funds with reference to the previous amendment applies to this amendment, and I hope the Senator from Arizona will accept it.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I accept the amendment with the same understanding.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment offered by the Senator from Alabama is agreed to.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. Mr. President, I should like to ask a question of the chairman of the committee. Under the subtitle of "Sanitary engineering activities" I see the sum of $4,100,000 is appropriated, including $2,700,000 for grants to the States and $300,000 to interstate agencies. As I understand the language, it is over and above the $4,100,000.

Mr. HAYDEN. No, it is not.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. Is that a part of the $4,100,000?

Mr. HAYDEN. It is a part of the total.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. According to the author of the act in the other body the amount of funds under section 4, and according to the report, is limited to $450,000 for research.

Mr. HAYDEN. The Senator from Alabama had charge of that matter.

Mr. HILL. We arranged the language so that the States might get their part of the Federal funds to go forward with the State plans.

As the Senator knows, under the act which has now passed both Houses of Congress, before any Federal funds available for any projects in a particular State can be used, the State must make its study and its plans, and then submit the plans for approval.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. That is correct.

Mr. HILL. After the plan has been approved, the project under the plan in the particular State will become eligible for Federal funds.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. That is my understanding.

I should like to ask the Senator a further question. The funds under section 4 are strictly for research purposes, as I understand the act. There is a feeling on the part of those who worked so diligently to make the act a reality that that amount of money—$450,000—will seriously restrict the possibilities of water pollution control under the terms of the act. In fact, it has been suggested to me that that sum should be raised to the amount of $1,450,000 for research activities. I would appreciate the Senator's comments.

Mr. HILL. If the figure were to be raised to the full amount, the increase would be $1 million.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. One million four hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

Mr. HILL. It would be the full figure as authorized by the act.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. The point seems to be that the research funds are of importance to this particular proposal, and that the modest amount provided in the bill might very seriously limit the effectiveness of this particular act.

I desire to have the advice and counsel of the able Senator from Alabama, for whom I have such a high regard. I know he examined into the matter. I wondered if the Senator would be receptive to increasing the figure from $450,000 to $900,000.

Mr. HILL. The distinguished Senator from Arizona [Mr. HAYDEN] has charge of the bill; but I may say to him that I think it would be well to make the figure $900,000 and to take it to conference.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. The urgency of this matter in terms of research is, I think, of the utmost importance. Therefore, in order to formalize the procedure, I move that the amount be raised from $4,100,000, as provided in the bill, to $4,550,000, with the understanding that the additional $450,000 will go to section 4 research funds.

Mr. HILL. That is satisfactory.

Mr. HAYDEN. On the recommendation of the Senator from Alabama, who is more familiar with the subject than I am, I shall be glad to take the amendment to conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Minnesota will be stated for the information of the Senate.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 13, line 19, it is proposed to strike out "$4,100,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$4,550,000."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. President, I have a comment to make on that amendment. In Cincinnati, the Taft Engineering Co. is engaged in the kind of work to which the Senator from Minnesota is referring. Rather than to increase the amount, I think the figure should be changed, so as to keep the present figure at $4,100,000, and substituting an amendment which will provide a sufficient amount of money for research.

Actually, it was not intended by the House or by the Budget Bureau, or by any other agency of the Government, to curtail research to that extent at all. I think that by changing the language somewhat, the $4,100,000 could be retained, and the amount for research could be increased.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. Mr. President, has not the amendment been agreed to?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No; the amendment has not been adopted.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. It is my understanding that it was accepted by the chairman of the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. So it has been adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It has been accepted by the chairman of the committee, but it has not been voted upon by the Senate.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, will the Senator from Ohio yield to me?

Mr. BENDER. I yield.

Mr. HILL. I do not think the Senator wants to take any funds out of the $3 million. The $3 million is to provide Federal funds for matching to bring into being the State plans.

Before any project under this act can be eligible within any State for any Federal funds within a particular State, whether it be Ohio, Alabama, or any other State, the State first must make its survey, its study, and its plans, and then submit the plans and have them approved.

There might be some other immediate project, but that project would not be eligible unless the State plan had been approved. The purpose of the $3 million was to enable the States to have their plans approved.

Mr. BENDER. As I understand, the amendment offered by the Senator from Minnesota provides $400,000 more for research.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. That is correct; $450,000.

Mr. BENDER. That is acceptable to me.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. I thank the Senator from Ohio.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment offered by the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. HUMPHREY] is agreed to.

AGREEMENT FOR CONSIDERATION OF RIVER AND HARBOR BILL

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, for myself and on behalf of the distinguished minority leader, I submit a proposed unanimous-consent agreement concerning the consideration of the rivers and harbors bill tomorrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The proposed unanimous-consent agreement will be read for the information of the Senate.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT

Ordered, That, effective at 9:30 a. m. on July 26, 1956, the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12080), the public works authorization bill, and the debate on any amendment, motion, or appeal, except a motion to lay on the table, shall be limited to 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the mover of any such amendment or motion and the majority leader: Provided, That in the event the majority leader is in favor of any such amendment or motion, the time in opposition thereto shall be controlled by the minority leader or some Senator designated by him: Provided further, That no amendment that is not germane to the provisions of the said bill shall be received.

Ordered further, That on the question of the final passage of the said bill debate shall be limited to 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled, respectively, by the majority and minority leaders: Provided, That the said leaders, or either of them, may, from the time under their control on the passage of the said bill, allot additional time to any

Senator during the consideration of any amendment, motion, or appeal.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the agreement is entered.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Barlett, one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed, without amendment, the following bill and joint resolution of the Senate:

S. 3821. An act to authorize the construction of 1 prototype ship and the conversion of 1 Liberty ship, by the Maritime Administration, Department of Commerce; and

S. J. Res. 177. Joint resolution to authorize the Secretary of Commerce to sell certain war-built vessels.

The message also announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 12354) relating to clerk hire of Members of the House of Representatives, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

The message further announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the enrolled bill (H. R. 5712) to provide that the United States hold in trust for the Pueblos of Zia and Jemez a part of the Ojo del Espiritu Santo Grant and a small area of public domain adjacent thereto, and it was signed by the Vice President.

SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATION BILL, 1957

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12350) making supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1957, and for other purposes.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, I have previously sent to the desk an amendment relating to educational, scientific, and cultural activities in Israel, which was requested by the State Department. I now call up the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated for the information of the Senate.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 19, after line 6, it is proposed to insert the following:

EDUCATIONAL, SCIENTIFIC, AND CULTURAL ACTIVITIES

Not to exceed $3,500,000 of foreign currencies, available after June 30, 1955, from the special account for the informational media guaranty program, shall be available during the current fiscal year for educational, scientific, and cultural purposes, as authorized by section 1011 (d) of the United States Information and Educational Exchange Act of 1948, as amended.

Mr. HAYDEN. Is the appropriation authorized by law?

Mr. DIRKSEN. It is.

Mr. HAYDEN. Is there a budget estimate for it?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes. It was also submitted to the committee and is authorized by the 1956 Mutual Security Act.

Mr. HAYDEN. Under those circumstances, I am willing to take the amendment to conference.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I am offering the amendment on behalf of myself and the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. HUMPHREY], the Senator from California [Mr. KUCHEL], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART], the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BUSH], and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, I am very happy that the Senator from Illinois has permitted me to join as a cosponsor in the offering of the amendment, and I am delighted that the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations has accepted it.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. Mr. President, I think the amendment offered by the Senator from Illinois is a most desirable one. Its purpose is the utilization of accumulated funds in the currency of the State of Israel, to be used there for the purpose of educational, scientific, and cultural projects, as the projects may be jointly agreed to, as I understand, by our Government and the Government of Israel. The money will not be used constructively unless we so designate. It might very well become depreciated in value unless the designation is made now.

I am happy to join as a cosponsor of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is advised that the chairman of the committee accepts the amendment.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, I submit another amendment, which is at the desk.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? May I be made a cosponsor of the amendment?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, I withhold my request and I ask unanimous consent that the distinguished Senator from New York [Mr. LEHMAN] be made a cosponsor of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. President, I ask that I may be made a cosponsor of the amendment.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, I shall gladly accept the cosponsorship of the distinguished Senator from Ohio.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Illinois for himself and other Senators will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed, on page 10, after line 19, to insert:

BOOKER T. WASHINGTON CENTENNIAL COMMISSION

For necessary expenses of the Booker T. Washington Centennial Commission to carry out the year-long celebration of the 100th anniversary of the birth of Booker T. Washington and to promote the spirit of interracial good will, and revive interest in the practical policies, programs, principles, and philosophies of Booker T. Washington, $225,000, to remain available until expended.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, as everyone knows, Booker T. Washington made such a great contribution to interracial good will that I think we are under some obligation to observe the 100th anniversary of his birth. That is all this fund is designed to do.

I submit the amendment in behalf of myself and the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. CLEMENTS] the Senator from New York [Mr. LEHMAN], and the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BENDER]. I sincerely hope the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Appropriations will take the amendment to conference and deal generously with it.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I accept the amendment and will take it to conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] for himself and other Senators.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the name of the Senator from California [Mr. KUCHEL] may be added as a cosponsor of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The bill is open to further amendment.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I call up my amendment providing for payment to the District of Columbia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 4, line 6, under title "Reimbursement to District of Columbia," it is proposed to insert:

For reimbursement to the Highway Fund, District of Columbia, for part cost of construction of highway-railroad grade separation underpass at a point in the southeast section of the District of Columbia in the vicinity of East Capitol Street, $665,000, to remain available until expended.

Mr. HAYDEN. My recollection is that an appropriation of this kind was provided last year.

Mr. BRIDGES. Yes. It was provided in a public law of the 84th Congress. It is specified by law. The amendment provides for a readjustment to the District of Columbia.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment.

Mr. BENDER. Mr. President, I call up an amendment which I have at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. It is proposed, on page 19, line 9, to strike out "$10,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$100,000."

Mr. BENDER. Mr. President, the amendment has to do with the pan-American games. A bill was passed authorizing an expenditure of $5 million for the games in 1959. The committee authorized $10,000 in its report. I have taken the amendment up with the chairman of the committee, the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. SALTONSTALL], the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr.

BRIDGES], and the majority leader. I understand they are willing to accept it.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, there would be no harm in providing a little more money to commence the study of this very important project. I think it would be entirely proper to take the amendment to conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BENDER].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Aiken	Goldwater	McCarthy
Allott	Gore	McClellan
Anderson	Green	McNamara

Mr. CLEMENTS. I announce that the Senator from Texas [Mr. DANIEL] is absent on official business.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I announce that the Senator from Michigan [Mr. POTTER] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business as a member of the American Battle Monuments Commission.

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. WELKER] is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MCNAMARA in the Chair). A quorum is present.

The bill is open to further amendment.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. President, I call up the amendment which I have at the desk, and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Oklahoma will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. At the proper place in the bill, it is proposed to insert:

To carry out the provisions of the act entitled "An act to authorize the construction, protection, operation and maintenance of a public airport in the vicinity of the District of Columbia", approved September 7, 1950 (64 Stat. 770), $12,943,750.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. President, my amendment seeks to add to the bill $15 million plus for the construction of a second airport for Washington, D. C. This is in line with an authorization approved by the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committees of both the House and Senate and voted by the Congress in 1950. It is in line with action taken by the Appropriations Committee in the year 1950, during which time more than $1 million was spent to acquire land in the vicinity of Burke, Va., to give Washington a second airport, which the Civil Aeronautics Board and those familiar with aviation needs said was necessary to meet the demands of the increasing air traffic into and out of Washington, D. C.

Bear in mind that this was in the year 1950, when most of our traffic was limited to DC–3's, slower aircraft, and flight movements well under half of the flight movements in and out of Washington National Airport today.

This project was not promoted by any land speculators or any civic pride group. It was originated by the Civil Aeronautics Administration, viewing the increasing air traffic in the year 1950. It came to the conclusion that a second airport in the vicinity of Washington was an absolute must.

The location of Burke, Va., was not chosen by the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee. It was not chosen by the Appropriations Committee. The selection was not made by anyone in political life, by any county officials, governors, or chambers of commerce.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration, with all its technicians, was directed by the Congress to find the best available site, near enough to Washington to serve our needs, yet far enough away from the Washington National Airport and other airports so that air traffic safety would be promoted, and so that dangerous conditions over the airport would not result.

This proposal is the most closely and carefully studied local bill I have known in my 18 years in Congress. It was studied constantly for many years by the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committees of both Houses, prior to the authorization. It was restudied by the Appropriations Committee before it recommended an appropriation of $1 million to acquire land at the site where the technicians said the second airport should be built, in the interest of safety.

It was studied again by the full Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, as recently as a year ago, after which time, after receiving the evidence which was presented to us by the men who fly the planes, the Airline Pilots Association, the Civil Aeronautics Administration, and all the others concerned, our committee unanimously directed that the Civil Aeronautics Administration, through the budget office of the President, bring in, not later than January 3 of this year, a recommendation for an appropriation to begin construction of a second airport, which was necessary for this vicinity.

We did not specify where to place the airport. The location had already been chosen by the technicians. It was testified by them that it was the only available site yet undeveloped which would be capable of serving Washington conveniently for the air needs of the future.

The Commerce Department supervisors and the Civil Aeronautics Administration, instead of bringing in, on January 3, a budget recommendation, as our committee had unanimously directed, came in with a recommendation, not from the Civil Aeronautics Administration, but from the Department of Commerce and the Under Secretary of Commerce for Transportation. The recommendation was for an intermixture of civilian and military aircraft at Andrews Field. This seemed to present very grave danger. It involved intermixing civilian aircraft with jet-fighter planes, some flying as fast as the speed of sound. The airport at Andrews Field, used by the military, is becoming overcrowded. Although it is close to Washington, the testimony showed that, with military use, it could not serve as a safe airport for Washington, D. C.

After several days' hearings and study, the testimony being taken by the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, we rejected the joint use of Andrews Airbase, and directed that a recommendation be brought in for the solution of this problem.

Burke, Va., had been recommended as the second best location, if it were not possible to manage an intermixture of civilian and jet aircraft at Andrews Field.

After many months of delay, in the closing days of Congress, only a few weeks ago, a budget request was submitted to Congress for an appropriation of $34,700,000. This amount was asked for by the proponents of a second airport at Burke, Va., in a 1-day hearing before the Appropriations Committee of the Senate.

Because of other pressing business, the maximum number of members of the Appropriations Committee present that day at no time was more than four.

After this brief hearing, it was decided to hold up the budget request for $34,700,000, and, instead, to propose the establishment of a committee to study the question as to whether Congress should appropriate next year funds for construction of the Burke Airport.

Because of my doubt of the legality of the authorization bill containing an authorization of $34,700,000, and in order to remove any doubt that the expenditure for starting money is within the limits previously authorized by the Congress, I have amended the amount requested by the Budget to $12,700,000 plus, in order not to lose a valuable period of some 8 months' time in order to begin to relieve what today is an extremely dangerous and critically congested air space over the Washington National Airport.

It is one of the most congested air spaces in the country. It is a strange thing to me, Mr. President, that the collision between the TWA plane and the United Airlines plane occurred over Arizona, and not over the Washington National Airport.

The testimony before our committee from the Airline Pilots Association revealed stories which would curl one's hair—stories about coming in through murky and soupy weather, with planes landing 30 seconds behind the tail of the plane ahead. It would require only a small slip in the cockpit of any of these planes to produce a crash which would result in many more casualties than occurred in the broad air space over the Grand Canyon a few weeks ago.

I know of no one in the aviation industry who does not support wholeheartedly the request for getting under way with the Burke Airport. The argument has always been, "Mañana—tomorrow. Let us investigate some more. Let us not do anything about it now." That attitude has continued until the air space over the Washington National Airport today is considered by pilots who fly in and out of that airport to be one of the most dangerous air areas in the United States. This is the Nation's Capital, which draws people from the 48 States of the Union. We certainly should be entitled to have an airport in the Capital of the United States which would be at least equal to the facilities we have built around the world through mutual security aid. We have given a new airport to the city of London. We have given two to the city of Paris. Whether we go to Cairo or Lebanon, we find great airbases which we have built in profusion.

In Washington there is only one airport, which is handling a record-breaking volume of traffic, and its capacity is crowded to a dangerous degree. Do Senators know, for example, that planes overfly Washington on dozens of schedules today? Those planes would like to land in Washington, but there is no available time to get them through the crowded stack and to land in Washington, except between the hours of midnight and dawn, when fewer people are using the airport.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield.

Mr. GORE. I am not informed on the subject, although I have read a little about it in the newspapers. What is wrong with using Friendship Airport?

Mr. MONRONEY. I would say that Friendship Airport, according to the testimony, and according to my own driving experience, is so far from Washington that it is necessary to allow an hour and 15 minutes in which to reach the airport from a downtown hotel in Washington, if sufficient time is to be allowed for the formalities for arriving at the airport and checking in and boarding the plane. Washington serves short-haul traffic to a higher degree than any other airport in the Nation. Our traffic comes in from——

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. I should like to complete my statement in answer to the question from the Senator from Tennessee. A heavy short-haul traffic comes into Washington from New York, Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh. People would not use Friendship Airport if it were necessary for them to travel the considerably extra long distance to reach Washington after landing at Friendship Airport in Baltimore. Under those conditions, instead of going by air, people would prefer to go by train, because they could make better time than by going by bus, for example, from the Statler Hotel, to Friendship Airport, and then flying from Baltimore to New York.

I might say also that Baltimore built the Friendship Airport so that its people would not have to use National Airport in Washington. That was done at a time when the traffic at Washington National Airport was not so heavy as it is today. At that time, by using the Washington Airport, people from Baltimore had much better airline service. However, National Airport was too far from Baltimore. Therefore, Baltimore spent about $13 million or $14 million to build its airport. I do not believe that the air passenger traffic to the Nation's Capital should be rerouted to Baltimore.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield.

Mr. GORE. Does the Senator believe that Washington air traffic ought to be forced to use the Baltimore airport, or that the Baltimore air traffic should be forced to use the Washington Airport?

Mr. MONRONEY. That is exactly the point. When the second airport at Washington is completed, there will be no necessity for urging the use of the Baltimore airport. We might as well ask people to use the Baltimore railroad station at Baltimore, instead of the Union Station in Washington. To follow that line of argument, we would not need the Union Station in Washington.

Mr. President, this is the Nation's Capital. One of the purposes of aviation is to provide speed in transportation. If people were forced to drive for 50 minutes—and that is the bus time, according to the testimony before our committee; and if anyone should drive that distance in less than 50 minutes he would be likely to be arrested for speeding—they would not use the Baltimore airport.

However, the Baltimore Chamber of Commerce insists that Washington should become the captive community of the Baltimore airport. The chamber of commerce insists that we must not have at Washington the air facilities necessary to serve the air traffic generated by the Nation's Capital.

People come to Washington because this is the Nation's Capital. That is why people come here from New York City and Pittsburgh and Philadelphia and Chicago. If they must be rerouted to Baltimore, the result will be that we will probably help a little bit along the line of safety by eliminating some of the overcrowding; but I do not believe that any of the Senators who have been at Friendship Airport will ever have any doubt that Friendship Airport is still the Baltimore airport and not the airport serving the Nation's Capital.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield.

Mr. GORE. Suppose a Member of the Senate is in Chicago and he wishes to come to Washington. If Friendship Airport were used, would he have to buy a ticket from Chicago to Baltimore, or from Chicago to Washington?

Mr. MONRONEY. The proposal would be that he would have to buy a ticket to Washington-Baltimore. He might get on a plane that would take him to Washington, and he might get on a plane that would take him to Baltimore. He would have to read the fine print on the ticket and on the timetable.

Mr. GORE. Under an arrangement like that, Senators and Representatives and Government officials would perhaps be inconvenienced. I know, for example, that many of us operate on a tight schedule. I know that there is a plane which arrives from my State at 11:30 in the morning. That is very convenient, because I can take a cab from the airport and get to the Capitol in time for the session at noon. If I must travel about 50 miles farther, and take 1 hour and 15 minutes to come to the Capitol, I might miss a 1:30 rollcall.

Mr. MONRONEY. I agree with the Senator.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. I may say to the Senator from Tennessee that most of the passengers who come to Washington from New York or Boston or Chicago or Cleveland or Philadelphia, are men who come to Washington to attend hearings or to conduct other business, and that they are on a very tight schedule before the various Government departments in their appointments downtown, for example. Washington generates the traffic because it is the seat of government. As a nation we have been very liberal in building airports all over the world, and I certainly believe that we could afford to have a second airport in the Nation's Capital, because the air traffic has grown to such tremendous volume and because the only safe thing we can do under the circumstances is to divide the traffic between two airports.

Another point is that if we must go to the Baltimore airport in order to obtain some safety in air operations, we might as well go to Richmond. We would be adding to our safety by going to Richmond, and we would be going just about as far as we would be going to Baltimore.

The Baltimore Chamber of Commerce, through its very able representatives, seeks to prevent us from building the second airport. The effort of the representatives of the Baltimore Chamber of Commerce are laudable from their standpoint. However, we are the National Congress. We do not represent the chamber of commerce of Baltimore.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield.

Mr. GORE. I must confess that I have very meager information on this subject. However, I should like to know who it is who is trying to have the Washington traffic go to Baltimore.

Mr. MONRONEY. The Baltimore Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. GORE. I thought Congress represented the American people.

Mr. MONRONEY. Congress is supposed to represent the American people, but this subject has been considerably confused by the idea that the airport at Baltimore, which was built to serve the people of Baltimore, because the people of Baltimore thought it was too far to go to Washington to take a plane, should now be used to serve Washington.

Apparently it is not too far for Washington people to go to Baltimore to take a plane.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. Baltimore spent about $15 million because it was too far for the people of Baltimore to come to Washington.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. I should like to reply to the Senator from Tennessee. Then I shall be happy to yield. The Baltimore Chamber of Commerce, of course, says, "No; you cannot have another airport in Washington." The chamber of commerce wants us to use its airport in Baltimore. If they had located the airport halfway between the two cities, that would have been a different matter.

Mr. BEALL and Mr. BUTLER addressed the Chair.

Mr. MONRONEY. I shall be glad to yield in a moment. I am explaining to my friend from Tennessee what the situation is. He does not represent the Baltimore Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. BUTLER. He does not know much about the facts either.

Mr. GORE. Baltimore is a delightful city, and I hope to visit it, but I do not believe I should be forced to go to Baltimore every time I want to fly to Washington.

Mr. MONRONEY. Exactly. Anyone who will buy a ticket, if the Friendship Airport is forced on Washington, will not know whether he will land in Baltimore or in Washington, because the schedule will have to be so arranged that certain planes will land in Washington and certain planes will land in Baltimore. It will be necessary to read the fine print to find out. Estimates have been made which indicate that by 1960 the metropolitan district of Washington will have a population of 5 million. In order to please the Baltimore Chamber of Commerce, we will be offering a substantial number of those 5 million people the privilege of spending an extra hour going to Friendship Airport and another hour coming from the airport, and we will be allowing them to spend an extra dollar or a dollar and a half for bus fare.

Much as I love my two distinguished colleagues from Maryland, who have done such a fine job for the Baltimore Chamber of Commerce, Washington is the Nation's Capital and is entitled to good air service. There is poor air service in Baltimore, and a poor schedule, which indicates to me that the people of Baltimore do not fly very much. Yet, they want to get in on these good airline schedules, because they tell us that if we build up a larger traffic load, there will be more business for Baltimore. The Baltimore Chamber of Commerce should be proud of the two Senators who have so ably managed to prevent construction of a project which everyone who has ever studied it says must be built at Burke. This is a technical decision; it is not a political decision.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oklahoma yield further?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield.

Mr. GORE. If a man boards a plane in Pittsburgh or Nashville or some other point and wishes to call his wife and ask if she will meet him at the plane, where would he tell her to meet him?

Mr. MONRONEY. He would get out his eyeglasses and try to read the schedule to find out whether flight 69 was coming into Washington Airport or into Friendship Airport. If it is a late schedule, he could probably tell his wife to meet him at the National Airport. If the schedule were over 2 weeks old, the plane might be landing in the next month or two in Baltimore. If the man should board a plane to go to Washington and was put off at Baltimore, he would have to take an hour and 15 minutes and pay an extra dollar to reach Washington by bus or hire a taxi to take him there.

The proponents of the Friendship Airport idea think a depot should be located at New York Avenue and Bladensburg Road. I do not know why they did not choose Laurel, Md.; it would be nearer to Friendship. But they want a depot at New York Avenue and Bladensburg Road. Then one could take a cab and run up another $2 going to northwest Washington, instead of having a national airport 14.8 miles from the control tower, far enough away to be safe, but not so far as going into another State and to another city on a long tour in nice, comfortable buses. The Baltimore Chamber of Commerce would like to see those planes coming in——

Mr. GORE. The Senator has already convinced me.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oklahoma yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield.

Mr. DOUGLAS. At the turn of the century I believe there was a popular song entitled "Put Me Off at Buffalo." Is the Senator saying that there is now an attempt to write a new popular song entitled "Put Me Off at Baltimore"?

Mr. MONRONEY. I am afraid there will be a lot of kicks, particularly by United States Senators, when the plane door is opened and they think they are getting off at Washington instead of at the delightful city on Chesapeake Bay.

Mr. BUTLER. They will have a thrill when they come to Washington, and do not have to get off in Virginia.

Mr. MONRONEY. Burke is 14.8 miles on the Shirley Highway, without a red light until we get to Independence Avenue and 13th Street, I think.

Let us talk about this a little bit. We always meet these difficulties. It is something like locating a fish hatchery. Someone has always got other ideas about where a fish hatchery should be located.

I am willing to yield to my colleagues when they want a fish hatchery or a dam or a dock. But the traffic coming from Washington and taking off from here is interstate commerce. The Senators from Maryland and the Senators from Virginia, I may say, do not use the airlines very much to come to Washington, but there are 92 other Senators who have to use the airlines. The number of near misses we have had in the past 3 or 4 weeks have been tabulated, as have been the number of congestions on the radio, in the cockpit, where for several minutes the man in the cockpit cannot reach the control tower. He cannot contact the control tower to get landing instructions to come into Washington. I can remember the old situation when we came in over high-tension wires and cut off in a hurry, on a "dogleg" on a runway. For years Congress battled with it. For years there were new investigations and technicians did their work. Then, one day, President Roosevelt said he was going to issue an Executive order to start construction of a Washington airport. He was asked why, and he said, "I had a dream that one of the huge airliners came in for a landing and cracked up and people were killed." He said he was starting it at Gravelly Point on the Potomac River. That is the airport which now serves this Nation well. It cost around $12 million. A great deal of it was WPA money, putting idle people to work. This WPA project was a boondoggle in those days. Unfortunately, Friendship Airport had not been built, or they would have wanted to use Friendship.

The Washington Airport was built at a cost of $12 million, and has paid into the United States Treasury, since 1942, $17 million. Every 48 hours the United States Treasury gets at least $15,000 from the Washington National Airport.

The income from landing fees is great. Under the new estimates, they will run about $178,000 a year. Even the ground transportation will pay into the Federal Treasury about $175,000.

The parking lot pays $118,000, and the shoeshine concession paid $1,650 last year.

Can we wonder why the Friendship Airport wants to be bailed out, to collect landing fees? The Baltimore Chamber of Commerce wants the planes to land near Baltimore.

I wish the Members of the Senate who will have to vote on this question would start out and drive from the Statler Hotel to Friendship, and see how fast they can make it. I have not been able to make it in less than 55 minutes, and I had to violate the speed laws a little bit at that.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oklahoma yield further?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield.

Mr. GORE. Is the Senator proposing an investigation, or has it already been investigated?

Mr. MONRONEY. It has been investigated. It has been restudied by the technicians. It was restudied in 1950. It was studied last year, and there was a unanimous report that we had to have a second Washington airport. That was reported by the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee. It was restudied a few weeks ago. The reports have been virtually unanimous, except the last one which was not concurred in by the distinguished Senator from Maryland, who is fighting so ably for the use of the Friendship Airport.

We have made sufficient studies so that if the paperwork were laid end to end, it would hard-surface the runways.

I feel that we have an obligation to the Nation, to the air travelers, and we have an obligation to the national defense of this country. Where would we have been in World War II had we not had the Washington National Airport to handle the overseas communications which had to go out from Washington?

What shall we do? Shall we postpone the construction of another airport, as is proposed in the pending appropriation bill, for another study, another investigation, and another delay? Eight or 9 months is what it will cost in time before we get to where we can get today; that is, if the $12 million which is in the bill can be appropriated. The land can be acquired. The engineering studies can be made. Bids can be obtained. The pouring of concrete for the runways can be started by the time the Committee on Appropriations provides the second amount with which to go to work sometime in February or March 1957. It will be necessary to get another authorization, because construction costs have gone up so much since 1950, when it was first proposed to build the airport.

The runways must be larger. The jet age is only 3 years away. Everyone knows that. Jet transports from coast to coast and from country to country will be the major long-range carriers. It will not be possible to land them in Washington. The Nation's Capital is not important enough to have a jet runway. Such runways cannot be built along the Potomac, because there is no airspace. There is not the length which is necessary, without having dangerous situations of water backing up into the basement of the Pentagon, and many other hydraulic problems connected with filled land.

So a jet airport cannot be made out of Washington National Airport. The Baltimore airport could be used, although it is a little obsolete for jet transports. But jets could get in and out.

Mr. GORE. Is the Senator from Oklahoma saying that within a short time it will be impossible to board a plane at any principal city in the United States and come to Washington?

Mr. MONRONEY. It will be impossible to board a true jet airliner, such as will be flying the skies soon on the long transcontinental runs, and land at Washington.

Mr. GORE. That is what I mean.

Mr. MONRONEY. That will occur within 3 years.

Mr. GORE. The planes of the future will be jet planes; and, unless something is done to correct the situation, there will be no jet planes landing in Washington; it will be necessary to go to Baltimore.

Mr. MONRONEY. That is true; or it will be necessary to take an old-fashioned DC–3 in order to come into Washington. It is the "horse and buggy" idea all over again. It will not be possible to come from Florida. Florida will be able to have jet airliners use the fine fields the Government helped to build. But Washington will not be able to accommodate jet airliners. So, passengers will have to pass up the jet airliners; and if they want to come into National Airport they must come in on an old-fashioned plane, because the Nation's Capital cannot afford to build an airport to accommodate jet airliners. Yet, jet planes are on order and are scheduled for delivery before the Burke Airport, if it is to be voted tonight, could be completed to accommodate them.

Yet it is proposed to delay its construction for another 7 or 8 months, while more and more studies are made.

I think it is a mistake to allow local prejudices and local differences of opinion as to location and the protests of local property owners to interfere with this project. I can appreciate the responses which Senators receive from the immediate localities concerned, but I may say that the airport will be located in Fairfax County.

Representative BROYHILL, who represents that county, took a poll of all the registered voters of which he had a list in Fairfax County. He sent all of them questionnaires, asking if they wanted Burke Airport to be built.

I feel certain the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BROYHILL], who has opposed the project, did not load the questionnaires in any way so as to favor Burke Airport. But when the returns came in, they showed that a majority of the people who lived in that county wanted the airport to be located at Burke.

Then we are told that the county is too wide an area for a poll and a poll should be taken of the township. Where will we find a township in which everyone is going to get together?

There are property owners who do not want 4-lane highways to go past their country homes. But progress demands that such highways be built. Similarly, progress demands that safe airports be built close enough to the cities they are intended to serve to be usable for air traffic uses.

Mr. GORE. If the Government waited until there was no objection on the part of property owners before a reservoir could be built, would any hydroelectric dam or reclamation project or flood control project ever be constructed in the United States?

Mr. MONRONEY. I know of no project on which the people of my State would have complete unanimity. Are we not foolish to expect unanimity from a combination of local property owners who have been heard again and again and again?

The result of the poll taken by Representative BROYHILL showed that the majority of the people of Fairfax County favored the airport. If they did not favor it, I would still think it was worth building, because it is the only undeveloped site which could be chosen from a communications, engineering, and flight-pattern standpoint.

Mr. GORE. Does the Senator consider that this is a local problem, or is not a problem which concerns the United States?

Mr. MONRONEY. I consider, as do most of my friends, that it is a national matter; it is a question which must be resolved in the interests of the Nation. Even though those interests might conflict with the interests of a few of the local constituencies, nevertheless, if we represent Maryland or Virginia, then we must resolve those conflicts in the interest of the Nation, and in the interest of national defense.

The Nation's Capital is one of the most important key centers of transportation. We are just on the eve—the beginning—of a great upsurge in the movement of airfreight. That movement will become tremendous. The new turbojet planes will have great hauling power. Yet, all the freight which will originate in Washington or will be destined for Washington will have to come through Baltimore. It will have to be transshipped and reloaded.

I want to reserve a little of my time, and permit Senators who are opposed to the Burke Airport to explain their position. But, before doing so, I may say that whenever a second airport is built, whether it be Midway or O'Keefe, of Chicago, or LaGuardia and Idlewild in New York, or any other two airports, the second airport must be built with consideration of the transfer of interline traffic. The transfer of passengers who arrive on a plane and depart on another plane must be considered, because such passengers amount to 20 or 25 percent of all air passenger traffic. Therefore, the most important thing to keep in mind is that the second airport should be built on the same side of the city; passengers should not be required to traverse a large city in order to make transfer.

In this instance, they should not have to go through the stream of traffic from Washington National Airport in order to go to the Baltimore airport.

Twenty percent of the air passenger traffic is interline traffic. All of it cannot be accommodated at Washington National Airport. Yet if the airport is built at Burke, for the valuable and important transfer of passengers between planes, the time will be about 17 minutes from Washington Airport to Burke Airport, on a through 4-lane highway, with cloverleaf intersections, and no city traffic and no traffic lights.

I wish to reserve the remainder of my time, because I know the able Senators who oppose our position desire to state their case on the need for a second Washington airport.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, first I wish to compliment the Senator from Oklahoma upon making such a good case out of a situation which I think is not a strong case for the immediate beginning of the construction of Burke Airport.

There must be two sides to the case, because in a committee consisting of 23 Senators—I do not believe all of them were present, but most of them were—when the vote was taken, there were only 3 votes in favor of an immediate beginning of construction at Burke, and the rest of the members of the Committee on Appropriations all felt that it was unwise for that step to be taken, and those Senators voted against it.

The pleadings of my eloquent friend would make it appear that when we make possible the beginning of construction by setting up an appropriation, our troubles will all be over. The contrary, of course, is true, because the construction time of the new airport, if and when one is constructed, will be between 3 and 4 years. In that period of time, with flight conditions as they are at National Airport, there will certainly have to be made a bona fide tryout of the alternatives which exist.

The principal objection to the making of an appropriation now is that there has been a completely recalcitrant attitude manifested on the part of the CAB and on the part of the commercial air carriers toward trying out or making any serious attempt to test the alternatives which are offered.

Mr. President, there are several alternatives. Let me mention what they are. One of them is to move the MATS terminal from the National Airport where it is now. In the last 2 years the Senate Committee on Appropriations has strongly recommended that course. Up to this good hour the recommendations have been disregarded. There has been no effort made on the part of anyone to obtain the degree of relief, whatever it would be, that would be occasioned by the moving of MATS. It is said that MATS will move, but it just never moves.

I realize perfectly well that it is not a complete answer to the problem, because MATS handles only 3 to 4 percent of the flights at National Airport; but I also know MATS has a very large part of the space at the airport. I know, according to reports made to us, there is only one less plane being kept in the MATS terminal now than was the case a year ago. There is one alternative in which there has been no effort at all to comply with the recommendations of the Appropriations Committee in order to see what was the best use to be made of the National Airport.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HOLLAND. I shall be glad to yield to the Senator from Tennessee after I have completed my statement on the alternatives.

The second alternative is to try out Andrews Field. At the hearings we were told that as between Andrews and Burke, Andrews is now well equipped, flying would be more secure, and flight arrangements would be better. Even after Burke is built, if it is built, flying conditions are such that that statement would be true. Andrews is closer to Washington.

Mr. President, there seems to be a completely recalcitrant attitude with reference to this alternative. There has been no effort to work out a joint operation, nor has there been an exploration made of the matter of taking over Andrews Field. It is said that there is a great deal of construction which is not readily adapted to commercial air use, such as some of the buildings. That might well be the case, but certainly this alternative deserves a reasonable tryout.

Mr. President, which is it most necessitous to have nearby—and I listened with great sympathy to the pleadings of my friend from Oklahoma—the facilities which are serving the National Capital, or the facilities which are serving the men and officers of the Air Force, who have to be stationed in this general area, but not necessarily in that particular place or anywhere near that place?

Another alternative is to move Bolling Field and Anacostia Field. That has been suggested, and nothing has been done in that direction. The flying at Bolling Field could easily be absorbed at Andrews Field, as everybody admits. Yet there has been no effort to comply with the suggestions of the Appropriations Committee in this regard.

The last of the alternatives, which has already been mentioned by my distinguished friend from Oklahoma, is the use of Friendship Airfield, which is not at Baltimore, but which is between Washington and Baltimore, closer, of course, to Baltimore than to Washington. It is a well constructed airport, which can be used.

One or several of the alternatives would have to be used if construction at Burke started tomorrow. The Senator from Oklahoma knows that. The Committee on Appropriations feels it is within its rights, and the Senate is within its rights, to know how these alternatives, or any grouping of them, would work out before we are called upon to embark on the expenditure of $50 million of Federal funds for the construction of a second airport to serve the Nation's Capital, which is already served by an airport, the National Airport, which has cost, up to date $25½ million.

Mr. President, more people are being served than just people who come to Washington on Federal business. I checked the census figures and found that over 400,000 people live in the suburbs on the Virginia side of the river, and 600,000, or maybe a few more, people live in the suburbs on the Maryland side of the river. Is it proposed actually to serve those more than 1 million people who do not reside in the District of Columbia, and many of whom are not here on Capital business, without having the cities or local units of government put up a single dime in the construction of that airport?

I call attention to the fact that in my State, when the city of Tampa, with a population of about 300,000, or when the city of Jacksonville, with a little larger population, gets ready to have air transport facilities, they put up very heavily out of local funds in order to get some service. The city of Miami, whose population is roughly comparable to the residents in the suburbs on the Maryland side of the Capital, has spent many millions of dollars in recent years in equipping itself to handle air traffic at the Miami Airport.

Mr. President, I make this point in passing. Shall we take the position that all of the air transportation facilities at the National Airport, which serve more people who live outside the capital than it does those who live inside, shall be paid for, 100 cents on the dollar, by the Federal Government? Is that what Senators seriously request? It seems to me that that is something which will make the Senate realize that the Appropriations Committee had serious matters before it when it decided it should not vote to make an appropriation for $34 million and put it in this bill, and commit ourselves to a $50 million expenditure on the slight acquaintance we had with the subject matter.

To come to the next point, with reference to Friendship, I was amused by my distinguished friend's able presentation of the difficulties of reaching Washington from Friendship. Fortunately, that matter has been very thoroughly explored by all those who are interested in not going to Friendship. We find from the testimony of General Arnold, who is head of the Air Transport Association, composed of all the commercial airlines, that it was 48 minutes from the Friendship Airport to the Statler Hotel, whereas it was 31 minutes from the Burke Airport to the Statler Hotel.

In other words, there was a difference of 17 minutes in travel time. Yet the Senator seems to believe that the 17 minutes difference for those coming into the heart of Washington—which would not be that difference at all for the people living in the great area of Maryland who use the airport, where over 600,000 people live—is enough to justify giving our approval to the beginning of a $50 million airport construction program, without giving it any real serious study.

The CAA also made a study of the distances involved both by mileage and by time. I have the report of the CAA in my hands, and it shows that the run from the Statler Hotel to the Burke terminal was 32 minutes and 30 seconds, and it was 32 minutes and 30 seconds from Burke to the Statler Hotel. Apparently everybody starts and ends at the Statler Hotel, which I suppose is a good central spot in the city of Wshington. But 32 minutes and 30 seconds is the running time, the CAA found, in both directions; whereas in the case of Friendship Airport, the time was 47 minutes and 30 seconds, or 15 minutes difference by their calculations as compared to the 17 minutes difference reported by General Arnold.

Mr. President, the average of those two is approximately 16 minutes. Even if the difference were 17 minutes, and if everyone were traveling to the part of the city of Washington which is represented by the location of the Statler Hotel, can we say we are justified in embarking on a $50 million expenditure without further studying the matter? The answer of all but 3 members of the Appropriations Committee was "no"; and they believe that a special subcommittee should be appointed to study this matter and to report between now and January 15.

Incidentally, Mr. President, Burke Airport, if begun at once, would require between 3 and 4 years for completion, as I know the Senator from Oklahoma will agree, because everyone gives us the same information on that point.

Why is there such unwillingness to try out these alternatives? I have not been able to find an answer to that question, so I shall supply one myself. I think the answer is that those who oppose the alternatives are afraid they will work; they are afraid people will not find it too much of a burden to travel 15, 16, or 17 minutes longer in order to reach the Statler Hotel, and a lesser period of time in order to reach the area where 600,000 people now live, and to which a great many of the travelers will be going.

Friendship Airport is constructed, completed, and functioning. I think it must be used in connection with this situation, before there is any real trial of the alternatives. After all, 47 minutes is considerably less time than is required to go into some of the key cities of the Nation from the airports which serve them. Every Senator knows that, and that testimony was heard by our Appropriations Committee.

Mr. President, there is one other matter which I think should be called to the attention of the Senate. Not only are all 4 Senators from the 2 States affected by this matter strongly opposed to so precipitous a way of going into the matter, but, in addition, the Members of the House of Representatives who represent the various districts affected are likewise opposed to it. What is much more important than even that, Mr. President, is the fact that the public unit of government in the area where this large airport would be located, if constructed at Burke, is very strongly opposed to it. I was shocked when I found that out at our Appropriation Committee meeting. I questioned the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY] about this matter. His reply gave us the information that in the supposedly extensive hearings given to this matter last year by a subcommittee of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, the subcommittee did not hear the representatives of the local government at Burke or the representatives of the local government in Fairfax County.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield?

Mr. HOLLAND. Not at this time.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Will the Senator from Florida yield 1 minute to me?

Mr. HOLLAND. Not at this time, Mr. President.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield half of a minute to me?

Mr. HOLLAND. I promised to yield first to the Senator from Tennessee. However, inasmuch as he has left the Chamber, I yield to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I merely wish to say that everyone was invited to testify.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, we had before us the chairman of the Board of Supervisors of Fairfax County. He said he was not notified of, nor invited to attend, the hearing. I am very sure that my distinguished friend, the Senator from Washington, means that the general public was invited; but that does not mean that any particular governmental agency felt it was summoned.

Mr. MAGNUSON. We do not send out engraved invitations.

Mr. HOLLAND. Let me say that the Appropriations Committee did not send out engraved invitations. We only asked our staff to call on the telephone the representatives of the various units of government, and let them understand that we were interested in knowing what their point of view was.

Mr. MAGNUSON. We did the same thing.

Mr. HOLLAND. But apparently that was not done in the case of the subcommittee headed by my distinguished friend, the Senator from Oklahoma, because the chairman of the Board of Supervisors of Fairfax County specifically stated that they were not notified of the meeting and were not asked to attend it; and the Senator from Oklahoma advised the Appropriations Committee that he did not feel it was necessary to hear or to invite them, because he thought that question had been determined in 1950, 6 years ago.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LAIRD in the chair). Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. HOLLAND. I yield.

Mr. BUTLER. That was precisely one of the points made before the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, especially in view of the fact that the legislation provides that the Secretary of Commerce shall consult the local people. But he did not do so, and the committee also ignored them.

Mr. HOLLAND. At any rate, the Appropriations Committee has no great feeling in this matter. I think 1 of the 4 Senators who represent the 2 States affected is a member of that committee, and I do not remember that he was highly vocal in his protests on the matter. The other 22 members of the committee are trying to be completely objective in my opinion.

I think I do about as much flying as do most other Senators. I certainly value safety. I call attention to the fact that the Senate subcommittee which I head reported to the full committee, and it reported to the Senate, and the Senate adopted the full appropriation request in the regular budget—namely, $40 million—to improve air navigation facilities, although the House of Representatives had voted a lesser amount; and in the conference we insisted on the larger amount, and obtained the appropriation of the $40 million item.

I also call attention to the fact that the bill now before the Senate provides $68 million more for the Civil Aeronautics Authority, occasioned by the fact that the President thought we could hasten the 5-year program we had adopted. We are working with all speed, and in every way we know how, to improve quickly the flight-control facilities of the Nation, in the interest of the security, speed, safety, and convenience of those who travel, as well as of those who operate the airplanes.

But, Mr. President, when we find that the committee which has last gone into the matter, and which has insisted on the taking of immediate action, did not even hear local officials; and when the chairman of the subcommittee, able and distinguished as he is, states to our Appropriations Committee that he did not feel it was necessary to call on the local officials again, because he thought the matter had been decided in 1950, that illustrates the fact that there is something left to be done by an Appropriations Committee which acts at the time when the money is requested and is about to be appropriated.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield at this point, inasmuch as he has mentioned my name?

Mr. HOLLAND. I yield.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. President, I do not wish to interrupt the Senator's train of thought.

However, I should like to say that as a result of the congressional authorization, $1 million has already been spent in acquiring land in that particular area. Under those circumstances, is it necessary that every new county commissioner be called before the congressional committee, to veto the technical decisions of the Civil Aeronautics Administration officials who have studied the location of the necessary airport? Are we a National Congress, or are we a coequal body with the Board of County Supervisors of Fairfax County a majority of whose residents—according to the poll of all registered voters there, as taken by the Member of Congress from that district—already have shown that they favor the Burke site for the airport?

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, evidently the answer is that the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma thought it was not necessary to advise the local supervisors, because he did not advise them, and they were not heard. But they were very glad to have an opportunity to appear before the Appropriations Committee. They told us that since the decision was made in 1950, the then slightly developed area in that part of their county, which had been chosen for the location of the airport—I believe the name of it is Springfield—has greatly increased in population and that the impact of this airfield, if constructed at Burke, upon that area, as it now exists, would be a completely different thing from that which would have prevailed in 1950.

I do not think those of us who serve on the Appropriations Committee need apologize for our willingness to hear citizens who are adversely affected, and who are affected at this time in a way very different from the way in which they would have been affected 6 years ago, at the time when the authorization measure was passed. On the contrary, I think the Appropriations Committee is entitled to be complimented, and I think it is entitled to have an expression of confidence from the Senate, because it insists that the few months from now until January shall be devoted to two things: First, to exploring the situation at Burke more fully than it has been explored since 1950; second, to insist—and I want to use that word again—that those who are in authority throw aside their recalcitrance and try out the alternatives, so that we may know from actual operation what relief can be obtained from them.

I repeat that to me the blind spot in the whole situation has been why the CAB and the airlines are unwilling to try out alternatives which exist, and which they have been directed by the Appropriations Committees of the Senate and House to try out in the past 2 years. Is it not a very reasonable answer to suggest that they are afraid those alternatives will work well, and will therefore obviate the necessity of this construction?

I shall not argue the question in greater detail. The Senator from Oklahoma knows that I am as much interested in aviation as is he or any other Member of this body. I suspect that my very intimate connection with aviation goes back further than that of any other Member of this body, unless it be the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. THYE], who was also a flyer in World War I.

Always I have had an interest in aviation. Always I have been willing to fight for security in the air, and for greater expansion of aviation. But I think we are entitled to consider also the welfare of the Nation and the funds of the Nation. To put $50 million into a second airport without asking for a dime's contribution by the areas affected, and without trying to utilize facilities already in existence, one of which, an excellent facility, was supplied by a part of the area to be served, I think is unreasonable. I do not think it is right. I do not think it is an observance of the obligation under which we rest with reference to our people and our Nation.

I see the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. GORE] has returned to the Chamber. I am very glad to yield to him at this time. I looked for him a moment ago, and he had stepped out of the Chamber.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, at the time I requested the Senator to yield I thought he had suggested that if MATS would move its terminal, the National Airport facility might be adequate.

Mr. HOLLAND. No. I did not make that suggestion. I said that that was one of the things which could be done, which would alleviate the situation to some degree. After the Senator stepped from the Chamber, I think I stated that the total volume of flights out of MATS was 3 or 4 percent of the total volume of flights from the airport. So that would not afford any permanent relief, but it would afford that degree of relief, and it would afford the availability of a great deal of space now being used by MATS.

To justify my position, and the position of the Senate Appropriations Committee, I used that fact, along with the fact that Bolling could easily be moved to Andrews; the fact that Anacostia is not functioning with any great degree of activity; the fact that Andrews was reported by the CAA to be the safest place available, even safer than Burke; the fact that Friendship is available, paid for largely by local funds; the fact that the driving time from Burke to the Statler, as compared with the driving time from Friendship to the Statler, represents a difference of only 16 or 17 minutes; the fact that a great many of the people coming into Friendship or National, or Burke, would not be coming to Washington, but would be coming to the areas in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties in Maryland, where between 600,000 and 700,000 people live, or to areas in Arlington, Alexandria, Fairfax, Loudoun County, and the city of Falls Church, where more than 400,000 people live. I think we are entitled to a fair trial of the alternative facilities before we embark upon the expenditure of not less than $50 million, the estimated cost of the Burke Airport. If we embark upon it, we shall be committed to it.

The distinguished Senator from Tennessee is known for his fine sense of economy and practicability. He will realize that the problem cannot be solved in a shorter time than 3 or 4 years, even if Burke Airport is begun tomorrow. We must make a trial of some of the alternatives. The Senator from Florida has asked over and over again why the unwillingness on the part of the CAB and flying groups to try the alternatives. Is it possible that they are afraid they would work out well? Is that the reason why they are pleading with the voices of angels for an expenditure of $50 million out of the Federal coffers for the supplying of a second great airport facility?

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I am sorry that I was called to the telephone and did not hear a part of the Senator's remarks. I had wondered if he intended to infer that moving the MATS terminal facilities of the National Airport would in any way better the situation to the extent that jet traffic could come in. The Senator has answered that.

Mr. HOLLAND. Jet traffic can use either Friendship or Andrews.

Mr. GORE. I appreciate the Senator's compliment as to the concern of the junior Senator from Tennessee with economy. I hope to merit his generous remarks.

I must say that I am more concerned with the danger of air traffic and the possibility of a tragic crash at the National Airport than I am with the comparatively small amount necessary to provide an adequate airport. I will not call it a small amount. I think it is necessary that the National Capital have an adequate airport, but it seems to me the sooner we get started, the better.

I should like to go one step further. More than once the Senator has referred to the fact that the people who live in the Montgomery area of the metropolitan center are large users of the airport. I dare say that is true; but does not the Senator concede that the great and overwhelming bulk of the air traffic into Washington consists of people from all over the United States who are coming to Washington, not to go to their homes in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, but for the transaction of business with the Government?

Mr. HOLLAND. I am sure that the majority of the people come for that purpose; yet I invite the Senator's attention to the fact that today the Washington newspapers were rejoicing over the fact that more than 5 million tourists are coming to the Capital this year. I invite the Senator's attention to the fact that Washington has become a great convention center. People are coming here by the tens of thousands to attend conventions, for sightseeing, and for all kinds of visitation.

I invite the Senator's attention to the fact that there is enough business in serving the more than 1 million people who live outside the city of Washington, but who are a part of the metropolitan area, to require what would be considered very elaborate facilities in the Senator's State in an area of that size, or in my State in an area of that size.

I wonder why we have completely forgotten the fact that service is rendered to those people.

It is proposed to make an enormous expenditure without taking a survey of the situation. None was possible, except a cursory one, during 1 day of hearings before the Appropriations Committee. What are the facts today? The authorization took place in 1950. The very maps shown to us by the supervisors of Fairfax County showed a phenomenal growth. The impact upon that area is much more severe than could possibly have been the case with respect to the airport which was planned in 1950.

There is more to this than meets the eye. One thing I wish to say to the Senator may comfort him greatly, and it is this: There is no way, by wishful thinking or by appropriation, whereby we can create overnight a second airport. However, there are ways for us, by our direction and insistence, to have a trial run of the alternative facilities which are available. For some reason or other, there has been complete unwillingness to try them out. They would have to be tried out during the term of construction, if we should decide to build and do proceed to build a second air terminal. To save my soul, Mr. President, I cannot understand how the distinguished Senator from Tennessee or any other Senator cannot feel that we are entitled to have a trial run of the alternative facilities before we are called upon to take this plunge, particularly when we are asked to take it in almost a twinkling of an eye, because the supplemental budget estimate comes to us within only a few days of the end of the session, and because it is a request to appropriate $34 million as a beginning on what is estimated to cost $50 million. My experience with estimates of that kind indicates to me that the final figure is apt to be a great deal more.

I was nonplused to find—and I am sure other members of the Committee on Appropriations were also—that no effort was made to replace 9 miles of roads in Fairfax County, in the Springfield area, which would be displaced by the building of the airport at Burke.

We asked CAA, "Have you figured that in?" They said, "No; we haven't got around to that."

Does the distinguished Senator feel it is fair, without even making any effort to find out how much it will cost the community to replace its highways, and without finding out whether it is fair for us to pay any part of it and, if so, what part, for us to embark on a transaction which is likely to cost at least $50 million, according to the cost estimates alone?

The Senator from Florida does not think it is fair or prudent.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HOLLAND. I yield.

Mr. GORE. Is it fair to conclude from the able Senator's remarks that he does favor the Capital of the United States, the city of Washington, having an airport adequate to serve the needs of the Nation and the Nation's Capital?

Mr. HOLLAND. I certainly favor having not only an adequate but a splendid airport, and adequate and splendid airport facilities to serve air traffic into the city of Washington.

I have just as much concern in that regard as my distinguished friends who are on the legislative committee which handled the proposed legislation. It seems to me, though, that we have a right, and should, consider the other implications which I have mentioned so briefly. When there are alternatives available, at least 2 of which are safer and 1 of which is closer, it seems to me that we are entitled to have a trial run of those alternatives before we embark upon this costly venture.

Mr. BUTLER addressed the Chair.

Mr. HOLLAND. I yield to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. BUTLER. I should like to have the floor in my own right.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President——

Mr. HOLLAND. I yield to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. MAGNUSON. I should like to address the Senate for about 5 minutes.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HOLLAND. I yield.

Mr. MONRONEY. The distinguished Senator from Florida referred to trial runs. Is he proposing to intermix civilian aircraft with military jet fighter planes at Andrews Airport?

Mr. HOLLAND. That is one of the alternatives. Either the Department of Commerce or the CAB—I forget which, and perhaps it was both—reported to us that the size of the field at Andrews is so great and the partial use now is so small that for many years in the future a joint use of the facilities by the overflow from the National Airport on that field and by the Air Force is not only possible but quite safe.

Mr. MONRONEY. Apparently the Senator did not avail himself of our hearings or pay any attention to what the Air Force has told our committee. We have been informed that it was near capacity in military use alone, and that to intermix civilian planes with military jets would endanger the lives of the military pilots, let alone the civilian pilots and passengers; and that they intended to come to us very shortly to ask for money with which to build a second runway, to take care of their military traffic. I may say to my distinguished friend from Florida that we must also consider the cost involved. Does the Senator know the cost of readying this so-called easy alternative at Andrews? Does he know the estimate that has been made in that connection?

Mr. HOLLAND. A figure was given to us.

Mr. MONRONEY. It is $30 million.

Mr. HOLLAND. I do not recall the exact figure, but the fact remains that the responsible agencies of our Government told our committee that there was a large amount of room still available at Andrews Field, and enough to give joint occupancy safely for some years in the future.

In addition to that, they told us that Friendship would serve safely this overflow of traffic at National Airport for a long period of time ahead.

I have already stated to the Senator, in spite of his humorous treatment of the time factor, what was reported to us, and what is shown in the RECORD, not only by the Air Transport Association, whose witness was General Arnold, but also by CAA, as to the probable time factor so far as Friendship Airport is concerned.

I am unable to accede at all to the statement of the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma that here is something that is so ridiculous that the people will not use that airport. The fact of the matter is that they are using the airports at Detroit, at New York, at Los Angeles, and at other places, well known to the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma, which require greater time to reach than is the case with Friendship.

Mr. MONRONEY. Would the Senator clarify the alternative he is asking us to use? Does he propose to intermix military jet aircraft with civilian aircraft through joint use of Andrews? Either we must accept joint use under the Senator's proposal, or we must rule it out. It would be helpful, therefore, to the people of this country, particularly those who anticipate flying to Washington, to know whether they are to land at Andrews in a jet blast behind some hot fighter pilot coming into the air pattern at perhaps 400 miles an hour, alongside of a lumbering DC–3 or DC–4.

Mr. HOLLAND. That is one of several alternatives that ought to be explored. Some of them ought to be in action right now. There has been no showing of any disposition whatever on the part of either the commercial airlines or the official agencies of the Government to try any of those alternatives. They do not want to try them out until we are committed to Burke and the actual work is under way. That is putting the cart before the horse.

Mr. MONRONEY. How much does the Senator want to spend for intermixing civilian and military air traffic? Is it $30 million? We could get a new airport, properly engineered, for $50 million.

Mr. HOLLAND. The distinguished Senator from Oklahoma overlooks one thing which the Senator from Florida has stated. We have had only a very few days to look into the subject. We were surprised to find that the Senator's committee had not given the local agencies of Government an opportunity to be heard. We were surprised to learn that CAA had not figured in the cost the replacement of 9 miles of highways in Fairfax County which would be knocked out by the construction of the airport. We found that the Department of Commerce had only recently suggested use of Friendship, and that no such use has been made. We were told, on the day that we were sitting in committee, that CAB was hearing them on the matter. We are hopeful that CAB may at long last get a move on, so to speak, and do something about it.

Mr. MONRONEY. We have been hoping for some action for 18 months, while the condition has been getting worse and worse.

Mr. HOLLAND. The action which the Senator from Oklahoma proposes will not do anything for us until 3 or 4 years from now. The action which we propose will do something beginning the very day that the alternatives are tried. The members of the Committee on Appropriations, with three exceptions, took the position that we were entitled to know where we were stepping before we stepped, and that we were entitled to some cooperation from those whom the Federal Government serves in this matter, and that we were entitled to know whether any one of those alternatives, or any admixture of them, could be used satisfactorily. We were utterly at a loss to understand why those who were such great beneficiaries of Government largess were unwilling to cooperate to the small degree that we had asked.

Mr. MONRONEY. Will the Senator yield on that point? I would like to say something on that point.

Mr. HOLLAND. I shall be glad to yield in a moment, but not right now. The Senator from Oklahoma does not serve, as I do, as chairman of the subcommittee which provides for paying out subsidies to airlines. Last year we were asked for approximately $60 million for subsidies to the airlines. We cut it down. My recollection is that we cut it down to an appropriation of about $54½ million.

This year the amount was greatly reduced from that, but we were told when we reduced it that next year it would go up again in the neighborhood of between $30 million and $40 million.

In addition to that, Mr. President, there is a great demand for air navigation facilities and airport grants, with joint contributions, to a total which I am not able to state, because I have not refreshed my mind on it today, but it is well over $200 million a year. It seemed to me and to other members of the Appropriations Committee, with three exceptions, that we were entitled to have a modicum of cooperation from these people who are getting such handsome treatment.

Mr. MONRONEY. Does not the Senator know that the State of Florida, which he so ably represents, received $151 million of Federal money to build airports, without 1 dime from the State of Florida?

When those airports are put into operation, all of the revenues derived therefrom remain in the State of Florida. The Miami Airport received $6,700,000 of Federal funds, and all the revenues coming from automobile rentals, orange-juice stands, and so forth stay in the city of Miami.

Every 48 hours $15,000 from the Washington National Airport goes into the Federal Treasury. Over $17 million has been paid into the Federal Treasury. If it belonged to the city of Miami, none of the money would go into the Treasury. If it was in the State of Virginia, none of the money would go into the Treasury. The Federal Government gave away $1,349 million without a penny coming back, and now, when Washington needs an airport, the Senator from Florida feels that we are handing out largesse. I did not hear any speeches from the Senator from Florida when Florida received money for airports.

Mr. HOLLAND. Unfortunately, the Senator from Oklahoma does not know the location of those airports as I do. I have been to every one of them. We had 126 of them during the war. Perhaps 8 or 10, or, let us say, a dozen are in a position where they can serve important commercial uses. The majority of them are now in tiny villages, or away out in the country, where they cannot serve anyone. I remember not long ago asking officials whether there was any possible use that could be made of an airport at a certain point, and I was told, "No. Dig up the concrete and put the land back into pasture."

I am glad the Senator from Oklahoma went further and quoted into the RECORD that the donation to the Miami Airport was between 6 and 7 million dollars. My recollection is that the total investment there was somewhere between 30 and 50 million dollars, which indicates rather clearly that the Miami people have been doing something for themselves. The Senator will find that to be true every place in our progressive State, as I am sure it is in his State. But the point is whether we should spend our money prudently, whether we should get cooperation from those who have been so greatly benefited out of the public till. I am for them. I have voted for appropriations for them. I have voted for more than a great many other Members of the Senate thought I should vote, so I am not willing to assume the reputation of being parsimonious. But I think we are entitled to be prudent and entitled to know what we are doing. I think we have not been treated fairly by those in authority and those in the commercial business in their unwillingness to try out any of the alternatives available. Until they do, I shall maintain my position.

CLERK HIRE OF MEMBERS OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House bill 12354.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated by title for the information of the Senate.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 12354) relating to clerk hire of Members of the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MRS. WARREN D. COOPER AND HER SON, TEDDY DEVERE COOPER

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House Concurrent Resolution 269.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The concurrent resolution will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK read the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 269) as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That in the enrollment of the bill (H. R. 8008) for the relief of Mrs. Warren D. Cooper and her son, Teddy Devere Cooper, the Clerk of the House is authorized and directed to make the following correction:

On page 2, line 1, of the House engrossed bill, strike out the date "September 2, 1934" and insert "September 23, 1934."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the immediate consideration of the concurrent resolution?

There being no objection, the concurrent resolution was considered and agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Maurer, its reading clerk, returned to the Senate, in compliance with its request, the bill (H. R. 9591) to amend the act of August 31, 1954 (68 Stat. 1037), relating to the acquisition of non-Federal land within the existing boundaries of any national park, and for other purposes.

The message announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to each of the following bills of the House:

H. R. 1420. An act for the relief of Mr. and Mrs. Herman E. Mosley, as natural parents of Herman E. Mosley, Jr.; and

H. R. 11207. An act for the relief of Cyrus B. Follmer.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to each of the following bills of the House:

H. R. 3062. An act for the relief of Paul H. Sarvis, Sr.; and

H. R. 7855. An act to amend the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949, as amended, to extend until June 30, 1956, the period during which disposals of surplus property may be made by negotiation.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 3903) to amend the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, so as to increase the amount authorized to be appropriated for purposes of title I of the act, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11544) to improve and simplify the credit facilities available to farmers, to amend the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8750) to amend the Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention Act.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 1637) for the relief of Sam H. Ray.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to a concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 269) authorizing the Clerk of the House to correct an enrolled bill, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS BILL, 1957

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12350) making supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1957, and for other purposes.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. BUTLER. Who has the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida has the floor.

Mr. BUTLER. I thought I had been recognized.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, we have all kinds of time on this issue. I should like to take about 5 minutes. I know the Senator from Maryland [Mr. BUTLER] has a great deal to say.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I left here about an hour and a half ago——

Mr. MAGNUSON. I have not said a word.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. I know the Senator has not.

Mr. President, I wonder if we could have an agreement on this Burke Airport issue. We do not wish the whole Congress to be brought to a standstill.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may yield to the distinguished Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON] for 5 minutes without losing the floor.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida permit me to propound a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. HOLLAND. Gladly.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I wonder if we can have a unanimous-consent agreement limiting the debate on the Burke Airport question to 30 minutes to each side.

Mr. HOLLAND. No, Mr. President. I am sorry, but my distinguished friend from Virginia [Mr. ROBERTSON], his colleague [Mr. BYRD], and the distinguished Senator from Maryland [Mr. BUTLER] wish to speak.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I should like to inquire——

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, I may say to my distinguished friend from Illinois, who I know is so warmly devoted to the cause of economy and prudence in appropriations, that we are trying to insist that the Senate be cautious and that it be prudent. We are trying to let the Senate understand why all members of the 23-man committee, except 3, voted against the appropriation for Burke Airport, and we think the Senators most directly affected may know the subject better than the Senator from Florida does. They may know it better than the Senator from Illinois does.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield?

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Texas.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, before I went to a meeting with the Speaker and the minority leader of the House I talked to the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. BUTLER], and the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY] and told them of the many conference reports pending and the other important business before the Senate. I realize that this is a controversial question. I asked them if they felt that 30 minutes to a side would be agreeable, and they told me they did. There are some 6 or 8 conference reports pending. There are 2 or 3 bills pending. We hope Congress can adjourn this weekend. I am hopeful that the Senator from Maryland and the Senator from Florida will permit us to have a vote on the question within a reasonable length of time after each Senator has had an opportunity to express himself. I hope we shall not have to stay here all evening to get a situation like the Burke Airport settled, and that we can vote and send the bill to conference.

Mr. HOLLAND. I could not agree more thoroughly with my friend, the distinguised majority leader, but one of the duties I perform in the Senate is as chairman of the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations which has been assigned the duty of studying this subject matter, of bringing it to the attention of the Senate, and of making a report on January 15. It seems to me that a beginning of that duty might well be the acceding to the request of the four Senators most affected, none of whom has opened his mouth as yet.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. The junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. BEALL] tells me he would like to have about 3 minutes.

How long would the Senator from Virginia like to have in order to express his views?

Mr. BYRD. About 5 minutes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. How long would the senior Senator from Maryland like to have?

Mr. BUTLER. I do not know; I may speak at length.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Earlier in the evening I understood the Senator would be agreeable to 30 minutes. That was about an hour and a half ago.

Mr. BUTLER. I feel that my remarks will be brief.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. I have been in sympathy with the Senator's position, but I think we ought not to allow the Burke Airport to stand in the way of the consideration of the customs simplification and the social security conference reports.

Mr. BUTLER. I do not think we ought to let the customs simplification bill interfere with the proposed expenditure of $60 million of the taxpayers' money.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I hope the time for this discussion is not being taken from my time.

Mr. BUTLER. I shall not take more than 5 or 10 minutes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the proponents may have 30 minutes and the opponents may have 30 minutes in order to discuss the situation. At the end of that time the absence of a quorum will be suggested, the yeas and nays will be requested, and we can come to a vote.

Mr. HOLLAND. I object. I may say to my distinguished friend that as soon as the Senators whom he has mentioned have been heard, I shall be perfectly willing to enter into a unanimous-consent agreement. I had hoped a vote could have been reached by this time. I certainly have no disposition to hold up action on the amendment any longer, but I shall not give my consent to a unanimous-consent agreement until Senators who have a major interest in the matter have had at least some opportunity to be heard.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Each of the Senators concerned is present. Each has told me how long he would like to have. I have included twice as much time as they need.

Mr. HOLLAND. I understand that; but I also understand that the Senator from Florida has been given the duty of trying to bring before the Senate the meaning of this matter. He thinks that one important step in that direction would be to allow his four friends at least an opportunity to make their speeches.

I have heard Senators start on a 5-minute speech and suddenly look at the clock an hour later and wonder what had happened to the 5 minutes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. I remind the Senator that there are pending several conference reports and if we follow the pattern he has just mentioned, we shall be here double the length of time we had anticipated.

In view of the statements by the Senator from Maryland and the Senator from Virginia that each will not take more than 5 or 10 minutes, could we not reach some agreement?

Mr. HOLLAND. I shall be happy to agree to a time limitation when each of those Senators has had a chance to be heard.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. In view of the attitude of the Senator from Florida; in view of the fact that there are at the desk conference reports on farm measures, customs simplification, and other matters; and in view of the fact that the Senator from Virginia has told me he must leave tomorrow afternoon, and I am trying to accommodate him also, I hope Senators will make their statements brief in order that an agreement can be reached as early as possible.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Texas yield, in order that we may ask for the yeas and nays?

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida has the floor.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Mr. President, I shall adhere to the admonition of the majority leader to be very brief on this matter. I think there is probably too much controversy about it.

I desire to correct the RECORD a little. I am certain that no Senator would wish to make a deliberate misstatement of the facts, but this has been a long-continuing matter, particularly in the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. So many things have occurred in this controversy that no one could be accurately informed about the facts, chronologically or otherwise.

In 1950, even then being cognizant of the fact that a second airport, or second airport facility, was needed in Washington, because of the increase of air traffic, a bill was passed authorizing the Secretary of Commerce to select a site. The Senator from Maryland will recall that.

The Secretary of Commerce was directed to use all the technical assistance and know-how and to scour the area to determine what could be done, even if it were necessary to remove the MATS terminal.

He was directed to ascertain whether there could be a military pool. In short, he was asked to come up with something. In any event, a second air facility was needed.

Six years went by. Hearing after hearing was held on the matter.

I am certain the Senator from Florida will agree with me that anyone from Fairfax County who wanted to testify could have come forward and done so. Is there a newspaper in Fairfax County? I suppose there is. At any rate, I am certain there were notices that public hearings would be held, and that the committee would hear anyone who wanted to testify.

I have discussed the matter with the Senators from Maryland and Virginia on many occasions. It is a very difficult situation for them; I know that. There are some persons who favor the proposed airport, and some who do not. It is pretty hard to satisfy both sides.

But what we should remember is that a second facility is needed for the Washington area. The Washington National Airport cannot be enlarged to take care of planes which will be flying in the jet age, which is even now closer than my friend from Oklahoma says it is. So we must do something.

We cannot take over Bolling, because the amount of airspace is the same over that area. If someone could figure out a way to get the military out of Andrews Field he would be a magician.

In the same bill we have appropriated money for new facilities and a new administration building in the military airports, to enlarge them and keep them where they are. So we are down to that point.

I am sure the Senator from Oklahoma and I are not concerned whether the proposed new airport shall be built at Burke or somewhere else. If Friendship had been designated, I would have been just as favorable to that. But after all this time, the Department finally made its report to the committee. I agree with the Senator from Florida when he says the Department has been dragging its heels.

I do not know how many communications, telephone calls, and hearings we have had with the Department of Commerce, urging them to get on with this matter. Nothing happened.

There was a proposal made that there be a compact between the States of Maryland and Virginia and the District of Columbia with respect to a second airport. But we know that the States would not have gotten together to make such a compact, because, fundamentally, not only do we believe there should be a second airport, but we believe that it is the responsibility of the Federal Government to construct it.

I should think that more than 85 percent of the traffic coming into and going out of Washington is either on Government business or is comprised of the citizens coming to the Nation's Capital, whether they be tourists or not. It is the responsibility of the Federal Government to provide a good airport.

That is the story. Everyone had a chance to be heard. I think I have talked to 200 persons from the area in question who have come to see me personally about the matter because I happen to be chairman of the committee. I think they had a right to be heard. As a matter of fact, the authorization bill provided that the committee should hear from the local interests. Whether the one supervisor who appeared before the Committee on Appropriations is new or not, I do not know. But surely in the 6 years which have elapsed everyone concerned has had an opportunity to be heard.

Finally, after considering all these matters, engineeringwise, landwise, land-taking-wise, and taking into consideration the air space, which is becoming a real problem, although not so much as the problem landwise, the Department of Commerce has said that Burke is the logical place to build the airport.

So I said, "Well, thank the Lord you have made the decision. So I am going to stick with it." I want to be frank with my friend from Florida. I do not know that a period of 3 or 4 months is going to be too serious in this matter. I must admit a good point has been made. I voted against the appropriation because I had been impatient with the inability of the persons concerned to make a decision. When they finally did make a decision, I said, "I will stick by you." That is the position of the Senator from Oklahoma. He has no other interest in the matter. But the fact is that we know week by week the situation is becoming worse and worse. More planes are stacked up at the Washington Airport than at any other airport in the United States, with the exception of La Guardia Airport. I am afraid something is going to happen. I am afraid that if even an attempt is made to use the alternative of mixing military with commercial operations, more serious things will happen. I know we are going to have jet planes, and I know the National Airport is not going to be sufficient. We have to do something. Everybody who operates planes—I guess that is their business—testified against Friendship. Friendship must be used as an alternative in the meantime, while we build another airport.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MAGNUSON. I yield.

Mr. HOLLAND. Does not the Senator think the Senate can act more soundly if that use takes place before the funds are appropriated than afterward?

Mr. MAGNUSON. I do not think it makes much difference, because everybody knows the capabilities of Friendship and the inherent possibilities of Friendship. Maybe the fact that Friendship is not so close technically fits into the problem. I do not know that it would serve any purpose to have any more investigations, to be honest with the Senator. The chairman of the Appriations Committee put me on the subcommittee. I have gone through the problem for 6 long years. I do not know that anybody can tell me anything that I do not already know. My friend from the State of Maryland said, "Why don't you visit Friendship? I will take you to lunch there sometime." I have been to Friendship many times. I think it is a marvelous airport. Maybe something can be done with regard to it. I do not know. But I say the Senate committee had no choice. We tried to hear all possible witnesses. We tried to do the best objective job we could do. We do know another airport facility is needed, and as soon as possible. That is all we can say. I hope the issue can be resolved. I do not know what will happen if the vote of the Senate is in the same proportion as the vote was in the Appropriations Committee.

I think the Senators from Virginia are disturbed about the matter, and logically so. Some persons living in that area want the airport there, and some do not. Yet the Senators from Virginia know we have to have this additional facility. They also do not want the financial burden to be placed on either side, because the airport is for a Federal use, and always will be.

I know the Senators from Virginia heard the evidence. To me it was repetitious. There are two sides to the question. I do not know what the Senate is going to do tonight, but we had better start on an airport facility, or something is going to happen.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MAGNUSON. I yield the floor.

Mr. HOLLAND. I want to say, as one who is on the subcommittee of five to make the quick checkup and report back January 15, I was very much pleased with all the other appointments, particularly with the fact that the chairman of the committee appointed the distinguished Senator from Washington, who has, I think, greater familiarity with the question than has anybody else, and, if I may say so, because the Senator from Virginia [Mr. ROBERTSON], who may not be considered by some to be completely impartial, was not appointed to the subcommittee. I am sure he preferred not to be appointed. In other words, the subcommittee is a completely impartial one. All we want to do is see what the facts are and see what the use of the alternatives will produce in the way of relief.

Mr. MAGNUSON. Perhaps I may commit myself a little bit tonight. After going into the whole question, I want to be honest and say that I myself do not think there are any alternatives, with one exception. Let me say this, and then I shall sit down. Senators can talk about $50 million or $30 million or $40 million for Andrews. The Senator from Maryland said it would be $60 million. I do not know, but I do know that the Federal Government is going to have to spend, and it had better do it pretty soon, at least $50 million, somewhere, to get a second airport in this area. It is going to cost that much, no matter what is done. We are not going to save any money that easily. It is going to cost us that much even to approach what is going to be needed in the air age in the next 2 or 3 years.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, I wish to congratulate the able and distinguished senior Senator from Florida [Mr. HOLLAND] for his very excellent and able presentation of the case in connection with Burke Airport. He has approached this problem with complete impartiality. He sat patiently through all the hearings before the Appropriations Committee, which overwhelmingly voted to have a subcommittee appointed, naming him as chairman, to make a study of this problem. Why did the Appropriations Committee ask for that study? It asked for it because, as the Senator from Florida has so ably said, there is something in this situation that does not meet the eye. I am not going to argue for the Friendship International Airport. I think the Senator from Florida and other Senators have very well made that case. But I do want to say to my colleagues that the most important issue, and the only real issue or principle, before the Senate, is this: Air safety.

We who have any familiarity with this question all know that the CAA, back in 1948, said that even planes of the type then in existence should not be flown in and out of airports that were closer than 16 miles apart.

Strictly from the point of air safety, if the field is located at Burke—if the Senate tonight overrides the judgment of its Appropriations Committee and accepts the amendment and makes provision for the construction of an airfield at Burke—when the airfield is completed there will be 6 major airports and 5 minor airports within a radius of approximately 12 miles.

The CAA was speaking of 1948 standards. The testimony before the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce by General Arnold, who heads the airline lobby, was that a plane could not land on the Burke Airport until at least 1961. By that time we shall have jet plane operations. If we are going hunting for a field, we better not locate the airport at Burke, Va., because we shall never get safety at Burke, Va.

We shall never obtain safety there, because the Civil Aeronautics Authority and other persons who know the facts have told us that jet aircraft or even the aircraft of the standard of 1948 cannot be operated so close together.

Further, Mr. President, it is not the duty of the Senate of the United States or any of its committees—the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce or the Appropriations Committee—to determine where this airfield shall be located, if indeed one is to be constructed. The basic law expressly states that the selection shall be made by the Secretary of Commerce, after consultation with the authorities in the locality where it is proposed to construct the airport. It is not our duty or our right to say where the airport shall be constructed Indeed, the testimony before the congressional committees has been to the effect that the Secretary of Commerce up to this very moment has not finished the engineering in connection with the Burke site. As was pointed out by the Senator from Florida, 9 miles of street have been torn up, but no provision whatever has been made for replacing it. The runways have not even been located. Nothing required for construction of the airport at Burke has been done there. I say that responsibility cannot be shifted to the Congress. It is the duty of the Secretary of Commerce, after a complete and thorough study, to make the selection.

Let me say that I enjoyed very much the speech of the Senator from Oklahoma. It was very humorous. He very adroitly referred to me as being, not a Senator from Maryland, but a Senator from Baltimore. I do not mind such a reference. He said I represent the Chamber of Commerce. Well, Mr. President, if the members of the Chamber of Commerce are individuals who pay taxes into the Treasury of the United States, I naturally represent them; and I am standing here right now defending their interest and also that of all the other taxpayers of our great Nation.

When one of the finest airports in the world is located in Maryland 30 miles away from this very spot, how can the Members of the Senate vote to have $50 million or $60 million spent for the construction of a new airport, aside from its approaches, at a location 20 miles away, in Virginia, and then go home and face their constituents, and say to them, "We have been careful of the public's money"? We simply cannot afford to spend $50 million or $60 million to save someone 15 minutes of time when he gets out of an airplane. We are not that rich, and I hope we have not gotten that arrogant.

As I have said, we have readily available, within 47 minutes of the Statler Hotel—as compared with 32 minutes from the Statler Hotel to the proposed Burke Airport—one of the finest airports in the world. It is ready and available. It will not cost the taxpayers a penny. They have already invested approximately $4 million in the Friendship Airport, and they invested it there after representations made to the congressional committees and to the Senate itself that that airport would be used in part for Washington traffic.

What is the difference between getting a ticket marked "Washington-Baltimore" and a ticket marked "Washington-Burke"?

As the Senator from Florida so ably and succinctly said, there is something in this matter that does not meet the eye. I will tell the Senate what it is. It is the airline lobby. They would not dare try the Friendship Airport. The other day I stated before the Appropriations Committee, and I state it tonight to the Senate, that the minute they try the Friendship Airport, they will find it such an excellent facility that they will not be able to have this money appropriated. That is what is wrong with this entire situation. They stubbornly refuse to try any alternative; it is easier for them to attempt to milk the public to the extent of $50 million or $60 million.

As the Senator from Florida [Mr. HOLLAND] said, and as I said the other day before the committee—and I repeat it now—if they once use Friendship Airport, they will not have anything to do with any other airport, because Friendship Airport is a splendid one. The pilots and all others who have to do with the operation of the planes say so, and say they are delighted to use Friendship Airport; and the Civil Aeronautics Authority is ready to name Friendship Airport as a coterminal.

So, Mr. President, why not provide for a period of 5 or 6 months in which to try Friendship Airport as an alternative, and thus save the taxpayers $50 million or $60 million?

In addition, how are we going to relieve the known congested condition at the Washington National Airport, by commencing the construction of an airfield which, according to the testimony of General Arnold, cannot be constructed before 1961 or 1962? How will the construction of an airport at that time relieve the present congestion? The plain truth is that it will not relieve it. The only way to relieve the congestion at the National Airport is to have the Civil Aeronautics Authority do its duty and tell the long-range flights to begin to use Friendship Airport, which is ready and available, and can be used without costing the taxpayers of the United States one penny.

Mr. President, on the basis of those facts, I say the Senate cannot in good conscience override the judgment of 20 members of its Appropriations Committee who have just completed 2 days of hearings, during which they heard numerous witnesses. The Senate simply cannot do that. Twenty members of that great committee thought there was enough to this matter to justify taking a second look at it. Only three members of the committee said, "No; we have already looked at it, and we do not wish to see any more of it." However, that takes us back again to the point made by the Senator from Florida, who pointed out that the interested people from Burke and the town councilmen were not called before the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to testify.

Those three Senators said, "No; they testified in 1950." Regardless of that, Mr. President, it was that committee's responsibility, if it was going to file a true and accurate report to hear these people before making a decision to usurp the powers of the Secretary of Commerce, by trying to tell him where to locate the airport. It is his duty, under the Act of Congress, to decide where the airport should be located.

So, Mr. President, I say we should let this matter go over until January; and we should let the appropriations subcommittee, headed by the Senator from Florida [Mr. HOLLAND], make its report, because I know there is no more thorough Member of the Senate than the Senator from Florida.

Mr. President, I ask the Senate to uphold the appropriations subcommittee, and to be patient, and to read the report of the Senator from Florida, before taking action on this matter.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I shall speak very briefly.

I should like to have my position in respect to this matter very clearly understood.

This question has been under consideration for more than 6 years. It has been debated back and forth, and back and forth again.

In my judgment, the Senator from Florida [Mr. HOLLAND] made one of the most comprehensive and effective speeches I have ever heard on the floor of the Senate. He spoke as a disinterested Senator but as one who is very deeply interested in aviation; and he spoke as chairman of the subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee. He very clearly showed the reasons why Friendship Airport should be used, instead of Burke airport.

Mr. President, some reference has been made by the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY] to the point that the Maryland Senators were speaking for the Baltimore Chamber of Commerce. I am not speaking for the Baltimore Chamber of Commerce. I am speaking against a project which it is proposed to locate in my own State at a cost of $50 million. I do so only because of my sincere conviction that that is not the right course to pursue. I do not know whether the people of Fairfax County, whom I in part represent, favor this project, as the Senator from Oklahoma indicated was shown by some referendum conducted by Representative BROYHILL. They may favor it and they may not favor it.

However, this fact is very significant, and I think the Senate should give due consideration to it: There are four Senators involved in this question, two from Virginia and two from Maryland. They are all opposed to the proposal. Representative BROYHILL is opposed to it, although it is said that his referendum indicated that the people of Fairfax County are for it. That may not be correct, for the reason that the referendum which he conducted reached only a small proportion of the people of Fairfax County. But that is not the question at issue.

The Representatives from Maryland, as well as the Representatives from Virginia, the two Senators from Virginia, the two Senators from Maryland, and all the local authorities involved, are opposed to the Burke airport. I think that fact deserves some consideration on the part of the Senate.

Why should all these agencies, which represent the people in the respective communities, be opposed to this particular location? I am opposed to it because it would cost $50 million. There is an airport at Friendship, which I think cost much more than $50 million, and which is available for the purpose of relieving the traffic congestion which exists at present at the Washington Airport.

I am frank to say that something should be done. I believe that if there is congestion at the airport in Washington it should be relieved. But I do not believe that relief will come from constructing another airport within 15 miles of the present airport. That would simply add to the congestion which now exists. When we come to the use of jet airplanes, which point we are rapidly approaching, there will be faster airplanes. With the Burke Airport only 15 miles from the present airport, it does not seem to me that there would be any great relief in air traffic conditions.

The solution to this problem should be a permanent solution. It should not be a temporary solution, which I think the Burke Airport would be.

The Senator from Florida [Mr. HOLLAND] brought out the fact that, so far as the time element is concerned, it requires 46 minutes to travel from the Friendship Airport to the Statler Hotel, and 32 minutes from the Burke Airport. I submit that a difference of only 14 minutes is not sufficient to justify the expenditure of $50 million, which would be the cost of constructing the Burke Airport.

Therefore, as a Senator from Virginia, I stand before the Senate asking it to vote down an appropriation for an expenditure of approximately $50 million in my State. I do so with the very sincere conviction that that is not the true solution.

The Senator from Florida brought out very clearly the fact that the defeat of the pending proposal would simply mean that the question would be deferred until January. In the meantime Friendship Airport would be used as an auxiliary field, so as to determine its practicability. I think that is the sensible and proper thing to do, and I hope the Senate will vote down the pending amendment.

Mr. BEALL. Mr. President, this evening we have heard a very fine explanation by a disinterested Senator. No one can accuse the Senator from Florida of having a selfish interest. The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY] said that, as a Maryland Senator, I might possibly have some selfish interest. Perhaps he is correct. The able Senator from Florida was thinking of the welfare of the country, and of the need for an additional airport.

We all know that there is need for an additional airport to serve the Nation's capital. Such facilities are now available. The Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON] said that the additional airport was needed now. We could start tomorrow morning using the facilities at Friendship.

There is one runway at Friendship 9,450 feet long. There is another 6,437 feet long; and a third 6,000 feet long. We are ready to go at Friendship.

In all fairness, why not begin to use the facilities at Friendship, which is only 46 or 47 minutes away from the city of Washington? Why wait for 5 years? Why not use those facilities now? Why vote for this additional appropriation tonight, when the Appropriations Committee, in its wisdom, has said, "We will look into the question next January. Then if an appropriation of $50 million, or whatever the cost may be, is necessary, it can be obtained at that time."

Let us use the facilities now in existence at Friendship. Friendship is between Baltimore and Washington. It is not necessarily exclusively a Baltimore airport. It would still be used by the millions of people coming to Washington.

Friendship is equipped to handle 100,000 passengers a day. I hope the Senate will vote tonight to sustain the Appropriations Committee in its judgment, and let us determine in January what is the desirable thing to do.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. BEALL. I yield.

Mr. LANGER. Is the Senator opposed to the $50 million airport?

Mr. BEALL. I recognize the need for an additional airport, but we have it now. Why not use it now? Why spend $50 million and wait until 1960 or 1962 to get it?

Mr. LANGER. Would the distinguished Senator mind a suggestion?

Mr. BEALL. No, indeed.

Mr. LANGER. Why not offer an amendment to locate an airport at Menoken, N. Dak.? We need a $50 million airport there.

Mr. BEALL. I will answer the Senator in this way: I cannot see why the airline companies cannot build their own airports. Railroad companies build their own stations. Bus companies build their own terminals. Why cannot the airlines build their own airports?

Mr. LANGER. The Senator will have to ask a much wiser man than I.

Mr. ROBERTSON. Mr. President, the hour is late, and it is desired to complete action on the pending bill in order that the Senate may dispose of several conference reports and other matters. I shall be very brief.

I endorse what the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] has said about the opposition to this proposal in Fairfax County. One phase of the question which has not been mentioned is the fact that if the airport were located at Burke, 9½ miles of primary and secondary roads would be closed. Beautiful farms and homes which would not be acquired by the Government for the airport would be rendered absolutly useless to the owners. Certainly we should not let a proposal such as this be adopted if we could prevent it, without inserting a provision that all property owners whose property was actually destroyed by the closing of their roads should be adequately compensated.

It has been pointed out that there is no objection to Friendship, from the practical standpoint, except for the distance.

Friendship is 14 or 15 minutes further from Washington in travel time than the Burke site.

The Burke site, as the senior Senator from Virginia has stated, will cost at least $50 million, and perhaps more. for one-tenth of that sum, we could provide access roads to Friendship Airport which would eliminate the 14- or 15-minute difference in driving time. By use of those roads it would be possible to travel 60 miles an hour, and in that way cut down the travel differential as between Baltimore and Burke.

The airports at Chicago are 45 minutes to an hour from the business section of Chicago. The same thing is true of New York. I do not know of any metropolitan areas the size of the District of Columbia where the airports are within 15 minutes driving time of the downtown hotels.

Therefore, I hope that the Senate will support the position of the Committee on Appropriations. We should not rush into the expenditure of this large sum of money, at such a great disservice to a community in Virginia, and at such great cost to the taxpayers of the Nation, until we know that there is no suitable alternative available.

The Committee on Appropriations has appointed a subcommittee of five members to make a thorough study of the subject between now and next January, and to report to the committee. Then we will expect action. In the meantime, if we voted the $12 million tonight, it would be more than 3 years before the airport at Burke could be in operation. In the meantime, also, we certainly should try something else.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ROBERTSON. I yield.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I speak as one who does not come from either Virginia or Maryland, and as one who believes a second airport is necessary. May I inquire whether I am right in stating that there was such divergence of opinion in the committee, that the committee took no action pro or con except to appoint a committee of five of its members to go into the matter and to study the whole subject between now and next January or February, when the first supplemental appropriation bill will be ready for action. In other words, I should like to point out that there was no decision pro or con reached in our committee. Is that correct?

Mr. ROBERTSON. The Senator is absolutely correct. The committee did not go on record either for or against Burke, or for or against any other site. We merely took the position that another airport is needed, but we did not know exactly where it should be located. We wanted from now until next January to get more information on the question than we have now. I hope the Senate will support the position taken by the Committee on Appropriations on that issue.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote! Vote!

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. President, I yield myself 3 minutes.

I should like to read from a statement on the time factor, which has been put into the RECORD by the Senator from Washington [Mr. MAGNUSON]. Of the 695 cities served by airlines, very few of them have a travel time distance which would be the case if Friendship were selected as a second airport for Washington. It is apparent from a review of 23 cities selected as examples of excessive travel time of 40 minutes or more, if allowance is made for passenger travel from downtown area and for formalities at the airport, and so forth, that Friendship would top the list of airports, if time were allowed for driving from Washington to the airport and for the necessary formalities.

There is no question of a lobby involved. Airlines look to their customers' convenience. If it were possible to dragoon the passengers into using only one airport, the airlines would certainly be agreeable to using a combination of Baltimore and Washington.

I am aware of the difficulties which confront the two Virginia Senators and the two Maryland Senators. Unfortunately Washington is in the middle. Not one of those Senators flies to Washington. However, 92 Senators do fly to Washington, and they face death every time they come into the airport under the congested conditions that exist. Yet Congress is offering no alternative except a trial run.

Mr. BEALL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. This subject has been before Congress since 1950. It has been investigated by no less than ten separate committees. Perhaps the Appropriations Committee does not believe anyone has sense enough to understand aviation or to understand the subject except Senators appointed by the Appropriations Committee. However, there there are men who are sincerely interested in the work. Otherwise approximately 10 committees would not have come to the same conclusion by almost unanimous vote. It will be a very poor statement by the Senate of the United States in the event that between now and the first of April two DC–6's crash with a loss of 150 lives, if all the Senate will be able to say will be, "We felt we needed another study to be made." I feel the time to act is now.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield.

Mr. HOLLAND. Is there anything in the suggestion of the Senator which would make an airport available between now and April of next year?

Mr. MONRONEY. I agree with the Senator. However, an investigation of 8 months would mean another delay beyond the estimated 3 years now, in starting the work. I do not believe in procrastinating. First it was 1950. Now it is 1956. Soon it will be 1960. Then the request will be made that we wait another 10 years. Maybe in that time we will be thinking about building an airport for flying saucers.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield.

Mr. BUTLER. Does not the Senator know that the Secretary of Commerce, during the past 2 weeks, wrote CAB asking that it immediately name Friendship as a co-terminal, with Washington Airport, and that we momentarily expect CAB to decide that that be done, and that that is the only thing which will serve to alleviate the congestion at the present time?

Mr. MONRONEY. I agree that the planes ought to be allowed to go to Friendship, but we should not make that a permanent proposition.

Mr. BUTLER. No one is asking that it be made permanent.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I wonder whether it would be possible to get a unanimous-consent agreement that I may suggest the absence of a quorum and that then each side have 10 additional minutes to speak on the subject.

Mr. MONRONEY. I would suggest a unanimous-consent agreement that we vote in 1 minute.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Very well. I ask unanimous consent that we proceed to vote on the pending amendment in 1 minute.

Mr. BUTLER. Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. MONRONEY. I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY]. On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Oklahoma. On this question, the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I announce that the Senators from New Mexico [Mr. ANDERSON and Mr. CHAVEZ], the Senator from Texas [Mr. DANIEL], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], and the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER] are absent on official business.

On this vote, the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. ANDERSON] is paired with the Senator from Texas [Mr. DANIEL]. If present and voting, the Senator from New Mexico would vote "yea," and the Senator from Texas would vote "nay."

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I announce that the Senator from Michigan [Mr. POTTER] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business as a member of the American Battle Monuments Commission.

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. WELKER] is necessarily absent; and, if present, would vote "nay."

The Senator from Kansas [Mr. SCHOEPPEL] is detained on official business.

The vote was recapitulated.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, how am I recorded?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is recorded as voting in the negative.

Mr. CLEMENTS. Mr. President, how am I recorded?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky is reported as voting in the negative.

Mr. PASTORE. Mr. President, how am I recorded?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island is recorded as voting in the affirmative.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, how am I recorded?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida is recorded as voting in the negative.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. President, how am I recorded?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama is recorded as voting in the affirmative.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. DOUGLAS. I should like to inquire how I am recorded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois is recorded as voting in the affirmative.

The result was announced—yeas 32, nays 56, as follows:

MODIFICATION OF ORDER FOR RECESS

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to modify the previous order, so that the Senate may meet at 9:30 tomorrow morning. I understand the first order had been modified by a subsequent order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

OPERATION WORLD LEADER

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I have received a letter from Ellsworth W. Taylor, who lives in Hawaii, with which letter he sent to me a manuscript entitled "Operation World Leader." Then I received a letter from a Hawaiian newspaperman, suggesting that he though the manuscript was so worthy of attention that he should like to have me read it into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. I do not want to take the time to read it in its entirety, but I should like to read the first paragraph of it. It reads:

"There is no force more powerful than that of an idea whose time has come," said Victor Hugo. I am an American citizen with an idea for stopping war and I believe its time has come. I believe the world is still looking to the United States for leadership, and that if we move into that leadership role with boldness and imagination we can banish the threat of general war within 10 years.

I ask unanimous consent that the rest of the article be printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

OPERATION WORLD LEADER—AN AMERICAN 10-YEAR PLAN FOR DISARMAMENT

(By Ellsworth W. Taylor)

"There is no force more powerful than that of an idea whose time has come," said Victor Hugo. I am an American citizen with an idea for stopping war and I believe its time has come. I believe the world is still looking to the United States for leadership, and that if we move into that leadership role with boldness and imagination we can banish the threat of general war within 10 years.

The heart of this plan is to tell the world:

"We believe there is this choice before the world: Disarm or die. We have seen the nations put their capital into war machines many times before, and we have seen war follow each time. We have seen one nation arm and others follow that example to defend themselves; we believe that if one nation disarms, others will follow that example, also.

"The United States is at the last crossroads. One road leads to atomic-hydrogen war against human beings; the other leads to a great fight against hunger, against disease, against ignorance and tyranny and corruption—all the real enemies of free men on which communism feeds and without which it will wither away. We are going to take the second road.

"Between now and 1965 we are going to take ten steps along that road to world welfare. We are going to spend 10 percent less each year on our armed forces, begining in 1957, and apply the money we save to making this green earth a fit place for the children of men to live in.

"At present our direct military budget is $40 billion a year. The chart of America's 10-year plan would look something like this:

"Year	For war	Saving	To feed and build in the poor lands	For United States schools	To pay public debt	Taxes saved each year
1956	40,000,000,000
1957	36,000,000,000	4,000,000,000	2,000,000,000	1,000,000,000	500,000,000	500,000,000
1958	32,000,000,000	8,000,000,000	4,000,000,000	2,000,000,000	1,000,000,000	1,000,000,000
1959	28,000,000,000	12,000,000,000	5,000,000,000	3,000,000,000	2,000,000,000	2,000,000,000
1960	24,000,000,000	16,000,000,000	8,000,000,000	3,000,000,000	3,000,000,000	2,000,000,000
1961	20,000,000,000	20,000,000,000	10,000,000,000	4,000,000,000	4,000,000,000	2,000,000,000
1962	16,000,000,000	24,000,000,000	10,000,000,000	5,000,000,000	5,000,000,000	4,000,000,000
1963	12,000,000,000	28,000,000,000	10,000,000,000	5,000,000,000	6,000,000,000	9,000,000,000
1964	10,000,000,000	30,000,000,000	9,000,000,000	5,000,000,000	8,000,000,000	8,000,000,000
1965	10,000,000,000	30,000,000,000	8,000,000,000	5,000,000,000	8,000,000,000	9,000,000,000
Total	228,000,000,000	172,000,000,000	66,000,000,000	33,000,000,000	37,500,000,000	37,500,000,000"

"The most important element in the working of the plan is its gradualness. As we take the first steps along the road to a richer world we shall be watching the reactions of other nations. We shall at first maintain our Air Force at full striking power, but reduce our surface Navy and our Army, our Marines and auxiliary forces. But we are certain that there will be a mighty swing of world public opinion in our favor, and that world communism will fall apart, deserted by all its allies.

"As we move down this road to disarmament, we invite all nations to follow, and to transfer funds from their war budgets to the various agencies of the United Nations for the feeding, healing, and teaching of the men, women, and children of the great poor lands of the earth. But whatever others do, we are going ahead with Operation World Leader."

It does not take much imagination to see the joy of other nations and to hear their great sigh of relief when the United States chooses this course. The peoples of Asia, the Middle East, Africa, and South America are waiting for leadership like this. For these are the people whose loyalty we must have. The world is presently divided roughly into thirds: one-third in the party of the United States; one-third in the party of Russia; and one-third uncommitted. It is the uncommitted third that both the United States and the U. S. S. R. are trying to win.

In this campaign for election to world leadership the Russians seem to be leading, largely because the United States has waited for them to make the first move and then tried to counter it: the Bear has been calling the tune for the Man to dance to. If we are to make good our claim to world leadership, we must get out in front and lead. The place for a leader is out in front, making the bold first move, catching the opposition off balance. This American 10-year plan is the kind of surprise that will knock the Bear clear off his paws, and when we follow through on it, he'll never get up again.

The uncommitted third will not be won by stockpiling H-bombs nor by the false security of alliances nor by slogans about liberty and democracy. A man in Asia whose stomach is empty and whose landlord has just collected two-thirds of his crop and whose wife has just died of cholera leaving him with seven scrawny children he cannot feed and no social security—such a man is not going to listen to sermons about liberty and democracy; he needs practical help. The uncommitted third will be won by the party which takes on the real enemies which rule in the great poor lands of the earth: Hunger, disease, illiteracy, and the kind of government that cares nothing for the citizen. Let's take our capital wealth out of the machines of slaughter and put it into machines that plow land and build roads and irrigation ditches and dams and hospitals and schools all over the world. Poverty, hunger, disease: these are the fertilizer for communism. These are the fertilizer, the soil, and the root of Russian and Chinese expansion; these are the enemies we must attack and the weapons are dollars. We have been trying to preach Americanism to starving foreigners, and it's like trying to cure cancer with Vaporub.

In our campaign for the loyalty of the uncommitted third, one tractor is worth a thousand tanks. Less for guns, more for the hungry ones should be our goal and our motto.

Let's get back to the chart for a moment. Let's understand that the more than $37 billion saved in taxes is not the only dividend. Every cent we send overseas will come back with interest in orders for American tools, machines, cars, and everything else we make. When Europe and Asia are prosperous, we are prosperous. But if the tools and machines come from Russia because we hide our heads in the sand, we'll not be prosperous; we'll be out in the cold and getting colder.

The way I feel about my country and the world of men cannot be expressed by armies and navies and hell-bombs. The American spirit is manifested by CARE and friendship trains and the Marshall plan and the point 4 program and the young American Quakers who have gone to Germany and Austria and Japan and Mexico and given their time and their labor and even paid their own expenses to help build homes, sewer systems and irrigation ditches—to teach, and to battle disease and filth and ignorance. These are the wonderful hands America has shown to other nations; but with the coming of the great fear we have forgotten the powerful and tender spirit of love for all mankind that has made the name of America blessed in every land of earth. Remember the words on the Statue of Liberty:

"Give me your tired, your poor,
Your heavy-laden yearning to be free."

This is the spirit that has made our country what it is, and the same spirit will preserve us and keep us from becoming a desperately frightened nation of men carrying guns and shivering behind coasts studded with steel and radar and under skies slashed with screaming jets. Certainly this would be a United States far from our ideals—unrecognizable by ourselves or any other peoples.

The worst danger to America's 10-year plan is the fear some of us have that Russia will attack in force if we weaken ourselves. I do not mean to ridicule this fear, for it has been skillfully planted by men in high position over a period of many years. But may I call your attention to the statements and actions of Communist and Russian leaders from Marx to the present? The Russians have always been afraid of large scale war; they have always lost heavily in war; and the whole Communist design is that of subversion and economic attack—not war.

Why then do the Communists keep large armies and make H-bombs? For the same reason we do: To defend themselves. The Russians have good reason to fear attack. Their country has been invaded and half-destroyed many times in their history. To mention only a few: Napoleon's invasion; the Kaiser's invasion in World War I; Hitler's invasion, the most destructive of all but not the worst; worst for the Russians' state of mind was the interference of 1919, when the Communist Government was less than 2 years old. In that year America, England, Turkey, France, and other nations which had come out on top in the Great War invaded Russia to destroy the new government and restore the Czar's family to the throne of Russia. American troops occupied at least one city and an area of Russian territory north of China; but the unforgivable insult was the sending of German soldiers—the defeated enemies of Russia and the other Allies—German soldiers who had killed and burned and strutted in Russia during the Great War—these German soldiers were sent by Russia's allies to destroy the new government which had taken the place of the Czar.

I do not agree with the Communist philosophy of religion or science or politics or anything else; but I can certainly understand why they are afraid of other nations. They see around them a ring of hostility: Air bases in North Africa, Arabia, Japan, Canada, Alaska, England, and France. They watch the invention and use of the A-bomb and the experiments with the H-bomb. They are frightened and they have only to look into recent history to find reason to be frightened.

The capture of the satellite nations was a symptom of that fear. Stalin determined that Russia would never again be surprised—that any future attack would be met on foreign soil. This was the reason for enslaving a ring of countries just outside the borders of the U. S. S. R. If you look at the map, you will see the plan in perfect clarity. Out of fear comes crime, and the Communist leaders, afraid of new invasion, committed a series of national crimes to build a wall of lands and peoples around Russia's borders. Like all crimes, these should be condemned; but more important, they should be understood.

Perhaps it will help us Americans to understand these crimes better if we do some confessing of our own. We have satellites of our own in South and Central America and in the Caribbean—satellites whom we have kept in line with alliances, trade agreements, money—and an occasional regiment of Marines or a visiting fleet of warships. Our hands are not as red as the Communists', but there are stains on them which will not easily wash out. If the United States were ringed with Soviet bases as Russia is with ours, we might take even more violent means to establish friendly governments in countries near our borders. Nations have always done so.

Russians are people. They fear and hate war, and they will respond to an American 10-year plan for peace the same as people in other countries. If the diplomats wish to start a revolt of the Russian people against their leaders, let them try this plan.

Let's check back a little. In 1946, when American armies and fleets went home, and nobody except a few professionals ever wanted to see a uniform or a gun again, the Russians could have attacked in force and wiped us out. Why didn't they? Because their method is to subvert, to undermine, and then to wait for their enemies to fall by themselves. They have been warned by their own leaders and prophets again and again not to be drawn into war—except to defend their own country. Every act of Communist leaders shows they follow those advices right down the line.

The load of armaments is as heavy for them as for any other nation, and they will put it down for good as soon as they feel safe again.

Continuing the arms race will bring military rule in America as strict and harsh as in many Communist areas. At present rates we would spend $400 billion on arms and armament by 1965. The way of violence is expensive:

"The debt we owe for bombs and jets
Gets bigger all the time—
The tax is high on private sky,
It don't come for a dime—
The men and guns don't practice free,
The price of hate ain't hay:
So if you choose to go to hell
You've got to pay your way."

Of course there will be opposition to an American 10-year plan for peace. But watch who objects. The makers of armor plate, of planes and tanks and H-bombs will scream, of course, and the military men who have studied almost nothing but tactics and strategy since they were adolescents—these generals and admirals will howl in anguish, and will bring out their scheduled war scares ahead of schedule. (Remember the admiral who said there would be war in the Formosa Strait by the middle of April 1955? And how often these war headlines come at the same time military appropriations are being voted on by Congress. Let us not be stampeded—let us not be discouraged by such as these.

But while we are talking about military men and munitions makers, let us confess again that in past centuries white European and American soldiers and traders raided South America of gold; robbed Africa of gold, diamonds, and slaves; and raided Asia of everything that wasn't nailed down. We are less guilty than the Europeans, but we helped strip the great poor lands of their capital goods; in returning some of that borrowed wealth we will be smashing world communism and seizing the greatest opportunity for world leadership ever offered.

In raising living standards in other lands, "A dollar for the world" would be a wonderful goal for organized labor. Let American labor be satisfied with a $1 minimum wage and concentrate on raising the rest of the world's workingmen to that same dollar. One profitable attack is to bring prices down while wages stay at present levels. I for one will not be happy with the most fabulous prosperity if I must be defended against the starving men of other nations by H-bomb-waving diplomats and politicians.

The strange thing we have overlooked is that America's 10-year plan will be immensely profitable. Even the munitions makers will enjoy a thriving business, once they convert to making machines for peace, since capital in the great poor lands will mean floods of orders for everything America sells, from wrist watches to steel mills. We save every way you look at it.

Some might say reducing the Armed Forces will bring unemployment. I say there is plenty of work in the world to keep everyone busy, and certainly enough here in the United States. There are schools, hospitals, bridges, dams, and Federal buildings to be built all over the country. How many men can New England use to build the multipurpose dams it needs to control floods and make power? How many can California use? And the old Mississippi River needs a few battalions of workers to bring her under bondage.

How many men will it take to reforest the dust bowl? How many to clear the slums out of Washington, D. C.? How many to irrigate desert areas of the United States which are only waiting for water? And if we still have idle men, let's send them overseas as workers and teachers and hungerfighters and crusaders against disease. Let them build schools, hospitals, and productive farms; let them teach the men of the great poor lands how to use American machines and tools; let them go not as soldiers but as working missionaries: such missionaries have always been welcome abroad.

This plan does not offer peace. The American 10-year plan is a way of getting past the roadblock of war to the great fights we have hardly begun yet: the fights to conquer poverty, and hunger, and disease, and ignorance all over the earth; yes, and the great campaign to conquer space, and to harness the power of the sun, and the tides and the atom for peaceful, everyday use. I see great battles ahead far beyond the lives of my great-grandchildren; but we will never fight those battles and we probably won't even have grandchildren unless we stop making war.

The place for a leader is out in front. America has won its place in the world by moving ahead; by breaking new trails; by leading the way with new ideas, new plans, and new ways of living. No nation deserves that place of leadership but the United States of America. Operation world leader is ready for D-day. The last handwriting is on the wall: disarm or die. And the men of the world are waiting for America to lead the way again. "We shall nobly save or meanly lose the last best hope of earth."

SIZE OF FARM UNITS IN COLUMBIA BASIN PROJECT—RESOLUTION

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter which I received from Clancy Jean, manager, agricultural department, Portland Chamber of Commerce, on June 6, 1956, together with a resolution which was enclosed with the letter.

There being no objection, the letter and resolution were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

PORTLAND CHAMBER OF COMMERCE,
Portland, Oreg., July 6, 1956.

Hon. WAYNE MORSE,
United States Senator,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR MORSE: Enclosed is a resolution recently passed by our board of directors stating our position on the size of farm units in the Columbia Basin project. The resolution also contains our recommendations regarding development of future area within the project.

Recently the Quincy (Wash.) Chamber of Commerce met with some of our members and requested our support of a similar resolution. This matter was referred to our 50-member agricultural committee who, in turn, drafted the attached resolution. All members of our agricultural committee are well acquainted with the Columbia Basin project and several of them have had long and continuing association with the project since its beginning.

We felt that you would be interested in the position we have taken on this matter. If you desire additional comment, please let me know.

Sincerely,

CLANCY JEAN,
Manager, Agricultural Department.

The board of directors of the Portland Chamber of Commerce on June 15 approved the following resolution which was submitted to them by the chamber's agricultural committee. It is felt the content of this resolution will be of interest to you:

"Whereas farm technology and mechanization, as well as economic conditions, have changed substantially since the passage of the Columbia Basin Act which established farm unit size at approximately 80 acres; and

"Whereas it has become apparent that too little attention was given to an accurate soil classification in accordance with its productivity and adapted types of farming: Therefore be it

"Resolved, That the Portland Chamber of Commerce favors amending the Columbia Basin Act to permit one family to own two farm units as now platted and engineered (a family to be defined as one single person, or husband and wife and all children under 21 years of age residing at home); and be it further

"Resolved, That in advance of delivery of water to all future irrigation blocs, particular attention be given to—

"A. Accurate soil studies under the direction of the State College of Washington or the Soil Conservation Service.

"B. Provisions be made to prevent the delivery of water to land of questionable productivity as determined by such studies.

"C. The size of farm units within the future area be platted in accordance with the type of agriculture necessary to provide sounder economic farm units."

Approved by the board of directors on June 15.

OREGON SCHOOL-BUILDING NEEDS—RESOLUTIONS

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD resolutions adopted by the first constitutional convention of the Oregon State Labor Council, held in Portland, Oreg., on June 18 through 22, 1956.

There being no objection, the resolutions were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

RESOLUTION No. 69

Whereas recent studies of Oregon school-building needs made by the schoolhouse planning section of the Oregon State Department of Education show that between 1956 and 1961 a total of $84,555,200 must be expended to provide for unhoused pupils and the increase which will occur in the State's elementary- and high-school population; and

Whereas the estimated total expenditures needed for school facilities between now and 1961 has been shown to be $98,261,597; and

Whereas 70 distressed school districts will need to provide school-building facilities in excess of their present remaining bonding capacity and accumulated bonding capacity to 1961 in an amount found to be $13,577,166; and

Whereas the amount 88 distressed school districts will need in excess of their present remaining bonding capacity to 1961 has been shown to be $23,368,216; and

Whereas school-building needs of 44 distressed districts for the next 2 years to house pupils who are double shifted, pupils in overloaded classrooms, and two-fifths of the 5-year projected increase is estimated to be $13,823,800; and

Whereas needs in excess of remaining bonding capacity for 44 districts for the next 2 years has been shown to be $5,225,114; and

Whereas school-building needs for 62 distressed districts for the next 4 years necessary to house pupils, pupils housed in substandard classrooms and two-fifths more of the projected increase is estimated to be $16,579,400; and

Whereas needs in excess of remaining bonding capacity and accumulated bonding capacity for the next 4 years for these 62 schools has been found to be $11,071,129; and

Whereas the estimated annual additional aid necessary to provide for minimum needs of Oregon schools is $5,225,114 for 1956–58 and $6,846,015 for 1958–60 and $2,506,037 for 1961: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That this first constitutional convention of the Oregon State Labor Council urges Congress to act with all speed to adopt the Kelley bill which would make Federal aid available to all States for school-building needs and to the State of Oregon in the amount of $3,852,000 annually, or $15,408,000 over a 4-year period, and would require Oregon matching funds of only an equal amount.

Adopted: June 21, 1956.

RESOLUTION No. 46

Whereas the Taft-Hartley Act states that it is the policy of the United States (carried over from the Wagner Act) to encourage organization of workers into unions of their own choosing and to promote industrial peace and progress through collective bargaining; and

Whereas the Taft-Hartley Act has operated to curtail and block union organization, to weaken unions and to interfere with free collective bargaining because many of the act's provisions subvert its professed aims; and

Whereas since the adoption of the Taft-Hartley Act the rate of organization has been greatly reduced—contrary to the experience under the Wagner Act, so that, today, two-thirds of the workers who are eligible for union membership remain unorganized; and

Whereas the Taft-Hartley Act places serious restrictions on the right to strike and to picket, and strikes or picketing for various purposes which were legal long before the advent of the Wagner Act are entirely prohibited by the Taft-Hartley Act; and

Whereas the use of the labor injunction had been virtually halted in the Federal courts for 15 years prior to the passage of the Taft-Hartley Act, because of the Norris-LaGardia Act; and

Whereas the Taft-Hartley Act permits the Government to seek an injunction in any unfair labor practice case prior to any hearing on the merits of the case and, in addition, is actually compelled by the act to seek such injunction in certain types of cases; and

Whereas the Taft-Hartley Act injects the Government into the writing of collective-bargaining agreements (unlike the Wagner Act where unions and employers were generally free to make whatever collective-bargaining contracts they thought appropriate); and

Whereas the Taft-Hartley Act restricts the benefits unions may achieve through collective bargaining, such as union security, welfare funds, check-off arrangements and strike notices, and in industries with shifting employment patterns such as construction, maritime trades and canning places restrictions on security arrangements which are wholly unworkable; and

Whereas section 14 (b) of the act legalizes State antiunion security (so-called right-to-work) laws in defiance of the principle that Federal legislation normally overrides conflicting State laws; and

Whereas the Taft-Hartley law contains a host of other restrictive provisions: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That this first constitutional convention of the Oregon State Labor Council meeting at Portland, June 19 to 22, 1956, calls upon the Congress of the United States—aided by the leadership of the executive department of the Federal Government—to remove the restrictive provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act to the end that the entire area of collective bargaining will be returned to the labor-management field, with the Government entering the picture only in the public interest—and impartially—after the two unhindered free enterprise agents, labor and management, find they are unable to reach agreement, themselves.

Adopted June 22, 1956.

RESOLUTION No. 71

Whereas many working people who are insured under the Social Security Act became unable to earn a living through sickness or accident long before they become 65 years of age and therefore are left without any means of providing a livelihood: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we—all local unions—in Oregon write letters to all Oregon Congressmen to work for an amendment to this act so that these people may be taken care of within the Social Security Act.

Adopted June 22, 1956.

PROPOSED ALTERATION OF CAPITOL—RESOLUTION

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a resolution adopted by the Southwestern Oregon Chapter of the American Institute of Architects.

There being no objection, the resolution was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas the Capitol is by general consent the most historic and as it stands one of the most beautiful buildings in the country; and

Whereas the central portion preserves intact the work of three of the greatest American architects, Thornton, Latrobe, and Bulfinch, as when completed in 1829: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Southwest Oregon Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, both for aesthetic and historical reasons, opposes any changes which would alter in material or design this central portion of the building, and recommends that if additional space be necessary, it should be taken care of by other means, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded at once to our Congressmen and to Don J. Stewart, regional director, for his action.

A CVA IS THE ANSWER—EDITORIAL

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I have received a request to have inserted in the RECORD an editorial entitled "A CVA Is the Answer," which was published in the Oregon Farmer Union for May, 1956. I desire to make it clear that I do not share the conclusions of the editor, but I believe points of view which do not agree with mine are entitled to insertion in the RECORD when responsible constituents want them inserted. I consider the editorial meritorious, even though I do not agree with its conclusions.

I have always opposed, for my section of the country, a CVA; but in this particular editorial an argument is made for a CVA.

It is interesting that with the growing threat that Congress is making against comprehensive development of our water resources, there is renewed agitation in my section of the country for a CVA, so I ask unanimous consent to have the editorial printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

A CVA IS THE ANSWER

Private utilities of the Pacific Northwest are trying to block further development of the Columbia River by a new propaganda twist. Numerous nationally circulated magazines are running advertisements and articles purporting to show how much the taxpayers of each of the 48 States would have to pay for the construction of Hells Canyon Dam. A story along this line was carried in the Saturday Review for May 10. Earlier, Time magazine had published a similar article.

"Why should taxpayers far from the Columbia River have to pay taxes so the people of the Pacific Northwest can have cheap power?" is the gist of this latest propaganda drive.

This propaganda is as false as most of the private utility stuff peddled across the Nation in magazines and on the radio.

All of the money spent for power development at Hells Canyon and at all the other Columbia River power projects is reimbursable, is paid back to the Federal Treasury with interest. The Bonneville Administration is several years ahead of schedule in reimbursing the Federal Treasury for the cost of dams completed and in operation.

With regard to the nonreimbursable cost of Columbia River projects—that part of the cost allocated to flood control, navigation, and so forth—what difference is their in money spent on the Columbia for these purposes and money spent on the Mississippi, New York Harbor, the Delaware River, and so forth? No one has ever questioned the right of the Federal Government to spend money to improve the usefulness of these rivers and harbors. They are a national asset, even though directly benefiting only that part of the Nation immediately adjacent. But when the Federal Government spends money on the Columbia River for identical purposes, this is damned as a crime against the Nation's taxpayers.

This propaganda campaign is so vicious, so untruthful that a question is being raised in the minds of many people of the Pacific Northwest as to whether the private utilities have not forfeited their right to continue in business. Had they been fair, there is no reason why public power and private power could not have continued to co-exist. But their tactics have been so unfair, their propaganda so false, that it now appears the people of the Columbia Basin have only one recourse to protect their vital interest in the cheap power and the full development of the Columbia River and its tributaries. That recourse is condemnation of all the private utilities in the area, with a Columbia Valley Authority taking over not only the production of power but also its distribution. We cannot continue indefinitely to waste so much social energy fighting the vicious tactics of the private utilities, not only to keep the dams we have, but also to develop for future generations the still undeveloped resources of the Columbia Basin.

PATTON ON FOREIGN AID—EDITORIAL

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an editorial entitled "Patton on Foreign Aid," which was published in the Oregon Farmer Union for May 1956.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

PATTON ON FOREIGN AID

President Patton rendered a notable public service in his statement early this month before the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives. Mr. Patton brought out into the open a fact carefully concealed by most of the Nation's newspapers. Only about 11 percent of the $4.7 billion asked by the administration for foreign aid will be for purposes not connected with military expenditures. A total of $533 million is in this category. The balance of the $4.7 billion is either for military aid programs or for some kind of economic development directly connected with the military program where the primary reason for giving the aid is to boost the economies of those countries with men under arms.

As late as last November, Mr. Patton pointed out, a delegate of the United States to the United Nations refused United States support for a United Nations economic development fund, despite the fact that the President has stated that one dollar of aid spent for economic aid is worth five spent on the military.

"It is equally a mystery," said Patton, "that the President and top State Department officials continue to give lipservice about expanding our contribution for economic development to the lesser developed countries and at the same time request of Congress such insignificant appropriations to be used for this purpose."

President Patton continued: "National Farmers Union sees the need for a strong defense among the free and democratic nations. But we are convinced that we are in grave error in assuming that effective military pledges can be bought in underdeveloped nations whose people as yet have not attained something they really want to defend.

"Aren't we putting the cart before the horse in our attempt to make military allies out of people who haven't yet won the battle against poverty, hunger, disease, and illiteracy?"

President Patton hailed the United Nations as the ideal medium for administering an economic aid program, and called for much larger U. N. expenditures for economic aid and technical assistance. The underdeveloped nations are highly critical of the United States for tying strings on aid and on our insistance that they line up with some regional military pact. What is needed is more economic aid, more cultural exchanges, more trade, more international commodity agreements, and establishment of a world food bank. American farmers, and workers, can earn a better living if people in other nations can earn the purchasing power required to buy the commodities we produce.

This is the kind of a foreign-aid program we need rather than an additional expenditure of $4 billion, practically all of it for military purposes.

USE OF MOTOR FUELS OF ALCOHOL MANUFACTURED FROM AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks a statement prepared by Representative JENSEN, of Iowa, and myself in connection with the so-called Jensen-Mundt bill, which proposes to provide for the utilization of grain alcohol in the manufacture of fuel used for motor vehicles.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE JENSEN-MUNDT BILL: BEFORE THE ADVENT OF THE AUTO, TRUCK, AND TRACTOR OUR HORSES AND MULES CONSUMED THE CROPS FROM 43 MILLION ACRES—OUR GRAIN SURPLUSES SHOULD NOW BE CONSUMED IN MOTOR FUEL

The Jensen-Mundt agriculture alcohol motor fuel bill, H. R. 9522, introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressman BEN F. JENSEN, of Iowa, and an almost identical bill, S. 3758, introduced in the Senate by Senator KARL E. MUNDT, of South Dakota:

"A bill to raise revenue, assist the American farmer by providing for the use of motor fuels of alcohol manufactured from agricultural products grown upon the farm in the United States; to utilize grains in surplus; to balance consumption with production of certain agricultural products

"Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the 'Agricultural Alcohol Motor Fuel Act.'

"SEC. 2. As used in this act—

"(1) The term 'United States' includes the States, Territories, and the District of Columbia.

"(2) The term 'motor fuel' means any of the following having a specific gravity of 36° or above, Baume scale, and suitable for use in internal-combustion engines: Gasoline, kerosene, naphtha, benzine, crude oil, and other petroleum products.

"(3) The term 'agricultural products' means all agricultural products grown upon the farm within the United States.

"(4) The term 'person' includes an individual, partnership, association, or corporation.

"SEC. 3. There is hereby imposed on motor fuel sold by the importer thereof or by a producer of motor fuel, unless at least 5 percent thereof, by volume, is alcohol manufactured from agricultural products grown upon the farm within the United States, a tax of 5 cents per gallon, such tax to be in addition to any other tax imposed by law.

"SEC. 4. It shall be unlawful for any person to sell motor fuel in the United States unless at least 5 percent thereof by volume is alcohol manufactured from agricultural products.

"SEC. 5. The act entitled 'An act for the withdrawal from bond, tax free, of domestic alcohol when rendered unfit for beverage or liquid medicinal uses by mixture with suitable denaturing materials,' approved June 7, 1906, is amended by adding at the end of the first paragraph of section 1 thereof a new sentence, as follows: 'Domestic alcohol manufactured from agricultural products may be withdrawn from bond, without the payment of the internal-revenue tax, for use in motor fuels, as provided in the Agricultural Alcohol Motor Fuel Act, without mixing such alcohol with methol alcohol or other denaturing material or materials.'

"SEC. 6. This act shall take effect 6 months after the date of its enactment, except that section 5 shall take effect upon the date of its enactment.

"SEC. 7. Notwithstanding the provisions of sections 3 and 4, the requirement under this act as to the percentage of alcoholic content shall be 2 percent during the 6 months after this act takes effect, with an increase of 3 percent 1 year after this act takes effect.

"SEC. 8. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than 1 year, or both.

"SEC. 9. The Secretary of Agriculture shall have the authority to declare this act inoperative for an indefinite period of time on any or all agricultural products declared in surplus, when such surplus has been reduced to proper proportions as determined by the Commodity Credit Corporation, and after the Secretary of Agriculture has given all interested manufacturers, importers, exporters, and blenders 6 months' advance notice in writing of such a declaration."

Now let us see how the law would operate in actual practice.

Let us say the processor of corn pays the farmer $1.50 per bushel delivered at his plant. Each bushel of corn will produce 2½ gallons of alcohol. The residue, or mash, from that bushel of corn is worth 60 percent of the natural grain in feed value, or 90 cents, which will be sold to farmers for stock and poultry feed at that price, making the first net cost for 2½ gallons of agrol 60 cents, or 24 cents per gallon, plus processing costs, which we are told is about 20 cents per gallon, making the next cost per gallon 44 cents. Add to that a 25 percent gross profit, making 55 cents per gallon, then allowing 5 cents per gallon for transportation costs and interest on the investment, making the total cost per gallon 60 cents. This bill provides for a 5 percent or one-twentieth agrol to nineteen-twentieths gasoline, one-twentieth of 60 cents equals 3 cents extra cost per gallon to the dealer over the price of low-grade gasoline.

The alcohol blend makes a premium-grade motor fuel from low-grade gasoline. It is a well-known fact that by adding 5 percent agrol to low-grade gasoline, which retails at an average throughout the country of 27 cents per gallon, that such a mixture makes a smooth-acting, powerful, high-grade extra mileage motor fuel, costing the consumer 30 cents per gallon, or just about to the penny the same as high-octane gasoline. These facts and figures apply equally to wheat, and some other grains, as well as to potatoes. Since that only comes out even, wherein do we benefit under provisions of this bill? Here it is:

The Department of Agriculture had on April 30 this year 976,406,792 bushels of corn and 728,356,697 bushels of wheat in Government storage. Total gallons of gasoline consumed in the United States in 1955 was a little over 72 billion gallons. Our bill provides for a 5-percent mix of agrol; 5 percent or one-twentieth of 72 billion gallons, is 3,600,000,000 gallons divided by 2½, which 1 bushel of corn will produce, making 1,440,000,000 bushels of corn thus consumed in 1 year. Hence, you will note, our surplus of corn and wheat would be exhausted in about 14 months if full production could immediately be put into effect; but that cannot be done due to the fact that it will require about 1 year to build the necessary processing plants for full production. But it is plain to see that in about 2 years after our bill went into effect, the surplus of corn and wheat would be reduced even below the ever-normal granary requirement, but that is safeguarded in section 9 of the bill.

We are informed that our present distillers of alcohol for medicine and beverage need only to operate their plants less than 25 percent of the time to meet their present requirements, so partial production could be accomplished quickly to furnish the 2 percent mix 6 months after the law went into effect, then additional needed plants could be erected and put into operation to produce the other 3 percent within a year after the law went into effect as the bill provides.

True, the amount of mash would go into the feed market and would replace some natural grain consumption, but remember the price of all feed grain is geared and determined by the price of corn, the greatest of all feed grains, hence the prices of all feed grains and livestock would be enhanced by stabilizing the price of corn. Remember too that the price of livestock, like other finished products, is determined by the cost of the parts required to produce it, whether it be meat, marbles or mowers. Therein lies the benefit to our farmers and to our entire economy, because the prosperity of every American over the long pull depends on the value of our raw products, which spring from mother earth in the form of feed and fiber each succeeding year, and which in the final analysis is our only real source of new wealth.

We import millions upon millions of barrels of blackstrap molasses annually, which is produced from sugarcane from which most of our present supply of alcohol and synthetic rubber is produced. All of this could and should also be produced from our own farm crops to further insure a stable ecenomy for America.

Before the advent of the automobile and tractor, our horses and mules consumed the grain produced on 43 million acres of our land. Is it any wonder we have long had a surplus of grain? Now I am sure you will agree that had we, years ago, adopted such a law as our bill provides, the periodical farm recessions and depressions would never have come upon us. So why wait longer? A start in correcting our past folly cannot be started earlier than now. Congress recently passed the soil-bank bill, which the President signed, the main purpose of which is to take 40 million acres out of production. Compare that figure, if you please, with the 43 million acres of grain production previously consumed by our horses and mules. Does not that fact prove to you the urgent need for the passage of this bill, which is not a new experiment? Many nations of the world have many years used an agrol mix in their motor fuels. One of those nations requires by law the use of 25 percent agrol in all their motor fuel in order to keep their farm crops in normal supply.

We have been told that when several bills, such as H. R. 9522 and S. 3758 were introduced in Congress during the early thirties, that the large gasoline producers vigorously opposed the legislation. If that is true, then they were plainly stupid and shortsighted, for certainly they should have known then, as they now know, that they are in the same boat with the farmers and the rest of us in any economic storm.

After H. R. 9522 was introduced, a provision was written into the soil-bank bill recently passed by Congress, directing the President to appoint a commission to make a study into new uses for farm products; which is all well and good. But why wait longer when we already know the facts as above stated? Certainly our bill should be passed without further delay. Then there would be little or no need in the future for such controversial and costly farm legislation such as Congress and the farmers have been struggling with these many, many years.

Congressman BEN F. JENSEN.
Senator KARL E. MUNDT.

ALLEVIATION OF CONDITIONS OF EXCESSIVE UNEMPLOYMENT IN CERTAIN ECONOMICALLY DEPRESSED AREAS—AMENDMENT

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment intended to be proposed by the Senator from Arizona to Senate bill 2663. I ask unanimous consent that, notwithstanding the unanimous-consent agreement previously entered today, this amendment may be in order, and that it be allotted equal time with the others on Senate bill 2663.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I should like to announce, for the information of the Senate, that as soon as action is completed on the pending bill, we shall take up the conference report on the first supplemental appropriation bill. We shall take up the housing bill and send it to conference. We shall take up the conference report on the Farm Tenant Act; the conference report on the judges, widows, and dependent children bill; the conference report on the customs simplification bill; the conference report on the agricultural trade development and assistance bill; the conference report on the watershed protection bill; and the conference report on the military decorations bill.

I should like all Senators to be on notice.

SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS BILL, 1957

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 12350) making supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1957, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment.

Mr. MUNDT. Mr. President, I offer an amendment on page 10, line 5, to strike out the provision reading "That $25,000 of this amount shall be available only upon the enactment into law of House Joint Resolution 576, 84th Congress." The amount appropriated is for the Alexander Hamilton Bicentennial Commission.

The House did not pass House Joint Resolution 576 until July 23. For that reason, as Chairman of the Commission of which the senatorial Members are the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], the Senator from Missouri [Mr. HENNINGS], the Senator from New York [Mr. IVES], and myself, I offer the amendment. I have discussed it with the minority and majority leaders and with the chairman of the Appropriations Committee and other Senators.

I ask that the authorizing language of House Joint Resolution 576 be inserted in lieu of the language on lines 5 through 7 on page 10.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 10, line 5, after the word "Provided", it is proposed to strike out "That $25,000 of this amount shall be available only upon the enactment into law of House Joint Resolution 576, 84th Congress" and insert in lieu thereof:

That section 7 of the joint resolution entitled "Joint resolution to establish a commission for the celebration of the 200th anniversary of the birth of Alexander Hamilton," approved August 20, 1954, is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 7. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums, not to exceed $25,000, in addition to the sum of $175,000 heretofore authorized to be appropriated, as the Congress may determine to be necessary to carry out the provisions of this joint resolution."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. MUNDT].

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. Mr. President, I do not wish to offer an amendment. I merely ask unanimous consent to have printed at this point in the RECORD a letter which I addressed to the chairman of the Appropriations Committee relating to the Upper Harbor project. I am pleased that that appropriation has been made available. I also ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a statement I have prepared on the Davis-Bacon provisions.

There being no objection, the letter and statement were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

JUNE 28, 1956.

The Honorable CARL HAYDEN,
Chairman, Committee on Appropriations, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR: I should like to call to your attention the fact that the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors on June 19, 1956, recommended that the authorized project on the Mississippi River at St. Anthony Falls, Minneapolis, Minn., be completed substantially as authorized. Original authorization was on August 26, 1937.

You may recall that the engineers had been requested to review the project by action of the House Committee on Public Works in August 1954.

The action of the Board of Engineers was taken on the report of the district engineer dated April 15, 1955, recommending completion of the extension at St. Anthony Falls.

In discussions with the Army engineers, I am told that if the engineers were asked to indicate the amount of funds which would permit full resumption of work on this authorized project during the coming fiscal year, they would specify that the sum of $400,000 could be utilized. This would permit completion of the lower lock and dam, which is 82 percent complete, and commencement of work on the upper lock and dam.

Because of the pending decision of the Board of Engineers, the engineers had not initiated a budget request for the St. Anthony Falls extension for the fiscal 1957 budget.

Now that the decision of the engineers has been made, and the Congress will be given a favorable recommendation to complete the project, I wish to request the Committee on Appropriations to consider the appropriation of the sum of $400,000 to be added to the supplemental appropriation on which the committee is now conducting hearings.

This harbor and channel improvement at St. Anthony Falls will be of immense value to the entire upper Midwest, and not only to the city of Minneapolis. The project has been exhaustively reviewed and its completion favorably recommended. Since 1948, work has gone steadily forward on this magnificent engineering task. It would be a tragic loss to be forced to suspend construction for an entire year.

That is why, Mr. Chairman, I urge that funds be appropriated to permit uninterrupted progress toward the development of the upper harbor at St. Anthony Falls.

Kindest personal regards.

Sincerely yours,

HUBERT H. HUMPHREY.

STATEMENT BY SENATOR HUMPHREY

I am pleased to note that the Appropriations Committee has provided $300,000 for carrying out the labor-standards provisions of the Federal-Aid Highway Act enacted a few weeks ago. You will recall that the act was intended to assure that employees building the Interstate System will be paid not less than prevailing-wage rates in accordance with the Davis-Bacon Act. The Highway Act imposes the duty on the Secretary of Labor to determine the prevailing-wage rates in the immediate locality of each project, after consulting with the highway department of the State involved and giving due regard to the information obtained from it.

These responsibilities of the Secretary of Labor will add a tremendous burden on the Office of the Solicitor of Labor. The Solicitor recently testified before the Senate Appropriations Committee that the Highway Act may increase the wage determination workload of his Department by approximately 12,000 determinations per year. This is based on estimates by the Bureau of Public Roads, Department of Commerce, on the number of contracts that will be made each year under the program.

The Solicitor of Labor explained that the workload and cost for each determination under the Highway Act will be substantially greater than for other Davis-Bacon determinations. This additional cost per determination is caused by several factors. For one thing, the greater bulk of the new highway construction will be in rural areas where complete or accurate wage-rate information cannot be obtained from the present sources. Many on-the-spot wage surveys will have to be conducted under the new program. In contrast, most of the present wage determinations are for building and heavy construction projects located in urban areas where information is readily available. Secondly, the requirement for the Secretary of Labor to consult with the appropriate State highway department before making each highway determination means that he must maintain constant liaison with the 48 State highway departments. This costs money. Thirdly, the Department of Labor will have to increase its subscriptions to the private reporting services which furnish information on contract awards.

Clearly the Secretary of Labor will need additional funds for making wage determinations under the Highway Act. He will also require extra funds for coordinating enforcement under the act, necessary to insure compliance with the labor-standards provisions of the act.

The sum of $300,000 is less than the amount requested by President Eisenhower in his communication of July 11 to the President of the Senate with respect to supplemental appropriations for fiscal 1957. It will, however, provide a minimum budget for the enforcement program. I am sure if more funds are needed, the Congress will respond favorably.

Lest there be any question regarding the authority of the Secretary of Labor to coordinate enforcement of the labor standards provisions of the Federal-Aid Highway Act, I think that an examination of what Congress did in enacting the Highway Act clearly shows that both Houses intended to give the Secretary of Labor this responsibility.

Section 115 (a) of the act requires that employees working on the Interstate System shall be paid not less than prevailing wage rates in accordance with the Davis-Bacon Act. And the Secretary of Labor is given the overriding authority, under Reorganization Plan No. 14 of 1950, "to assure coordination of administration and consistency of the labor standards provisions" of the Davis-Bacon Act and related statutes.

It will be recalled that section 115 (a) was added on the floor of the Senate by the Chavez amendment, with the junior Senator from Oregon, among others, as cosponsor. The senior Senator from New Mexico pointed out that the language of his amendment was identical with the labor standard provision inserted in the highway bill by the House Public Works Committee and passed by the House. The provision was not in the bill when reported out by the Senate committee but was reinserted here by enactment of the Chavez amendment. During the debate on the amendment, the junior Senator from Oregon had printed in the RECORD the portion of the House committee report explaining the meaning and operation of the section. The House report stated, "In discharging his responsibilities, the Secretary of Labor will have, with respect to the labor standards specified in the bill, the authority and functions set forth in reorganization plan of 1950" and under the Davis-Bacon Act, as amended.

So when this Chamber voted to include the House labor standards provision in the bill, it was fully aware that the Secretary of Labor was being given the responsibility of coordinating enforcement of the provision, as provided in Reorganization Plan No. 14. The senior Senator from California, in opposing the Chavez amendment, correctly pointed out to the Senate that: "Inclusion of the Davis-Bacon Act in the highway bill would also result in placing enforcement functions in the Federal Government as provided under Reorganization Plan No. 14, 1950. This would mean that the Federal Department of Labor would have authority to conduct compliance inspections" on work conducted under the program. The senior Senator from Florida also referred to the responsibility of the Secretary of Labor if the amendment were adopted.

Nothing can be clearer than that the statement of the House committee is controlling with respect to the application of Reorganization Plan No. 14. The Senate accepted the provision exactly as reported out by the House committee. As the junior Senator from Tennessee explained with respect to the bill reported out of conference: "This particular section was not before the conference committee, because it was approved in identical language in both the Senate version of the bill and the House version of the bill."

The Secretary of Commerce is responsible, as stated by the managers on the part of the House in connection with the conference report, "to insure that the Davis-Bacon Act is applied to Interstate System projects." His enforcement responsibility under the Highway Act is comparable to that vested in each Federal contracting agency under the Davis-Bacon Act. But it is equally clear that the Secretary of Labor has the overall responsibility of coordinating enforcement under the Highway Act, as he has with respect to Davis-Bacon projects.

There is no inconsistency between the enforcement responsibilities of the Secretary of Commerce and the coordinating functions of the Secretary of Labor under the Highway Act. During the 6 years since adoption of Reorganization Plan No. 14, the functions performed by the agencies having the primary enforcement responsibility and those of the Secretary of Labor have been mutually complementary in producing effective enforcement of the labor standards provisions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment.

If there be no further amendment to be proposed, the question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, request a conference thereon with the House of Representatives, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer (Mr. BIBLE in the chair) appointed Mr. HAYDEN, Mr. RUSSELL, Mr. CHAVEZ, Mr. ELLENDER, Mr. HILL, Mr. BRIDGES, Mr. SALTONSTALL, Mr. YOUNG, and Mr. KNOWLAND the conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I further ask unanimous consent that the clerk be given authority to change the section numbers, if necessary.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATION BILL, 1957—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I submit a report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the 2 Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12138) making supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1957, and for other purposes. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read for the information of the Senate.

The legislative clerk read the report.

(For conference report, see House proceedings, July 23, 1956, pp. 14002–14004 CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. President, I desire to ask the distinguished Senator from Arizona, the chairman of the committee, whether the conference report includes agreement by the House of Representatives to the provision for the Advisory Committee on Weather Control, which provision was inserted in the bill by the Senate.

Mr. HAYDEN. Yes, that was agreed to.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. President, this item was not included in the bill at the time when it was passed by the House of Representatives, because at that time the President had not signed the bill extending the life of the Advisory Committee on Weather Control.

I recognize the lateness of the hour, and I shall not detain the Senate; but I wish to say that when history is written, I think the work of the Advisory Committee on Weather Control and the value of the experiments on modication of clouds will be considered among the most important results from the tasks authorized by this Congress.

I may say that I have before me a paper by Capt. Howard T. Orville, chairman of the Committee, presented by him at a conference on weather control, held just a few days ago in the State of South Dakota, by invitation of Gov. Joe Foss. I ask unanimous consent that the statement by the chairman of the Advisory Committee be inserted at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON WEATHER CONTROL

(By Capt. Howard T. Orville, chairman, Friez instrument division, Bendix Aviation Corp.)

Gentlemen, it is indeed a pleasure for the task force of the Advisory Committee on Weather Control to meet with the distinguished gentlemen from South Dakota headed by His Excellency, Gov. Joe Foss. We sincerely hope when this day is over you will all have a better understanding of what is meant by cloud seeding experiments and you will have a deeper appreciation of the capabilities and limitations of present cloud seeding techniques and even more important the great difficulties in determining exactly what effects have been obtained when cloud seeding experiments are carried out.

You will note that I have used the term "experiments" in connection with the cloud seeding. The use of this term is intentional to emphasize the fact that there is still much to be learned about cloud seeding and how to determine what results, if any, have been obtained when cloud seeding experiments are conducted over an area.

It may seem strange to some of you that even though the present techniques of creating precipitation artificially were first discovered almost 10 years ago there are still many questions remaining to be answered and because so many of the answers are unknown the whole question of weather modification using present scientific techniques is still controversial. There are many today who feel that cloud seeding can completely modify the weather and that the day of absolute weather control is on the horizon. There are many more, and probably most of us here today are in this classification, who take the more conservative view that cloud seeding experiments can and do produce increases in preciptation of varying amounts under favorable weather conditions. Then, of course, there is the third group who are positively skeptics and will never accept the view that cloud seeding has any effect on the weather until they have observed repeated positive demonstrations almost with mathematical certainty.

Because of the widely different opinions as to the effectiveness of cloud seeding and because of the tremendous economic importance of any methods of increasing precipitation in the western drought States, Congress became interested in weather modification as early as 1948. However, it was not until 1953 that through the efforts of your distinguished Senator FRANCIS CASE, assisted by Senators CLINTON ANDERSON, of New Mexico, and WARREN MAGNUSON, of Washington, that a bill was finally passed and signed into law creating the Advisory Committee on Weather Control. This bill was signed by President Eisenhower on August 13, 1953, and created an 11-man committee to study and evaluate public and private experiments in weather modification. It is now known as Public Law 256 (67 Stat. 559). Its members consist of 5 members from private life of recognized standing in the fields of science, agriculture, and business, and 6 members from interested Government departments. The members from private life were appointed by President Eisenhower on December 9, 1953, and confirmed by the Senate on January 25, 1954. This 11-man Committee held its first meeting on December 18, 1953. At this first meeting the Committee adopted four guiding principles to ensure that its evaluation would be impartial in all respects. These principles are:

"First, the Committee will base its conclusions on facts obtained and interpreted, and not any preconceived notions. Experiments to date have suggested that weather control may eventually provide benefits to agriculture, industry, and Government. Without such a hint of substantial benefits, the Congress would most likely not have created this Committee. However, the Committee will not proceed under the assumption that weather control, including rainmaking, does 'work' or does not 'work.' It will aim to examine all the evidence with scholarly care and scientific impartiality.

"Second, the Committee recognizes the need for additional basic research dealing with processes related to rain, snow, and cloud phenomena. There is also a need to develop ways and means of providing methods for reliable evaluation of weather-control activities. The Committee will encourage such research in industry at our universities and throughout Government.

"Third, the Committee will welcome, and will solicit, the information possessed by and the opinions held by all individuals and groups having an interest in the field of weather control. It will carefully consider all facts and opinions pertinent to its study.

"Fourth, the Committee will not act in any way prejudicial to responsible individuals and concerns attempting to modify the weather."

Since that time the Committee has—

1. Held a total of 12 meetings.

2. Made numerous field trips to observe cloud-seeding operations.

3. Received and analyzed several hundred reports from private meteorologists, commercial cloud-seeding companies, and corporations.

4. Obtained complete information on Government-sponsored projects.

5. Consulted with or sought the advice of most of the leading scientists in the world who are familiar with one phase or another in the field of weather modification.

6. Developed an evaluation program consisting of two principal phases, a statistical one and a study of the physical process. You will hear much more of this program this afternoon from Capt. F. A. Berry, our chief scientific adviser.

The Committee was severely handicapped in its operations prior to July 1, 1954, due to lack of funds. A very modest budget was granted by Congress on July 1 and this permitted setting up a staff headquarters in Washington, D. C. As most of you know, the first executive secretary was Charles Gardner, Jr., a native son from Miller, S. Dak. Also you will be interested in knowing that our administrative assistant, Miss Rosalea Munkvold, is also a native of South Dakota. Since this was a temporary Committee, due to go out of existence on June 30, 1956, extreme difficulty was encountered in obtaining a competent technical staff. In fact, the only way in which this was possible was because Public Law 256 permitted the Committee to obtain personnel from other Government agencies on a reimbursable basis. The Committee obtained its chief scientific advisor, Capt. F. A. Berry, from the Navy, its chief climatologist, H. Thom, from the United States Weather Bureau, as well as several other members of the technical staff, and then the Department of Agriculture and Meteorological Survey assisted in furnishing several persons who were willing to come with the Committee for about 2 years.

The Committee is primarily concerned with three aspects of weather modification or cloud seeding as conducted by the commercial cloud-seeding companies.

1. The technical aspects. How effective is cloud seeding? Does it increase or decrease rainfall or is there no effect?

2. If the answers to (1) above are in the affirmative and there is a positive effect then what economic benefits may be expected from cloud seeding? Dean Eberle, our vice chairman, headed a group of economists and businessmen that has already made a study of the benefits to be obtained if a 10 percent increase in rainfall is produced.

3. If the answers to (1) and (2) are in the affirmative then the Committee has been directed to report to the President immediately on the advisability of the Federal Government regulating by means of licenses or otherwise, those who carry out weather modification activities.

Up to the present time the Committee has found partial answers to (1) and (2) above, but sees no reason to recommend Federal regulation at this time. It has found:

(a) That supercooled stratified clouds can be dissipated by aircraft seeding with dry ice or silver iodide.

(b) Water seeding of warm cumulus clouds will initiate precipitation under favorable temperature and moisture conditions.

(c) Dry ice and silver iodide seeding of cumulus clouds over 5,000 feet above the freezing line and temperature at top −10° C. will induce precipitation.

(d) Ground generator silver iodide seeding in the three Pacific Coast States has produced average increases in precipitation of 9 percent to 17 percent from late winter and early spring storms. These results cannot be referred to other areas or other seasons of the year. The Committee hopes to find answers to flatland seeding and interior mountain areas during the next 2 years that Congress has just granted.

(e) Intensify study of hail storm suppression and the possibility of inhibiting lightning fires seems well justified. Captain Berry may mention this in his discussion of project Skyfire this afternoon.

In its study the Committee is paying particular attention to any research leading to the discovery of new types of nucleating agents and new methods of dispersing these agents.

In closing I would like to quote from a report by Assistant Secretary Aandahl, of the Department of Interior, when he sums up the relation between cloud seeding and irrigation:

"While the studies to date offer hopes of some eventual increase of water supply, there is, within the present scope of scientific knowledge, little likelihood that artificially induced precipitation can ever substitute for irrigation in most of the areas now requiring irrigation. Precipitation cannot be caused when there is insufficient moisture vapor in the air. Furthermore, as far as is known now, other factors such as temperature must be favorable. Thus, it may not always be possible to cause rain when needed for the crops. There are also times when rainfall, while needed for some crops, may bring damage or even ruin to others. Air movements are sufficiently erratic that it would be impractical, if not completely impossible, to deposit rainfall on certain localized plots. Even if the techniques develop to their maximum anticipated potential of effectiveness, the total annual rainfall in most arid areas will probably still be a fraction of that required for crops, and much of it will be at times when it cannot be fully used. Reservoirs will still be required to conserve water for use when needed, and canals and related works will still be needed to convey the water to the exact spot of use."

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. President, I also ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point an account from the Sioux Falls Daily Argus-Leader for July 19, 1956, dealing with experiments in cloud seeding by the use of jet planes, as carried on by the South Dakota Air National Guard; and also an editorial from the same newspaper, commenting upon the results obtained.

There being no objection, the article and editorial were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CLOUD SEEDING IS HELD SUCCESSFUL

PIERRE, July 19.—South Dakota has successfully pioneered in cloud seeding experiments by jet plane, it was reported to a State weather modification conference here.

Clouds were seeded for the first time by a specially equipped jet plane and produced excellent results, Chief Howard Welle, United States Navy representative on the National Advisory Committee on Weather Control, told the conference.

The plane, carrying a converted jato tube (jet assist takeoff) with 60 pounds of dry ice on each flight, successfully seeded the coulds in the southeastern part of the State on 6 days.

Wells said arrangements for the experiments were made in Washington 2 weeks ago in conference with Senator Francis Case, Gov. Joe Foss, and Lt. Col. D. L. (Duke) Corning. One of the Air Guard planes of the 175th Fighter Interceptor Squadron at Sioux Falls was specially equipped for the experiments on July 5.

TRACKED DOWN BY RADAR

"The experiments were carried out in cooperation with the United States Weather Bureau station at Sioux Falls which tracked the seeding operations by radar," Wells disclosed.

"We made one run in a C–47, but the icing level in this country is high (12,000–14,000 feet) and it took too long to reach that altitude."

Wells said M. Sgt. Bob Perkins, Air Guard mechanic, designed a trapdoor arrangement for a jato tube and placed screen mesh at one end. The tube, loaded with dry ice, was attached to the belly of a T–33 jet trainer. The pilot tripped the trapdoor from his pressurized cockpit, rushing air through the tube and supercooling it while the screen prevented chunks of ice from escaping.

THREE HUNDRED AND FIFTY MILES AN HOUR

The super-cooled air was spread over the tops of storm clouds at altitudes ranging from 6,500 to 39,000 feet while the jet plane was traveling about 350 miles per hour. Except for one trip over the West River and near Pickstown, all flights were flown over the East River area.

Most of them were flown near Sioux Falls to permit ground as well as air observation.

Wells said every cloud seeded produced rains, many of them minutes after the plane had made its run over the tops. The ground observers kept in radio contact with the pilot and learned that the clouds rose quickly after seeding. One pilot reported that the top of a cloud he had seeded rose 2,500 feet within 3 minutes.

Flights were made July 9, 10, 13, 15, 16, and 17 and Wells gave instructions to the pilots on days when cloud formations were not right for seeding and when there were severe thunderstorms in the area.

THREE INCH FALL

"There was a complete changeover in the formation of the clouds after seeding and rain fell from them soon after each run," Wells said. "On one flight, three clouds 20 miles apart were seeded and one of them dropped three inches of rain in the Sioux City region."

Colonel Corning, Maj. John Schilt and Capt. Justin Berger took turns piloting the plane on the experimental flights. A chase plane went along on each flight to observe the effect of the seeding.

Colonel Corning described flying through one of the clouds after seeding and said, "Something was churning in there and I flew out of it fast."

"There were a lot of skeptics among my boys at first," Corning added. "But they joined me in believing there's something to it now."

Wells said the dry ice disappeared at the rate of about one pound for every 4 miles, while normal cloud seeding with dry ice requires from 3 to 20 pounds every 4 miles.

He added, "There is an abundance of moisture in the clouds out here."

FOSS OPENS EVENT

Governor Foss opened the weather modification conference by stating that rain increase programs should be encouraged in an effort to provide more stable rainfall for this agricultural State. He said arrangements have been made to conduct further experiments by the State.

"We're going to try out some new ideas," Foss said. "I realize that these programs are still pretty much of a gamble. However, rain increase research has been improving the odds."

Two other members of the Advisory Committee on Weather Control, Chairman Howard T. Orville, New York, and Dean A. M. Eberle of South Dakota State College, also addressed the conference. Orville described rain increase projects on the West coast and Eberle traced the progress of rain programs in this State.

Other speakers were Charles Gardner, formely of Miller, S. Dak., and Jack Disanto, Rapid City, representing commercial rain increase companies.

JETS EXCEL AS RAIN PRODUCERS

The experiments with the "seeding" of rain clouds by jet airplanes in the Sioux Falls territory are an interesting development in this new field of scientific exploration.

According to the reports, the jets have made several tests under a program suggested by Gov. Joe Foss and Senator FRANCIS CASE. Dry ice was sprayed on the clouds and precipitation resulted.

One pilot said the reaction was noticeable when he dropped the ice on a cloud. He cited an instance where a cloud he had seeded rose 2,500 feet immediately afterward—an apparent result of the lightening of its weight due to the precipitation of some of the moisture it was carrying.

Each run produced results, the report said. The jets traveled through and above the clouds at about 350 miles an hour.

Col. Duke Corning said odd things took place after the seeding. "Something was churning in there," he explained in describing one incident, "and I flew out of it fast."

Then he added: "There were a lot of skeptics among my pilots at first but they join me in believing there's something to it now."

The experiments provided reason to believe that the jets achieved results better and faster than other types of airplanes.

All of this points up to another interesting chapter in the program of weather control. The experiments may have been the occasion for a rather peculiar and somewhat erratic rain pattern in the Sioux Falls area during July—many rains that struck limited areas and bypassed others.

Obviously it is wrong to classify today's rainmaking with the fakes of some 50 and 60 years ago. The earlier attempts were unscientific and often misrepresented. But these of today are something else. Rain can be produced, the tests have demonstrated, when conditions are right.

But there are countless problems that may develop. In fact, some already have developed. There may be a battle among areas in respect to the right to seed moisture-bearing clouds. There may be questions about hail resulting from the activity. There may be instances when the rain falls in areas where it isn't desired. There may be cases of excessive rainfall. In any event, all of it is extremely interesting and in a few more years we may know much more about it.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. President, I may say to the Senate that the use of jet planes for cloud seeding—the dropping of dry ice in cumulus clouds—is a new thing. The jet plane has made it possible to get on top of the higher clouds, and to do so with some remarkable results. On six trials between July 5 and July 17, as I recall, success was obtained in each instance. In view of the fact that the Congress is so repeatedly called upon to bring relief in one form or another to drought-stricken areas, the significance of this matter is not to be underestimated. Therefore, I have included in the RECORD the article and the editorial from the Sioux Falls Daily Argus-Leader.

I also ask unanimous consent to have printed at this point in the RECORD a report by Mr. Howard J. Wells, an expert of the Advisory Committee on Weather Control, who was sent to South Dakota as an observer during the conduct of these trials. In the report he details the incidents and the circumstances under which the seeding was carried on, and the results which were obtained. I am sure they will be of interest to every Member of the Senate. I think they have great significance for the country as a whole.

There being no objection, the report was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

REPORT OF HOWARD J. WELLS, ADVISORY COMMITTEE ON WEATHER CONTROL, SIOUX FALLS, S. DAK.

Thursday July 5, 1956: Dean Aberle picked up at the Carpenter Hotel, and we proceeded to the Air National Guard Terminal at the Sioux Falls Airport. I was introduced to Lt. Col. Duane L. Corning and staff, and we inspected the available aircraft for the project. One C–47, one B–25 in overhaul and 3 T–33 Jets were found suitable for conducting the project. During the afternoon, a metal chute was made for the C–47. Dean Eberle and I established a source of dry ice at 4 cents a pound. We went to the United States Weather Bureau and met Mr. Clark, officer in charge. Everything is working fine, and all personnel are very interested and cooperative. We gave a cold box demonstration in Colonel Corning's office during the afternoon.

Friday, July 6, 1956: We briefed Colonel Corning for first seeding run in the C-47. About 30 pounds of ice remaining from Thursday's demonstration was used. The top of the cumulus clouds was about 14,000 feet. Good results both by observation and radar were observed. This was a single drop method, and it was a wonderful experience for the crew. Also the colonel saw the results, which is an important part of the operation.

Saturday, July 7, 1956: After looking over the weather at the Weather Bureau, it was decided not to seed due to severe thunderstorms throughout the area. The remainder of the day was spent devising a suitable dispenser which could be used on jet aircraft. The result was using a Jato bottle and tripping mechanism control from the inside of the aircraft.

Sunday, July 8, 1956: This was a very good seeding day. The T-33 equipped with dispenser proceeded on discussed flight plane. It was decided to seed perpenicular to the wind and 40 miles away from the station on a bearing of 310 degrees. This would bring the seeding area over the station in about 1 hour. A chase plane accompanied the seeding plane to watch the dispenser in operation.

The seeding was conducted on top of clouds working back and forth along a 20-mile line. Complete change over was noted in about 30 minutes. The thunderstorms which formed at the end of the run were, or could have been, caused by seeding as the plane turned around at each end of the run. If this is true, then we are underseeding except at turning points.

The dispenser used 60 pounds of dry ice in 50 minutes, or about 1 pound per every 4 miles. Again the pilots could see very good results and were amazed at the growth. A second run was made in the afternoon, but the clouds were not forming due to subsidence in the atmosphere. There were no results to speak of.

Monday, July 9, 1956: This was a fair seeding day. The T-33 aloft proceeded at 27,000 feet. Clouds were visible at the station, and all available flying personnel were standing by to observe the results. We were in contact with the plane through radio, and the pilot gave word when the dispenser was opened. The target cloud was 60 miles distant from the station. Rain was observed to fall from the base of the cloud in about 30 minutes. The top of the cloud, in accordance with the pilot's report, rose at the rate of 2,500 feet in about 2 minutes. Everyone was very impressed.

Tuesday, July 10, 1956: The bottle was modified to give greater output. The T-33 was out and hit the top of three clouds about 20 miles apart. One of these clouds gave 3 inches of rain to Sioux City. The other two were observed to give rain, but how much was unknown.

Wednesday, July 11, 1956, and Thursday, July 12, 1956: There was high pressure over the area. The time was used to instruct pilots and men in methods of seeding.

Friday, July 13, 1956: The forecast proved a failure and spent the day in working with pilots in a simple method of when to work and when not to.

Saturday, July 14, 1956: Again, we decided not to seed because of severe thunderstorm and tornado warnings.

Sunday, July 15, 1956: A weak front was crossing the State southwest to northeast with thunderstorms reported north of station. We decided to conduct operation trying to slow down thunderstorms. Good results at station with 0.20 of light to moderate rain falling.

Monday, July 16, 1956: Air over the station was too dry to operate, but a moist zone was expected to move down from the north. At 1330 first top of cumulus clouds could be seen to the northwest and west. The flight departed from the area and reported moderate thunderstorms through the north half of the State. Captain Berger decided to seed only clouds that were not raining. One cloud was seeded, and as the plane descended to observe base, rain commenced to fall approximately 15 to 20 minutes after seeding.

Tuesday, July 17, 1956: Weak front south and southwest to north northeast through eastern half of the State with thundershowers in progress by 0900. The flight went to the extreme south end of the State and seeded again along the clear air side of the front. During the afternoon, a flight departed to conduct seeding operations over the airport. The cloud base was 6,500 feet and the tops 9,000 to 12,000 feet. Seeded clouds were observed to form and reach 19,000 to 20,000 feet. This bank moved southeast and light rain showers were falling from the base of the cloud by 1700.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, this is the conference report on the first supplemental appropriation bill, is it not?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. Mr. President, I wish to thank the conferees for keeping in the bill the item of $35,000 for the building of an elevator at Anderson, S. C.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I ask that the message from the House of Representatives announcing the action of the House on certain amendments of the Senate be laid before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives announcing its action on certain amendments of the Senate to House bill 12138, which was read as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, U. S.,
July 23, 1956.

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 16, 26, 34, 38, 45, 58, 59, 60, and 61 to the bill (H. R. 12138) entitled "An act making supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1957, and for other purposes", and concur therein.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, U. S.,
July 23, 1956.

Resolved, That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of Senate No. 4 to the bill (H. R. 12138) entitled "An act making supplemental appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1957, and for other purposes", and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum of $18,915,000 proposed, insert "$16,250,000."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 22, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by said amendment insert:

"SEC. 310. Not exceeding $5 million of the funds available to the Department of Defense for military construction may be used for capital expenditures other than for amortization of outstanding mortgages on any housing project constructed under title VIII of the National Housing Act as in effect prior to the Housing amendments of 1955, in accordance with applicable provisions as may be authorized by law during the 2d session of the 84th Congress: Provided, That the Secretary of Defense or his designee, in acquiring such housing projects, may make purchases subject to any existing mortgage or assume such mortgage."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 27, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by said amendment insert:

"REPAIR, IMPROVEMENT, AND EQUIPMENT OF FEDERALLY OWNED BUILDINGS OUTSIDE THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

"For an additional amount for 'repair, improvement, and equipment of federally owned buildings outside the District of Columbia', not to exceed $35,000, to remain available until expended."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 33, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: After the word "expended", insert: ": Provided, That no part of this appropriation shall be used for the acquisition of any land without the approval of the local government concerned."

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 36, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In line 5 of the amendment, delete the words "assisting the Territory in."

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I move that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House to the amendments of the Senate Nos. 4, 22, 27, 33, and 36.

Mr. THYE. Mr. President, amendment No. 33 has been mentioned. The only reason I rise is to explain that today I have received a considerable number of telephone calls because certain language relative to amendment No. 33 denies the right to expend any of these funds until agreement is obtained from the local units of the Government. Many persons fear that that provision will restrict the use of the funds entirely, because concurrence will not be obtained from the local units of Government.

I wish to make this explanation because some persons have accused me of being the author of the amendment. It is a House provision. In the conference we were unable to get the House to agree to amendment No. 33 unless that language was made a part of the legislative enactment. I wish the RECORD to show that I am not the author of the amendment, and that the Senate conferees were unable to obtain concurrence.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, the Senator from Minnesota has correctly stated the situation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Arizona.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. HAYDEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed at this point in the RECORD, as a part of my remarks, a summary of the bill, showing for each appropriation title the amount of the budget estimate, the amount provided by the House of Representatives, the amount provided by the Senate, and the amount appropriated under the conference report.

There being no objection, the summary was ordered to be printed in the RECORD.

AMENDMENT OF CERTAIN ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS OF TARIFF ACT OF 1930—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I believe that the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD] has a conference report on the customs simplification bill, House bill 6040. I ask that the report be submitted, so it may be considered by the Senate.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I submit a report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6040) to amend certain administrative provisions of the Tariff Act of 1930 and to repeal obsolete provisions of the customs laws. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read for the information of the Senate.

The legislative clerk read the report.

(For conference report, see House proceedings, July 21, 1956, pp. 13878–13879, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the Senate receded on only 1 amendment, and the House receded on 12. So the conference report is practically the bill as it was passed by the Senate. It is a unanimous report by the conferees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF AGRICULTURAL TRADE DEVELOPMENT AND ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1954—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, I submit a report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 3903) to amend the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, so as to increase the amount authorized to be appropriated for purposes of title I of the act, and for other purposes. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read for the information of the Senate.

The legislative clerk read the report.

(For conference report, see House proceedings, pp. 14562–14563, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, the conferees agreed unanimously on the provisions of the conference report. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point as a part of my remarks an explanation of the differences between S. 3903 as passed by the Senate and the conference substitute therefor.

There being no objection, the explanation was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DIFFERENCES BETWEEN S. 3903 AS PASSED BY THE SENATE AND THE CONFERENCE SUBSTITUTE THEREFOR

1. The provision of S. 3903 (sec. 2) providing for the use of foreign currencies generated under title I for American schools, libraries, and community centers abroad has been modified in technical respects (1) to conform to changes made in Public Law 480 by the Mutual Security Act of 1956 and (2) to meet parliamentary objections in the House. No change in substance was made in this provision.

2. The Senate bill would have modified section 304 of Public Law 480 so as to restrict it to title I transactions and permit barter with Iron Curtain satellites. The House amendment would have modified it to make it clear that barter with such countries is prohibited. The conference substitute omits both the House and Senate provisions and leaves the law unchanged.

3. The conference substitute extends the famine and urgent relief provisions of title II to provide assistance in meeting extraordinary relief requirements, such as those for refugee relief, which may be extraordinary although no longer urgent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

CREDIT FACILITIES AVAILABLE TO FARMERS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, I submit a report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11544) to improve and simplify the credit facilities available to farmers, to amend the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, and for other purposes. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read for the information of the Senate.

The legislative clerk read the report.

(For conference report, see House proceedings, pp. 14558–14560, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, the conferees were unanimous in their decision. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point an explanation of the differences between the conference substitute and the Senate amendment to House bill 11544.

There being no objection, the explanation was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DIFFERENCES BETWEEN THE CONFERENCE SUBSTITUTE AND THE SENATE AMENDMENT TO H. R. 11544

1. The House bill and the Senate amendment contained language restricting farm ownership and operating loans on less than family-size farms to bona fide farmers, but defined bona fide farmers somewhat differently. The conference substitute generally follows the House bill in this respect, but substitutes historical residence on a farm and historical dependence on farm income for dependence during 1 of the last 10 years on farm income.

2. The Senate amendment would have limited farm ownership refinancing loans on less than family-size farms to loans to refinance indebtedness constituting a lien on the farm. The conference substitute would permit such loans to refinance indebtedness incurred for any agricultural purpose.

3. The Senate amendment would have prohibited farm ownership or operating loans to borrowers able to obtain loans from other sources at "reasonable rates." The conference substitute leaves the existing law unchanged. Existing law prohibits such loans if obtainable elsewhere at prevailing rates but not in excess of 5 percent. The conferees felt the existing law to be adequate to assure that such loans will be restricted to other than the well-to-do farmers.

4. The Senate amendment would have permitted loans to be made on family-size farms having a value in excess of the average value of efficient family-size farms in the community. The conference substitute would permit improvement loans to be made for such farms, but not acquisition or enlargement loans.

5. The conference substitute would extend the economic emergency loan authority of Public Law 727, 83d Congress for 2 years and increase the overall limitation on such authority to $65 million. The Senate amendment contained no similar provision, the Senate having previously passed S. 3559, to provide for a similar extension and to increase the limitation to $50 million.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF WATERSHED PROTECTION AND FLOOD PREVENTION ACT—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. KERR. Mr. President, I submit a report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8750) to amend the Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention Act. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read for the information of the Senate.

The legislative clerk read the report.

(For conference report, see House proceedings, pp. 14560–14562, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, was the conference report signed by all the conferees?

Mr. KERR. It was. I will say to the Senator from California that the provisions agreed upon in conference were substantially in line with the spirit of the bill as passed by the Senate.

There were three principal changes. First, the Senate bill had provided that in certain instances plans should be submitted to the Public Works Committees of the House and Senate. In the bill as passed by the House, it was provided that the plans be referred to the Agriculture Committees of the House and Senate.

It was agreed in conference—and certain specifications were agreed upon—that when the plan was predominantly a flood control plan, it be referred to the Public Works Committee, and when it was predominantly an agricultural plan, it be referred to the Agriculture Committees.

An effort was made to make especially clear the intent of the language as provided by the Senate, which permitted the local organization to have the optional right of employing engineering services in connection with plans for development. Where the structure for the impounding of water exceeded 5,000 acre-feet—in other words, when it became a structure which involved a considerable part of the program in the matter of conservation of water for municipal water supplies or irrigation—the privilege of employing local engineering services was made optional.

The other point, as I recall, was to clarify the language in the bill which specified that help was available to the local organization from the Secretary of Agriculture, in the preparation of specifications for the plan. The employment of necessary assistance in preparing advertisements for bids and entering into contracts for carrying out the structure as planned, was provided for.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, let me say for the RECORD that both the Department of Agriculture and the Bureau of the Budget are opposed to this bill, although it was not generally known at the time it was passed by the Senate last Saturday morning.

Yesterday I had inserted in the RECORD, at page 14217, correspondence from these two agencies of the Government, setting forth their opposition to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

EXTENSION OF TIME WITHIN WHICH AWARDS OF CERTAIN MILITARY AND NAVAL DECORATIONS MAY BE MADE—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, I submit a report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 1637) to extend the time limit within which awards of certain military and naval decorations may be made. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read for the information of the Senate.

The legislative clerk read the report.

(For conference report, see House proceedings of today.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, the conference report is signed by all the conferees on the part of the Senate and the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

IMPROVEMENT OF HOUSING AND CONSERVATION AND DEVELOPMENT OF URBAN COMMUNITIES

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate a hand engrossed copy of House bill 11742, which has just come over from the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate a bill coming over from the House of Representatives.

The bill (H. R. 11742) to extend and amend laws relating to the provision and improvement of housing and the conservation and development of urban communities, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute. I ask that the amendment be printed in the RECORD at this point without reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment may be printed in the RECORD at this point without reading.

The amendment offered by Mr. FULBRIGHT, in the nature of a substitute, was to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "Housing Amendments of 1956."

TITLE I—FHA INSURANCE PROGRAMS

PROPERTY IMPROVEMENT LOANS

SEC. 101. (a) Section 2 (a) of the National Housing Act, as amended, is hereby amended by striking out "September 30, 1956," and inserting in lieu thereof "September 30, 1959."

(b) Section 2 (b) of such act, as amended, is amended by—

(1) striking out "made for the purpose of financing the alteration, repair, or improvement of existing structures exceeds $2,500, or for the purpose of financing the construction of new structures exceeds $3,000" and inserting "exceeds $3,500";

(2) striking out "except that" in clause (2) and inserting "except that the Commissioner may increase such maximum limitation to 5 years and 32 days if he determines such increase to be in the public interest after giving consideration to the general effect of such increase upon borrowers, the building industry, and the general economy, and"; and

(3) striking out the first proviso and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "Provided, That no insurance shall be granted under this section (A) in the case of any obligation in a principal amount of $2,500 or less, representing any loan, advance of credit, or purchase made after the effective date of the Housing Amendments of 1956, if such obligation has a financing charge in excess of an amount equivalent to $5 discount per $100 original face amount of a 1-year note to be paid in equal monthly installments calculated from the date of the note, or (B) in the case of any such obligation in a principal amount in excess of $2,500, if such obligation has a financing charge in excess of (i) an amount equivalent to $5 discount per $100 original face amount of a 1-year note to be paid in equal monthly installments calculated from the date of the note, with respect to that part of the principal amount not in excess of $2,500, and (ii) an amount equivalent to $4 discount per $100 original face amount of a 1-year note to be paid in equal monthly installments calculated from the date of the note, with respect to that part of the principal amount which is in excess of $2,500: Provided further, That such charges correctly based on tables of calculations issued by the Commissioner, or adjusted to eliminate minor errors in computations in accordance with requirements of the Commissioner, shall be deemed to comply with the preceding proviso: And provided further, That insurance may be granted to any such financial institution with respect to any obligation not in excess of $15,000 (nor an average amount of $2,500 per family unit), having a maturity not in excess of 7 years and 32 days, representing any such loan, advance of credit, or purchase made by it if such loan, advance of credit, or purchase is made for the purpose of financing the alteration, repair, improvement, or conversion of an existing structure used or to be used as an apartment house or a dwelling for two or more families."

HAZARD INSURANCE ON FHA ACQUIRED PROPERTIES

SEC. 102. Title I of the National Housing Act, as amended, is hereby amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 10. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Commissioner is hereby authorized to establish a Fire and Hazard Loss Fund which shall be available to provide such fire and hazard risk coverage as the Commissioner, in his discretion, may determine to be appropriate with respect to real property acquired and held by him under the provisions of this act. For the purpose of operating such fund, the Commissioner is authorized in the name of the fund to transfer moneys and require payment of premiums or charges from any one or more of the several insurance funds established by this act and from the account established pursuant to section 2 (f) of this act, in such amounts and in such manner, including any repayments of such moneys, as the Commissioner, in his discretion, shall determine. In carrying out the authority created by this section, the Commissioner and the Fire and Hazard Loss Fund shall be exempt from all taxation, assessments, levies, or license fees now or hereafter imposed by the United States, by any Territory or possession thereof, or by any State, county, municipality, or local taxing authority. Moneys in the Fire and Hazard Loss Fund not needed for current operations of the fund shall be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States to the credit of the fund or invested in bonds or other obligations of, or in bonds or other obligations guaranteed as to principal and interest by, the United States or in bonds or other obligations which are lawful investments for fiduciary, trust, and public funds of the United States.

"Notwithstanding the provisions of this section, the Commissioner is authorized to purchase such other insurance protection as he may, in his discretion, determine, and he may further provide for reinsurance of any risk assumed by the Fire and Hazard Loss Fund."

COOPERATIVE HOUSING INSURANCE

SEC. 103. Section 213 (b) (2) of the National Housing Act, as amended, is amended by—

(1) striking out "65 percent" and inserting in lieu thereof "50 percent"; and

(2) amending the last proviso to read as follows: "And provided further, That for the purposes of this section the word 'veteran' shall mean a person who has served in the active military or naval service of the United States at any time on or after April 6, 1917, and prior to November 12, 1918, or on or after September 16, 1940, and prior to July 26, 1947, or on or after June 27, 1950, and prior to February 1, 1955."

GENERAL MORTGAGE INSURANCE AUTHORIZATION

SEC. 104. Section 217 of the National Housing Act, as amended, is amended by—

(1) striking out "July 1, 1955" in the first sentence and inserting "July 1, 1956";

(2) striking out "$4,000,000,000" in the first sentence and inserting "$3,000,000,000"; and

(3) striking out "section 2" in the first and second sentences and inserting "section 2 and section 803."

HOUSING IN URBAN RENEWAL AREAS

SEC. 105. Paragraph (iii) of section 220 (d) (3) (B) of the National Housing Act, as amended, is amended by striking out in the first proviso thereof all that follows "construction and design" and inserting in lieu thereof a colon and the following: "Provided further, That the Commissioner may, by regulation, increase any of the foregoing dollar amount limitations by not to exceed $1,000 per room or per family unit, as the case may be, in any geographical area where he finds that cost levels so require."

LOW-COST HOUSING FOR DISPLACED FAMILIES

SEC. 106. Section 221 (d) of the National Housing Act, as amended, is amended by—

(1) striking out "$7,600" in clauses (2) and (3) and inserting "$8,000";

(2) striking out "$8,600" in clauses (2) and (3) and inserting "$10,000";

(3) striking out "95 per centum of the appraised value (as of the date the mortgage is accepted for insurance) of a property, upon which there is located a dwelling designed principally for a single-family residence: Provided, That the mortgagor shall be the owner and occupant of the property at the time of the insurance and shall have paid on account of the property at least 5 per centum of the Commissioner's estimate of the cost of acquisition in cash or its equivalent" in clause (2) and inserting "the appraised value (as of the date the mortgage is accepted for insurance) of a property, upon which there is located a dwelling designed principally for a single-family residence, less such amount as may be necessary to comply with the succeeding proviso: Provided further, That the mortgagor shall be the owner and occupant of the property at the time of the insurance and shall have paid on account of the property at least $200 in cash or its equivalent (which amount may include amounts to cover settlement costs and initial payments for taxes, hazard insurance, mortgage insurance premium, and other prepaid expenses)";

(4) striking out "95 percent of" in clause (3); and

(5) striking out "thirty" in clause (4) and inserting "forty."

COST CERTIFICATION OF RENTAL HOUSING

SEC. 107. Section 227 of the National Housing Act, as amended, is amended by—

(1) inserting the following new sentence between the first and second sentences: "Upon the Commissioner's approval of the mortgagor's certification as required hereunder such certification shall be final and incontestable, execept for fraud or misrepresentation on the part of the mortgagor."; and

(2) adding at the end of subsection (c) the following: "In the case of a mortgage insured under section 220, there shall be included in the actual cost an allowance for sponsor's profit of up to, but not exceeding, 10 percent of all other items entering into the term 'actual cost'; except any allowance for builder's profit, land or amounts paid for a leasehold, amounts paid under a general construction contract where the mortgagor is not the builder as defined by the Commissioner, and amounts included under either (A) or (B) of clause (ii) of the preceding sentence."

NATIONAL DEFENSE HOUSING

SEC. 108. (a) Title II of the National Housing Act, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof a new section as follows:

"SEC. 230. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, and in addition to mortgages insured under section 203 or 207, the Commissioner may insure and make commitments to insure any mortgage under this section which meets, except as hereinafter provided, the eligibility requirements set forth in such sections: Provided, That no mortgage shall be insured under this section unless the Secretary of Defense or his designee shall have certified to the Commissioner that the housing with respect to which the mortgage is issued is necessary in the interest of national defense. Any such certification shall be conclusive evidence to the Commissioner of the need for such housing without regard to any other requirement in this act that the project or property be economically sound or an acceptable risk. If the Commissioner determines, notwithstanding any such certification, that the insurance of any mortgage on such housing is not an acceptable risk, he may require the Secretary of Defense to guarantee the Mutual

Mortgage Insurance Fund or the Housing Insurance Fund, as the case may be, from loss with respect to any such mortgage insured pursuant to this section. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to provide for payment to meet losses arising from such guaranty.

"(b) Except as otherwise provided herein, the provisions of this title relating to mortgages insured under section 203 or 207, respectively, shall be applicable to mortgages insured under this section which meet the eligibility requirements of such sections.

"(c) In the case of any mortgage insured under this section meeting the eligibility requirements of section 207, the principal obligation of such mortgage shall, notwithstanding the provisions of section 207 (c) (2), not exceed 90 percent of the estimated value of the property or project when the proposed improvements are completed.

"(d) The Commissioner shall require that each dwelling designed for rental purposes and covered by a mortgage insured under this section shall be held for rental for a period of not less than 4 years after the dwelling is made available for initial occupancy.

"(e) The Commissioner and the Secretary of Defense shall comply with and carry out the purposes of clause (ii) of section 803 (b) (2) of this act, as amended by the Housing Amendments of 1956, in the administration of this section, and for such purposes any reference therein to the Armed Services Housing Mortgage Insurance Fund shall be deemed to refer to the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund, or the Housing Insurance Fund, as the case may be."

(b) Section 305 of the National Housing Act, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof a new subsection as follows:

"(h) Notwithstanding any other provisions of this act, the Association is authorized to enter into advance commitment contracts, which do not exceed $50 million outstanding at any one time, if such commitments relate to mortgages with respect to which the Federal Housing Commissioner shall have issued pursuant to section 230 a commitment to insure; but of such authorization not more than $5 million outstanding at any one time shall be available for such commitments in any one State."

MILITARY HOUSING

SEC. 109. (a) Section 801 (g) of the National Housing Act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(g) The term 'State' includes the several States, and Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, the District of Columbia, Guam, the Virgin Islands, the Canal Zone, and Midway Island."

(b) Section 803 (a) of such act, as amended, is amended (1) by striking out the first proviso and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "Provided, That the aggregate amount of principal obligations of all mortgages insured under this title (except mortgages insured pursuant to the provisions of this title in effect prior to the enactment of the Housing Amendments of 1955) shall not exceed $3 billion," and (2) by striking out in the last proviso "September 30, 1956" and inserting in lieu thereof "September 30, 1959."

(c) (1) Sections 803 (b) (2) of such act, as amended, is amended by striking out all that follows clause (i) and inserting in lieu thereof the following: ", and (ii) with the approval of the Commissioner, shall have determined that adequate housing is not available for such personnel at reasonable rentals within reasonable commuting distance of the installation and that the mortgaged property will not, so far as can reasonably be foreseen, substantially curtail occupancy in existing housing covered by mortgages insured under this act. The housing accommodations shall comply with such standards and conditions as the Commissioner may prescribe to establish the acceptability of such property for mortgage insurance, except that the certification of the Secretary of Defense or his designee shall (for purposes of mortgage insurance under this title) be conclusive evidence to the Commissioner of the existence of the need for such housing. However, if the Commissioner does not concur in the housing needs as certified by the Secretary, the Commissioner may require the Secretary to guarantee the Armed Services Housing Mortgage Insurance Fund against loss with respect to the mortgage covering such housing. The Commissioner shall report to the Committees on Banking and Currency of the Senate and the House of Representatives each instance in which he has required the Secretary to guarantee the Armed Services Housing Mortgage Insurance Fund, with reasons therefor. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to provide for payment to meet losses arising from such guaranty."

(2) Title VIII of such act, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof a new section as follows:

"SEC. 809. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, or of title IV of the Housing Amendments of 1955, no personnel shall be assigned to, or granted occupancy in, any project which was acquired or constructed under this title, and is situated at or near a military installation, if, at the time it is proposed to make such assignment or grant such occupancy, more than 10 percent of the living accommodations in any housing, acquired or constructed under this title prior to the construction of such project, and situated at or near the same military installation, are vacant.

"(b) As used in this section, the term 'this title' refers to the provisions of title VIII of the National Housing Act in effect both prior to and on and after the date of enactment of the Housing Amendments of 1955."

(d) Clause (B) of section 803 (b) (3) of such act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(B) not to exceed with respect to any project an average of $15,000 per family unit, and with respect to all projects for any one of the armed services an average of $14,250 per family unit, for such part of the property (including ranges, refrigerators, shades, screens, and fixtures) as may be attributable to dwelling use: Provided, That such amounts shall be reduced by the average amount per family unit of the replacement cost, as determined by the Commissioner, of all usable utilities which are owned by the United States, and which are not provided for out of the proceeds of the mortgage, and are within the boundaries of the property or project; and."

(e) (1) Section 803 (b) (3) (C) of such act, as amended, is amended by striking out "eligible builder of" and inserting in lieu thereof "eligible bidder with respect to."

(2) Sections 403 (a) and 403 (b) of the Housing Amendments of 1955 are amended by striking out "eligible builder", wherever the term appears therein and inserting in lieu thereof "eligible bidder."

(3) Section 403 (a) of the Housing Amendments of 1955 is amended by striking out the term "the builder", wherever appearing therein and inserting in lieu thereof the term "the mortgagor."

(4) Section 403 (a) of the Housing Amendments of 1955 is amended by striking out the term "with any builder."

(f) Section 403 (a) of the Housing Amendments of 1955 is further amended by inserting immediately before the last sentence the following: "Any such contract shall provide for the furnishing by the contractor of a performance bond and a payment bond with a surety or sureties satisfactory to the Secretary of Defense, or his designee, and the furnishing of such bonds shall be deemed a sufficient compliance with the provisions of section 1 of the act of August 24, 1935 (49 Stat. 793), and no additional bonds shall be required under such section."

(g) Section 405 of the Housing Amendments of 1955 is amended by striking out "$9,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$18,000,000."

(h) The second sentence of section 406 of the Housing Amendments of 1955 is amended by inserting after the colon immediately following the first proviso the following: "Provided further, That such plans, drawings, and specifications shall follow the principle of modular measure, in order that the housing may be built by conventional construction, on-site fabrication, or factory fabrication, whichever the successful bidder may elect, or, in the case of a negotiated contract, whichever the contracting officer may determine to be in the best interest of the Government."

(i) Section 407 of the Housing Amendments of 1955 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection (c):

"(c) Any funds heretofore or hereafter authorized to be expended by a military department for military construction or by the Coast Guard for acquisition, construction, and improvements may, within the purposes specified in subsection (a) above, be used for capital expenditures other than the amortization of outstanding mortgages."

(j) Title IV of the Housing Amendments of 1955 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 410. (a) In the construction of housing under the authority of this title and title VIII of the National Housing Act, as amended, the following are the maximum limitations on net floor area for each unit:

"(1) For flag officers and general officers, 2,100 square feet.

"(2) For captains in the Navy and colonels, 1,670 square feet.

"(3) For commanders and lieutenant commanders and for lieutenant colonels and majors, 1,400 square feet.

"(4) For officers below the grade of lieutenant commander or major, 1,250 square feet.

"(5) For enlisted members, 1,080 square feet.

"In this section 'net floor area' means the space inside the exterior walls, excluding basement, service space instead of basement, attic, garage, and porches.

"(b) The maximum limitations prescribed by subsection (a) are increased—

"(1) 10 percent for quarters outside the United States;

"(2) 10 percent for quarters of the commanding officer of any station, base or other installation, based on the grade authorized for that position."

TITLE II—HOUSING FOR ELDERLY PERSONS

AMENDMENTS TO THE NATIONAL HOUSING ACT

SEC. 201. (a) Section 203 (b) (2) of the National Housing Act, as amended, is hereby amended by striking out the period at the end thereof and substituting a comma and the following: "except that with respect to a mortgage executed by a mortgagor who is 60 years of age or older, as of the date the mortgage is accepted for insurance, the mortgagor's payment required by this proviso may be paid by a corporation or person other than the mortgagor under such terms and conditions as the Commissioner may prescribe."

(b) Title II of such act, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof a new section as follows:

"Elderly persons housing insurance

"SEC. 229. (a) The purpose of this section is to aid in the provision of housing for elderly persons and is designed to supplement systems of mortgage insurance under other provisions of this act. The Commissioner shall prescribe such procedures as in his judgment are necessary to secure to elderly persons a preference or priority of opportunity to rent or purchase dwelling units in housing the construction or rehabilitation of which is assisted under this section, and to prevent the benefits of this section from being made available to any such person with respect to the purchase of more than one dwelling unit. Any housing the construction or rehabilitation of which is assisted under this section shall be of such design as to be suitable for occupancy by elderly persons and shall be conveniently located so as to provide to the maximum extent practicable for their comfort and welfare. As used in this section, the term 'elderly person' means a person 60 years of age or over, or a family the head of which or his spouse is 60 years of age or over.

"(b) The Commissioner is authorized, upon application by the mortgagee, to insure under this section as hereinafter provided any mortgage which is eligible for insurance as provided herein and, upon such terms and conditions as the Commissioner may prescribe, to make commitments for the insurance of such mortgages prior to the date of their execution or disbursement thereon.

"(c) As used in this section, the terms 'mortgage', 'first mortgage', 'mortgagee', 'mortgagor', 'maturity date', and 'State', shall have the same meaning as in section 201 of this act.

"(d) To be eligible for insurance under this section, a mortgage shall—

"(1) have been made to and be held by a mortgagee approved by the Commissioner as responsible and able to service the mortgage properly;

"(2) involve a principal obligation (including such initial service charges, appraisal, inspection, and other fees as the Commissioner shall approve) in an amount not to exceed $8,000, except that the Commissioner may by regulation increase this amount not to exceed $10,000 in any geographical area where he finds that cost levels so require, and not to exceed the appraised value (as of the date the mortgage is accepted for insurance) of a property upon which there is located a dwelling designed principally for a single-family residence; less such amount as may be necessary to comply with the succeeding proviso: Provided, That the mortgagor shall be the owner and occupant of the property at the time of the insurance and such mortgagor (or other person or corporation satisfactory to the Commissioner) shall have paid on account of the property at least $200 in cash or its equivalent (which amount may include amounts to cover settlement costs and initial payments for taxes, hazard insurance, mortgage insurance premium, and other prepaid expenses): Provided further, That nothing contained herein shall preclude the Commissioner from issuing a commitment to insure and insuring a mortgage pursuant thereto where the mortgagor is not the owner and occupant and the property is to be built or acquired and repaired or rehabilitated for sale and the insured mortgage financing is required to facilitate the construction or the repair or rehabilitation of the dwelling and provide financing pending subsequent sale thereof to a qualified owner-occupant, and in such instances the mortgage shall not exceed 85 percent of the appraised value; or

"(3) if executed by a mortgagor (other than a mortgagor referred to in paragraph (4) of this subsection (d)) which, until the termination of all obligations of the Commissioner under this section, is regulated or restricted by the Commissioner as to rents, charges, and methods of operation, in such form and in such manner as, in the opinion of the Commissioner, will effectuate the purposes of this section, the mortgage may involve a principal obligation not in excess of $12,500,000; and not in excess of $7,200 per family unit for such part of such property or project as may be attributable to dwelling use, except that the Commissioner may by regulation increase this amount to not to exceed $9,000 in any geographical area where he finds that cost levels so require, and not in excess of 90 per centum of the Commissioner's estimate of the value of such property or project when constructed, or repaired and rehabilitated, for use as rental accommodations for eight or more families eligible for occupancy as provided in this section; or

"(4) if executed by a mortgagor which is a public or private nonprofit corporation or association or other acceptable public body or political subdivision, regulated or supervised under Federal or State laws or by political subdivisions of States or agencies thereof, as to rents, charges, and methods of operation, in such form and in such manner as, in the opinion of the Commissioner, will effectuate the purposes of this section, the mortgage may involve a principal obligation not in excess of $12,500,000; and not in excess of $8,000 per family unit for such part of such property or project as may be attributable to dwelling use, except that the Commissioner may by regulation increase this amount to not to exceed $10,000 in any geographical area where he finds that cost levels so require, and not in excess of the Commissioner's estimate of the value of the property or project when constructed, or repaired and rehabilitated, for use as rental accommodations for eight or more families eligible for occupancy as provided in this section; and

"(5) provide for complete amortization by periodic payments within such terms as the Commissioner may prescribe, but not to exceed 40 years from the date of insurance of the mortgage or three-quarters of the Commissioner's estimate of the remaining economic life of the building improvements, whichever is the lesser; bear interest (exclusive of premium charges for insurance and service charge, if any) at not to exceed 5 percent per annum on the amount of the principal obligation outstanding at any time, or not to exceed such percent per annum not in excess of 6 percent as the Commissioner finds necessary to meet the mortgage market; and contains such terms and provisions with respect to the application of the mortgagor's periodic payment to amortization of the principal of the mortgage, insurance, repairs, alterations, payment of taxes, default reserves, delinquency charges, foreclosure proceedings, anticipation of maturity, additional and secondary liens, and other matters as the Commissioner may in his discretion prescribe.

"(e) The Commissioner may at any time, under such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, consent to the release of the mortgagor from his liability under the mortgage or the credit instrument secured thereby, or consent to the release of parts of the mortgaged property from the lien of the mortgage.

"(f) The property or project shall comply with such standards and conditions as the Commissioner may prescribe to establish the acceptability of such property for mortgage insurance. Without restricting the authority of the Commissioner under this act, the Commissioner is hereby authorized (with respect to a mortgagor under paragraph (2), (3), or (4) of subsection (d)) to consider for purposes of mortgage insurance eligibility under this section, any financial arrangement, or guaranty or endorsement of the mortgage, with respect to such property or project by a person or corporation, other than the mortgagor, acceptable to the Commissioner. No mortgage shall be accepted for insurance under this section unless the Commissioner finds that the property or project, with respect to which the mortgage is executed, is economically sound.

"(g) The mortgagee shall be entitled to receive the benefits of the insurance as hereinafter provided—

"(1) as to mortgages meeting the requirements of paragraph (2) of subsection (d) of this section, as provided in section 204 (a) of this act with respect to mortgages insured under section 203, and the provisions of subsections (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), (g), and (h) of section 204 of this act shall be applicable to such mortgages insured under this section, except that all references therein to the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund or the fund shall be construed to refer to the Elderly Persons Housing Insurance Fund, and all references therein to section 203 shall be construed to refer to this section; or

"(2) as to mortgages meeting the requirements of paragraph (3) or paragraph (4) of subsection (d) of this section, as provided in section 207 (g) of this act with respect to mortgages insured under said section 207, and the provisions of subsections (h), (i), (j), (k), and (l) of section 207 of this act shall be applicable to such mortgages insured under this section, and all references therein to the Housing Insurance Fund or the Housing Fund shall be construed to refer to the Elderly Persons Housing Insurance Fund.

"(h) The provisions of section 221 (g) (3) of this act shall be applicable to mortgages insured under this section.

"(i) There is hereby created an Elderly Persons Housing Insurance Fund which shall be used by the Commissioner as a revolving fund for carrying out the provisions of this section, and the Commissioner is hereby authorized to transfer to such fund the sum of $1 million from the War Housing Insurance Fund established pursuant to the provisions of section 602 of this act. General expenses of operation of the Federal Housing Administration under this section may be charged to the Elderly Persons Housing Insurance Fund.

"Moneys in the Elderly Persons Housing Insurance Fund not needed for the current operations of the Federal Housing Administration under this section shall be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States to the credit of such fund, or invested in bonds or other obligations of, or in bonds or other obligations guaranteed as to principal and interest by, the United States. The Commissioner may, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, purchase in the open market debentures issued under the provisions of this section. Such purchases shall be made at a price which will provide an investment yield of not less than the yield obtainable from other investments authorized by this section. Debentures so purchased shall be canceled and not reissued.

"Premium charges, adjusted premium charges, and appraisal and other fees received on account of the insurance of any mortgage accepted for insurance under this section, the receipts derived from the property covered by such mortgage and claims assigned to the Commissioner in connection therewith shall be credited to the Elderly Persons Housing Insurance Fund. The principal of, and interest paid and to be paid on, debentures issued under this section, cash adjustments, and expenses incurred in the handling, management, renovation, and disposal of properties acquired under this section shall be charged to such fund."

(c) (1) Subsection (a) of section 212 of such act, as amended, is amended by inserting "or under paragraph (3) or (4) of subsection (d) of section 229 of this title," immediately following the phrase "or under section 213 of this title,".

(2) Section 219 of such act, as amended, is amended by inserting "the Elderly Persons Housing Insurance Fund," immediately following "the Defense Housing Insurance Fund."

(3) Section 226 of such act, as amended, is amended by inserting "229," immediately following "222."

(4) Subsection (a) of section 227 of such act, as amended, is amended (1) by inserting "(v) under section 229 if the mortgage meets the requirements of paragraph (3) or (4) of subsection (d) thereof," immediately following "paragraph (3) of subsection (d) thereof,", and (2) by redesignating clauses (v) and (vi) as (vi) and (vii), respectively.

(5) Subsection (e) of section 513 of such act, as amended, is amended by inserting "under paragraph numbered (3) or (4) of subsection (d) of section 229," immediately preceding the phrase "under section 608."

(d) Section 305 of such act, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof a new subsection as follows:

"(g) Notwithstanding any other provision of this act, the Association is authorized to enter into advance commitment contracts, which do not exceeed $50 million outstanding at any one time, if such commitments relate to mortgages with respect to which the Federal Housing Commissioner shall have issued pursuant to section 229 a commitment to insure; but of such authorization not more than $5 million outstanding at any one time shall be available for such commitments in any one State."

AMENDMENTS TO THE UNITED STATES HOUSING ACT OF 1937

SEC. 202. (a) Paragraph (2) of section 2 of the United States Housing Act of 1937 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentences: "The term 'families' includes (A) a person 65 years of age or over, and (B) the remaining member of a tenant family. The term 'elderly families' means families the head of which (or his spouse) is 65 years of age or over."

(b) Section 10 of such act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(m) For the purpose of increasing the supply of low-rent housing for elderly families, the Authority may assist the construction of new housing in order to provide accommodations designed specifically for such families, and may, with the approval of the President, after July 1, 1956, without regard to the provisions of any other law, enter into contracts for loans and annual contributions providing for not to exceed 15,000 new dwelling units designed specifically for such families (either as separate projects or as parts of projects), which number shall be increased by 15,000 dwelling units on July 1 of each of the years 1957, 1958, 1959, and 1960, respectively. Such new dwelling units shall be in addition to the dwelling units for which annual contributions contracts are authorized by any other provision of law. The total authorization otherwise provided for annual contributions under this act shall be increased by $6 million per annum on July 1, 1956, and by the same amount on July 1 in each of the years 1957, 1958, 1959, and 1960, respectively: Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed to prevent the provision of dwelling units designed for elderly families under such other authorizations. Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection 10 (g), any local public housing agency, in respect to dwelling units suitable to the needs of elderly families, may extend a prior preference to such families and may waive the provisions of clause (ii) of section 15 (8) (b) with respect to such units: Provided further, That as among such families, the 'First' preference in subsection 10 (g) shall apply."

(c) Section 15 (5) of such act is amended by inserting immediately before the colon in the first sentence the following: "or $2,250 in the case of accommodations designed specifically for elderly families."

(d) Such act is further amended by striking the figure "$336,000,000" in subsection 21 (d) and substituting therefor the figure "$366,000,000."

ADVISORY COMMITTEE

SEC. 203. The Housing and Home Finance Administrator shall establish, in accordance with the provisions of section 601 of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, an advisory committee on matters relating to housing for elderly persons (as defined in section 229 (a) of the National Housing Act, as amended).

TITLE III—FEDERAL NATIONAL MORTGAGE ASSOCIATION

SEC. 301. Subsection (b) of section 302 of the National Housing Act, as amended, is amended by inserting before the period at the end thereof a comma and the following: "except that such $15,000 limit shall not be applicable with respect to mortgages covering property located in Alaska, Guam, or Hawaii which are offered for purchase under section 305."

SEC. 302. Subsection (b) of section 303 of the National Housing Act, as amended, is hereby amended by striking out the first sentence and inserting: "The Association shall accumulate funds for its capital surplus account from private sources by requiring each mortgage seller to make payments of nonrefundable capital contributions equal to 2 percent of the unpaid principal amounts of mortgages purchased or to be purchased by the Association from such seller or equal to such other greater or lesser percentage, but not less than 1 percent thereof, as the Association may determine from time to time, taking into consideration conditions in the mortgage market and the general economy."

SEC. 303. Subsection (a) of section 304 of the National Housing Act, as amended, is hereby amended by striking out "at the market price" in the second sentence and inserting "within the range of market prices."

SEC. 304. (a) Subsection (b) of section 305 of the National Housing Act, as amended, is amended by striking out the second sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, the price to be paid by the Association for mortgages purchased in its operations under this section shall be 100 per centum of the unpaid principal amount thereof at the time of purchase, with adjustments for interest and any comparable items."

(b) Subsection (e) of such section is amended by striking out all that follows the semicolon and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "but of such authorization not more than $5 million outstanding at any one time shall be available for such commitments in any one State."

SEC. 305. (a) Subsection (c) of section 305 of the National Housing Act, as amended, is amended by striking out "purchasers" in the clause preceding the proviso and inserting in lieu thereof "purchases."

(b) Subsection (f) of section 305 of such Act is amended by striking out "by the Housing Amendments of 1955" and inserting in lieu thereof "on or after August 11, 1955."

SEC. 306. (a) Subsection (c) of section 306 of the National Housing Act, as amended, is amended by striking out in the last sentence thereof "and subsection (e) of this section."

(b) Subsection (e) of section 306 of such Act is hereby repealed.

TITLE IV—SLUM CLEARANCE AND URBAN RENEWAL

SEC. 401. Section 102 (d) of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "Notwithstanding section 110 (h) or any other provision of this title, the Administrator may make advances of funds under this subsection for surveys and plans for an urban renewal project (including general neighborhood renewal plans as hereinafter defined) to a single local public body which has the authority to undertake and carry out a substantial portion, as determined by the Administrator, of the surveys and plans or the project respecting which such surveys and plans are to be made: Provided, That the application for such advances shows, to the satisfaction of the Administrator, that the filing thereof has been approved by the public body or bodies authorized to undertake the other portions of the surveys and plans or of the project which the applicant is not authorized to undertake."

SEC. 402. (a) (1) Section 105 (a) of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, is amended by striking out "(including any redevelopment plan constituting a part thereof)."

(2) Section 110 (b) of such act is amended by striking out clause (3) and the semicolon and the word "and" which immediately precede said clause and by inserting the word "and" after the semicolon at the end of clause (1).

(b) (1) Section 110 (c) of such act is amended to read as follows:

"(c) 'Urban renewal project' or 'project' may include undertakings and activities of a local public agency in an urban renewal area for the elimination and for the prevention of the development or spread of slums and blight, and may involve slum clearance and redevelopment in an urban renewal area, or rehabilitation or conservation in an urban renewal area, or any combination or part thereof, in accordance with such urban renewal plan. Such undertakings and activities may include—

"(1) acquisition of (i) a slum area or a deteriorated or deteriorating area, or (ii) land which is predominantly open and which because of obsolete platting, diversity of ownership, deterioration of structures or of site improvements, or otherwise, substantially impairs or arrests the sound growth of the community, or (iii) open land necessary for sound community growth which is to be developed for predominantly residential uses: Provided, That the requirement in paragraph (a) of this section that the area be a slum area or a blighted, deteriorated or deteriorating area shall not be applicable in the case of an open land project;

"(2) demolition and removal of buildings and improvements;

"(3) installation, construction, or reconstruction of streets, utilities, parks, playgrounds, and other improvements necessary for carrying out in the urban renewal area the urban renewal objectives of this title in accordance with the urban renewal plan;

"(4) disposition of any property acquired in the urban renewal area (including sale, initial leasing or retention by the local public agency itself) at its fair value for uses in accordance with the urban renewal plan;

"(5) carrying out plans for a program of voluntary repair and rehabilitation of buildings or other improvements in accordance with the urban renewal plan; and

"(6) acquisition of any other real property in the urban renewal area where necessary to eliminate unhealthful, insanitary or unsafe conditions, lessen density (including measures designed to reduce the vulnerability of metropolitan target zones from enemy attack), eliminate obsolete or other uses detrimental to the public welfare, or otherwise to remove or prevent the spread of blight or deterioration, or to provide land for needed public facilities.

"For the purposes of this title, the term 'project' shall not include the construction or improvement of any building, and the term 'redevelopment' and derivatives thereof shall mean development as well as redevelopment. For any of the purposes of section 109 hereof, the term 'project' shall not include any donations or provisions made as local grants-in-aid and eligible as such, pursuant to clauses (2) and (3) of section 110 (d) hereof.

"Financial assistance shall not be extended under this title with respect to any urban renewal area which is not clearly predominantly residential in character unless such area will be a predominantly residential area under the urban renewal plan therefor: Provided, That, where such an area which is not clearly predominantly residential in character contains a substantial number of slum, blighted, deteriorated, or deteriorating dwellings or other living accommodations, the elimination of which would tend to promote the public health, safety, and welfare in the locality involved and such area is not appropriate for predominantly residential uses, the Administrator may extend financial assistance for such a project, but the aggregate of the capital grants made pursuant to this title with respect to such projects shall not exceed 10 percent of the total amount of capital grants authorized by this title.

"In addition to all other powers hereunder vested, where land within the purview of clause (1) (ii) or (1) (iii) of the first paragraph of this subsection (whether it be predominantly residential or nonresidential in character) is to be redeveloped for predominantly nonresidential uses, loans and advances under this title may be extended therefor if the governing body of the local public agency determines that such redevelopment for predominantly nonresidential uses is necessary and appropriate to facilitate the proper growth and development of the community in accordance with sound planning standards and local community objectives and to afford maximum opportunity for the redevelopment of the project area by private enterprise: Provided, That loans and outstanding advances to any local public agency pursuant to the authorization of this sentence shall not exceed 2½ percent of the estimated gross project costs of the projects undertaken under other contracts with such local public agency pursuant to this title."

(2) The first sentence of section 110 (d) of such act is amended by striking out the words "either the second or third sentence" in clause (2) and inserting "the second sentence."

(3) The first sentence of section 110 (d) of such act is amended by striking out the phrase ", public facilities financed by special assessments against land in the project area," in clause (3) and adding the following proviso before the period at the end of the sentence: ": And provided further, That in any case where a public facility furnished as a local grant-in-aid is financed in whole or in part by special assessments against real property in the project area acquired by the local public agency as part of the project, an amount equal to the total special assessments against such real property (or, in the case of a computation pursuant to the proviso immediately preceding, the estimated amount of such total special assessments) shall be deducted from the cost of such facility for the purpose of computing the amount of the local grants-in-aid for the project."

(d) Section 110 (e) of such act is amended by adding the following at the end thereof: "Where real property in the project area is acquired and is owned as part of the project by the local public agency and such property is not subject to ad valorem taxes by reason of its ownership by the local public agency and payments in lieu of taxes are not made on account of such property, there may (with respect to any project for which a contract of Federal assistance under this title is in force or is hereafter executed) be included, at the discretion of the Administrator, in gross project cost an amount equal to the ad valorem taxes which would have been levied upon such property if it had been subject to ad valorem taxes, but in all cases prorated for the period during which such property is owned by the local public agency as part of the project, and such amount shall also be considered a cash local grant-in-aid within the purview of section 110 (d) hereof. Such amount, and the amount of taxes or payments in lieu of taxes included in gross project cost, shall be subject to the approval of the Administrator and such rules, regulations, limitations, and conditions as he may prescribe."

SEC. 403. (a) (1) Section 102 (d) of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, is amended by adding the following at the end thereof:

"In order to facilitate proper preliminary planning for the attainment of the urban renewal objectives of this title, the Administrator may also make advances of funds (in addition to those authorized above) to local public agencies for the preparation of general neighborhood renewal plans (as herein defined) for urban renewal areas of such scope that the urban renewal activities therein may have to be carried out in stages, consistent with the capacity and resources of the respective local public agency, over an estimated period of not more than 10 years. No contract for advances for the preparation of a general neighborhood renewal plan may be made unless the Administrator has determined that:

"(1) in the interest of sound community planning, it is desirable that the urban renewal area be planned for urban renewal purposes in its entirety;

"(2) the local public agency proposes to undertake promptly an urban renewal project embracing at least 10 percent of such area, upon completion of the general neighborhood renewal plan and the preparation of an urban renewal plan for such project; and

"(3) the governing body of the locality has represented that the general neighborhood renewal plan will be used to the fullest extent feasible as a guide for the provision of public improvements in such area and that the plan will be considered in formulating codes and other regulatory measures affecting property in the area and in undertaking other local governmental activities pertaining to the development, redevelopment, rehabilitation, and conservation of the area.

The contract for any such advance of funds for a general neighborhood renewal plan shall be made upon the condition that such advance shall be repaid, with interest at not less than the applicable going Federal rate, out of any moneys which become available to the local public agency for the undertaking of the first urban renewal project in such area: Provided, That in the event of the undertaking of any other project or projects in such area an appropriate allocation of the amount of the advance, with interest, may be effected to the end that each such project may bear its proper allocable part, as determined by the Administrator, of the cost of the general neighborhood renewal plan. As used herein, a general neighborhood renewal plan means a preliminary plan (conforming, in the determination of the governing body of the locality, to the general plan of the locality as a whole and to the workable program of the community meeting the requirements of section 101) which outlines the urban renewal activities proposed for the area involved, provides a framework for the preparation of urban renewal plans and indicates generally, to the extent feasible in preliminary planning, the land uses, population density, building coverage, prospective requirements for rehabilitation and improvement of property, and any portions of the area contemplated for clearance and redevelopment."

(2) Section 102 (d) of such act, as amended, is further amended by striking "The Administrator may make advances of funds to local public agencies for" and inserting in lieu thereof "The Administrator may make advances of funds to local public agencies for surveys of urban areas to determine whether the undertaking of urban renewal projects therein may be feasible and for."

(b) Section 104 of such act, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 104. Every contract for capital grants under this title shall require local grants-in-aid in connection with the project involved. Such local grants-in-aid, together with the local grants-in-aid to be provided in connection with all other projects of the local public agency on which contracts for capital grants have theretofore been made, shall not be required in excess of one-third of the aggregate net project costs of all projects of the local public agency on which contracts for capital grants have been made."

(c) Section 103 (b) of such act, as amended, is amended by striking out "$200,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$250,000,000".

SEC. 404. Section 106 of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) The Administrator is hereby authorized to make payments to individuals, families, and business concerns to the extent necessary to compensate or reimburse them for the following expenses or losses, for which reimbursement or compensation is not otherwise made, resulting from their displacement from an urban renewal area included in an urban renewal project with respect to which a contract for capital grant or temporary loan with a local public agency has been executed under this title:

"(1) necessary moving expenses not to exceed $100 for any individual or family; and

"(2) business losses, including loss of good-will and necessary moving expenses, not to exceed $2,000 for any business concern.

"The Administrator shall prescribe reasonable rules and regulations for the making of payments in conformity with the purposes of this subsection. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated to the Administrator such sums as may be necessary to make payments under this subsection."

TITLE V—PUBLIC HOUSING

LOW-RENT PUBLIC HOUSING

SEC. 501. (a) Subsection (i) of section 10 of the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"(i) Notwithstanding any other provisions of law, the Authority shall not enter into any new contracts for loans or annual contributions for more than 135,000 additional dwelling units during any fiscal year: Provided, That in respect to the fiscal year 1957 such number shall be increased by the difference between 45,000 and the number of units for which new annual contribution contracts for additional units were entered into during the fiscal year 1956: Provided further, That (subject to the authorization of not to exceed 810,000 dwelling units) the number of additional dwelling units for which contracts may be entered into under this subsection during any fiscal year may be increased at any time or times by additional amounts aggregating not more than 65,000 dwelling units, or may be decreased at any time or times by amounts aggregating not more than 85,000 dwelling units, upon a determination by the President, after receiving advice from the Council of Economic Advisers as to the general effect of such increase or decrease upon conditions in the building industry and upon the national economy, that such action is in the public interest."

(b) Section 13 of such act, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof a new subsection as follows:

"(f) The Authority shall establish general standards applicable to low-rent housing projects with respect to minimum space requirements and type of construction. The Authority shall allow, subject to the provisions of paragraph (5) of section 15 and consistent with such general standards as it may prescribe, the local public housing agencies a maximum amount of discretion with respect to the size of any housing project, the types of dwellings, and project densities and design."

(c) Subsection (d) of section 21 of such act, as amended, is amended by striking out the figure "10" in both places it appears and inserting in lieu thereof the figure "15."

(d) There are hereby repealed—

(1) the third proviso and clause (2) of the eighth proviso appearing in that part of the First Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1954, which is captioned "Annual contributions:" under the heading "Public Housing Administration";

(2) clause (2) of the third proviso, and the fourth proviso, appearing in that part of the Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1953, which is captioned "Annual contributions:" under the heading "Public Housing Administration";

(3) the fourth proviso appearing in that part of the Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1952, which is captioned "Annual contributions:" under the heading "Public Housing Administration";

(4) the sixth and seventh provisos appearing in that part of the first Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1954, which is captioned "Annual contributions:" under the heading "Public Housing Administration", and the fifth and sixth provisos under the same caption in the Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1953;

(5) as of its effective date section 10 (j) of the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended; and

(6) section 10 (l) of the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended.

FARM-LABOR CAMPS

SEC. 502. Section 12 of the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, is amended by adding the following at the end of subsection (f): "Notwithstanding any other provisions of law, upon the filing of a request therefor within 12 months after the effective date of the Housing Amendments of 1956, the Authority shall relinquish, transfer, and convey, without monetary consideration, all of its rights, title, and interest in and with respect to any such project or any part thereof (including such land as is determined by the Authority to be reasonably necessary to the operation of such project and contractual rights to revenues, reserves, and other proceeds therefrom) to any public housing agency whose area of operation includes the project, upon a finding and certification by the public housing agency (which shall be conclusive upon the Authority) that the project is needed to house persons and families of low income and that preference for occupancy in the project will be given, first, to low-income agricultural workers and their families and, second, to other low-income persons and their families. Upon the relinquishment and transfer of any such project it shall cease to be a low-rent project within the meaning of this act, and the Authority shall have no further jurisdiction over the same, except that in any conveyance hereunder the Authority shall reserve to the United States of America any mineral rights of whatsoever nature upon, in, or under the property, including the right of access to and the use of such parts of the surface of the property as may be necessary for mining and saving the minerals. Any project or part thereof not relinquished or conveyed or under a contract for disposal pursuant to this subsection shall be disposed of by the Authority pursuant to subsection (e) of section 13 of this act, notwithstanding the parenthetical clause in said subsection."

DISPOSITION OF DEFENSE HOUSING

The provisions of title III of the Defense Housing and Community Facilities and Services Act of 1951, as amended, and of the act entitled "An act to expedite the provision of housing in connection with national defense, and for other purposes," approved October 14, 1940, as amended, shall not apply to any property transferred hereunder and, except as otherwise provided herein, the laws relating to similar property of the Department of Defense shall be applicable to the property transferred.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of this or any other law, any housing constructed or acquired under the provisions of title III of the Defense Housing and Community Facilities and Services Act of 1951, as amended, which is not transferred under the provisions of subsection (a) hereof shall, as expeditiously as possible, but not later than June 30, 1957, be disposed of on a competitive bid basis to the highest responsible bidder upon such terms and after such public advertisement as the Housing and Home Finance Administrator may deem in the public interest; except that the Administrator may reject any bid which he deems less than the fair market value of the property and may thereafter dispose of the property by negotiation: Provided, That project No. IDA-2D1 at Cobalt, Idaho, shall be sold only for use on the site.

(c) The Housing and Home Finance Administrator is hereby directed to convey (pursuant to the provisions of section 606 of the Act entitled "An act to expedite the provision of housing in connection with national defense, and for other purposes," approved October 14, 1940, as amended): (1) housing project No. RI-37013 to the Housing Authority of the city of Newport, R. I.: Provided, That, notwithstanding the provisions of that section or of any other law, the agreement required by that section shall permit the use of the project in whole or in part for the housing of military personnel without regard to their income, and shall require the authority, in selecting tenants, to give a first preference in respect to 360 dwelling units to such military personnel as the Secretary of Defense or his designee prescribes for 3 years after the date of conveyance and to give 30 days advance notice of available vacancies to such designee, and (2) housing projects Nos. PA-36011 and PA-36012 to the Housing Authority of Philadelphia, Pa.

(d) The act entitled "An act to expedite the provision of housing in connection with national defense, and for other purposes," approved October 14, 1940, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 614. (a) Notwithstanding the provisions of this or any other law, (1) any housing to be sold on site determined by the Administrator to be permanent, located on lands owned by the United States and under the jurisdiction of the Administrator, which is not relinquished, transferred, under contract of sale, sold or otherwise disposed of by the Administrator under other provisions of this act or under the provisions of other law by January 1, 1957, except housing which is determined by the Administrator by that date to be suitable for sale in accordance with section 607 (b) of this act; and (2) any permanent housing to be sold off site which is not relinquished, transferred, under contract of sale, sold or otherwise disposed of prior to the effective date of this section shall be disposed of, as expeditiously as possible, on a competitive basis to the highest responsible bidder upon such terms and after such public advertisement as the Administrator may deem in the public interest; except that the Administrator may reject any bid which he deems less than the fair market value of the property and may thereafter dispose of the property by negotiation.

"(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of this or any other law, all contracts entered into after the enactment of the Housing Amendments of 1956 for the sale, transfer, or other disposal of housing (other than housing subject to the provisions of sec. 607 (b) of this act) determined by the Administrator to be permanent, except contracts entered into pursuant to subsection (a) hereof, shall require that if title does not pass to the purchaser by April 1, 1957 (or within 60 days thereafter if such time is necessary to cure defects in title in accordance with the provisions of the contract), the rights of the purchaser shall terminate and thereafter the housing shall be sold under the provisions of subsection (a) hereof. For the purposes of this subsection, title shall be considered to have passed upon the execution of a conditional sales contract.

"(c) The dates set forth in subsections (a) and (b) of this section shall not be subject to change by virtue of the provisions of section 611 of this act."

TITLE VI—MISCELLANEOUS

COLLEGE HOUSING

SEC. 601. (a) Subsection (d) of section 401 of the Housing Act of 1950, as amended, is amended by striking out "$500,000,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$750,000,000."

(b) Section 404 (b) of such act, as amended, is amended by striking out "and (2)" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "(2) any educational institution (no part of the net earning of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual) the courses of which are designed to train persons to carry on the vocation of minister of a religious denomination, and (3)"

RESEARCH

SEC. 602. (a) The Housing and Home Finance Administrator is authorized and directed to undertake such programs of investigation, analysis, and research as he determines to be necessary and appropriate in the exercise of his responsibilities, including the formulation and carrying out of national housing policies and programs. Without limiting such authority, such programs shall develop and supply data and information on—

(1) the housing inventory of the Nation and the production, use, and demolition and conversion of residential structures, and such other factors as affect the total supply of housing;

(2) mortgage market problems;

(3) the extent to which adequate housing is available to the low-income and middle-income families of the Nation through public and private means;

(4) housing for elderly persons;

(5) residential design, assembly methods, and materials use in relation to cost, utility, and comfort; and

(6) characteristics of current and prospective housing market demand.

(b) (1) In order to permit the Administrator to carry out the functions vested in him by subsection (a) of this section, he is hereby authorized to enter into contracts with agencies of State or local governments and educational institutions and other nonprofit organizations and into working agreements with departments and independent establishments and agencies of the Federal Government on a reimbursable basis: Provided, That the total amount of such contracts and working agreements shall not exceed $500,000 during the fiscal year 1957, which amount shall be increased by further amounts of $1 million on July 1, 1957, and July 1, 1958, respectively.

(2) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this section, including administrative expenses which are hereby authorized, and amounts necessary to make payments pursuant to contracts or working agreements authorized under subsection (b) (1) of this section.

(3) The provisions of the third and fourth sentences of subsection (a) of section 301 of the Housing Act of 1948, as amended, shall apply to contracts and appropriations pursuant to this section.

(c) The Administrator may disseminate (without regard to the provisions of section 306 of the Penalty Mail Act of 1948 (39 U. S. C. 321n)) any data or information acquired, or held under this section, including related data and information otherwise available to the Administrator through the operation of the programs and activities of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, in such form as he shall determine to be most useful to departments, establishments and agencies of the Federal Government, or State, or local governments, to industry and to the general public.

(d) In carrying out the provisions of this section, the Administrator is hereby authorized to request and receive such information or data as he deems appropriate from private individuals, organizations, and other public agencies. Any such information or data shall be used only for the purposes for which it is supplied, and no publication shall be made by the Administrator whereby the information or data furnished by any particular person or establishment can be identified, except with the consent of such person or establishment.

(e) Nothing contained in this section shall limit any authority of the Administrator under title III of the Housing Act of 1948, as amended, or any other provision of law.

HOME OWNER'S LOAN ACT OF 1933

SEC. 603. (a) Section 5 (c) of the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, as amended, is amended by striking out "$2,500" in the proviso at the end of the second paragraph and inserting in lieu thereof "$3,500."

(b) Section 5 (c) of such act is further amended by striking out "15 percent" in the first sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "20 percent."

COMMISSION ON NATIONAL HOUSING POLICY

SEC. 604. (a) The Congress finds that the general welfare and security of the Nation and the health and living standards of the people require a dynamic housing industry and an increasing availability of residential housing and related community development. The Congress further finds that the periodic discounting of Government-supported mortgages demonstrates the lack of an orderly mortgage market and tends to negate public policy, and that it may be desirable to develop new sources of investment funds to meet the housing needs of the Nation. It is the purpose of this section to authorize an intensive study to be made of ways and means of encouraging a flow of investment capital to provide financing, through an orderly and adequate market, sufficient to support a level of residential construction compatible with the housing demands and needs of the population and the capacities of a balanced, high-level economy.

(b) (1) There is hereby established a commission to be known as the Commission on National Housing Policy (hereinafter referred to as the "Commission").

(2) The Commission shall be composed of 11 members as follows:

(A) The Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, the Chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, and the Secretary of the Treasury, all ex officio; and

(B) Six persons to be appointed by the President from private life, such persons to be selected on the basis of their qualifications and experience in the field of housing or mortgage finance.

(3) The Chairman and the Vice Chairman of the Commission shall be selected by the Commission from among its members at its first meeting.

(4) Any vacancy in the Commission shall not affect its powers, but shall be filled in the same manner in which the original appointment as made.

(5) Six members of the Commission shall constitute a quorum.

(c) (1) The members of the Commission who are serving ex officio shall serve without compensation in addition to that received for their other services in the Government, but they shall be reimbursed for travel, subsistence, and other necessary expenses incurred by them in the performance of the duties vested in the Commission. The members of the Commission from private life may be paid transportation expenses and not to exceed $50 per diem in lieu of subsistence as authorized by section 5 of the act of August 2, 1946, as amended (5 U. S. C. 73b–2.)

(2) The Commission may—

(A) appoint and fix the compensation of such personnel as it deems advisable without regard to the civil service laws and the Classification Act of 1949, as amended;

(B) make such expenditures (including expenditures for travel and not to exceed $15 per diem in lieu of subsistence for witnesses appearing at the request of the Commission) for personal services, printing and binding, rent in the District of Columbia, and for such other matters as are necessary for the efficient execution of its functions under this section; and

(C) procure, without regard to the civil service laws and the Classification Act of 1949, as amended, temporary and intermittent services to the same extent as is authorized by section 15 of the Act of August 2, 1946 (60 Stat. 810; 5 U. S. C. 55a), but at rates not to exceed $50 per diem for individuals.

(3) Service of an individual as a member of the Commission or employment of an individual by the Commission as an attorney or expert in any business or professional field, on a part-time or full-time basis, shall not be considered as service or employment bringing such individual within the provisions of section 281, 283, 284, 434, or 1914 of title 18 of the United States Code, or section 190 of the Revised Statutes (5 U. S. C. 99).

(4) There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section.

(d) The Commission is authorized and directed to conduct an inquiry with respect to the current and prospective residential housing needs of the country and the capacity of the economy in general and of the building industry and mortgage market in particular to meet these needs. The Commission shall formulate recommendations which shall include but not be limited to the following subjects:

(1) The short-term and long-term housing needs of the Nation;

(2) The discounting of Government-supported mortgages;

(3) Long-term prospects for developing new sources of investment funds to meet the housing needs of the Nation, including but not limited to private and semiprivate pension funds and trusts;

(4) The extent to which the resources of the Federal National Mortgage Association can be utilized to stabilize the mortgage market; and

(5) Ways and means of increasing the supply of adequate housing for families of moderate income.

(e) (1) The Commission may, in connection with its inquiries and studies under this section, hold such hearings and hear such witnesses as it may deem appropriate.

(2) All departments and agencies of the Government are authorized and directed to cooperate with the Commission in its work and to furnish the Commission such information and assistance as it may require in the performance of its functions and responsibilities.

(f) The Commission may submit interim reports of its studies under subsection (d) to the Congress and the President at such time or times as it deems advisable, and shall submit its final report with respect to such studies to the Congress and the President not later than June 30, 1957. The final report of the Commission shall include its recommendations (including recommendations for governmental action, either legislative or administrative, as it shall deem necessary) with respect to the matters referred to in subsection (d), and such other related matters as it shall determine to be appropriate. The Commission shall cease to exist 90 days after submission of its final report.

FARM HOUSING

SEC. 605. (a) The first sentence of section 511 of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, is amended to read as follows: "The Secretary may issue notes and other obligations for purchase by the Secretary of the Treasury for the purpose of making loans under this title (other than loans under section 504 (b)). The total principal amount of such notes and obligations issued pursuant to this section during the period beginning July 1, 1956, and ending June 30, 1961, shall not exceed $450,000,000."

(b) Section 512 of such act is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 512. In conection with loans made pursuant to section 503, the Secretary is authorized to make commitments for contributions aggregating not to exceed $10 million during the period beginning July 1, 1956, and ending June 30, 1961."

(c) Clause (b) of section 513 of such act is amended to read as follows: "(b) not to exceed $50,000,000 for grants pursuant to section 504 (a) and loans pursuant to section 504 (b) during the period beginning July 1, 1956, and ending June 30, 1961; and."

(d) This section shall take effect on July 1, 1956.

HOSPITAL CONSTRUCTION

SEC. 606. (a) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 104 of the Defense Housing and Community Facilities and Services Act of 1951, as amended, the authority under section 304 of such act to make loans or grants, or other payments to public and nonprofit agencies for the construction of hospitals is hereby revived and extended with respect to public and nonprofit agencies which have, prior to June 30, 1953, applied under such section 304 for such loans or grants, or other payments for the construction of hospitals, and have been denied such loans or grants, or other payments solely because of the unavailability of funds for such purpose.

(b) The authority granted by this section shall expire June 30, 1957.

(c) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $5,000,000 for the purposes of this section for each of the fiscal years ending June 30, 1956, and June 30, 1957.

SALE OF HOUSING PROJECTS

SEC. 607 (a) (1) Notwithstanding any other provisions of law, the Housing and Home Finance Administrator is authorized to sell and convey at fair market value as determined by him on the basis of an appraisal made by an independent real-estate expert to the city of Alexandria, Va., or to the Alexandria Redevelopment and Housing Authority, or to any agency or corporation established or sponsored in the public interest by such city, all of the right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the Chinquapin Village housing project, VA 44131, located in Alexandria, Va. Any sale pursuant to this authorization shall be on such terms and conditions as the Administrator shall determine, and the amount received for the project shall be reported by the Administrator to the Banking and Currency Committee of the Senate and the Banking and Currency Committee of the House of Representatives.

(2) The provisions of this section shall be effective only during the period ending 6 months after the date of enactment of this act.

(b) The last proviso of subsection (c) of section 108 of the Housing Amendments of 1955 is amended by striking out "12" and inserting in lieu thereof "24."

CITY PLANNING SCHOLARSHIPS AND FELLOWSHIPS

SEC. 608. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $500,000 annually for a 3-year period, commencing on or after July 1, 1956, to be used by the Housing and Home Finance Administrator for the purpose of providing scholarships and fellowships in public and private nonprofit institutions of higher education for the graduate training of professional city planning and housing technicians and specialists. Persons shall be selected for such scholarships and fellowships solely on the basis of ability.

SERVICEMEN'S READJUSTMENT ACT OF 1944

SEC. 609. (a) The fourth sentence of subsection (a) of section 500 of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended, is amended by striking out "ten" the first time it appears therein and inserting in lieu thereof "eleven."

(b) Paragraph (C) of subsection (b) of section 512 of such act is amended by striking out "1957" and inserting in lieu thereof "1958."

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. CAPEHART. Will I be permitted to offer an amendment to the substitute?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That would be in order.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, the amendment which I have sent to the desk would strike out everything after the enacting clause of the House bill and substitute the text of Senate bill 3855, which passed the Senate on May 24, 1956. Following the adoption of this amendment, I intend to move that the Senate insist on its amendment, request a conference with the House of Representatives thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. President, I am sure the Senate is generally familiar with the situation in which we find ourselves at this late date with respect to housing legislation.

However, for the record, I should like to review some of these circumstances. On March 20, 1956, the Housing Subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency began hearings on a series of bills, the provisions of which dealt with all phases of housing. The subcommittee met morning and afternoon, and over a 10-day period took over 700 pages of testimony and heard close to a hundred witnesses. Following these extended hearings, the Banking and Currency Committee convened and after several days more discussion in executive session reported out a bill on May 15, 1956. The Senate passed this bill with three amendments on May 24, 1956. This bill was referred to the House, which body has been in a position to act on housing legislation since that time.

The House Banking and Currency Committee developed its own bill, H. R. 11742, which was reported to the House on June 15, 1956. Although the chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency requested a rule to permit the House to consider this bill, no action was taken until July 21, 1956—a full 2 months after the Senate had passed its bill.

I make this statement not in any way reflecting on the House or any of its committees or Members, but merely to demonstrate that the delay has not been the responsibility of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. On July 21, the House Rules Committee adopted a rule permittting one amendment to H. R. 11742. That amendment is the text of the bill which is now before us, which incidentally was introduced on July 20, 1956. At the time the rule was granted, it was stated before the Rules Committee of the House that those who offered the amendment had received assurances that there were sufficient votes in the House to substitute it for the bill reported by the House Committee on Banking and Currency.

The normal procedure, of course, following the enactment of a House bill, where a Senate passed bill is also in existence, would be to take up the Senate passed bill, insert the House language and eventually go to conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will suspend until the Senate is in order. The Senator will suspend until there is quiet in the Chamber. Those having no business on the floor of the Senate, will please retire.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. However, in this case the House has merely sent its bill to the Senate without action on the Senate-passed bill still pending in the House. Discussions during the hearings of the Rules Committee on July 21 were to the effect that the House would not consider the Senate-passed bill; that the House would send to the Senate its own bill and, moreover, would refuse to go to conference if the Senate amended the bill passed by the House.

The first I heard of the bill, which has passed the House and which is the pending measure, was on Monday, July 23. On that date the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART], the Senator from Alabama [Mr. SPARKMAN], and I met with the General Counsel of the HHFA.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I yield.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Who is the general counsel of the HHFA?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. A. Oakley Hunter.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Is Mr. A. Oakley Hunter a former Representative from California?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I believe that is correct.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Is he the author of H. R. 12328?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I cannot speak from personal knowledge. He was very much interested in it. He talked to us about it in conference.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Did he not know all about H. R. 12328?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I believe he knew all about it.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Did he not draft H. R. 12328?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. It is my understanding he had a great deal to do with it, but I cannot testify that he actually drafted it. I am sure he was aware of its drafting.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Section 603 of the bill, at page 61, contains an extraordinary provision, which says:

> The salary of the general counsel of the Housing and Home Finance Agency shall be the same as that of the heads of the constituent agencies of the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

As I understand, the heads of those agencies will receive a salary, under the executive pay bill, of $20,000. Am I correct?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. The Senator is correct.

Mr. DOUGLAS. The General Counsel of the Housing and Home Finance Agency was not included in the executive pay bill, as I understand.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. That is correct.

Mr. DOUGLAS. The Senator from Illinois is correct?

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. The Senator from Illinois is correct.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Here we have a bill increasing the salary of the General Counsel of this Agency from the present figure, which I believe is $14,800,to $20,000, in a bill which apparently that same man drafted.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I should like to say along that line——

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I believe I have the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas has the floor. Does he yield further?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I ask unanimous consent that I may yield to the Senator from South Carolina to clarify this particular point, without my losing my right to the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina. I wish to call to the attention of the Senate one of the difficulties about increasing salaries in this manner. We get into a great deal of trouble in conference, particularly on bills like the executive pay bill, because one salary will be at one figure and another salary at another figure. Because of that we have a great deal of trouble trying to adjust the various salaries. Here we are undertaking to do the same thing in this field. I believe the Senator from Kansas will agree with every word I am saying.

Mr. CARLSON. Mr. President, if the Senator from Arkansas will yield, I should like to state that I am in thorough accord with what the chairman of the committee has stated. It is very unfortunate indeed that an attempt should be made to bring up piecemeal the salaries of various individuals.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a further question?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I yield for a question.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Was this provision for an increase in the salary of the general counsel of the Home Finance Agency contained either in the bill which the Senate passed or in the bill which the House committee reported?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. It was not contained in the Senate bill, and I am informed it was not in the House bill either.

Mr. DOUGLAS. It is something which was put in the bill drafted presumably by the man whose own salary was to be increased. Is that correct?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I believe the Senator is correct that this man had an interest, I suppose, in seeing that that be done.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Does not the Senator from Arkansas believe that that is highly improper conduct?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I do; and it is one of the provisions in the bill to which I object.

At this conference the general counsel advised us of this proposed method of procedure and indicated that he wanted our reaction to it. My reaction was that, quite aside from the merits of the bill, I did not propose to assume the responsibility of deciding whether or not the Senate would accept this measure. The Senate passed its own bill, as I have said, on May 24. That bill, so far as I am concerned, reflects the will of the Senate. The bill now before us presumably reflects the will of the House. The normal, and, indeed, necessary way to adjust differences between the two coequal legislative bodies is by a regularly appointed official conference committee. It is not proper for any sub rosa star chamber conference, between a few Members of either branch of the Congress, to decide in advance what either body will or will not do.

I believe in the procedure of an official conference committee. It has been worked out over a long period of time, and, while individual Members may often be disappointed in the results, they may have the satisfaction of knowing that there is a final and regular method of determining that result presumably reflecting the will of the Congress as a whole.

Therefore, I rejected this proposal for my own part, and it was my impression that the other two Senators present also rejected it. They can speak for themselves.

I intend no reflection on the House, any of its Members, or any of its committees. However, I implore those who did deliver this ultimatum to the Senate to consider the precedent they are establishing. I have moved that the Senate ask the House for a conference. Is not the Senate entitled to ask the House for a conference? It is, of course, for the House itself to decide whether it will grant a request of the Senate if such a request is made and to assume the responsibility for the consequences of either accepting or rejecting the request of the Senate.

Personally, I believe the House will accede to the solemn and formal request of the Senate until it acts to the contrary—and not before. I am not willing to proceed on the assumption which has been reported in the newspapers and through a messenger of the administration that the House will not honor such a request of the Senate, that it will deny the Senate an opportunity to confer with its own regularly appointed representatives in the normal way.

For, as I have indicated, consider what a precedent this would be. Would this mean that year after year, in the closing hours of the Congress, one House can force its will on the other and turn the Congress into a unicameral legislature? If Senators desire to uphold the right and dignity of the body in which they serve, they should vote to ask the House for a conference on this legislation.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, to the so-called Fulbright amendment, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk and I ask unanimous consent that it be not stated at this time, but that it may be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senator's amendment will be printed in the RECORD.

Mr. CAPEHART'S amendment to Mr. FULBRIGHT'S amendment is as follows:

On page 42, beginning with line 24, to strike out down through and including line 10, on page 45, and in lieu thereof, to insert the following:

"'(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Authority may enter into new contracts for loans and annual contributions after July 31, 1956, for not more than 35,000 additional dwelling units, which amount shall be increased by 35,000 additional dwelling units on July 1, 1957, and may enter into only such new contracts for preliminary loans in respect thereto as are consistent with the number of dwelling units for which contracts for annual contributions may be entered into hereunder: Provided, That the authority to enter into new contracts for annual contributions with respect to each such 35,000 additional dwelling units shall terminate 2 years after the first date on which such authority may be exercised under the foregoing provisions of this subsection: Provided further, That any balance of the authorization provided by this subsection, as amended by section 108 (b) of the Housing Amendments of 1955, not utilized by July 31, 1956, shall be available in any succeeding year: Provided further, That no such new contract for annual contributions for additional units shall be entered into except with respect to low-rent housing for a locality respecting which the Housing and Home Finance Administrator has made the determination and certification relating to a workable program as prescribed in section 101 (c) of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended: And provided further, That no new contracts for loans and annual contributions for additional dwelling units in excess of the number authorized in this sentence shall be entered into unless authorized by the Congress.'

"(b) Clause (2) of the third proviso appearing in that part of the Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1953, which is captioned 'Annual contributions:' under the heading 'Public Housing Administration' is repealed.

"SEC. 402. Section 101 (c) of title I of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended, is amended by inserting the following after the first comma therein: 'or for annual contributions or capital grants pursuant to the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, for any project or projects not constructed or covered by a contract for annual contributions prior to August 1, 1956.'

"SEC. 403. Subsection (d) of section 21 of the United States Housing Act of 1937 is amended by striking out the figure '10' in both places it appears and inserting in lieu thereof the figure '15.'"

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART], to the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. FULBRIGHT].

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, the result of the substitute offered by the chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. FULBRIGHT], and the amendment which I have just offered to it is simply this: On May 21 the Senate passed a bill. The House passed a bill 2 days ago on the same subject. The substitute offered by the Senator from Arkansas would restore the Senate bill in its entirety, and my amendment which is at the desk at the moment would strike out the language of the Senate bill as to public housing and substitute the House language for public housing.

The House language calls for 35,000 public housing units each year for 2 years. There are now approximately 55,000 houses authorized under previous laws, which have not been constructed, and they must be added. There would be a little more than 100,000 houses. The amendment which I have offered simply reduces the public housing units to 35,000 for 2 years.

I strongly urge that the Senate accept my amendment, and we shall be able to go to conference tomorrow. My best judgment is that in a couple of hours time we can straighten the matter out with the House and come back with a bill acceptable to everyone.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Indiana yield?

Mr. CAPEHART. I yield.

Mr. SPARKMAN. As I understand the amendment offered by the Senator from Indiana, it goes only to the public housing features and seeks to bring the public housing provision in line with what the House actually passed.

Mr. CAPEHART. In accordance with the House language concerning public housing.

Mr. SPARKMAN. And that includes public housing which the Senate committee in its bill and which the House committee in its bill have——

Mr. CAPEHART. It makes the total number of units for the next 2 years 35,000.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Plus the actual carryover, making a total of 115,000?

Mr. CAPEHART. We cannot know until the last half of this month. It all depends on whether we are talking about houses under contract or houses on which construction has actually been started.

Mr. SPARKMAN. I am talking about those which are under construction.

There is a question which I should like to ask the distinguished Senator aside from that. It relates to a provision in the bill which the House passed. I do not wish to take up too much time. The Senator is familiar with the provision which the House passed requiring the Department of Defense to buy all the Wherry housing projects throughout the country, is he not?

Mr. CAPEHART. I should say that if the Senate passed the bill with the amendment the able Senator from Arkansas has proposed, plus the amendment I have just offered, the language of the bill will be the language of the original Senate bill.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Will the question of Wherry housing be in conference?

Mr. CAPEHART. Everything in the bill will be in conference except public housing. As a result of my amendment, we will be agreeing with the House on public housing, thereby taking public housing out of the conference. Everything else will be in conference. We have sought to place on the desk of each Senator a complete analysis of the bill which the Senate passed on May 24, the bill the House sent over today, and comments and analyses of each.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Inasmuch as it is most likely that the House will accede to the request of the Senate for a conference, and that the conference committee will meet tomorrow, and by that time the printed RECORD will be available to Senators, I think it might be quite relevant to place in the RECORD at this point a few facts. I should like to read them, if I may.

Mr. CAPEHART. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. SPARKMAN. This is from the report of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, which brings out these facts with reference to Wherry projects:

> Since the inception of title VIII there have been 272 projects insured involving an aggregate of $690,945,270. This amount includes 83,217 housing units.

Under the provision as it passed the House, the Department of Defense would be required to purchase that number of houses under a price formula which I believe the able Senator from Indiana will agree with me the Senate has never had an opportunity to examine, but which seems to me to have in it some features which would almost guarantee windfall profits, or certainly unreasonable profits, which the Department of Defense could be required to pay.

Does the Senator from Indiana agree with me?

Mr. CAPEHART. Yes; I am inclined to agree with the able Senator tonight; however, that is one of the purposes of the conference which we hope to have tomorrow with the House. We might have the House conferees explain in detail exactly what is meant by that section in respect to Wherry housing.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Would the Senator from Indiana permit me at this point to ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter dated July 25, 1956, addressed to me as chairman of the Subcommittee on Housing of the Committee on Banking and Currency, by Robert Tripp Ross, Assistant Secretary of Defense, relating to this program, and stating very strong opposition on the part of the Department of Defense to this particular provision?

Mr. CAPEHART. Yes; I yield for that purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection——

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. President, reserving the right to object to the unanimous-consent request, let me say that, from my acquaintance with this subject as a member of the Subcommittee on Military Construction of the Committee on Armed Services, which deals with military housing, I share the views which the Senator from Alabama has expressed, that a directive to require the Secretary of Defense to buy Wherry housing under a price formula which would be adjusted to current costs will open the way to huge windfalls. In my judgment, that would be utterly unjustified, since, in the first place, the builders of houses got a guaranteed or an insured loan. To make a price now which would be adjusted to current costs would add to the guaranty or insurance windfall that would come from whatever inflation may have taken place since the houses were originally built.

I certainly have no objection to having the letter from the Assistant Secretary of Defense printed in the RECORD. But I should like the conferees to know that if the report should come back from the conference accepting the House language on the Wherry housing provision, and directing the purchase of Wherry housing units, I shall oppose the adoption of the conference report with all the vigor I can command.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Alabama? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The letter is as follows:

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF DEFENSE,
Washington, D. C., July 25, 1956.

Hon. JOHN J. SPARKMAN,
Chairman, Subcommittee on Housing, Committee on Banking and Currency, United States Senate.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I should like to offer certain comments on the provisions of H. R. 12328 (Housing Act of 1956), which appears scheduled for early consideration on the floor of the House, and may be brought to a joint conference shortly thereafter.

The Department of Defense objects to the language of section 512 of this bill, which directs the Secretary of Defense to acquire Wherry projects. It is believed that should this section be enacted, the Department would be at a disadvantage in negotiating the purchase of such projects at terms which are in the best interests of the Government.

The Department of Defense supports the language contained in section 419 of the military construction authorization bill (H. R. 12270), which provides the necessary authority and a satisfactory formula for the acquisition of Wherry projects, without the enactment of additional legislation.

In addition, since the military construction authorization bill has passed the House and is expected to receive favorable Senate action, enactment of section 512 would require the Department of Defense to comply with inconsistent laws. Section 512 not only sets forth different provisions from those contained in the MCA bill, but it also makes mandatory the assumption of mortgages in connection with Wherry acquisition, while section 311 of the supplemental appropriations bill (H. R. 12138), as agreed to by Senate and House conferees, makes this permissive.

Furthermore, the Department opposes the establishment of a revolving fund for Wherry acquisition, as is provided by the amended section 404 (h) of the National Housing Act. Since the fund will be used for the purchase of equities as well as the payment of obligations, while being replenished to a considerable extent from the rentals of substandard quarters, it will not be possible to operate on a revolving-fund basis without periodic augmentation from other sources.

The Department of Defense proposes to take positive steps to acquire a substantial number of Wherry projects during the present fiscal year, but believes that such a program should proceed gradually on a negotiated basis in its initial stages, until a degree of experience has been gained.

The Department also objects to the language of section 509 of H. R. 12328, which makes mandatory the use of modular measure in the design of title VIII housing. A similar provision appears in section 108 (h) of S. 3855. The Department does support greater use of the principle of modular dimensioning, and is currently undertaking extensive studies to determine the benefits which may be expected from a more extensive use of this principle. However, a number of technical difficulties arise in broadening the use of modular measurements, and it is believed that such use should be permissive until greater experience has been gained. Moreover, section 509 would necessitate costly revisions to designs already under way, and would delay completion of urgently needed housing.

Section 418 of H. R. 12270 contains language which registers the intent of Congress in this matter, and which is satisfactory to the Department of Defense. Accordingly, it is believed that the enactment of section 509 of H. R. 12328 is not necessary at this time.

Sincerely yours,

ROBERT TRIPP ROSS.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CAPEHART. I yield to the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. STENNIS. I invite the Senator's attention to title 512, on the acquisition of Wherry housing, which is the same point as was made by the Senator from South Dakota. The proposed law actually makes it mandatory that the Secretary of Defense shall buy Wherry housing, and also that he shall buy the personal property and the chattels which go with those houses. The formula then provides that he shall pay the cost adjusted to the current cost level. What does the Senator propose to do about that? Do I understand correctly that it is proposed to strike it out of the bill on the floor now?

Mr. CAPEHART. The Senator from Arkansas [Mr. FULBRIGHT] offered a substitute to strike out all after the enacting clause of the House bill and to insert in lieu thereof the language of the Senate bill.

Mr. STENNIS. Would that provision be included?

Mr. CAPEHART. We hope to have the bill go to conference, if the Senate agrees with us tonight, and in conference we shall take up with the House all the questions which the able Senator from Mississippi is asking, as well as many other questions.

Mr. STENNIS. We want to register our views now, for whatever they may be worth, for the benefit of the conference, so that the Senate conferees can make very vigorous objection to this provision in the bill.

Incidentally, there is in the military construction bill permissive authority for the Secretary of Defense to buy Wherry housing when he determines there is actual need for it. Then there is a formula under which he can buy it. Does the Senator agree to that position?

Mr. CAPEHART. As one of the conferees, I am opposed to the present language of the House bill. Unless it provides something which I do not see or do not understand, I shall be opposed to giving in to the House in respect to this provision.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CAPEHART. I yield.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Is it not true that the provision requiring the Department of Defense to buy almost $700 million of Wherry housing, at grossly inflated prices, is in the bill which was drafted by the Housing and Home Finance Agency, under the direction of Mr. Cole and ex-Representative Hunter?

Mr. CAPEHART. The Senator from Illinois is wrong in that respect. They have been very crtical about that. This provision was written by the House itself.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Where did this provision come from?

Mr. CAPEHART. It came from the House itself.

Mr. DOUGLAS. May I ask my good friend from Indiana if it is not true that, so far as public housing is concerned, the House bill fails to remove the very restrictive conditions concerning the direction of public housing, which in the past have virtually hogtied the program? Is it not true that those restrictive provisions are not removed by the House bill, whereas they were removed from the Senate bill?

Mr. CAPEHART. I think, in all fairness, my answer should be that there are certain restrictions in the House bill which are not in the Senate bill; but I cannot agree that public housing is restricted to the point where no houses can be built.

Mr. DOUGLAS. May I inquire from my friend from Indiana, who is in so amiable a mood, if the House Committee on Banking and Currency recommended not 35,000 units a year, but 60,000 units a year?

Mr. CAPEHART. The able Senator is correct.

Mr. DOUGLAS. Finally, may I ask my good friend from Indiana, why not have the entire Senate-approved bill for action in conference? Why remove the question of public housing from conference?

Mr. CAPEHART. That is a matter for the Senate to decide by its vote. If the Senate does not want to reduce the number to 70,000, it can say so by its vote—and I hope the vote will come in a few minutes. But if the Senate wants to agree with the House, then the Senate will adopt my amendment.

I think the best answer is that regardless of the number of houses which might be authorized in the bill, it will not be possible to have additional housing built between now and next year.

I am reliably informed—and I think the record of years gone by will prove it—that the House simply will not agree in conference to more than 70,000 public-housing units, as they have refused to do so in the past.

Mr. DOUGLAS. The Senator from Indiana was on the committee of conference last year, along with the Senator from Illinois. He will remember that the House members of the committee of conference kept saying they would not take any public-housing units. Yet, finally, after several meetings, we forced them to take 45,000 units a year.

Why does the Senator from Indiana think the House will be so much more overbearing this year than it was last year? What is the Senator from Indiana afraid of?

Mr. CAPEHART. I am afraid of nothing. I think my record proves it.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President——

Mr. CAPEHART. I shall be glad to yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. LEHMAN. I thank the Senator. Later I shall ask to speak in my own time to reply the Senator from Indiana, but I should like to ask him a question. If the proposal of the Senator from Indiana should prevail—and I sincerely hope it will not prevail; I cannot conceive that the Senate will agree to it—the number of public-housing units would be reduced to 35,000 a year for 2 years. That is identical with what is contained in the House bill. Is that correct?

Mr. CAPEHART. That is correct.

Mr. LEHMAN. Would that not completely preclude any discussion of public housing in conference?

Mr. CAPEHART. The able Senator from New York is 100-percent correct.

Mr. LEHMAN. I understand, from what the Senator from Indiana has previously said, that he favors a conference on this bill.

Mr. CAPEHART. Yes; I very much favor a conference, primarily because of the treatment the House gave the Wherry Housing provisions.

Mr. LEHMAN. I agree it is inconceivable that the Congress should proceed to enact legislation without the right of conference, and I am glad to hear the Senator say he agrees with that thought. I wonder, however, why the Senator should seek to exclude public housing from the purview of the conferees. That would not be a conference. Under those circumstances, the cards would be stacked against us.

Mr. CAPEHART. There are three reasons. The first is that, of course, the President has advocated 35,000 units a year for 2 years. So the administration asked for only 70,000 units. Secondly, regardless of how many units are authorized, whether they be 35,000 or 350,000, there will not be a single additional unit until next year, when Congress meets again. Thirdly, I think we have every reason to believe that if we want a housing bill passed, and passed within a reasonable time, the Senate must give in on this particular point. I have been as frank as I know how to be.

Mr. LEHMAN. I appreciate that. While I do not agree with the Senator, I am sure he is being very fair.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CAPEHART. I yield.

Mr. SPARKMAN. There is one thing I should like to say with reference to the restrictions referred to in the colloquy between the Senator from Illinois and the Senator from Indiana. We have been assured—and I want to ask the Senator from Indiana if this is not true, and it occurred in the conference at which he and the Senator from Arkansas and I were present—that this so-called workable plan would be administered in a reasonable way, so as not to restrict it, as was the experience for a couple of years.

Mr. CAPEHART. That is correct. I think the Senator will find a change in the language.

Mr. SPARKMAN. I wish to say I certainly would not be willing to support the bill at all unless what I have stated were the case.

In that connection, I ask unanimous consent to have printed at this point in the RECORD a brief statement I have prepared regarding this workable program.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR SPARKMAN ON WORKABLE PROGRAM

As the Senate knows, several times in the past I have voiced strong opposition to the so-called workable program requirement contained in section 101 (c) of the Housing Act of 1949. My opposition to the workable program requirement has not been in connection with its application to the urban renewal program, but rather with reference to its application to public housing.

I have said previously and I say again, that it is important that communities be encouraged to adopt a program designed to improve housing conditions and city planning. This the workable program does when it is applied as a prerequisite to Federal aid under the slum clearance or urban renewal programs.

However, in the past, the workable program has been required before a community is entitled to an allocation of public-housing units. I am convinced that originally the workable program requirement and other restrictions prevented many communities from obtaining allocations of public-housing units to which they would otherwise have been entitled. I cannot condone the imposition of these requirements upon communities if they are deliberately intended as a device to prevent communities from obtaining public housing. Last year I supported the successful attempt to eliminate these requirements from the law.

At present, while a community must have a "workable program" to secure Federal aid under the urban renewal plan, it need not have an approved workable program to get public housing.

In the last year, the requirements which a community must meet before receiving approval of its workable program have been relaxed. It is now far easier, I am advised, to obtain the approval of a workable program than it has been in the past. I have talked with several persons who have had close association with the workable program and am advised in most instances, first, that it is desirable as applied to the urban renewal program; and, second, that it is now far easier to obtain approval of a workable program than formerly.

I have received assurances from the Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency that the workable program requirements will not be rigid as applied to large or small communities. The program, I am told, is now and will continue to be sufficiently flexible to permit smaller communities to obtain approval by means of reducing the number of requirements or the stringency of their applications to these smaller communities. Acting on these assurances, I am prepared to amend my previous position in opposition to the workable program.

If the program can be developed along flexible lines and will be administered in such a way that smaller communities can comply without unreasonable delays and expenditures and if the workable program requirement is not allowed to become an impediment to such public housing as may be desired by the community, I am willing to withhold my previous objections and to permit a trial period during which the workable program may be applied.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. President, let me repeat some of the pertinent facts and figures with respect to the acquisition of Wherry Act projects. I think this data is of such importance that it might well influence the decisions of Senators when they vote on this important bill.

This amendment would strike section 512 of the bill (H. R. 12328) beginning on line 1, page 51, through line 24, page 57. Since the inception of title VIII of the National Housing Act, there have been 272 Wherry Act projects insured, involving an aggregate of insurance of $690,945,270. These projects include 83,217 housing units. These projects are built on or near military installations principally for the use of military personnel stationed at those installations. They may also be used by civilian personnel. They are privately owned and privately financed. H. R. 12328 directs the Secretary of Defense to acquire all of these projects by one means or another. A formula is established for determining the purchase price. This price shall be not more than the Commissioner's estimate of replacement cost, plus or minus certain allowances.

This may or may not be an equitable formula. The fact is that we, on the Banking and Currency Committee, who have primary responsibility for the Wherry Act projects simply are not in a position to know. The Banking and Currency Committee did discuss in its hearings the problem of Wherry Act housing units. We heard that the new title VIII program referred to as Capehart military housing could have an adverse effect upon Wherry Act projects. It is entirely possible that the construction of a Capehart project near a Wherry Act project would attract tenants from the Wherry units into the Capehart units, thereby creating a possibility of default by the Wherry Act owners. We are, of course, anxious to avoid any such defaults if we possibly can.

However, in 1955, we provided by law that Wherry Act projects could be acquired for fair market value by purchase, donation, or condemnation. When the committee discussed this problem again in 1956, it was decided that the 1955 act was adequate to take care of any problem which might arise, and certainly to provide a means of acquisition of Wherry Act projects.

Subsequent to that date the Supreme Court announced a decision relating to the payment of taxes by Wherry Act project sponsors. This decision will undoubtedly have some effect upon the expenses of a Wherry Act project and may require additional legislation to prevent unnecessary default. This Supreme Court decision came after the Senate had passed its bill. It may well be that an event such as the Supreme Court decision that occurred subsequent to Senate passage of S. 3855 might require additional legislation. Members of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee stand ready to discuss this problem in a conference with the House. However, unless we go to conference, we shall not be given an opportunity to discuss this problem, and we can have no assurance that the language contained in H. R. 11742 would give any adequate protection to the Government or to the Wherry Act sponsors as a result of acquisition of these Wherry Act projects.

One of the most disturbing features about this provision in the House bill is the mandatory requirement that Wherry Act projects be acquired by the Federal Government. This approach departs from past actions of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, the Senate Armed Services Committee, and the House Armed Services Committee. All three of these committees recognize that acquisition could be advantageous to the Government or project owners under some circumstances and establish a procedure for acquisition in such cases.

H. R. 11742, however, assumes that the Federal Government is solely responsible for the construction of these projects, and requires the Government to buy the housing, regardless of whether it is needed. Admitting that there was a Federal impetus behind the construction of Wherry Act housing, there was, nevertheless, an element of business risk for profit or loss. Until the Senate has had an opportunity to thoroughly explore this basic assumption in the House bill, we should not adopt a wholesale purchase program which treats all projects more or less the same, and which could in many cases unjustly enrich project owners, or could saddle the Federal Government with housing for which it has no need.

Let me repeat that this problem has been considered by four committees of the Congress. Each of these committees has prepared a recommended solution to the problem of acquiring Wherry Act projects. The language contained in H. R. 11742 differs from all of the other approaches. It has not been considered by any committee of the Congress. I do not say the formula provided by H. R. 11742 is good or bad. I do say that the Congress should have an opportunity to consider it. If this amendment is accepted, it will permit the conferees of the House and Senate to discuss the problem and to arrive at a solution equitable to all concerned.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I strongly urge that the Senate adopt my amendment to the substitute offered by the able Senator from Arkansas, adopt his amendment, as thus amended, and pass the bill in that form.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CAPEHART. I yield.

Mr. BUSH. I should like to say, in support of the Senator's motion, that I am very much disappointed, indeed, with the long delay in House action on the bill, thus placing this needed legislation in a position of danger. Also, I am very much disappointed by its attitude on public housing. I have consistently felt that the administration has not taken a broad enough view of the need for public housing, and I have consistently felt, with the Senator from New York, the Senator from Alabama, and other Senators on the committee, that the authorization for 35,000 units did not meet the situation realistically at all.

However, it is clear that only a day or two remain in the session, and that if the housing bill is to be passed, we may as well face the fact that we shall have to accept the 35,000-unit limitation. Otherwise, we may jeopardize the entire bill, which contains provisions relating to housing and urban renewal in disaster areas, which are extremely important to communities in my State.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD, at this point in my remarks, correspondence which I have had with Representative SPENCE, chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency.

There being no objection, the correspondence was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

APRIL 18, 1956.

Hon. BRENT SPENCE,
Chairman, Committee on Banking and Currency, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR CHAIRMAN SPENCE: The Senate, by unanimous consent, approved today three disaster relief housing bills, S. 2854, S2855, and S. 2859. Copies of the bills, together with the committee reports, are enclosed for your ready reference.

Anything you can do to expedite action on these measures by the House of Representatives will be deeply appreciated.

With kindest regards, I am,

Sincerely yours,

PRESCOTT BUSH,
United States Senator.

MAY 21, 1956.

Hon. BRENT SPENCE,
Chairman, Committee on Banking and Currency, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Senate today approved, by unanimous consent, S. 3844, designed to expedite Federal urban renewal assistance to disaster areas by cutting red tape and eliminating certain rigid requirements of existing law. Copies of the bill and of the unanimous favorable report of the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency are enclosed for your ready reference.

The provisions of this bill were originally contained in the amendments to the Housing Act recommended by the administration. In the interest of saving time, possibly as much as 6 weeks, in making the benefits of the proposed legislation available to the communities so sorely afflicted by flood disasters during the past year, the Senate committee decided to report it as a separate bill.

It is my understanding that your committee will hold an executive session on Wednesday of this week. I respectfully urge that sympathetic consideration be given to the desirability of acting on S. 3844 and a companion bill, H. R. 11282, introduced by Congressman at Large ANTONI N. SADLAK, of Connecticut, promptly and favorably so that it may be voted upon by the House in the near future.

Very many of the flood-afflicted communities in my own State of Connecticut are in need of the proposed legislation, and I assume the same is true of municipalities in other States which were the victims of major disaster in the past year.

The rigid requirements of present law have created many difficult problems. As just one illustration, the town of Farmington, Conn., has applied for urban renewal assistance in areas which before the August 1955 floods were almost completely residential. To date, it has been unable to obtain such assistance because the flood waters destroyed so many homes that the areas can no longer be termed "predominantly residential" as required for eligibility under existing law.

Your committee will deserve, and will have the gratitude, of the people of Farmington and other affected communities if it takes prompt and effective action to remove this and other requirements of existing law which were never intended to apply in a post-disaster situation.

May I also renew my request that your committee act upon three other disaster relief housing bills, S. 2854, and S. 2855 and S. 2859, which were approved by the Senate almost 5 weeks ago. These measures are entirely noncontroversial and, in my judgment, deserve separate treatment on a priority basis instead of being deferred for consideration along with the onmibus housing bill.

With kindest regards, I am,

Sincerely yours,

PRESCOTT BUSH,
United States Senator.

JUNE 25, 1956.

Hon. BRENT SPENCE,
Chairman, House Committee on Banking and Currency, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: In reviewing H. R. 11742, the proposed Housing Act of 1956, which was reported by your committee recently, I note that it includes the provisions of two bills in which I am vitally interested, S. 2854, to increase the amount of mortgage insurance for disaster victims, and S. 3844, to expedite urban renewal assistance to disaster-affected communities.

Although separate action, in the interest of saving time, would have been preferable on these two measures, both passed by the Senate many weeks ago, I appreciate your committee's approval of their provisions as part of the general housing bill.

Two other disaster relief housing bills which I introduced with other Senators as cosponsors and which were approved by the Senate on April 18, 1956, the same day as S. 2854, are not included in H. R. 11742. These are S. 2855, to provide shelter for disaster victims, and S. 2859, relating to rent-free accommodations in low-rent projects for disaster victims.

I hope it will be possible for your committee to consider these bills in the near future and take such action as may be necessary to complete the process of enactment either through offering them as amendments to H. R. 11742 on the floor or by reporting them as separate bills.

As you know, S. 2855 and S. 2859 were approved by the Senate unanimously, and as disaster relief measures should be entirely noncontroversial within your committee. I am confident that favorable action by your committee will be gratefully noted not only by the people of my own and other States afflicted by the 1955 floods but also by those who may be affected by future disasters.

With kindest regards, I am,

Sincerely yours,

PRESCOTT BUSH,
United States Senator.

JUNE 30, 1956.

Hon. BRENT SPENCE, Chairman,
House Committee on Banking and Currency, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: In further reference to my letters of May 21 and June 21 concerning the advisability of separate action on S. 3844 and other bills arising from the flood disasters of 1955, I know you share my concern because of the decision of the Committee on Rules to table H. R. 11742, the proposed Housing Act of 1956.

As you are aware, S. 3844, to expedite urban renewal assistance to disaster-affected communities, and S. 2854, to increase the amount of mortgage insurance for disaster victims, were included in H. R. 11742. The prospects for their enactment as part of H. R. 11742 are made very doubtful because of the Rules Committee's apparent determination to keep that measure from reaching the House floor.

Under the circumstances, I hope your committee will decide to report out the Senate-approved bills, S. 3844, and S. 2854, as well as two others, S. 2855, to provide shelter for disaster victims, and S. 2859, relating to rent-free accommodations in low-rent projects for disaster victims.

I regret the necessity of bringing these bills to your attention so frequently. However, in view of the fact that they were approved by the Senate many weeks ago, it is becoming increasingly difficult to explain to people in the flood-affected areas of my own State and others why the House has been unable to take action. If the House has an opportunity to act on these measures, dealing as they do with disaster relief, I am sure they will be approved overwhelmingly and sent to the President for his signature. I strongly urge that your committee give the House the opportunity to do so.

With kindest personal regards, I am,

Sincerely yours,

PRESCOTT BUSH,
United States Senator.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I shall be glad to yield.

Mr. RUSSELL. I merely wish to make a brief observation about the provisions of the bill as they relate to the so-called Wherry housing projects. We are not dealing with "peanuts" in those projects. There is involved some seven or eight hundred million dollars. I cannot conceive of anything which would be more injurious to the national interest than to adopt any proposition that compelled us to acquire all of these projects under the formula prescribed in the House bill. Personally, I like the formula prescribed in the military construction bill, and I hope those who represent the Senate in conference will give some consideration to that formula. It would be the height of folly for the Congress to direct the Government to acquire seven or eight hundred million dollars' worth of housing under present conditions.

We see a great many reports of what will be the size of the various military establishments over the next 2 or 3 years. Forces are being constantly shipped from one area to another. If we were to authorize the acquisition of all of these projects, including personal property, under the formula provided by the bill, it could well result in a loss of two or three hundred million dollars to the National Treasury. So far as I am concerned, I would oppose a conference report which went to that extreme degree. It could only result in the Government's buying the houses from anybody who, under the free enterprise system, undertook the hazard of building the Wherry housing projects.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. President, will the Senator from Georgia yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NEUBERGER in the chair). Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Not so much hazard, because the loans were insured.

Mr. RUSSELL. Of course the loans were insured. Not only that, but in many cases rents have been collected from them for 7 or 8 years. This formula is most unrealistic, and the Government will be bilked if the Senate accepts any such proposition as the one included in the bill.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I wish to assure the Senator from Georgia that, as one of the conferees, I certainly will do what he is urging.

Mr. RUSSELL. I thank the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. Mr. President, will the Senator from Georgia yield to me?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I wish to reaffirm what the Senator from Georgia has said. The Armed Services Committee has gone into this problem with a good deal of care, and what the Senator from Georgia has stated so ably is the conclusion reached as a result of our discussions; namely, that the Government should take over this housing on a voluntary basis, but not on a compulsory basis.

Mr. RUSSELL. And certainly at some reasonable standard of value. We should not pay more than the fair market value of these units, because in most cases a considerable amount of rent has been collected.

Mr. President, I hope the conferees will give attention to the provision for military housing; I refer to what was known as the Capehart provision. If we proceed to reduce the strength of our Armed Forces by several hundred thousand men, on the theory that the development of new weapons makes such a reduction advisable, it certainly will not be necessary to construct the large amount of housing provided for in the Senate version of the bill. I hope the Senator from Indiana will not proceed on the basis of pride of authorship; I hope that for that reason he will not take the position that the amount of housing provided for in the Senate version of the bill should be constructed. We have become so involved with tremendously large sums of money that the ordinary Senator uses almost interchangeably the terms "billion dollars" and "million dollars"—except in the case of the few Senators who themselves have millions of dollars.

But the sum of money involved in this case is an extremely huge one. If necessary, we should reject the entire bill, rather than commit the Government to such a project.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, will the Senator from Georgia yield?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. CAPEHART. My position is—and I am certain it is the position of the Senator from Georgia and of all other Senators—that we wish to provide living quarters for the married personnel in both the Army, the Navy, and the Air Force, regardless of how large or how small those Armed Forces are, and that we should use good common sense as to the building of the quarters.

Mr. RUSSELL. And the Congress should keep in touch with the program, in view of some of the terrific mistakes which were made under the Wherry housing program.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Georgia yield to me, so that I may present some figures in connection with this matter?

Mr. RUSSELL. I yield.

Mr. STENNIS. I should like to point out that now in the process of being contracted for is approximately $1 billion worth of this family housing for the military. Under the House version of the bill, which came to us a while ago, there is an authorization for approximately $1,500,000,000. The Senate version of the bill, which is offered as a substitute for the House version, would authorize $3 billion more for this military housing. Mr. President, we are just running away on the subject of military housing, to the extent of billions of dollars' worth. The same news article that carries the story of a balanced budget can carry the story of congressional authorization for an additional $3 billion for military family housing which is not reflected in that budget.

At one time the military said they needed only 50 percent of the possible capacity that they expected to build. Now they mention 90 percent.

I certainly agree with the Senator from Georgia that it is far beyond what we need; and in this case the amounts are running into the billions of dollars—fantastic sums of money.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, the Senator from Mississippi is eminently correct.

Mr. President, I here and now predict that even as we are being called on in this measure to bail out those who built Wherry housing, if we authorize this $3 billion of financed housing under this bill, in 2 or 3 years the Senate will be called on to bail out, at the expense of the taxpayers, those who have constructed these projects. This is a matter with which we should proceed very slowly. It involves vast sums of money. It sounds very simple to say that we shall let a contract with a guaranteed loan. But if the Government moves a military post, we shall wind up with an obligation on the back of the same old man, the American taxpayer, under the provisions of the original contract.

This is a matter with which we should proceed with extreme care. I urge those who represent the Senate to keep this expenditure at a very minimum, at least until we know something about what will be the composition of the Armed Forces of the United States over the next 2 or 3 years.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, I rise to support the amendment of the distinguished chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee [Mr. FULBRIGHT] to substitute the Senate bill, as is, for the House bill.

I particularly rise to oppose the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART] to the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas.

Early in this session—I believe in January, or not later than the early part of February—the Banking and Currency Committee, of which I have the honor to be a member, initiated hearings on housing legislation. We heard from hundreds of witnesses over a period of 4 months. They testified at a great many hearings. We sought the best counsel we could get, from various segments of the people of this country. We took counsel with builders, architects, social workers, experts in housing, and people who are thoroughly familiar with the needs of the country in relation to public housing.

It was testified that there should be built each year in this country, in order to catch up with the accumulated backlog and care for the current needs, a minimum of 2 million new houses, of which 200,000 should be in the form of public housing units.

On May 24, after 4 months of hearings, the Senate passed the housing bill reported by the Committee on Banking and Currency. On June 12, the House Committee on Banking and Currency reported a basically sound housing bill, although it was deficient in certain particulars, especially with reference to the size of the public housing program. Like the Senate bill, it had no provision for families of middle income.

We have heard a great deal about military housing, and about the Wherry housing, so-called. I think it is a subject of great importance.

I am in agreement with what has been said by many of my colleagues tonight. I believe that the provisions of the House bill would be dangerous and costly to this Government, but, after all, the heart of the housing proposals is basic assistance to families of low income, through new public housing, including proper provisions for our senior citizens. That is today, as it was when public housing was first adopted, the basic and fundamental purpose of any housing bill. We can gloss over it as much as we like, but it is still the fundamental purpose and justification for a housing bill.

The bill of the Senate which was passed on May 24 provided for 135,000 units of public housing, and 15,000 additional units for elderly people.

That was the minimum which the Committee on Banking and Currency felt it should report and recommend to the Senate. Mr. President, at the hearings it was clearly disclosed that the opposition to the amount recommended and that the recommendation for a vastly smaller amount came from Mr. Cole, the Administrator. He testified at the hearings. On page 103 of the Senate hearings I had this exchange with Mr. Cole:

Senator LEHMAN. I thought public housing was based on need, was based on the desire of the Nation to take care of people who need governmental assistance.

Mr. COLE. The 35,000 units recommended by the administration are based upon the demand largely, and, frankly, on the fact that Congress would not give any more.

Mr. President, there is not one word in the testimony taken at the many hearings which disclosed a need for public housing units less in number than recommended by the committee and included in the bill which was passed by the Senate.

It is no business of the administrator of an agency to tell Congress that he bases his estimate of what is needed on what he thinks Congress will agree to give him. That is an attempt to legislate by a man who I consider has little to recommend him as an administrator of this important activity.

We are told that if we do not agree to the House bill, the House will not meet us in conference. I cannot believe that the House would take such a position. I cannot believe that 1 of the 2 coordinate bodies of Congress would seek to control the actions of the other body in a manner which would be clearly indicated if the House refused to meet a committee of the Senate in conference. If I did believe it, I certainly would under no circumstances be willing to agree to it.

However, the House originally approved 60,000 units of public housing. Under the provisions of the rule imposed on the House the number was later reduced to 35,000 units, and no public housing whatever was provided for elderly people. The administration insisted on a totally inadequate low-rent public housing program and no housing for the elderly. It is not content to permit tested and democratic legislative processes to function. It is afraid to permit Congress as a whole to work its combined will. It harks back, Mr. President, to the tactics of the Administrator and his General Counsel when they were Members of the House, and were voluble and violent opponents of the public housing program they are now called upon to administer by the present administration.

Mr. President, may we have order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, I would not be a party to the surrender of the responsibility, the integrity, and, yes, the dignity of the Senate to the Executive, even though I might be in total agreement with the Executive. Differences between this and the other body must be adjudicated in the proper forum of a conference between the Senate and the House of Representatives. It is inconceivable to me that any Member of the Senate could vote otherwise.

However, Mr. President, we must not forget that if we agree to the amendment of the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART], we will have no opportunity of negotiating in conference. I call that to the attention of the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. CAPEHART. The able Senator from New York is absolutely correct.

Mr. LEHMAN. In other words, we are surrendering our right to confer and negotiate on, and to consider public housing, if we adopt the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from Indiana.

Mr. President, I cannot believe that the Senate will agree to any such surrender or compromise or such tying of its hands as an independent body of Congress. Therefore I hope with all my heart that the amendment offered by the Senator from Indiana will be defeated.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote!

Mr. DOUGLAS. Mr. President, I hope very much that the amendment of the Senator from Indiana will be rejected. On the question of the adoption of his amendment I ask for a division.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. CAPEHART] to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. FULBRIGHT].

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment offered by the Senator from Indiana.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered to the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas by the Senator from Indiana. [Putting the question.] The "ayes" seem to have it——

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, I ask for a division.

On a division, the amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, I offer an amendment to the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Georgia to the Fulbright amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 12, line 3, it is proposed to strike out "$3,000,000,000," and insert in lieu thereof "$2,300,000,000"; and on line 6 to strike out "September 30, 1959," and insert "December 31, 1957."

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I see no objection to that amendment.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. President, the purpose of the amendment is to take care of houses which are on airbases and to give us a chance to look the situation over before spending millions of dollars.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. I accept that modification of my amendment.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. Mr. President, I wish to say that I cannot support an amendment which would cut down the housing units so greatly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Georgia to the so-called Fulbright amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. FULBRIGHT], as amended.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist on its amendments, request a conference with the House thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. FULBRIGHT, Mr. SPARKMAN, Mr. DOUGLAS, Mr. LEHMAN, Mr. CAPEHART, Mr. BRICKER, and Mr. BENNETT conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. LEHMAN. Mr. President, I cannot serve on any conference committee which is estopped from discussing the most important part of the bill.

Mr. CAPEHART. Mr. President, I think it is unfair for the able Senator from New York to make any such statement, for the simple reason that the Senate has just voted on the matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair appoints the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. MONRONEY] as a member of the conference committee on the part of the Senate, in place of the Senator from New York [Mr. LEHMAN].

ANNUITIES FOR WIDOWS OF JUDGES—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. EASTLAND. Mr. President, I submit a report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11124) to amend title 28, United States Code, to provide for the payment of annuities to widows and dependent children of judges. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read for the information of the Senate.

The Legislative Clerk read the report.

(For conference report, see House proceedings of tomorrow).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report.

Mr. EASTLAND. Mr. President, the Senate amended the bill as passed by the House, by increasing from 1½ to 3 percent the contributory amount required of Federal judges. The conferees concurred in this feature of the Senate amendment, which now is contained in the conference report.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Mississippi yield?

Mr. EASTLAND. I yield.

Mr. GORE. The Senator from Mississippi has just stated to the Senate the first item in disagreement. Is it not true that as the bill came to the Senate, it provided that Federal judges would contribute only 1½ percent of their salaries, and that under that version of the bill it was possible for a Federal judge to pay only 1½ percent of only one month's salary, and thereafter his widow would be entitled to a pension of $5,300 per year for the remainder of her life?

Mr. EASTLAND. Yes, subject to the 10 percent deduction of his unpaid contributions. Now that provision is taken out, and a Federal judge will contribute 3 percent of his salary on a mandatory 5-year contribution in order to qualify.

Let me tell the distinguished Senator from Tennessee that the Members of Congress pay 6 percent of their salaries into a retirement fund. Of that 6 percent about 1¼ percent goes into a fund for the widows of Members of Congress. In other words, Members of Congress contribute about 1¼ percent of their salaries for a pension for the widows of Congressmen, and the balance goes to the retirement program.

Under this bill a Federal judge will contribute 3 percent of his salary for the identical pension for which a Member of Congress pays 1¼ percent. The reason for that increased payment by a judge is that he receives a salary for life.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Mississippi yield further to me?

Mr. EASTLAND. I yield.

Mr. GORE. I believe the Senator from Mississippi is slightly in error when he uses the word "identical". When a Member of Congress retires, he must make an election as to the survivor benefits of his wife.

If he elects survivorship benefits for his wife, his own annuity is thereby reduced. Likewise, the time that the former member draws an annuity, it reduces the amount to which his widow will ultimately be entitled; so to that extent it is not the same.

Let me ask the Senator this question: As I understand, the conferees have retained the amendment adopted by the Senate, to require Federal judges to pay 3 percent of their salaries. Is that true?

Mr. EASTLAND. That is true.

Mr. GORE. In the bill as it came to the Senate there was no requirement that a judge pay for 5 years before his widow would be entitled to an annuity. Have the conferees also retained the 5-year provision?

Mr. EASTLAND. The conference agreement is this: A judge contributes 3 percent of his salary. He must pay for 5 years to be eligible to participate in the fund. Then he can buy back whatever of his previous service he desires.

We took into the program about 110 or 120 living widows. The staff of the House Judiciary Committee states that the highest of those pensions would be either $2,700 or $2,900 a year. The lowest would be $900 a year. The average would be approximately $2,200 a year.

Dr. Myers, of the Social Security Administration, gave the distinguished Senator from Tennessee his figures on this subject and sat with us in the conference. We have molded the bill just as nearly as possible to the retirement program for Members of Congress. That is largely what it is.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

Mr. EASTLAND. I yield.

Mr. GORE. I wish to congratulate the Senator upon bringing back to the Senate a bill which is much improved over the bill which originally came from the other body.

I invite the Senator's attention to the fact that there is still a basic question, it seems to me, as to the advisability of conferring survivorship benefits of a retirement system upon the survivors of men who have never been members of the system, who are not now members of the system, and for whom it is not contemplated that membership in the system will ever occur. I think that is a basic question. However, I think the bill is much improved over what it was.

The Senator has stated the improvements which have been made. I point out that for widows of former judges the bill will provide an annuity up to $2,700 or $2,900 a year. That is not an unconscionably large amount, but I wish to compare it with the $5 a month about which we debated for so long on the floor of the Senate for the needy old people. I understand that in conference that $5 has been reduced to $2.50 a month.

As the bill came to the Senate pensions would have been given free to widows of former judges, to the extent of $5,000 or $6,000 per year. The Senator has done a fine job in helping to bring this bill more nearly into conformity with the congressional retirement system, and I congratulate him.

Mr. EASTLAND. I thank the distinguished Senator.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point a statement which I have prepared on this subject.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATEMENT BY SENATOR EASTLAND

I submit a report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill, H. R. 11124, to amend title 28, United States Code, to provide for the payment of annuities to widows and dependent children of judges.

The Senate amended the House-passed bill by increasing from 1½ percent to 3 percent the contributory amount required of Federal judges. The conferees concurred in this feature of the Senate amendment, which is now contained in the conference report.

The second item of conference was in relation to the right of a widow to obtain the annuity if a judge had failed to make deposits as required. The conference version allows the widow to accept the annuity with a reduction of 10 percent per year of the amount which the judge would have contributed to the fund after having paid in the 5-year mandatory amount had he made the total subsequent contributions. The conferees on the part of the Senate receded from this position and accepted the House version as amended.

The next item in conference by reason of the Senate amendment concerned subsection (g) of the bill. The House version provided that a judge who elected to bring himself within the purview of the statute was eligible after having rendered at least 5 years of civilian service. The Senate version required that such service be as a judge of the United States, as defined in section 451 of title 28 of the United States Code. It further required that for this 5-year period contributions or deposits must have actually been made. The conferees agreed that the 5-year contributions should be made before a judge could be eligible to qualify for annuity, but also agreed that the 5-year payment should be of either judicial or civilian service, or both.

The next item in conference was in relation to the amendment of the Senate which provided that in the case of orphan children the amount payable to each orphan child should be not to exceed $480 per year. The conferees on the part of the House accepted this portion of the amendment.

The final item in conference applied to now existing widows. The House version of the bill made provision for existing widows of judges to participate as annuitants on the same basis as other widows, provided there was a 10 percent deduction of what their husbands would have contributed by reason of their allowable service. The Senate amendment struck the provision in regard to existing widows from the bill. The conferees agreed to reinstate the House provision with an amendment which would not require these widows to pay the 5-year mandatory contribution to be made by the judges which I have heretofore mentioned. This was necessitated by reason of the fact that the judge, now being deceased, could not make a contribution and that it would be unfair to require the widow to make the 5-year contribution before she could become eligible, particularly in light of the fact that she is subject to the 10-percent yearly reduction from her annuity to make up for what the judge would have contributed in order to become eligible.

Mr. President, I move that the Senate agree to the conference report.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. EASTLAND. I yield.

Mr. LANGER. What Federal judges are included?

Mr. EASTLAND. All United States judges.

Mr. LANGER. Are judges of the Court of Customs and Patent Appeals included?

Mr. EASTLAND. All Federal judges are included.

Mr. LANGER. Does that include judges of the circuit court?

Mr. EASTLAND. Yes; they are United States judges.

Mr. LANGER. Of course, they hold office for life.

Mr. EASTLAND. They are all included.

Mr. LANGER. Are judges of the Court of Claims included?

Mr. EASTLAND. Yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

UNEMPLOYMENT IN CERTAIN ECONOMICALLY DEPRESSED AREAS

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of Order No. 2596, Senate bill 2663.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated by title for the information of the Senate.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. A bill (S. 2663) to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of excessive unemployment in certain economically depressed areas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Texas?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That this act may be ctied as the "Area Redevelopment Act."

FINDINGS OF FACT

SEC. 2. The Congress hereby finds and declares that the maintenance of the national economy at a high level of prosperity and employment is vital to the best interests of the United States and that the existence of substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment in certain areas of the Nation is jeopardizing the health, standard of living, and general welfare of the Nation. It is therefore the purpose of this act to provide assistance to communities, industries, enterprises, and individuals in areas needing redevelopment to enable them to expand and adjust their productive activity to alleviate substantial and persistent unemployment or underemployment within such areas by providing new employment opportunities and developing and expanding existing facilities and resources without reducing employment in other areas of the United States.

AREA REDEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

SEC. 3. In order to carry out the purposes of this act, there is hereby established, within the executive branch of the Government, an Area Redevelopment Administration. Such Administration shall be under the direction and control of an Administrator (hereinafter referred to as "the Administrator") who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who shall be compensated at the rate of $17,500 per annum.

ADVISORY COMMITTEES

SEC. 4. (a) There is hereby established a Government Advisory Committee on Area Redevelopment which shall be composed of the following members: The Administrator, as Chairman, the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Commerce, the Secretary of Labor, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, the Administrator of the Small Business Administration, the Administrator of General Services, the Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, and the Director of the Office of Defense Mobilization. Such Committee, or any duly established subcommittee thereof, shall from time to time make recommendations to the Administrator relative to the carrying out of his duties under this act, and the Administrator shall, in carrying out such duties, consult with such Committee, or any duly established subcommittee thereof. Such Committee shall hold meetings at the call of the Chairman, and such meetings shall be held at least twice during each calendar year.

(b) The Administrator shall appoint a National Public Advisory Committee on Area Redevelopment which shall consist of 12 members and which shall be composed of representatives of labor, management, agriculture, and the public in general. From the members appointed to such Committee the Administrator shall designate a Chairman. Such Committee, or any duly established subcommittee thereof, shall from time to time make recommendations to the Administrator relative to the carrying out of his duties under this act. Such Committee shall hold not less than two meetings during each calendar year.

(c) The Administrator is authorized from time to time to call together and confer with representatives of the various parties in interest from any industry in which employment has dropped substantially over an extended period of years and which in consequence has been a primary source of high levels of unemployment in several areas designated by the Administrator as redevelopment areas. Conferences convened under authority of this subsection shall consider with and recommend to the Administrator plans and programs with special reference to any such industry to carry out the purposes of this act.

REDEVELOPMENT AREAS

SEC. 5. (a) The Administrator shall designate as "industrial redevelopment areas" those industrial areas within the United States in which he determines that there has existed substantial and persistent unemployment for an extended period of time. Any industrial area in which there has existed unemployment of not less than (1) 12 percent of the labor force for the 12-month period immediately preceding the date on which an application for assistance is made under this act, (2) 8 percent of the labor force during at least 15 months of the 18-month period immediately preceding such date, or (3) 6 percent of the labor force during at least 8 months in each of the 2 years immediately preceding such date, shall be designated an "industrial redevelopment area."

(b) In addition to those areas designated under subsection (a), the Administrator shall designate as "rural redevelopment areas" those rural areas within the United States (not exceeding at any one time 15 counties in any 1 State or 300 counties in the United States) in which he determines that there exist the largest number and percentage of low-income farm families, and a condition of substantial and persistent underemployment. In making the designations under this subsection, the Administrator shall consider among other relevant factors the number of low-income farm families in the various rural areas of the United States, the proportion that such low-income families are to the total farm families of each of such areas, the relationship of the income levels of the farm families in each such area to the general levels of income in the same area, the current and prospective employment opportunities in each such area, and the availability of farm manpower in each such area for supplemental employment.

(c) In making the determinations provided for in this section, the Administrator shall be guided, but not conclusively governed, by pertinent studies made, and information and data collected or compiled, by (1) departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government, (2) State and local governments, (3) universities and land-grant colleges, and (4) private organizations.

(d) Upon the request of the Administrator, the Secretary of Labor, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Director of the Bureau of the Census are respectively authorized to conduct such special studies, obtain such information, and compile and furnish to the Administrator such data as the Administrator may deem necessary or proper to enable him to make the determinations provided for in this section. The Administrator shall reimburse, out of any funds appropriated to carry out the purposes of this act, the foregoing officers for any expenditures incurred by them under this section.

(e) As used in this act, the term "redevelopment area" refers to any area within the United States which has been designated by the Administrator as an industrial redevelopment area or a rural redevelopment area.

LOCAL AND REGIONAL COMMITTEES

SEC. 6. (a) The Administrator, upon determining that any area is a redevelopment area, shall appoint a local redevelopment committee (hereinafter referred to as a "local committee"), to be composed of not less than seven residents of such area who, as nearly as possible, are representative of labor, commercial, industrial, and agricultural groups, and of the residents generally of such area. In appointing such local committee, the Administrator shall include therein all members of existing local redevelopment committees who are willing to serve. Each local committee shall prepare plans and cost estimates, to the extent deemed desirable by it, for (1) the development of the resources of, and processing and marketing facilities in, the area which such committee represents, (2) the construction, rehabilitation, and alteration of industrial plants or other industrial and commercial facilities in such area, and (3) the purchase of machinery or equipment for use in such area, with a view to attracting new industries thereto and otherwise to stimulate economic activity therein. Each local committee shall enlist the support of local residents and private and public lending agencies in financing the carrying out of such plans. The Administrator shall, at the request of any local committee, make available to such committee such professional, technical, and other experts as may be necessary to enable such local committee properly to discharge its functions under this act.

(b) The Administrator may establish regional advisory committees to represent two or more redevelopment areas when he finds that the establishment of such committees will facilitate the carrying out of the purposes of this act. The members of such regional committees shal be appointed by the Administrator on the same basis as are members of local committees, and such regional committees shall cooperate with, and, to the extent possible, coordinate the activities of, the local committees within the regions represented by such regional committees.

(c) Of the sums appropriated to carry out the purposes of this act, not to exceed $1,500,000 shall be available to the Administrator for the purpose of assisting the local or regional committees established under this section to defray their administrative expenses, but no part thereof shall be available for the purpose of paying salaries or traveling expenses of the members of such committees.

LOANS

SEC. 7. (a) Upon application approved by any local committee, the Administrator is authorized to make loans to assist in financing the purchase or development of land for industrial usage within the redevelopment area represented by such committee, and the construction, rehabilitation, or alteration of industrial or commercial plants, or other manufacturing, commercial, or processing facilities, and the purchase of machinery or equipment for use, in such area, if he finds that—

(1) the project for which financial assistance is sought is reasonably calculated to provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment within the redevelopment area wherein it is, or will be, located;

(2) the funds requested for such project are not otherwise available on reasonable terms;

(3) the amount of the loan plus the amount of other available funds for such project are adequate to insure the completion thereof; and

(4) the borrower will not cause a transferral to, or relocation in, any plant or facility under this section, of business operations otherwise conducted by such borrower so as to effect a reduction in employment in any other area within the United States.

(b) No loan under this section shall be for an amount in excess of 75 percent of the aggregate cost of the project for which such loan is made. The maturity date of any such loan shall be not later than 40 years after the date such loan was made. Any such loan shall bear interest at a rate equal to the rate of interest paid by the Administrator on funds obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury as provided in section 10 of this act, plus one-half of 1 percent per annum.

(c) In making any loan under this section, the Administrator shall require that not less than 10 percent, or more than 25 percent, of the aggregate cost of the project for which such loan is made shall be supplied (1) by the State (including any agency, instrumentality, or political subdivision thereof) within which such project is to be located, or (2) by one or more community or area organizations, or persons, firms or corporations within the redevelopment area in which such project is to be located, as equity capital, or as a loan repayable only after the financial assistance provided under this section has been repaid in full, and, if such loan is secured, its security shall be subordinate to the lien or liens securing the financial assistance provided under this section: Provided, That in making any loan under this section with respect to an industrial redevelopment area, the Administrator shall require that not less than 5 percent of the aggregate cost of the project for which such loan is made shall be supplied by nongovernmental sources. In determining the amount of participation required under this subsection with respect to any particular project, the Administrator shall give consideration to the financial condition of the State or local government, and to the per capita income of the residents of the redevelopment area, within which such project is to be located.

(d) In making any loan under this section with respect to any plant or facility, the Administrator shall include in the loan agreement a provision that during the life of the loan the borrower shall not cause a transferral to, or relocation in, such plant or facility of business operations otherwise conducted by such borrower so as to effect a reduction in employment in any other area within the United States. Such loan agreement shall further authorize the Administrator, in the event of a violation of the foregoing provision, to declare the unpaid balance of any such loan immediately due and payable, and, in default of payment, to proceed forthwith to enforce such loan agreement and the security thereon. For purposes of this subsection and subsection (a) (4) of this section a loan with respect to any plant or facility shall include a loan to assist in financing (1) the purchase or development of land to be utilized in connection with a plant or facility, (2) the construction, rehabilitation, or alteration of a plant or facility, or (3) the purchase of machinery or equipment for use in a plant or facility.

(e) As used in this section, the term "borrower" includes any successor in interest to the borrower, or any agent, lessee or operating subcontractor thereof, or any person, firm, or corporation which directly or indirectly controls, is controlled by, or is under common control with, the borrower by reason of voting stock interest, common officers, directors or stockholders, voting trusts, or by any other direct or indirect means.

LOANS FOR PUBLIC FACILITIES

SEC. 8. (a) Upon the application of any State, or political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or private or public organization or association representing any redevelopment area or part thereof, the Administrator is authorized to make loans to assist in financing the purchase or development of land for public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of public facilities within any redevelopment area, if he finds that—

(1) the project for which financial assistance is sought will provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment in the redevelopment area wherein such project is, or will be, located, and will tend to improve the opportunities in such area for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities;

(2) the funds requested for such project are not otherwise available on reasonable terms; and

(3) the amount of the loan plus the amount of other available funds for such project are adequate to insure the completion thereof.

(b) No loan under this section shall be for an amount in excess of 75 percent of the aggregate cost of the project for which such loan is made. The maturity date of any such loan shall be not later than 40 years after the date such loan is made. Any such loan shall bear interest at a rate equal to the rate of interest paid by the Administrator on funds obtained from the Secretary of the Treasury as provided in section 10 of this act, plus one-half of 1 percent per annum.

(c) In making any loan under this section, the Administrator shall require that not less than 10 percent, nor more than 25 percent, of the aggregate cost of the project for which such loan is made shall be supplied by the State (including any political subdivision thereof) within which such project is to be located as equity capital, or as a loan repayable only after the financial assistance provided under this section has been repaid in full, and, if such loan is secured, its security shall be subordinate to the lien or liens securing the financial assistance provided under this section. In determining the amount of participation required under this subsection with respect to any particular project, the Administrator shall give consideration to the financial condition of the State or local government, and to the per capita income of the residents of the redevelopment area, within which such project is to be located.

GRANTS FOR PUBLIC FACILITIES

SEC. 9. (a) The Administrator may conduct studies of needs in the various redevelopment areas throughout the United States for, and the probable cost of, land acquisition or development for public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of useful public facilities within such areas, and may receive proposals from any State, or political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or private or public organization or association representing any redevelopment area, or part thereof, relating to land acquisition or development for public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of public facilities within any such area. Any such proposal shall contain plans showing the project proposed to be undertaken, the cost thereof, and the contributions proposed to be made to such cost by the entity making the proposal. The Administrator, in consultation with such entity, is authorized to modify all or any part of such proposal.

(b) The Administrator, pursuant to a proposal received by him under this section, may make grants to any State, or political subdivision thereof, Indian tribe, or private or public organization or association representing any redevelopment area, or part thereof, for land acquisition or development for public facility usage, and the construction, rehabilitation, alteration, expansion, or improvement of public facilities within a redevelopment area, if he finds that—

(1) the project for which financial assistance is sought will provide more than a temporary alleviation of unemployment or underemployment in the redevelopment area wherein such project is, or will be, located, and will tend to improve the opportunities in such area for the successful establishment or expansion of industrial or commercial plants or facilities;

(2) the entity requesting the grant proposes to contribute to the cost of the project for which suhc grant is requested in proportion to its ability so to contribute; and

(3) the project for which a grant is requested will fulfill a pressing need of the area, or part thereof, in which it is, or will be, located, and there is little probability that such project can be undertaken without the assistance of a grant under this section. The amount of any grant under this section for any such project shall not exceed the difference between the funds which can be practicably obtained from other sources (including a loan under section 8 of this act) for such project, and the amount which is necessary to insure the completion thereof.

(c) The Administrator shall by regulations provide for the supervision of the carrying out of projects with respect to which grants are made under this section so as to insure that Federal funds are not wasted or dissipated.

(d) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $50 million for the purpose of making grants under this section.

FUNDS FOR LOANS

SEC. 10. To obtain funds for loans under this act, the Administrator may, with the approval of the President, issue and have outstanding at any one time notes and obligations for purchase by the Secretary of the Treasury in an amount not to exceed $225,-million. Such notes or other obligations shall be in such forms and denominations, have such maturities, and be subject to such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the Administrator, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury. Such notes or other obligations shall bear interest at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury, taking into consideration the current average rate on outstanding marketable obligations of the United States as of the last day of the month preceding the issuance of such notes or other obligations. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to purchase any notes and other obligations issued under this section and for such purpose is authorized to use as a public debt transaction the proceeds from the sale of any securities issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act, as amended, and the purposes for which securities may be issued under such act are extended to include any purchases of such notes and other obligations. The Secretary of the Treasury may at any time sell any of the notes or other obligations acquired by him under this section. All redemptions, purchases, and sales by the Secretary of the Treasury of such notes or other obligations shall be treated in every respect as public debt transactions of the United States.

ESTABLISHMENT OF REVOLVING FUNDS

SEC. 11. Of the funds raised under section 10 of this act, not more than (1) $100 million shall be deposited in a revolving fund which shall be used for the purpose of making loans for projects within industrial redevelopment areas; (2) $50 million shall be deposited in a revolving fund which shall be used for the purpose of making loans for projects within rural redevelopment areas, but the principal amount of loans from such fund which are outstanding at any one time within any one State shall not exceed $2,500,-000; and (3) $75 million shall be deposited in a revolving fund which shall be used for the purpose of making loans for public facilities. Receipts arising from the repayment of any such loans shall be deposited in the fund from which such loan was made and shall be utilized for the purpose for which such fund was established.

PROCUREMENT BY GOVERNMENTAL AGENCIES

SEC. 12. Each department, agency, or other instrumentality of the Federal Government engaged in the procurement of any supplies or services for use by or on behalf of the United States shall—

(1) use its best efforts to award negotiated procurement contracts to contractors located within redevelopment areas to the extent procurement objectives will permit;

(2) where deemed appropriate, set aside portions of procurements for negotiation exclusively with firms located in redevelopment areas, if a substantial proportion of production on such negotiated contracts will be performed within redevelopment areas and if such firms will contract for such portions of the procurement at prices no higher than those paid on the balance of such procurements;

(3) where deemed appropriate and consistent with procurement objectives, after the expiration of the period during which bids for any procurement are permitted to be submitted and if the lowest of such bids was submitted by a firm in an area other than a redevelopment area, negotiate with firms in redevelopment areas with a view to ascertaining whether any such firm will furnish the services or supplies with respect to which bids were theretofore submitted for an amount equal to, or less than, the amount of the lowest bid theretofore submitted for the furnishing of such services or supplies, and if any such firm can be found, award the contract for the furnishing of such services or supplies to such firm;

(4) assure that firms in redevelopment areas which are on appropriate bidders' lists will be given the opportunity to submit bids or proposals on all procurements for which they are qualifed and on which small business joint-determinations have not been made, but whenever the number of firms on a bidders' list is exclusive, there shall be included a representative number of firms from redevelopment areas;

(5) in the event of tie bids on offers on any procurement, award the contract to the firm located in a redevelopment area, other things being equal;

(6) encourage prime contractors to award subcontracts to firms in redevelopment areas; and

(7) cooperate with other departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government in achieving the objectives set out in this subsection.

INFORMATION

SEC. 13. The Administrator shall aid redevelopment areas by furnishing to interested individuals, communities, industries, and enterprises within such areas any assistance, technical information, market research, or other forms of assistance, information, or advice which are obtainable from the various departments, agencies, and instrumentalities of the Federal Government and which would be useful in alleviating conditions of excessive unemployment or underemployment within such areas. The Administrator shall furnish the procurement divisions of the various departments, agencies, and other instrumentalities of the Federal Government with a list containing the names and addresses of business firms which are located in redevelopment areas and which are desirous of obtaining Government contracts for the furnishing of supplies or services, and designating the supplies and services such firms are engaged in providing.

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

SEC. 14. In carrying out his duties under this act, the Administrator is authorized to provide technical assistance to areas which he has designated as redevelopment areas under this act. Such assistance shall include studies evaluating the needs of, and developing potentialities for, economic growth of such areas. Such assistance may be provided by the Administrator through members of his staff or through the employment of private individuals, partnerships, firms, corporations, or suitable institutions, under contracts entered into for such purpose. Appropriations are hereby authorized for the purposes of this section in an amount not to exceed $4,500,000.

POWERS OF ADMINISTRATOR

SEC. 15. In performing his duties under this act, the Administrator is authorized to—

(1) hold such hearings, sit and act at such times and places, and take such testimony, as he may deem advisable;

(2) request directly from any executive department, bureau, agency, board, commission, office, independent establishment, or instrumentality information, suggestions, estimates, and statistics needed to carry out the purposes of this act; and each department, bureau, agency, board, commission, office, establishment, or instrumentality is authorized to furnish such information, suggestions, estimates, and statistics directly to the Administrator;

(3) under regulations prescribed by him, assign or sell at public or private sale, or otherwise dispose of for cash or credit, in his discretion and upon such terms and conditions and for such consideration as he shall determine to be reasonable, any evidence of debt, contract, claim, personal property, or security assigned to or held by him in connection with the payment of loans made under this act, and collect or compromise all obligations assigned to him in connection with the payment of such loans until such time as such obligations may be referred to the Attorney General for suit or collection;

(4) deal with, complete, renovate, improve, modernize, insure, rent, or sell for cash or credit, upon such terms and conditions and for such consideration as he shall determine to be reasonable any real or personal property conveyed to, or otherwise acquired by, him in connection with the payment of loans made under this act;

(5) pursue to final collection, by way of compromise or other administrative action, prior to reference to the Attorney General, all claims against third parties assigned to him in connection with loans made under this act, and the power to convey and to execute in the name of the Administrator deeds of conveyance, deeds of release, assignments and satisfactions of mortgages, and any other written instrument relating to real or personal property or any interest therein acquired by the Administrator pursuant to the provisions of this act may be exercised by the Administrator or by any officer or agent appointed by him for that purpose;

(6) in addition to any powers, functions, privileges, and immunities otherwise vested in him, take any and all actions, including the procurement of the services of attorneys by contract, determined by him to be necessary or desirable in making, servicing, compromising, modifying, liquidating, or otherwise administratively dealing with or realizing on loans made under this act; and

(7) establish such rules, regulations, and precedures as he may deem appropriate in carrying out the provisions of this act.

TERMINATION OF ELIGIBILITY FOR FURTHER ASSISTANCE

SEC. 16. Whenever the Administrator shall determine that employment conditions within any area previously designated by him as a redevelopment area have changed to such an extent that such area is no longer eligible for such designation under section 5 of this act, no further assistance shall be granted under this act with respect to such area, and, for the purposes of this act, such area shall not be considered a redevelopment area: Provided, That nothing contained herein shall (1) prevent any such area from again being designated a redevelopment area under section 5 of this act if the Administrator determines it to be eligible under such section, or (2) affect the validity of any contracts or undertakings with respect to such area which were entered into pursuant to this act prior to a determination by the Administrator that such area no longer qualifies as a redevelopment area. The Administrator shall keep the departments and agencies of the Federal Government, and interested State or local agencies, advised at all times of any changes made hereunder with respect to the designation of any area.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING

SEC. 17. (a) The Secretary of Labor shall determine the vocational training or retraining needs of unemployed individuals residing in redevelopment areas and shall cooperate with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare and with existing State and local agencies and officials in charge of existing programs relating to vocational training and retraining, for the purpose of assuring that the facilities and services of such agencies are made fully available to such individuals.

(b) Whenever the Secretary of Labor finds that additional facilities or services are needed in the area to meet the vocational training or retraining needs of such individuals, he shall so advise the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, through the Commissioner of Education, shall provide assistance, including financial assistance when necessary, to the appropriate State vocational educational agency in the provision of such additional facilities or services. If the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare finds that the State vocational educational agency is unable to provide the facilities and services needed, he may, after consultation with such agency, provide for the same by agreement or contract with public or private educational institutions: Provided, That the Secretary of Labor shall arrange to provide any necessary technical assistance for setting up apprenticeship, journeymen, and other job training needed in the locality.

RETRAINING SUBSISTENCE PAYMENTS

SEC. 18. The Secretary of Labor shall, on behalf of the United States, enter into agreements with States in which redevelopment areas are located under which the Secretary shall make payments to such States for the purpose of enabling such States, as agents of the United States, to make weekly retraining payments to unemployed individuals residing within such redevelopment areas who are not entitled to unemployment compensation (either because their unemployment compensation benefits have been exhausted or because they were not insured for such compensation) and who have been certified by the Secretary of Labor to be undergoing training for a new job. Such payments shall be made for a period not exceeding 13 weeks, and the amounts of such payments shall be equal to the amount of the average weekly unemployment compensation payment payable in the State making such payments.

ANNUAL REPORT

SEC. 19. The Administrator shall make a comprehensive and detailed annual report to the Congress of his operations under this act for each fiscal year beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30, 1957. Such report shall be printed, and shall be transmitted to the Congress not later than January 3, of the year following the fiscal year with respect to which such report is made. Such report shall show, among other things, (1) the number and size of Government contracts for the furnishing of supplies and services placed with business firms located in redevelopment areas, (2) the number and size of such contracts which were negotiated with such firms pursuant to paragraph (3) of section 12 of this act, and (3) the amount and duration of employment resulting from such contracts. Upon the request of the Administrator, the various departments and agencies of the Government engaged in the procurement of supplies and services shall furnish to the Administrator such information as may be necessary for the purposes of this section.

APPROPRIATION

SEC. 20. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, this bill—S. 2663—proposes the establishment of an effective program to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in industrial and rural depressed areas. The bill was reported from committee with broad bipartisan support of its basic objectives and provisions. Three minority Members have filed supplemental views in which they differ with the committee bill in two respects. Another member of the minority has filed individual views, while still another has submitted a minority report.

It is more than a decade since Congress declared it to be a policy of this Government to utilize its resources in order to establish conditions which would assure maximum employment throughout the United States. This was accomplished in the Employment Act of 1946.

During this period since the act was passed, the country has enjoyed economic growth and general prosperity. Many communities, however, have been plagued during most of the period with chronic unemployment. In addition, there are many rural areas throughout the Nation—of which, I am sorry to say, the South has more than its share—where a very low standard of living has prevailed throughout the years. The average per capita income in hundreds of these rural counties is less than a quarter that of the average income per person throughout the Nation.

FEDERAL RESPONSIBILITY

The responsibility of the Federal Government to aid such areas is commonly acknowledged. This responsibility is in the interest of the areas which are subject to chronic unemployment and underemployment, and coincides also with the interests of the Nation. The fact is that these less fortunate areas exert a general drag upon the economy, and the Federal Government, in order to assure full prosperity for the Nation as a whole, should do all it can to eliminate pockets of unemployment and underemployment.

These views have been endorsed by all but one of the members of the Labor and Public Welfare Committee. Similar views have been expressed in the latest economic report of the President. In this report the President stated:

> The fate of distressed communities is a matter of national as well as local concern. * * * We should give serious thought to ways and means of extending prosperity to less flourishing sectors of the economy.

Our extensive hearings on this subject in connection with S. 2663 have indicated that a national policy to aid areas which are suffering from excessive unemployment and underemployment is long overdue. These communities cannot escape from the economic doldrums unless some Federal aid is extended to them.

At the end of my remarks I should like to insert a list of industrial and rural communities which might directly benefit from the proposed legislation.

S. 2663 is not regional legislation. It attempts to cope with a national problem and with unfortunate conditions which exist in many industrial and rural communities in a majority of the States. It should be stressed, however, that S. 2663 does not assume that the Federal Government will take over the total responsibility of rehabilitating distressed areas. On the contrary, we fully recognize that there is no substitute for self-help and that the initiative to rehabilitate a community must come from the residents in the area. We only propose that Federal help should supplement the needs of areas striving for rehabilitation.

MAJOR PROVISIONS OF THE PROGRAM

Such a program must be tailor-made to fit the diverse needs of the various communities needing help. The bill proposes four types of programs in which the Federal Government would aid communities suffering from chronic unemployment and underemployment.

First. Loans: Experience has shown that many communities which embark on a rehabilitation program cannot attract sufficient capital to meet their needs. Capital in such areas is limited and is not as venturesome as it is in more prosperous communities. The area development program which we are proposing, therefore, provides for the establishment of two types of credit that would be extended to redevolpment communities:

(a) Loans that would help them in the establishment of industrial projects which would create additional jobs in these communities. The maximum that can be lent under this program is $150 million. One hundred million dollars may be extended to help industrial areas and $50 million to rural areas.

(b) Many of the poor communities lack the necessary public facilities which would make them attractive to new industry. The bill, therefore, provides for a revolving fund of $75 million which could be used to lend to these areas for the development of public facilities. It is recognized, however, that some communities are in such poor financial condition that they would not be in a position to obligate themselves to develop such facilities. The poorest communities will, therefore, be eligible to receive grants from the Federal Government. A maximum of $50 million is earmarked for the grants.

Except in cases of grants, the program requires that local capital participate in each case in promoting the industrial and public facilities projects. Even where grants are involved the program anticipates that only in the most extreme cases will the Federal Government finance the total cost of the project. As I have stated earlier, the program is based on the principle of self-help, and local participation is stressed throughout the program.

A major consideration in the minds of the supporters of this bill is that the proposed program not only would help rehabilitation of numerous local areas but also would contribute to economic expansion throughout the country. In no case can loans be made which would benefit a redevelopment area at the expense of another community in the country. Furthermore, the loans must be used for projects which would expand employment opportunities within the redevelopment area. Loans are not to be used to provide only temporary employment.

At present, many people in surplus-labor areas—whether industrial or rural—are obliged to go great distances or even to move permanently to another area to find jobs. The Area Redevelopment Program would help bring jobs to the communities where jobs are needed most and, therefore, reduce the need for migration.

Second. Training and retraining: In addition to the development of facilities, areas suffering from excessive unemployment and underemployment may not have sufficiently trained and skilled manpower resources to attract industry. The bill, therefore, provides that the Federal Government in partnership with State and local agencies would establish the necessary training facilities that new industry would require in the communities undertaking a program of redevelopment. Persons undergoing training would receive a subsistence payment equal to the average unemployment benefits in their respective States, if they are not otherwise eligible to receive unemployment benefits. It would be unrealistic to expect that persons who have been unemployed or underemployed for a long period of time could afford full-time training for new jobs unless they were provided some means of livelihood during the training period.

Third. Technical assistance: Market research and other technical information are needed by businessmen in order to secure potential customers. The program provides that such information would be made available to interested individuals in redevelopment areas.

Furthermore, many depressed areas have never realized their economic potential. The program, therefore, authorizes that technical aid be given to depressed areas which would help these communities to evaluate their needs and resources and would help them in furthering their economic growth.

Fourth. Procurement policies: Last, but not least, S. 2663 proposes that the Federal Government give special consideration in its procurement to areas suffering from chronic unemployment and underemployment. This can be achieved without any additional cost to the taxpayer. The bill urges Federal procurement agencies to award negotiated procurement contracts to firms located within redevelopment areas by permitting firms located in these areas to match the lowest bid made by companies located in more prosperous and fortunate communities. S. 2663 further encourages the awarding of contracts in the redevelopment areas by setting aside portions of procurement for negotiating exclusively with firms located in redevelopment areas. Other things being equal, in the event of tie bids, the contract would be awarded to the firm located in a redevelopment area. Prime contractors are also encouraged to award subcontracts to firms in redevelopment areas.

As I said, this can be accomplished without extra cost to the Government. Compassion for the suffering and struggles of persons in distressed areas is a compelling reason to give special consideration to such areas in the procurement of supplies by the Federal Government.

ADMINISTRATION

The area redevelopment bill which we are proposing establishes a separate agency to administer the program. This was considered necessary since the program cuts across the various responsibilities of about a dozen separate agencies, none of which is geared by itself to fully carry out the program. I have stressed the need for active community participation in realizing the purposes of this program. This means that the program must receive the full support of the groups that are vitally concerned with the program; namely, agriculture, business and labor. It was, therefore, considered inadvisable to establish the agency as part of an existing department. Naturally, each of the existing departments is interested in furthering the common welfare, but the history of each of these departments shows clearly that it was created to advance largely the specific interest groups which it represents. The area redevelopment program goes beyond the improvement of business, labor and rural conditions; it is concerned with the total economic development of an area. It was, therefore, considered necessary to establish a new agency to carry out the area-redevelopment program. But in order to fully benefit from existing programs, the bill establishes a Government advisory committee to aid the Administrator of the program to carry out his responsibilities.

CONCLUSION

Mr. President, we believe that the provisions of S. 2663 would benefit the total economy and not just a few selected areas or communities. The program deserves our immediate and wholehearted support. Such action would alleviate untold suffering and would help the people in the poorest areas to share in some measure in the ever-rising standard of living which should be the birthright of every American.

Mr. President, at this point I yield to the Senator from Arkansas who, I believe, desires to offer some amendments to the bill which I am prepared to accept.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, I offer my amendments, identified as "7-23-56-A," and I ask unanimous consent to have them printed in the RECORD at this point, together with a statement explaining them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO S. 2663

The amendments to S. 2663 consist of 3 principal substantive amendments, and a number of technical amendments based on the Small Business Act and similar statutes.

DEFINITION OF RURAL REDEVELOPMENT AREAS

The principal change made in section 5 (b) would be to eliminate the arbitrary limitation of rural redevelopment areas to 300 counties in the United States and to 15 counties in any one State.

The need of a rural area for redevelopment under the bill is entirely unrelated to counties and county lines. Some States have large counties, others have small counties. In all respects, counties are inappropriate factors to be considered.

The limitations on the number of counties in each State would have served to prevent undue concentration of the program in one or a few States. This same result is accomplished by the limitation in section 11 on the amount of loans in any one State from the fund established for projects in rural redevelopment areas.

The definition of rural redevelopment areas would also be changed to permit consideration of unemployment, as well as underemployment, and to permit consideration of all low-income families in rural areas, without limitation to low-income farm families. In addition, the relation of the income levels in the area to general levels of income in the United States would be taken into consideration.

These changes would permit the administrator to take into consideration, in designating these rural areas for redevelopment, the entire economy of the area, including villages and towns, and also mining and small industrial areas located in these rural areas.

TRANSFER OR RELOCATION OF BUSINESS OPERATIONS

The amendments would delete the finding by the Administrator required by section 7 (a) (4) that the borrower will not cause a transferral to or relocation in, any plant under this section of business operations otherwise conducted by the borrower so as to effect a reduction in employment in any other area in the United States. It would also eliminate the requirement of section 7 (d) and (e) that the borrower must covenant, in the loan agreement, that he and his successors will not cause such a transfer or relocation of business operations as long as the loan is outstanding.

These requirements are so strict as to raise a question whether any loans could be made, either in industrial or in rural redevelopment areas. They would have the result of freezing economic activities, subject to the penalty of foreclosure of the mortgage if a reduction in employment of a single person were to result 10 or 20 years after the loan was made.

AMOUNTS AVAILABLE FOR LOANS

Under the bill as reported, the Administrator would be authorized to borrow up to $225 million from the Secretary of the Treasury to establish three revolving funds: $100 million for loans in industrial redevelopment areas; $50 million for loans in rural redevelopment areas, limited to $2,500,000 in any State; and $75 million for loans for public facilities.

The amendments would increase the total to $275 million, and the revolving funds for rural redevelopment areas to $100 million, with a ceiling of $6 million for any one State.

TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS

The findings required in sections 7 (a) and 8 (a) for making loans for private or public facilities (in either industrial or rural redevelopment areas) would be changed by the amendments to include a finding that "there is a reasonable expectation of repayment" of the loan. This is similar to, but less stringent than, the comparable requirement imposed by the Small Business Act of 1953.

The powers of the Administrator would be increased in a number of respects, based on the powers granted the Small Business Administrator:

1. A new section 15 (1) would authorize him to adopt a seal, and would provide specific authority to employ persons, to provide bonds for them and to pay the costs of notaries.

2. A new section 15 (5) would authorize him to extend loans for as much as 10 years beyond the statutory period to assist in their liquidation.

3. He would be authorized to obtain deficiency judgments, and to obtain hazard insurance and services and supplies costing up to $1,000 without following the advertising requirements of Revised Statutes, section 3709 in connection with property obtained by him as the result of loans under the act.

4. He would be authorized to obtain property necessary or appropriate to the conduct of his loaning activities under sections 7 and 8.

5. He would be authorized to employ consultants and to pay them up to $50 a day plus $15 per diem.

A new section 18 would be added, based on the Small Business Act, imposing penalties on wilfully overvaluing securities or making false statements to the Administrator in connection with his activities, and also imposing penalties on employees who commit certain improper acts, including embezzling, making false entries, receiving improper profits or fees in connection with the agency's transactions, or improperly releasing information about the agency's activities, or speculating in securities of concerns receiving assistance from the agency.

A new section 19 would be added, also based on the Small Business Act, which would require any business enterprise receiving a loan to certify the names of the expediters it employed, and to agree not to hire, for 2 years after the loan is made, any agency employee having a position involving discretion with respect to granting assistance.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is it the understanding that the Senator's amendments will be considered en bloc?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Yes, Mr. President. I understand the committee is disposed to accept the amendments.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I understand that the distinguished chairman of the committee has reviewed these amendments, and I ask unanimous consent that they be printed in the RECORD instead of being stated. I understand the chairman of the committee is willing to accept them.

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes. Although I am willing to accept one of the amendments of the Senator from Arkansas, I am reluctant to accept his amendment dealing with Government contracts for defense areas. I think the other amendment of the Senator from Arkansas improves the bill by providing for additional assistance to rural areas, which I believe need assistance greatly.

Mr. FULBRIGHT. Mr. President, there are two amendments. Amend-B must also be offered.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed at this point in the RECORD a brief explanation of that amendment.

There being no objection, the explanation was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

PROCUREMENT BY GOVERNMENTAL AGENCIES

The bill, as reported, in section 12, beginning on page 31, requires that Government agencies engaged in procurement shall:

1. Use their best efforts to award negotiated contracts to contractors in areas "to the extent procurement objectives will permit."

2. "Where deemed appropriate" set aside portions of procurements for negotiation with firms in areas, at no higher prices than others.

3. "Where deemed appropriate and consistent with procurement objectives," let contractors in areas meet or better low bids from nonarea contractors.

4. Assure that firms in areas on bidders lists get chance to submit bids on all procurements they are qualified for.

5. In the event of tied bids, and other things equal, award contract to area.

6. Encourage subcontracting in areas.

7. Cooperate in achieving the objectives.

This amendment would strike this entire Section 12. The purpose of the bill apparently is to create new employment opportunities. This purpose is not accomplished by shifting procurement from one area to another. No new jobs are created by this practice, and, on the contrary, it will benefit one area to the detriment of another.

Inevitably the use of procurement for relief purposes makes it more expensive. It makes procurement subject to political determinations. It puts small firms at a disadvantage in that it makes it more difficult for them to bid. It affords great opportunity for favoritism.

The use of the Government's procurement authority to channel contracts to redevelopment areas is entirely inconsistent with the Government's financial interests. It is also inconsistent with the ordinary principles of business. It is obviously to the best interests of the Government and the taxpayer to buy the best product at the lowest price. It is also the normal and reasonable expectation of a manufacturer who makes the best product at the lowest price to have a chance to make the sale.

There are occasions when departures are made from this principle. The Congress has come to the conclusion that the importance of favoring and encouraging small businesses is so great as to warrant special consideration for them. Section 12 of the bill would hurt small businesses. In certain cases it has proved necessary to use the procurement authority to promote the national defense, for example to encourage the production of strategic minerals and to promote dispersal. But with the exception of such primary considerations as small business and national defense, the use of the procurement authority for anything but the economical and efficient procurement of needed supplies is entirely wrong.

The most objectionable provision in the section is paragraph 3. This provides that, if the low bidder on a procurement is not from a redevelopment area, the procuring may negotiate with firms from redevelopment areas after the bidding has closed and may award the contract to such a bidder at the low bid or a lower figure. At first glance, it might seem that this would not cost the Government anything. But it is frequently expensive to prepare and submit a bid. And the immediate result of this provision would be to reduce the number of bidders. Responsible bidders would not go to the expense of preparing a bid, and attempting to squeeze the last cent out in order to make the bid the lowest, if a bidder from a redevelopment area can then come in and take the order at that price.

While paragraph 3 is the most objectionable provision, the others are almost equally undesirable. Paragraph 2 provides for set-asides for such firms. This would conflict with set-asides for small business. Paragraph 4 requires that firms in redevelopment areas must be given an opportunity to submit bids on all procurements for which they are qualified, however much this may delay the procurement, and however high their bids may have been in the past. Paragraph 5 provides that all tie bids must be awarded to firms from these areas.

All these provisions assume that the firms in redevelopment areas will not be able to get the business in the ordinary way, by submitting low bids, with the resulting benefit to the taxpayers. All of these provisions, by interfering with the normal and proper procurement rule of buying the best article at the lowest price, will result in an undetermined subsidy to these firms, at the taxpayers' expense.

It is highly questionable that there is any statutory authority for the present system of awarding contracts to so-called depressed areas. In the past, I understand, the defense establishments have relied on language in the Defense Production Act. However, the Director of the ODM, Mr. Flemming, has testified that act does not provide such authority. This section of the bill would give legislative sanction to the present system and extend it to permit "bid matching." If procurement is to be used as a means of affording relief, there may well be other objectives which have an equal claim. The Committee on Labor and Public Welfare normally would not have jurisdiction over procurement. I would assume that would be a matter which would be handled by the Armed Services Committee so far as military procurement is concerned and perhaps other committees for nondefense procurement. This is a very broad subject that ought to be considered thoroughly and not merely from the standpoint of the commendable desire to assist employment.

The section is inconsistent with the basic principle of the bill, which is to create new business and employment opportunities. The taxpayers of the entire Nation, including those in the so-called depressed areas, would be better served by following ordinary procurement rules.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Clerk will state the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the second amendment be printed in the RECORD without reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment offered by Mr. FULBRIGHT is as follows:

On page 31, beginning with line 20, strike out all through line 18 on page 33; and renumber the following sections and all cross references accordingly.

On page 40, beginning with "the number" on line 9, strike out all through "and, (3)" on line 11.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, would it be asking too much to have the Senator tell the rest of us what the amendment provides?

Mr. KENNEDY. The second amendment strikes out the portion of the bill dealing with the channeling of Government procurement contracts into distressed areas which was completely objectionable to my Republican colleagues. It was a provision of the bill which I thought desirable; but in order to expedite the passage of the bill through Congress, I am willing to accept the amendment.

I believe it was the purpose of the Senator from New Jersey to offer a similar amendment. On behalf of the Democratic members of the committee, I accept the amendment which would strike out this provision.

Mr. LANGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield.

Mr. LANGER. Will the distinguished Senator tell us how the amendment helps rural areas?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, this is the first amendment of the Senator from Arkansas. First, it provides for an increase from $50 million to $100 million in the loan fund to be available for rural areas.

Second, the original bill, before it was amended by the Senator from Arkansas, provided a limitation of 300 counties in the United States and 15 in any single State which would be available for assistance under the rural development program. Under the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas, there would be no restriction on the number of counties which could receive assistance.

There is however, a limitation of $6 million which can be loaned in each State under the rural development program.

Mr. LANGER. I thank the Senator from Massachusetts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments offered by the Senator from Arkansas.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. President, in section 3, provision is made for the setting up of an organization to be known as the Area Redevelopment Administration. Under the bill a separate administrator is to be appointed by the President at a salary of $17,500 per annum.

The administration objects to such an administrator acting outside the regular departments of the Government. The administration says there is no necessity for such a position because the work will be conducted as functions of the Departments of Labor and Commerce. Therefore, I submit amendments which I should like to have read. Then I will explain it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments of the Senator from New Jersey will be stated for the information of the Senate.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 16, it is proposed to strike out lines 10 through 17 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

SEC. 3. In order to carry out the purposes of this act, the Secretary of Commerce (hereinafter called the Secretary) shall establish within the Department of Commerce, an Area Redevelopment Administration headed by an Assistant Secretary of Commerce to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who shall perform such duties in the administration of this act as the Secretary may prescribe.

Strike out, wherever it appears, the word "Administrator" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Secretary."

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. President, the amendment is very easy to understand. The bill as it comes to the Senate from the committee contains a provision to which the minority on the committee object. It provides:

In order to carry out the purposes of this act, there is hereby established, within the executive branch of the government, an Area Redevelopment Administration. Such administration shall be under the direction and control of an Administrator (hereinafter referred to as "the Administrator") who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who shall be compensated at the rate of $17,500 per annum.

In other words, the Area Redevelopment Administration would be entirely separate from the other departments of the Government.

After conferring with members of the administration and of the departments concerned with the matter, and with the present Administrator of these matters, we have a picture which indicates that at present the Department of Labor determines where the so-called depressed areas are. The Department of Labor then turns the matter over to the Department of Commerce, which takes care of whatever development is needed in those areas to restore employment and to bring conditions back to a normal status.

So my amendment simply provides:

In order to carry out the purposes of this act the Secretary of Commerce (hereinafter called the Secretary) shall establish within the Department of Commerce, an area redevelopment administration headed by an Assistant Secretary of Commerce to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who shall perform such duties in the administration of this act as the Secretary may prescribe.

The question is whether the Area Redevelopment Administration shall be within the Department of Commerce or within some other existing department of the Government, or shall be a separate administration, as is provided in the bill.

The minority members of the committee objected to the bill as reported, which provided for a separate administrator. Three of the minority Senators joined in offering the amendment I have submitted, and the other two expressed their approval of the amendment in separate views.

Mr. President, this is a very fundamental question in our whole organizational setup. I shall read from the supplemental views in the report, at page 50:

The bill—

As it comes to the Senate—

would assign the administration of the area redevelopment program to a new and independent agency established by the bill. This runs counter to the current trend toward incorporating new undertakings such as this within existing departments or agencies. This trend is sound and is steadily gaining wider public acceptance. The Hoover Commission reports have performed an important public service in crystallizing this view and fostering its adoption. More experience in this matter has been gained since the days when it was popular to create a new agency almost any time the Government undertook a new operation or function. Where, as in this case, the functions to be performed are substantially related to the work of a department, it would be much more efficient to set up the administration within that department. This was recognized in S. 2892, the administration's bill—

Which I, together with some cosponsors, introduced earlier this year—which proposed putting the area redevelopment program in the Department of Commerce, which is already engaged in similar activities, in the Business and Defense Services Administration. Interdepartmental and interagency cooperation can then be handled smoothly and effectively through the advisory committee consisting of Cabinet officers and heads of independent agencies.

Therefore, Mr. President, I am offering the amendment to put this matter back where it has been functioning successfully.

Because this is very fundamental, and the administration feels very strongly about the matter of reorganization, and believes that this agency should be within the departments of the Government, I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I think it would be a mistake to accept the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey, for a very fundamental reason. The program provides substantial assistance to rural areas. There is no legitimate reason why control over that particular program should be placed in the Department of Commerce.

In addition, it involves very heavily matters in which labor is interested. I think a department which has a great responsibility to assist commerce is not the proper agency to assign a program in which labor is tremendously interested and which can have significant effects on labor.

Although there are in the program substantial elements which will be of assistance to business, I do not see any reason why those elements of the program should take precedence over the rights of farmers, labor, and the general public.

Therefore, the bill provides for an independent agency to be headed by an administrator appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The administrator's authority should not be taken away from him and placed in the Department of Commerce under the control of an Assistant Secretary.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. I may say that the Secretary of Labor has ample responsibilities here. He is on the advisory council. The entire Government must function in this matter through the joint operation of the departments with which the Secretary of Labor must confer.

The Secretary of Labor does not feel that this Commission should be in the Labor Department. The Labor Department determines where the areas concerned are located. That is done, and should be done, through the Department of Labor.

The matter then goes to the Department of Commerce, which is able to set up, through industry, and through whatever other assistance is necessary, distress relief areas.

It seemed to the administration and to the minority members of the committee that this was a sound organizational setup.

Mr. KENNEDY. Since under the amendment submitted by the Senator from Arkansas $100 million is to be expended for rural areas, I do not see why the program should not be in the Department of Agriculture, and I think the Department of Labor might have equal claim to it.

Because of this diversity of interest involved, because of our desire to give the Administrator broad authority, and because we wanted the Administrator to be appointed by the President and approved by the Senate, the bill provides that the Area Redevelopment Administration shall be a separate agency, and therefore able to speak for farmers, businessmen, and labor.

Mr. MONRONEY. Mr. President, is it not a fact that the bill, as amended by the Fulbright amendment, provides $100 million support for rural areas, and $100 million support for industrial areas?

Mr. KENNEDY. There is more than that provided. There is an additional $75 million for loans to communities for the construction of public facilities and $50 million for grants to communities for such facilities. There is, however, a balance between money made available for industrial purposes and money made available for rural purposes.

Mr. MONRONEY. I may say also that the problem in rural areas is a problem of small business and individually owned businesses and entrepreneurs who are trying to get started and trying to make new products and trying to get along. The amendment offered on the Republican side would place control over the tiny, new elements of business in a man who has done more than anybody else to encourage the growth of giant combinations of business, who has never recognized the fact that small business should ever exist, who has established one of the worst records in the history of the United States for favoritism to huge enterprises and combinations of giant organizations.

The amendment would put at the mercy of Sinclair Weeks, whose failures are known to every Member of the Senate, this program by which he would be able to administer chloroform to what little remaining small business we have in this country.

Mr. KENNEDY. I thank the Senator for his contribution. He is 100 percent correct.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Minnesota. I wish to say to the Senator from Massachusetts that, as I understand the bill, and it was my privilege to be a cosponsor, it provides for an area redevelopment administration, and an advisory committee is provided for. On that advisory committee will serve the Secretary of Commerce, the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, the Administrator of the Small Business Administration, the Administrator of the General Services Administration, the Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, and others.

The struggle which is now taking place is similar to that which took place when we adopted the Small Business Administration bill. The question then before the Senate was whether or not we would put the Small Business Administration under the control of the Secretary of Commerce or make it an independent agency. We decided in the Senate, by vote, that we would leave the agency as an independent agency.

I desire to say that had the agency been put under the Department of Commerce, it would have been just as useful as a dodo insofar as assistance to small business is concerned.

In this instance we have an opportunity to help areas which need help, and the bill is designed to do that. If we started to divide up the measure on the basis of which group in the society is to be represented in the Cabinet, as the Senator from Massachusetts said, let us put it under the Department of Agriculture. The agency to do the job is an independent agency, where there is some imagination, where there is some perspective, where there is some drive. The Secretary of Commerce is not noted these days for any great push in aiding commerce, either intrastate or interstate. That program is rather static. I gather that what is needed is not to depress further areas which are already depressed, but to do something to lift up the depressed areas.

I support the position of the Senator from Massachusetts. I hope the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey will be rejected.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair reminds the Senator that the Senate is operating under controlled time. The Senator from New Jersey has 11 minutes remaining to him. The Senator from Massachusetts has 8 minutes remaining to him.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield to the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SPARKMAN. First, I should like to commend the able Senator from Massachusetts and other members of his committee for doing such fine work in formulating and reporting the bill. I should like to ask the Senator a question. As a matter of fact, did not the subject matter receive the most careful study, not only by the Senator's committee, but by the Joint Committee on the Economic Report and by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes, by both of those committees. The Committee on the Joint Economic Report made an exhaustive report on the question of loans. As I recall, the Senator from Alabama introduced a bill on that subject some time ago.

Mr. SPARKMAN. I was the chairman of the subcommittee of the Committee on the Joint Economic Report which made the studies. Numerous recommendations were made, many of which are incorporated in the bill.

I am particularly pleased that the provision was put in the bill which refers to rendering technical assistance to rural counties of low-income areas. My colleagues will remember, when I introduced my bill in January 1955, there was contained in it a provision which called for technical assistance to 500 rural counties of low income. There are 1,000 such counties in the United States, I believe, under the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas, that program will be carried out under the terms of the bill. I think the Senator is right in resisting the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I am prepared to yield back my time, if the Senator from New Jersey will yield back the time remaining to him.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. I should like to yield first to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. DWORSHAK. Mr. President, the bill was introduced on July 28, 1955. I should like to know why its consideration has been deferred until the closing hours of the session, when it is apparent that the House will refuse to give any consideration to it at this time. Why are we devoting this time to the bill in the closing hours of the session?

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. I am afraid that is something the Senator will have to ask of the leadership on the other side of the aisle.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, I do not presume to speak for the House. I do not know what the House will do. I hope that by the Senate's acting on the bill, the House will decide to act on the bill. It has not been acted on previously for the same reason that many other bills have not been acted on yet. First, the bill was referred to the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare. It went to that committee. Many bills that have been introduced have not reached the calendar. There are some bills on the President's program which have not been scheduled for consideration at the present time. We hope that the Senate will pass the bill. Then what the House does will be its own responsibility.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. President, I yield 3 minutes to the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I support the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey. I have full confidence in the ability of Mr. Sinclair Weeks to carry out this or any other program. I say that in answer to the Senator from Oklahoma, who expressed lack of confidence in the Secretary of Commerce's taking advantage of any program to protect small-business men, the Senator from Oklahoma attacked the amendment on the ground that the Secretary of Commerce was not interested in the problems of small-business men.

I point out to him that the Secretary of Commerce whom he attacked is the same Secretary of Commerce who recently denounced the bill sponsored on the Democratic side of the aisle, which proposed to give twenty or thirty million dollars to one shipping company. With the support of the Secretary of Commerce, that bill was overwhelming defeated by the Senate. It was later brought back by the majority side and is again on the Senate Calendar. It is a bill which, I am confident, if it is brought up again, will again be overwhelming defeated. I refer to the bill which would compel the Government of the United States to buy 20 ships from a certain company at a price averaging $1,600,000 each, when the record will show that these same ships were originally sold by the Government to this company about 12 years ago at an average price of about $800,000 each. In addition the sponsor of the bill proposed that the company be given a tax exemption on its ill-gotten gains. That bill was opposed by Sinclair Weeks, and I commend him for his opposition.

I do not think anyone on this side of the aisle has to apologize for the Secretary of Commerce, and I venture to say that no one on that side of the aisle will again attempt to defend this raid on the Treasury of the United States which was stopped by the help we received from the Secretary.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. President, I yield back the time remaining to me.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I yield back the time remaining to me.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has been yielded back.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey to the committee amendment.

On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. CLEMENTS. I announce that the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], the Senator from Texas [Mr. DANIEL], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER], the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY], and the Senator from Virginia [Mr. ROBERTSON] are absent on official business.

I further announce, if present and voting, the Senator from Texas [Mr. DANIEL], the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. KEFAUVER], and the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY] would each vote "nay."

Mr. SALTONSTALL. I announce that the Senator from Michigan [Mr. POTTER] is absent by leave of the Senate on official business as a member of the American Battle Monuments Commission.

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. WELKER] is necessarily absent, and, if present, would vote "yea."

The Senator from Colorado [Mr. MILLIKIN] is also necessarily absent.

The yeas and nays resulted—yeas 43, nays 43, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FREAR in the chair). On this vote the yeas are 43, and the nays are 43. Since the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey to the committee amendment has not received a majority vote of the Senate, the amendment to the amendment is rejected.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 29, after line 24, in the committee amendment, it is proposed to add a new subsection, as follows:

Provided further, That no loan, grant or other financial assistance shall be authorized as provided by this act if the proposed project, plant or facility is for the rendition of a service to the public, for which, if rendered by an individual, partnership or private corporation, the rates or charges would be subject to regulation by a State regulatory body, unless there shall first be a report or finding by such State regulatory body that said service being rendered to the public in the area served by the proposed project, plant, or facility is inadequate.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, in both sections 8 and 9 of the proposed legislation there are proposals which would enable the Federal Government to get into public business, such as power and other businesses of that type. This amendment would prevent any financial assistance for any proposed public facility rendering service to the public of such kind.

I am greatly disturbed about the entire bill, but I do not want any avenues left open whereby the Federal Government can get into any business. That is why I offer the amendment.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, on behalf of the committee I will accept the amendment.

Mr. GOLDWATER. The Senator from Arizona is very grateful.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, do the Senators yield back their time?

Mr. GOLDWATER. I yield back my time.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I yield back all time on this side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has been yielded back.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona [Mr. GOLDWATER] to the committee amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. FLANDERS. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In the committee amendment on page 23, between lines 12 and 13, it is proposed to insert the following:

Such loans authorized under this section may be made either directly or in cooperation with banks or other lending institutions through agreements to participate on an immediate or deferred basis. No direct loans shall be made under this section unless the Administrator shall determine that a participation is not available upon reasonable terms; and no immediate participation shall be purchased unless he shall determine that a deferred participation is not available upon reasonable terms.

On page 23, line 13, after "loan" it is proposed to insert "made or participated in."

On page 23, line 17, it is proposed to strike out "such" and before "shall" insert "(other than a participation)."

On page 23, line 22, it is proposed to strike out "making any loan" and insert in lieu thereof "granting any financial assistance."

On page 23, line 25, it is proposed to strike out "loan is made" and insert in lieu thereof "assistance is granted."

On page 24, line 10, it is proposed to strike out "making any loan" and insert in lieu thereof "granting any assistance."

On page 24, line 14, it is proposed to strike out "loan is made" and insert in lieu thereof "assistance is granted."

On page 24, line 15, it is proposed to strike out "participation" and insert in lieu thereof "financial contribution."

On page 25, between lines 7 and 8 it is proposed to insert the following:

The Administrator shall include in any participation agreement entered into under this section involving any loan with respect to any plant, facility, or equipment appropriate provisions to insure compliance with the requirements of this subsection.

On page 30, line 2, after "loans", it is proposed to insert "(including participations in loans)."

On page 31, line 8, after "loans" it is proposed to insert "(including participations in loans)."

On page 31, line 10, after "loans" it is proposed to insert "(including participations in loans)."

On page 31, line 12, before "loans" it is proposed to insert "such."

On page 31, it is proposed to strike out lines 17 and 18, and insert in lieu thereof the following: "any such loans shall be deposited in the fund applicable to such loan and shall be utilized."

Mr. FLANDERS. Mr. President, I should like to make a brief explanation of the content and purpose of my amendment.

Present section 7 (a) of S. 2663 authorizes the Administrator to make certain loans but no provision is made for the Administration to participate with private lending institutions in making such loans. The question, therefore, may be raised as to whether the language of present section 7 (a) precludes the making of participation loans. Under similar circumstances, Congress deemed it advisable to amend section 207 (b) of the Small Business Act (1955 amendments) to provide specific authority to make participation loans in connection with the Small Business Administration disaster-loan program.

The language incorporated in the suggested amendment is similar to that contained in sections 207 (a) and (b) of the Small Business Act. The inclusion in that act of this special authority to participate in making loans with private financing institutions has enabled the Small Business Administration completely to avoid any charge that this Government agency is competing with private banks or other lending organizations. Thus, during the last fiscal year, more than 70 percent of the loans made by SBA were made in participation with banks.

S. 2663, in its present form, virtually precludes the participation of private lending institution in the programs established under the bill. Section 7 (c) provides that funds equal to 10 to 25 percent of the aggregate cost of any project must be supplied by either the State or by a community organization or private concern within the development area. However, if such funds are supplied as a loan, any security for the loan must be subordinated to the Administration's loan and may not be repaid until the Administration's loan has been repaid in full. These conditions may well preclude private financing sources from supplying in the form of a loan any of this portion of the project's cost.

When the requirements of section 7 (c) have been met then under 7 (b) the Administration is authorized to make a loan but the amount of the loan is limited to 75 percent of the aggregate cost of the project.

It is possible under the present bill for private lending institutions to supply additional funds toward the aggregate cost of the project. However, if a loan from the Administration is necessary, then it would appear that the private financing institution and the Administration would be in direct competition with each other as to the amount of financing they would be willing to supply and, more important, their security position after the loan is made. Since, traditionally, the Government in its lending programs has been reluctant to accept a subordinate security position, it would appear that unless the Government were authorized to participate with private lending institutions, the participation of private concerns would be discouraged.

The new language would not only permit the Administration to participate with private lending institutions when the Administrator found it feasible to do so but also would eliminate the element of competition between private and Government lending sources. Under a participation program, private loans to cover the cost of the project could be encouraged. If they were made on a deferred participation basis, the participation agreement would, in effect, be a guarantee of the private financing without any direct, immediate spending of Government funds.

Inclusion in the bill of authority to participate with private lenders does not in any way tie the hands of the Administrator. If private capital is available for these projects the Administrator may utilize it to the maximum extent on a fair and equitable basis. If it is not available, the Administrator may make a direct loan without it.

Mr. President, I ask consideration of the amendment, which extends into this new undertaking principles already adopted in the Small Business Administration, and permits a maximum use of private funds instead of Government funds.

Mr. KENNEDY. As I understand, the Senator's amendment has not been printed. Is that correct?

Mr. FLANDERS. It has not been printed.

Mr. KENNEDY. It is a very complicated amendment. As I understand, it provides that no action can be taken by the Administrator until there has been an attempt made to get not only a direct loan but also a deferred participation loan. Is that correct?

Mr. FLANDERS. Yes; those elements in the present law persist.

Mr. KENNEDY. I spent a good deal of time working on other amendments which the Senator offered to the bill, but I must say to him that the amendment he now offers would be a most unfortunate amendment of the program provided for by the pending bill. I hope the Senator's amendment will not be adopted, even though I understand that he is very eager to exhaust every method of securing private capital before allowing a governmental loan. I should regret to see the Senate adopt the amendment.

Mr. FLANDERS. We have had experience with the proposed procedure in the Small Business Administration.

Mr. KENNEDY. From what I know of the Senator's amendment, I understand it would provide that no action could be taken by the administrator until there had been an attempt made either to get a direct loan or deferred participation. I am afraid it would result in a weakening of the program by introducing burdensome delays and red tape; therefore, I would regret to have the amendment adopted.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote! Vote!

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. FLANDERS. I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All remaining time has been yielded back. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Vermont [Mr. FLANDERS] to the committee amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I should like to announce to the Senate that the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] who had intended to propose an amendment to the bill no longer plans to do so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment, as amended.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I yield 1 minute to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. CAPEHART. I merely wish to say that I believe we will regret this sort of legislation. I cannot help but believe it is wrong. All we do is to take from one section of the country and give to another, and to throw people out of work in one section, and give employment to people in another section. It is like taking money out of one pocket, and putting it into another. I shall vote against this sort of legislation, because I do not believe it is good legislation and because I do not believe it is in the best interest of the country.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I yield 3 minutes to the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, the extension of Federal functions in the manner and to the degree proposed by Senate bill 2663 constitutes an unwarranted invasion of private rights and is premised upon the faulty hypothesis that Federal intervention is the only alternative and sole redemption to the problem of so-called distressed areas.

I am opposed to the type of relief program suggested by this legislation. I disagree with the implied assumption of the advocates of this bill that economic reverses in certain areas of our country constitute either a critical or a permanent danger. Such conditions as are intended to be met by Senate bill 2663 are perfectly normal to the economic cycle of American enterprise, and, contrary to the apparent thinking of the proponents of this legislation, their final relief lies in the continued application of individual incentive and personal initiative. The unseating of this principle by appeals to governmental beneficence can only aggravate the problem and, indeed, negate the very foundations of the American economy.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, may we have order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, the whole history of this country's development refutes the contention of those who would invoke extreme Federal remedies in such situations. In the West, for instance, we have experienced the "boom" development of certain areas, only to realize, at some later date when the economic sources were dissipated, the collapse of whole communities, which exist today only as "ghost towns." During such transitions, our people did not seek governmental assistance for the artificial stimulation of areas whose economic wells had run dry. They accepted the tribulations of their ventures with stout hearts and strong backs, just as, in the beginning, they accepted their triumphs. They look, even today, upon these shadows of their history as a reminder of the opportunities which were then available to them, and as an inspiration for future achievements.

It is not too difficult to understand the psychology behind S. 2663, however, for we have reached an unfortunate stage in our Country's progress where we find the time-honored virtues of incentive and self-sufficiency being supplanted by the easier maxim of "let the Government do it." Hence, I keenly suspect that the fear of unemployment in America is not so much a genuine reaction of working people as it is a phobia afflicting certain politicians and pseudoliberal, left-wing theorizers, who would substitute for our free enterprise system the awful specter of the planned, super-state.

This legislation is based on the theory that the Federal Government must act. such a conclusion is not only contrary to the real facts of the unemployment problem, but is completely at variance with the potential of private capital which is actively seeking places of investment. At every turn, however, the free enterprise system is being thwarted in its desire to help the country and save itself.

Mr. President, to a great extent, then, unemployment pockets persist today because, instead of seeking jobs, too many Americans are letting jobs seek them. Thus, to a degree, the efforts of the "big Government planners" have been successful. The American psychology has been distorted and our citizens have become so afraid of unemployment that, in their fearful irrationality, inspired by the planners, they have succumbed to the stagnated belief that the former incentives and opportunities no longer exist and that they must depend upon the Federal Government for survival.

Nothing could be more fallacious, and nothing could be more contrary to the prescribed function of the Congress than to enact legislation giving impetus to this negative, defeatist concept. Economically, we do not have to have these distressed areas in America; so if anyone wonders why we have over 150 of them in this booming economy, it is clearly because somebody does not want the free-enterprise system to succeed, and the subsequent psychology of fear is keeping them in existence.

If it is the ultimate sense of the Senate at this time to pass legislation to alleviate the more desperate problems in this field, however, I propose that such action that is taken be as consistent as possible with the economic structure which we are endeavoring to support. The prescriptions of S. 2663 are completely antithetical to this objective. The recommendations of the administration, on the other hand, which are embodied in S. 2892, which was introduced by Senator H. ALEXANDER SMITH, far more accurately reflect the true problem involved and the remedies which can justifiably be applied toward its solution. The administration's approach is one of encouragement, through the greatest kind of participation by private enterprise, with Government grants only as a last resort. Therefore, I believe, if we must have legislation in this instance, that S. 2892, not the present bill, S. 2663, is the approach which should be adopted.

Mr. President, I wish to warn Members of the Senate and to warn the people of the United States of the words that someone in gone-by history spoke—I do not remember who it was—to the effect that people do not lose their liberties all at once, but they lose them a little bit at a time.

Mr. President, in this country we have come to accept too readily the thesis that we can meddle with our free-enterprise system and not destroy the freedom we intend to protect.

Mr. President, I intend to rise at every opportunity to try to defeat those who are endeavoring to destroy the last bastion of freedom in this world—the American private-enterprise system.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, I yield 1 minute to the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. AIKEN. Mr. President, I should like to ask the sponsors of this bill a question. I notice there is a limitation on the extent to which rural areas may benefit from this bill. May I ask if there is any limitation on the extent to which industrial areas may be benefited?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. The amendment which I offered, and which was accepted, limited that situation, I believe.

Mr. AIKEN. What does it do?

Mr. FULBRIGHT. It removes the limitation on rural areas.

Mr. AIKEN. Otherwise, without the amendment offered by the Senator from Arkansas, this would have been a bill decentralizing industry in rural areas. It would require redevelopment of existing industrial areas where there has been more than 18 percent unemployment for a 15-month period.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I yield 2 more minutes.

Mr. KENNEDY. It would have provided assistance to the 300 lowest income rural areas in the country. The amendment of the Senator from Arkansas took off the limitation of 300.

Mr. AIKEN. Does the Senator feel that the rural areas would have equal advantage with the industrial areas?

Mr. KENNEDY. No; the Senator is completely wrong. It provides for an equal amount with reference to the rural and industrial areas. It strikes out the provision which was open to question and which would have prevented any migration from one area to another.

Mr. AIKEN. Does it not still require the development of old industrial areas, even though they may be in heavily populated areas and subject to attack?

Mr. KENNEDY. It does not refer to that question at all. It provides loans to an area suffering from critical unemployment, but it does not do anything about industrial migration.

Mr. AIKEN. I wanted to make sure that we are not acting on a bill that would prevent limiting the development of decentralization.

Mr. KENNEDY. This bill does not deal with that question at all. The Senator from Arkansas would not have offered the amendment in regard to decentralization, I am sure, if it provided otherwise.

Mr. AIKEN. I agree that the amendment of the Senator from Arkansas makes the bill look considerably different.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MALONE].

CONGRESS VOTES FOR FREE TRADE TO DESTROY AMERICAN WORKINGMEN AND INVESTORS

Mr. MALONE. Mr. President, Congress voted, in 1934, to destroy the American workingmen and investors. As a result the legislation proposed tonight is inevitable on account of that policy we have followed for 22 years.

The Secretary of State testified before the Senate Finance Committee last year, when the bill H. R. 1 was before the Senate Finance Committee, to extend the 1934 Trade Agreements Act for 3 years, that it was to be expected that some industries would suffer, that there would be depressed areas, and that he favored Congress appropriating money to reimburse investors and to furnish transportation for working men and women to move from a depressed area to another area where they might find jobs.

CONGRESS TRANSFERRED ALL CONSTITUTIONAL RESPONSIBILITY

That 1934 Trade Agreements Act was first passed in 1934 for 3 years as an emergency measure, but has been continually renewed and for 3 years in 1955 to June 14, of 1958, they called it "Reciprocal Trade," although the catch phrase did not occur in the legislation.

Only 15 Senators out of 96 Members of this august body voted against its extension.

The Congress by that act transferred the constitutional responsibility of the legislative body to the President, to regulate foreign trade and the national economy—and by that act gave him full authority, according to the Secretary of State, to transfer that responsibility to any nation on earth under the auspices of any organization he might "spearhead."

So, in 1947, he caused to be organized the General Agreements on Tariffs and Trade, to be located at Geneva. Thirty-five nations of which we are 1—each with 1 vote are proceeding to divide our markets among them.

It might just as well have been located in Moscow or Peking—and still could be removed to either of those areas if the President so desired.

The Congress is helpless unless the act is repealed or allowed to expire on June 14, 1958.

THE ITO AND IOTC

Later, the International Trade Organization came on, and the Congress did not accept it. The International Office of Trade Cooperation will die in the House with the close of this Congress.

However, I invite attention to the fact that it means nothing when Congress does not approve of these organizations. Since it approved the 1934 Trade Agreements Act—and by that action gave the President full authority to establish the General Agreements on Tariffs and Trade at Geneva.

DRIVING AMERICAN FIRMS AND INVESTORS ABROAD

So, Mr. President, Congress established a policy of driving American firms and investors abroad, and by driving these firms and investors out of their established American areas deliberately caused the depressed areas. Congress itself then caused the depressed areas, which it now seeks to alleviate through the further appropriation of the taxpayers' money.

FINANCE COMMITTEE CONFERENCE ON TEXTILES

Our Finance Committee had a 3-hour conference with the Chairman of the Tariff Commission as to what we should do to cause him to make a full investigation to determine what was the matter with the textile industry. Any 10-year-old schoolboy could tell us what is the matter with the textile industry.

The textile factories in Japan, largely financed by American taxpayers, that pay 14 to 19 cents an hour for labor, and import their product into this country under virtual free-trade conditions, is running the American higher wage living standard working men and women and the American investor out of the business.

The textile industry is doomed in this country along with the chemical, mining, crockery, machine tool, glass, and 5,000 other products.

So, if Congress continues to vote for the very thing that brings about the depressed areas, it had better vote for the appropriation to reimburse the investors and to move the working men and women—or at least to feed them. It would be helpful to Congress if they would read the Constitution of the United States just one more time. It provides, article I, section 8, that Congress shall regulate foreign trade and the national economy.

The Congress is designated by the Constitution because every precinct in America is represented in both the House and the Senate.

It does not say that any foreign trade and national economy shall be regulated in Geneva by 34 foreign nations. Yet that is exactly what is happening, since each nation has one vote. We are members of that General Agreement on Tariff and Trade, with 1 vote out of 35.

So now that Congress has caused the depressed areas by its own action, the legislation proposed by the Secretary of State to appropriate money to reimburse the investors and to transport the working men and women to more fertile areas is under way.

It is the Russian way—except they do not need legislation—they do it by Executive order.

I shall vote for this legislation because of my inability to repeal, before this vote, the "mother" act—the basis of the continual lowering the duties or tariffs that were utilized to equalize the wages and cost of doing business here and in the chief competing nation on each product.

REVERT TO THE CONSTITUTION

Repeal the 1934 Trade Agreements Act—revert to the Constitution in the regulation of foreign trade and the national economy.

The Tariff Commission, an agent of Congress, would then adjust the duties—article I, section 8—on the basis of fair and reasonable competition—take the profit out of low-cost wages at the water's edge and give the American workingmen and investors equal access to the American markets.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading and was read the third time.

Mr. KNOWLAND. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the passage of the bill.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I would not like to call Senators here this late at night. I suggest that we wait until tomorrow to vote on the passage of the bill.

POSITION OF OUTDOOR GROUPS ON FISHERIES LEGISLATION

Mr. NEUBERGER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a telegram to me from leading American outdoor groups on S. 3275, the so-called fisheries reorganization legislation. I concur generally with the purport of the message.

There being no objection, the telegram was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Hon RICHARD L. NEUBERGER,
Senate Office Building,
Washington, D. C.:

All national conservation organizations representing millions of sportsmen and other conservationists and the State fish and game directors urge approval of S. 3275 as amended and passed by the House. We are opposed to establishing any kind of needless, costly, and disjunctive several-man commission in Interior Department. We are unalterably opposed to separating the management of those invaluable related resources and still insist upon a United States Fish and Wildlife Service with a single responsible administrative head under an Assistant Secretary for Fish and Wildlife as agreed with Bonner committee, with Secretary Fred A. Seaton in line with the President's program, and as agreed with entire commercial fishing industry. Amended S. 3275 would provide immediate relief to distressed commercial fishing industry and we stand by the agreed organizational pattern in House bill.

Citizens Committee on Natural Resources, Spencer M. Smith, Secretary; Forest Conservation Society of America, C. H. Stoddard, Executive Director; International Association of Fish, Game, and Conservation Commissioners, B. F. Stiles, President; Izaak Walton League of America, Joseph W. Penfold, National Conservation Director, Midwest Association of Fish, Game, and Conservation Commissioners, Glen D. Palmer, President; National Parks Association, Fred M. Packard, Executive Secretary; National Wildlife Federation, Charles H. Callison, Conservation Director; Outdoor Writers Association of America, Michael Hudoba, Conservation Director; Public Affairs Institute, Dewey Anderson, Executive Director; Sport Fishing Institute, Richard H. Stroud, Executive Vice President; Western Association of State Game and Fish Commissioners, John A. Biggs, President; Wilderness Society, Howard Zahniser, Executive Secretary; Wildlife Management Institute, C. R. Gutermuth, Vice President.

APPOINTMENT OF ADDITIONAL CONFEREE ON SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. ANDERSON] may be appointed as a conferee on the second supplemental appropriation bill for consideration of items pertaining to atomic energy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRANSACTION OF ADDITIONAL ROUTINE BUSINESS

By unanimous consent, the following additional routine business was transacted:

REPORT OF A COMMITTEE

The following report of a committee was submitted:

By Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina, from the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, with an amendment:

H. R. 3489. A bill to amend the Federal Employees' Group Life Insurance Act of 1954 to bring employees of Gallaudet College within its coverage (Rept. No. 2807).

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF A COMMITTEE

As in executive session,

The following favorable reports of nominations were submitted:

By Mr. JOHNSTON of South Carolina, from the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service:

One hundred postmaster nominations.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. BRIDGES:

S. 4285. A bill for the relief of Harvey Chih Sung, his wife, Wang Wen Chun Sung, and children Grace Yuen Chien Sung and Flora Yuen Pin Sung; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. MORSE:

S. 4286. A bill to revise the basis for establishing wartime service connection for multiple sclerosis; to the Committee on Finance.

(See the remarks of Mr. MORSE when he introduced the above bill, which appear under a separate heading.)

By Mr. DUFF:

S. 4287. A bill for the relief of Nicola Marcello; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

REVISION OF BASIS FOR ESTABLISHING WARTIME SERVICE CONNECTION FOR MULTIPLE SCLEROSIS

Mr. MORSE. Mr. President, I am about to introduce a bill, knowing full well that at this late time in the session no action can be taken on it, but a legislative record needs to be made on this problem, and I hope the very introduction of the bill awaiting committee hearings next year will have some effect on the Veterans' Administration in the meantime. Veterans are, in my judgment, suffering a gross injustice because of lack of attention by the Veterans' Administration.

Mr. President, I introduce, for appropriate reference, a bill to further amend the second proviso of paragraph I (c) of part (I), Veterans Regulation No. 1 (a), to provide that multiple sclerosis developing a 10 percent degree of disability or more within 3 years from the date of separation from active service, shall, in the absence of affirmative evidence to the contrary, be deemed to have been incurred in or aggravated by active service.

I have, and I am sure that many of my colleagues have also had, correspondence with veteran constituents who are suffering from this insidious disease and who have attempted unsuccessfully, to prove their disability is service connected.

Mr. President, the cause of multiple sclerosis is unknown; the etiology and course of the disease remain obscure. In the early stages it is almost impossible to diagnose, and some eminent neurologists feel that only by postmortem examination can a positive diagnosis be made.

By the very nature of the disease, placing the burden of proof of service connection upon the veteran is an undue and impossible burden. In the interest of those veterans suffering from multiple sclerosis and facing a life of increasing disability and decreasing productivity, and the crushing problems of their families, this bill is a reform that should be adopted.

Mr. President, I do not introduce this bill lightly. I introduce it only after I have checked its substance with medical authority. I am told that medical knowledge at this time in regard to this very serious disease is such that medical science cannot tell the origin of the disease, but medical science is of the opinion, I have been advised by competent medical authority, that if the disease develops within 3 years, which is covered in this bill, it is a safe assumption that it developed during the time of military service.

I wish to say, once again, Mr. President, that when we are dealing with disability cases involving veterans, all doubts should be resolved in favor of the veteran. When there can be any question at all as to whether or not the multiple sclerosis from which a veteran has suffered may have been developed and aggravated by military service, the veteran should have the benefit of the doubt, at least, Mr. President, until medical science can write a clear case to the contrary, which it is unable to do at the present time.

I am satisfied that under existing regulations the Veterans' Administration could have done something about those cases. I hope the introduction of my bill will make it perfectly clear that there are those of us who mean business in regard to this subject in seeing that justice is done at an early date. I strongly recommend favorably consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be received and appropriately referred.

The bill (S. 4286) to revise the basis for establishing wartime-service connection for multiple sclerosis, introduced by Mr. MORSE, was received, read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

ALLEVIATION OF EXCESSIVE UNEMPLOYMENT IN CERTAIN ECONOMICALLY DEPRESSED AREAS—AMENDMENT

Mr. GOLDWATER submitted an amendment, intended to be proposed by him, to the bill (S. 2663) to establish an effective program to alleviate conditions of excessive unemployment in certain economically depressed areas, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

INCREASE IN NUMBER OF VISAS AUTHORIZED TO BE ISSUED TO ELIGIBLE ORPHANS — AMENDMENTS

Mr. LEHMAN submitted amendments, in the nature of a substitute intended to be proposed by him, to the bill (S. 3570) to increase the number of visas authorized to be issued to eligible orphans under the Refugee Relief Act of 1953, and for other purposes, which were ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

PAYMENT OF CLAIMS OF AMERICANS AGAINST GERMANY AND JAPAN—AMENDMENT OF TRADING WITH THE ENEMY ACT AND WAR CLAIMS ACT OF 1948—AMENDMENT

Mr. YOUNG submitted an amendment, intended to be proposed by him, to the bill (S. 4205) to provide funds to pay nationals of the United States who have war damage claims against Germany and Japan, without additional direct appropriations therefor, and to amend the Trading With the Enemy Act and the War Claims Act of 1948, as amended, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed.

ADDITIONAL RECORD MATTERS

By Mr. GORE:

Speech delivered by him on the subject of The Plight of Independent Agencies.

By Mr. JACKSON:

Statement prepared by him entitled "Commonwealth of Puerto Rico."

RECESS TO 9:30 A. M. TOMORROW

Mr. JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. President, I move, pursuant to the order previously entered, that the Senate stand in recess until 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 11 o'clock 48 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess, the recess being, under the order previously entered, until tomorrow, Thursday, July 26, 1956, at 9:30 o'clock a. m.

NOMINATIONS

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

WEDNESDAY, JULY 25, 1956

The House met at 10 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. Bernard Braskamp, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, who hast blessed us with the gift of a new day, grant that during all its hours we may seek the higher and nobler levels of living.

May we have the insight and the inspiration, the skill and the energy, to make this day radiant and vibrant with that which is beautiful and best.

We pray that we may never look upon the work in which we are engaged as just a job, but as a joy and an opportunity to have a part and a place in the vast areas of human service and in the building of a better world.

Make us realize more fully that man cannot live by bread alone and that it is not enough to help him gain economic and social security, but that he needs that inner spiritual security which comes from faith and trust in Thee.

Hear us in the name of our blessed Lord who came to give us the abundant life. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

BRIDGES ACROSS THE POTOMAC

Mr. DAVIS of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (S. 2568) to authorize and direct the construction of bridges over the Potomac River, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers on the part of the House be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. No. 2879)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 2568) to amend title I of the act entitled "An Act to authorize and direct the construction of bridges over the Potomac River, and for other purposes," having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its amendments numbered 2 and 3.

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House numbered 1, and agree to the same.

JAMES C. DAVIS,
JOHN BELL WILLIAMS,
JOEL T. BROYHILL,
Managers on the Part of the House.

ALAN BIBLE,
J. ALLEN FREAR, Jr.,
J. GLENN BEALL,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 2568) to amend title I of the act entitled "An act to authorize and direct the construction of bridges over the Potomac River, and for other purposes," submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

Amendment No. 1: This amendment provided that the bridge to be constructed should be a six-lane bascule-span bridge. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 2: This amendment struck out the provision of the Senate bill that the general location of the bridge, approaches, interchanges, and connecting roads on lands under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior shall be subject to his approval. The House recedes.

Amendment No. 3: The Senate bill provided that the Secretary of the Interior shall retain control and jurisdiction over certain park lands in the vicinity of the bridge. The House amendment provided that the Secretary should retain such jurisdiction only upon completion of the bridge. The House recedes.

JAMES C. DAVIS,
JOHN BELL WILLIAMS,
JOEL T. BROYHILL,
Managers on the Part of the House.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CALL OF THE HOUSE

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently no quorum is present.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 118]

Bailey	Bell	Brooks, Tex.
Bass, Tenn.	Boykin	Broyhill
Baumhart	Brooks, La.	Burleson
Carnahan	Hoffman, Ill.	Priest
Chatham	Johansen	Prouty
Clevenger	Kelley, Pa.	Scudder
Davis, Wis.	Lane	Short
Dingell	Long	Sieminski
Dolliver	McDowell	Simpson, Pa.
Dowdy	Morrison	Thompson, La.
Eberharter	Nelson	Thornberry
Gamble	O'Hara, Minn.	Vinson
Gordon	Patman	Whitten
Gregory	Phillips	Wickersham
Hébert	Powell	Wilson, Calif.
Hillings	Preston

The SPEAKER. On this rollcall 383 Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

By unanimous consent, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Carrell, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed, with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, bills of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 12130. An act making appropriations for Mutual Security for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1957, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the foregoing bill and requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes and appoints Mr. HAYDEN, Mr. RUSSELL, Mr. CHAVEZ, Mr. ELLENDER, Mr. HILL, Mr. BRIDGES, Mr. SALTONSTALL, Mr. KNOWLAND, and Mr. DIRKSEN, to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendments of the House to bills of the Senate of the following titles:

The message also announced that the Senate requests the House of Representatives to return to the Senate the bill H. R. 9591, entitled "An act to amend the act of August 31, 1954 (68 Stat. 1037), relating to the acquisition of non-Federal land within the existing boundaries of any national park, and for other purposes."

CONSIDERATION OF CONFERENCE REPORTS

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that during the remainder of this week it shall be in order to consider conference reports the same day reported, notwithstanding the provisions of section 2 of rule XXVIII.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

MOTIONS TO SUSPEND THE RULES

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it shall be in order during the remainder of this week for the Speaker at any time to entertain motions to suspend the rules, notwithstanding the provisions of clause 2 of rule XXVII.

May I say that it is understood that any bills on which the Speaker will recognize Members who offer motions to suspend the rules will be taken up with the minority leader. His views, of course, will be given consideration.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. GROSS. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, can the gentleman give us some idea of the bills that would be called up under suspension? The other day we had a number of what in my opinion were nonessential bills called up under that procedure. I should like to know before acceding to this unanimous-consent request that any bills called up under this abnormal procedure are necessary and essential to the welfare of the people of this country.

Mr. McCORMACK. Of course, the question of considering a bill under suspension of the rules involves many factors. I would not want to unnecessarily put down what bills would be taken up or ask the Speaker to do so because the Speaker decides when he will recognize a Member to make such a motion. That is in the jurisdiction of the Speaker to determine. Certainly, if there was a rule granted, I am sure a Member would not want to have his bill considered under suspension of the rules, as I certainly would not, and I do not think the Speaker would, where there might be some doubt as to getting the necessary two-thirds vote. Now, referring to the bills that might be called up, there are two or three projects in which Members on your side are greatly interested. I certainly would not want them brought up, and I cannot imagine that they would want them brought up under suspension of the rules if they can be considered in the usual way under a rule.

With reference to the gentleman's inquiry, there has been an understanding, or I should say there has been a conversation between the leadership on my side and the leadership on the gentleman's side, and no bills will be brought up under suspension without the leadership on your side being conferred with and advised. I think that certainly should satisfy any Member.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, I assume that when those bills were called up the other day under suspension that there was prior consultation between the leadership. Is that not true?

Mr. McCORMACK. The situation the other day was different than now.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

Mr. HOFFMAN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I object.

MUTUAL SECURITY APPROPRIATIONS, 1957

Mr. PASSMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 12130) making appropriations for Mutual Security for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1957, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. PASSMAN, GARY, ROONEY, CANNON, FERNANDEZ, LANHAM, NATCHER, DENTON, TABER, WIGGLESWORTH, FENTON, FORD, and HAND.

Mr. PASSMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Appropriations may have until midnight to file a report on the bill, H. R. 12130.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

There was no objection.

VERENDRYE NATIONAL MONUMENT

Mr. ASPINALL. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 1774) to abolish the Verendrye National Monument, and to provide for its continued public use by the State of North Dakota for a State historical site, and for other purposes, and ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers on the part of the House be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection.

The clerk read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. No. 2886)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 1774) to abolish the Verendrye National Monument, and to provide for its continued public use by the State of North Dakota for a State historic site, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 1, 3, 4, and 5.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 2, and agree to the same.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 1774) to abolish the Verendrye National Monument, and to provide for its continued public use by the State of North Dakota for a State historic site, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report as to the amendments to the bill:

As agreed to by the managers on the part of the House, the conference committee version of H. R. 1774 differs from the bill as approved by the House in only one respect.

The House managers have agreed to a Senate amendment to section 1 of the House-passed version, which amendment subjects the lands authorized to be conveyed to a reservation to the United States of the right to flood such lands in connection with the operation and maintenance of the Garrison Dam and Reservoir Project. This amendment will preserve in the United States the right to exercise flowage easement rights over such minimal portion of the lands involved as will result from the flooding of a portion of the monument lands by the filling of the Garrison Reservoir behind Garrison Dam, presently under construction by the United States Corps of Engineers. Even with this flooding—at high water level and at normal pool level—of a portion of the monument lands along the north and west boundaries thereof, it is noted that the summit of Crow High Butte, the monument's principal feature, will still be 259 feet above maximum pool level of the reservoir.

In all other respects, the conference committee version of H. R. 1774 is identical to the House-approved bill.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

KANEOHE BAY, OAHU

Mr. ENGLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 7890) to authorize the Commissioner of Public Lands to sell public lands located at Kaneohe Bay, Oahu, to certain persons, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

The 28th and 29th legislatures of said Territory shall continue to be governed by the same provisions of said organic act which were in effect prior to the approval of this act, except that portion of section 55 of said organic act which is deleted by subsection (a) of section 7 of this act."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments were agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ORGANIC ACT OF GUAM

Mr. ENGLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 11522, an act to implement section 25 (b) of the Organic Act of Guam by carrying out the recommendations of the Commission on the Application of Federal Laws to Guam, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

PROVIDING FOR DISPOSAL OF PUBLIC LANDS WITHIN HIGHWAY, TELEPHONE, AND PIPELINE WITHDRAWALS IN ALASKA

Mr. ENGLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 4096), an act to provide for the disposal of public lands within highway, telephone, and pipeline withdrawals in Alaska, subject to appropriate easements, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 2, line 11, strike out "Public lands" and insert "Lands."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE IN CONSTRUCTION AND OPERATION OF SCHOOLS IN IMPACTED AREAS

Mr. BARDEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 11695), an act to extend until June 30, 1958, the programs of financial assistance in the construction and operation of schools in areas affected by Federal activities under the provisions of Public Laws 815 and 874, 81st Congress, and to make certain other changes in such provisions, with Senate amendments thereto, and concur in the Senate amendments.

Page 14, line 16, after "sale", insert "or transfer."

Mr. SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

Mr. MARTIN. Reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain the Senate amendments?

Mr. BARDEN. It does not affect the operation of the bill. The only amendment, aside from correction of the language was that the Senate put in after "sale", the words "or transfer." The House used the word "sale", but the Senate felt it should be "sale or transfer" as it relates to housing projects. I presume the gentleman understands what that was. It was to take care of a sudden impact that might be the result of immediate transfer, and provides extension.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BARDEN]?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments were agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

STOCKTON AIR FORCE STATION AND STOCKTON ANNEX

Hanford MacNider, United States Army Reserve (retired), to the grade of lieutenant general on the retired list, with a Senate amendment thereto, and agree to the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Lines 3 and 4, strike out "United States Army Reserve (retired)" and insert "Army of the United States (retired)."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act to provide for the advancement of Maj. Gen. Hanford MacNider, Army of the United States retired to the grade of lieutenant general on the retired list."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENDING TIME LIMIT WITHIN WHICH AWARDS OF CERTAIN MILITARY AND NAVAL DECORATIONS MAY BE MADE

Mr. KILDAY submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (S. 1637) to extend the time limit within which awards of certain military and naval decorations may be made:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. No. 2906)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 1637) to extend the time limit within which awards of certain military and naval decorations may be made, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its amendment.

PAUL J. KILDAY,
CARL T. DURHAM,
DEWEY SHORT,
Managers on the Part of the House.

JOHN STENNIS,
HENRY M. JACKSON,
SAM J. ERVIN, JR.,
LEVERETT SALTONSTALL,
MARGARET CHASE SMITH,
Managers on the Part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 1637) to extend the time limit within which awards of certain military and naval decorations may be made, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report.

S. 1637 passed the Senate on May 21, 1956, and provided that a decoration or device in lieu of decoration which, prior to the enactment of the bill had been authorized by Congress to be awarded to any person for an act or service performed while on active duty in the military or naval forces of the United States, or while serving such forces, could be awarded at any time not later than one year after the enactment of the bill for any act or service performed between June 27, 1950, and July 27, 1953, if written recommendation had been submitted to the appropriate office in a military department before the enactment of the bill.

On July 16, 1956, the House passed the bill with amendments which would authorize an additional year within which new recommendations for military awards and decorations could be filed with the military department and extending the time from one to two years in which recommendations already received could be processed and awarded.

In conference the Senate managers took the position that the authority to award decorations for service performed between June 27, 1950, and July 27, 1953, should be limited to those for which recommendations have already been received. Furthermore, the position was taken that no more than one year should be allowed for the military departments to process the recommendations already on file and that the period of two years, as contained in the House amendment, was not necessary.

The managers on the part of the House realize that with the passage of time it becomes more difficult to make fair evaluations of suggested awards and consequently agree with the position of the Senate that an additional period of time, within which new recommendations for awards based on Korean service can be submitted, should not be granted. Furthermore, for those recommendations already on file one additional year within which the awards can be processed and made should be sufficient.

The House recedes from its amendment.

PAUL J. KILDAY,
CARL T. DURHAM,
DEWEY SHORT,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. KILDAY. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (S. 1637) to extend the time limit within which awards of certain military and naval decorations may be made, and ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers on the part of the House may be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

LOAN OF CERTAIN NAVAL VESSELS

Mr. RIVERS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 11613 with a Senate amendment thereto and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert "That (a) the first sentence of section 4 (a) of the act of August 5, 1953 (67 Stat. 363), is amended by inserting immediately after 'Far Eastern' the words 'or European.'

"(b) Section 4 (c) of such act is amended by striking out 'December 31, 1956' and inserting in lieu thereof 'December 31, 1957.'

"(c) Section 5 of such act is amended by striking out 'respective Governments under the Mutual Security Act' and inserting in lieu thereof 'recipient Governments under the Mutual Security Act of 1954, as amended, or provided by the recipient Governments under reimbursable provisions of such act'."

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain briefly the changes that were made?

Mr. RIVERS. Last week the House passed the bill H. R. 11613, which was designed to lend to the friendly nations of NATO countries 25 ships.

In 1953 we had a similar bill which provided for the lending of 25 ships to friendly far-eastern countries. Under the 1953 act only 18 ships were lent, leaving 7.

When the House bill H. R. 11613 went to the other body the Senate struck out everything after the enacting clause and changed it so that the remaining seven vessels under the 1953 act could be lent to friendly European nations.

In all, the two acts would have authorized 50 ships.

Instead of having 50 ships authorized the other body struck out the 25 under H. R. 11613. We only have 7 then that were authorized under the 1953 bill. This bill extends the expiration date of the 1953 law and authorizes the European nations to participate in the provisions of the law so far as the remaining 7 ships are concerned.

We took this because half a loaf we felt was better than none.

Mr. GROSS. I commend the conferees.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from South Carolina?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments were concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

LAND GRANTS TO PUEBLO INDIANS

Mr. HALEY submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 5712) to provide that the United States hold in trust for the Pueblos of Zia and Jemez a part of the Ojo del Espiritu Santo Grant and a small area of public domain adjacent thereto:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. NO. 2907)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5712) to provide that the United States hold in trust for the Pueblos of Zia and Jemez a part of the Ojo del Espiritu Santo Grant and a small area of public domain adjacent thereto, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by the Senate amendment, insert the following:

"SEC. 3. In the administration of the lands to be held in trust by the United States pursuant to this Act, together with any remaining lands comprising the Ojo del Espiritu Santo Grant, the Secretary of Agriculture, or any officer or agency of the United States hereafter administering such lands, shall make the livestock grazing capacity of the lands held in trust under sections 1 and 2 hereof available to the Zia and Jemez Indians to the extent of 400 cattle units yearlong, and the remaining lands available to the non-Indians included in the provisions of the Executive Order (Number 8697) signed by the President on February 28, 1941."

And the Senate agree to the same.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5712), to provide that the United States hold in trust for the Pueblos of Zia and Jemez a part of the Ojo del Espiritu Santo Grant and a small area of public domain adjacent thereto, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended in the accompanying conference report.

H. R. 5712, as reported by the House, contained two sections. The Senate added section 3 which provided that in the administration of the trust lands in question as well as any remaining lands comprising the Ojo del Espiritu Santo Grant, the Secretary of Agriculture would make the livestock grazing capacity of the lands available to the Zia and Jemez Indians to the extent of 400 cattle units yearlong. The amendment also provided that the remainder of the grazing capacity on the entire grant would be available to non-Indians regardless of the trust provisions.

Declaring that this section would have defeated the purpose of the bill, the House managers refused to accept the amendment and agreed to a substitute amendment which provides that in the administration of the lands to be held in trust by the United States pursuant to this act as well as any remaining lands comprising the Ojo del Espiritu Grant, the Secretary of Agriculture, or any agency of the United States (Department of the Interior) charged with the administration of such lands shall be assured that the livestock grazing capacity of the lands held in trust under sections 1 and 2 hereof available to the Zia and Jemez Indians shall not be in excess of 400 cattle units yearlong. The amendment also provides that the remaining lands available to non-Indians under the provisions of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act as provided by Executive order (No. 8697) signed by the President on February 28, 1941. The managers believe this amendment to be the most equitable provision that can be made.

JAMES A. HALEY,
B. F. SISK,
JOHN J. RHODES,
Managers on the Part of the House.

Mr. HALEY. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 5712) to provide that the United States hold in trust for the Pueblos of Zia and Jemez a part of the Ojo del Espiritu Santo Grant and a small area of public domain adjacent thereto, and ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers on the part of the House may be read in lieu of the report.

The Clerk read the title of the bill?

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments were concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AMENDING PART II OF TITLE III OF THE COMMUNICATIONS ACT OF 1934

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 4090) to amend part II of title III of the Communications Act of 1934, so as to require the installation of an automatic radiotelegraph call selector on cargo ships of the United States carrying less than two radio operators, and for other purposes, with Senate amendment thereto and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert "That the Federal Communications Commission, the United States Coast Guard, and the Federal Maritime Administration are hereby authorized and directed, acting jointly, (1) to make a full and complete study and investigation with respect to the need for installing automatic radiotelegraph call selectors on cargo ships of the United States carrying less than two radio operators, and other such safety devices, and the feasibility thereof, (2) to report to the Congress at the earliest practicable date, but not later than March 1, 1957, and (3) to include in such report their recommendations, if any, for necessary legislation."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

Mr. PELLY. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object—and I shall not object. I do this for the purpose of inquiring of the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. HARRIS] if it is not true that the Senate version of this bill, H. R. 4090, to all intents and purposes, is entirely different from the bill with a similar number which I opposed in the House recently. In other words, Mr. Speaker, I would like the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. HARRIS] to verify that the Senate Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce after public hearings reported H. R. 4090 with a new title and wording. Instead of the bill requiring cargo vessels of 1,600 tons or more with only one radio operator to install a call-selector device, this bill as passed by the Senate authorizes and directs the Federal Communications Commission, the Department of Commerce and the Coast Guard to investigate the device and to report back so that at the next session of Congress a report will be available as to the need and desirability of such a device.

I think, Mr. Speaker, that H. R. 4090 as it would be considered here today is innocuous and is a fair way to settle a controversy. The bill as passed by the House made this gadget mandatory if the Federal Communications Commission found it satisfactory. This amended bill does not get the cart before the horse, and is a constructive way of approaching the subject of safety.

Accordingly I can assure my friends, who joined me in opposing this legislation when it came to the House previously, that I have no objection to this bill, and therefore I withdraw my reservation.

Mr. HARRIS. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. PELLY. Mr. Speaker, I support this. I think it is constructive legislation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act to provide for study by the Federal Communications Commission, the United States Coast Guard, and the Federal Maritime Administration with respect to the need for automatic radiotelegraph call selectors and other such safety devices on certain cargo ships of the United States."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

REMOVING PRESENT $1,000 LIMITATION WHICH PREVENTS SECRETARY OF THE NAVY FROM SETTLING CERTAIN CLAIMS ARISING OUT OF CRASH OF A NAVAL AIRCRAFT

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 12170) to remove the present $1,000 limitation which prevents the Secretary of the Navy from settling certain claims arising out of the crash of a naval aircraft at the Wold-Chamberlain Air Field, Minneapolis, Minn., with Senate amendment thereto and concur in the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert "That the $1,000 limitation contained in the first section of the act of July 3, 1943, as amended (31 U. S. C. 223b), shall not apply with respect to claims arising out of the crash of a United States Air Force airplane near Wold-Chamberlain Air Field, Minneapolis, Minn., on June 5, 1956, and the crash of a United States Navy airplane near Wold-Chamberlain Air Field, Minneapolis, Minn., on June 9, 1956.

"SEC. 2. With respect to claims filed as a result of the airplane crashes described in the first section of this act, the Secretary of the Air Force and the Secretary of the Navy shall, within 30 months after the date of the enactment of this act, transmit to the Congress a report setting forth—

"(1) each claim settled and paid by the Secretary of the Air Force or the Secretary of the Navy, as the case may be, with a brief statement concerning the character and equity of each such claim, the amount claimed, and the amount approved and paid; and

"(2) each claim submitted which has not been settled, with supporting papers and a statement of findings of facts and recommendations with respect to each such claim.

"SEC. 3. No part of the amounts awarded under this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with these claims, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain this?

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, this is a bill offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. JUDD] concerning an airplane accident that happened up in his State. The Senate added a provision inserting the usual counsel fees provision and also an amendment to have the bill embrace the victims of another accident that happened prior to the date that the one indicated in the bill happened.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROVIDING FOR CONVEYANCE OF CERTAIN LAND OF THE UNITED STATES TO THE STATE OF INDIANA

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H. R. 9810) to provide for the conveyance of certain land of the United States to the State of Indiana, with Senate amendments thereto, and concur in the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments, as follows:

Page 1, line 10, after "fair", insert "appraised."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendments were concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

HOUR OF MEETING FOR BALANCE OF THE WEEK

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that for the balance of the week when the House adjourns from day to day it adjourn to meet at 10 o'clock on the following day.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

CONFERENCE REPORTS AND MOTIONS TO SUSPEND THE RULES

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution (H. Res. 630) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That during the remainder of this week it shall be in order to consider conference reports the same day reported notwithstanding the provisions of clause 2, rule XXVIII; that it shall also be in order during the remainder of this week for the Speaker at any time to entertain motions to suspend the rules, notwithstanding the provisions of clause 1, rule XXVII.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the resolution was agreed to.

HOUSING ACT OF 1956

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 618 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 11742) to extend and amend laws relating to the provision and improvement of housing and the conservation and development of urban communities, and for other purposes. After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill, and shall continue not to exceed 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Banking and Currency, the bill shall be considered as having been read for amendment. No amendments shall be in order to the said bill except that it shall be in order for any member of the Committee on Banking and Currency to move to strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill H. R. 11742 and insert as a substitute the text of the bill H. R. 12328, and such substitute shall be in order, any rule of the House to the contrary notwithstanding, but shall not be subject to amendment. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill H. R. 11742, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendment as may have been adopted and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendment thereto to final passage without intervening motion, except one motion to recommit.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ALLEN] and yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this resolution is to make in order the so-called housing bill, and I would like to give you a little history of the situation so that we may all clearly understand what has happened and what is about to happen.

The Committee on Banking and Currency reported out a voluminous bill on public housing and other housing which contained all of the features of the old housing bill and then added a few more. Now, that bill contained everything, including the kitchen stove. The Committee on Rules declined to give a rule on that bill, so another bill was prepared which I believe was not submitted to the Committee on Banking and Currency, but that bill left out the kitchen stove and gave you all the rest of it, including public housing.

The Committee on Rules then took up that bill, which was a perfectly legitimate and proper thing to do, if the committee decided to do that, and reported out this rule.

Now, my complaint about it is that the rule is probably the most drastic gag rule that I have seen presented in my time here in the House, and I have seen some pretty drastic ones. This rule makes it in order to substitute the new bill, which no committee has considered, in place of the bill which the committee did consider. It prohibits the offering of any amendment on the original bill, and then it prohibits the offering of any amendment on the substitute bill. So, what you are given the slight privilege of doing is, at the conclusion of a lot of speeches and a lot of hot air, you are going to be accorded the privilege of saying "Aye" or "No"; that is all, and that will occur at the conclusion of general debate. The bill will be considered as read, the roll will be called, and you will say "Aye" or you will say "No." You Members of the House are denied all opportunity to participate in the formation or amendment of this very important and costly legislation.

Mr. GROSS. How about pro forma amendments?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. No pro forma amendments. I do not think that is what we ought to do in the Committee on Rules.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, I would like to ask the gentleman if under the rule a parliamentary inquiry would be in order.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. If the Speaker recognizes the gentleman for that purpose.

What I do not like about this situation is this. Every since public housing or more properly socialized housing—ever since socialized housing was passed by the Congress, this House has historically, year after year and year after year, whenever the housing bill came up, stricken public housing from the bill. This House has been against public housing—Congress after Congress.

What I want to say to you is that I think you ought to have the opportunity and the courtesy of being permitted merely to say, "We want an opportunity to vote on whether we want to strike out public housing or do not want to strike out public housing."

I am not insisting that you do either, but I do think that the dignity of this situation requires, in view of the history of this legislation, that Members be accorded the privilege of saying whether they want to put the handcuffs on themselves this morning or whether they do not want to put the handcuffs on themselves. If you want to handcuff yourselves so that you are not permitted to say anything about this bill all day long except "Yes" or "No," that is your privilege; go on and handcuff yourselves, if you want to. But what I am going to do is to give you the opportunity of saying, "I do not want to be handcuffed, I want the opportunity to vote on striking out public housing."

Of course, I used to have some allies on public housing over on the left side of the aisle in the days gone by. The Republican side, under the able leadership of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT], has always stood up and voted against this socialistic proposal that the general taxpayers should pay the house rent of the less fortunate taxpayers or nontaxpayers. That is what this is about.

The way I am going to seek to accomplish that is to permit you to vote on the question in the easiest way possible. And I think the easiest way possible to do it is for me to yield for an amendment. I shall yield to the gentleman from Mississippi at the conclusion of the debate for an amendment which will simply say that this resolution is amended so that this House shall be accorded the small privilege of offering one amendment. And that amendment will not even permit you any latitude in what you shall do, but it will just permit you to vote "yes" or "no" twice. That is, you are going to be permitted to vote "yes" or "no" if this amendment is adopted on whether you want to be handcuffed on voting for or against public housing.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from Indiana who has stood up on this floor so often and fought the battle against socialized public housing.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, of course I must say to the gentleman that there was a day when I did vigorously oppose Federal public housing. As the gentleman knows, in recent years I have taken the position that it is not a question of whether or not you are for or against public housing. The question now is, When are you going to stop it? And I think we are on the road to getting it stopped.

And may I say, that while the gentleman's position has many attractions at this time, I find myself in opposition to him.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yielded to the gentleman for a question. I am going to reverse the process and ask him a question. Can the gentleman see any earthly reason why this House should not be permitted to say "yes" or "no" on whether they want to be handcuffed on voting for or against public housing?

Mr. HALLECK. Yes, may I say to the gentleman, I think I can answer that.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I wish the gentleman would.

Mr. HALLECK. I am happy to.

If that arrangement of the gentleman should prevail and public housing, the limited amount that is here included, with the workable provisions included, were to be stricken from the bill, this would be the situation. We have to have a housing bill to carry on through the other parts of this bill. If that bill goes over to the other body, we know it will probably have public housing to the extent of 135,000 units. Not 35,000 but 135,000 units would be put in the bill. Under those circumstances, in my opinion, we must have a housing bill. There is going to be some public housing in it. So far as I concerned, I think, coming into the closing days of the session, we might as well recognize what has prevailed in the last 2 or 3 years and go on with the passage of this bill at this time.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I thank the gentleman for his delightful contribution, which is always so welcome.

May I say in reply to the gentleman from Indiana, who tells you that we ought not to take these handcuffs off, that we ought not to permit ourselves to vote yes or no because another body is going to say, "No, we cannot do that," I should like to propound to the gentleman that if we cannot even be permitted to vote yes or no on a proposition because the other body says so, why do we not all resign and go home and let the other body run the whole show, as they are pretty well doing?

Mr. HALLECK. Was the gentleman asking me for an answer?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I will give the gentleman a brief time to answer.

Mr. HALLECK. On Monday of this week we had 17 bills under suspension of the rules, and you did not even have a choice between one bill or the other. May I simply say to the gentlemen that there are some times when he recognizes as well as I that you have to be pretty practical about legislation. If the gentleman does not want any housing bill at all, then there are ways of accomplishing that. The only position I take is that this arrangement that has been worked out will assure us of a housing bill in line with what I think the majority wants.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I do not think that things like this, of this great importance, that involve the right of men to be heard and the right of men to vote their sentiments, ought to be operated on this suggestion of the gentleman from Indiana that it has been "worked out." You ought not to "work out" things around here without giving the House an opportunity to participate in the "workout." All I am asking is that you be given a little bit of opportunity to participate in the "workout" by saying yes or no.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Does the gentleman agree with me that this rule is just as objectionable to those who want more housing than is in the bill as to those who want less than is in the bill?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Of course that is true. That is an argument why you should untie your hands and permit yourself to vote "yes" or "no" twice, once on the amendment and once on the bill. That is all I am asking that you have the opoprtunity to do. I am not asking for unlimited debate, I am asking that the House have some little limited amount of freedom, maybe just to express the idea and let it be known that we are around here and the whole business is not being run by the other body.

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may require.

Mr. Speaker, it is not an easy task for me to stand here and be in opposition to the desires of my chairman, whom I regard and have always regarded during my 24 years in Congress as not only a great American but a great legislator.

The chairman has explained this rule, which provides for the bill H. R. 11742, known as the committee bill, to come before us. According to the rule, it cannot be amended, but it does provide that any member of the Committee on Banking and Currency can substitute the Widnall bill. It will not be open to amendment, either. And the rule does not permit a motion to recommit with instructions.

I am certain that many of you will wonder why I voted for this closed rule and am speaking in favor of it. I feel that many of you would like to know the reason for my supporting 35,000 units of public housing when in the past I have always opposed public housing. I desire to be practical.

As I rode down Pennsylvania Avenue this morning, I noticed an inscription on the Archives Building which read, "What is past is prologue." Therefore, my past experiences in the field of public housing compels me to be practical in the matter presently before us.

Many times the House of Representatives have voted against public housing. Then the other body voted each time for an unusually high number of public housing which was accepted by the House and became law.

The housing bill passed by the other body provides for 135,000 units of housing per year for 5 years. The committee bill provides for 60,000 units each year for 3 years, the Widnall bill which I am supporting, for 35,000 units each year for 2 years. The Widnall bill is a good compromise bill.

I am convinced that the Widnall bill which includes FHA and the improvement of FHA loans and includes military housing and many other features as well, which the public generally are supporting and the banks are supporting and the insurance companies are supporting must be passed. I am convinced if we did not have this bill here before us, there probably would be no bill. That would be unfortunate because FHA and all other good features of the bill expires September 30, 1956.

In the event we were to adopt the amendment, which I understand the gentleman from Mississippi is going to offer, which would give the membership a choice to vote on whether or not they wanted public housing and in the event the public housing was stricken from the Widnall bill by the House, we would go back to that experience that I mentioned—what is past is prologue. We would find, after days of conferences, which would take us into next week, what would happen would very likely be what has been our experience in the past, and that is the other body would put in housing and because they have come out, as I said and as I repeat, for 135,000 units over a 5-year period, so it is not likely that the other body is going to let this go any more than they have done so in the past when we have voted public housing out and they have put it in. Then, we decide on considerably more housing units than the 35,000 housing units. You might say this is a compromise on my part because I have never favored public housing, but when the public and the people generally write to you and say that they want the FHA loans and the insurance companies want it and they want the improvements and the military housing, it is pretty hard for LEO ALLEN at this time when we are trying to adjourn to support the amendment, knowing well that it will go to the other body and they will come back after conferences of days and days, and that there will be more public housing than the 35,000 units which the Widnall bill provides. I am respectfully requesting that when the amendment to be offered by the gentleman from Mississippi comes up that we accept this compromise knowing well that the other body will probably do as it has in the past. We have that proposition before us.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. I yield.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I think the gentleman inadvertently has not stated my position on this amendment quite accurately. This amendment will not strike out public housing, if you vote for it. If you vote for this amendment, all it does and all that is intended to do is when the bill gets on the floor of the House, some Member may, as he so desires, offer an amendment to strike it out. Then, the House can vote whether they want to strike it out or whether they want to follow the ideas expressed by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. ALLEN], that it might be better to go along with the compromise proposal. That is all right, if they want to do that. But, what I am asking, and all that I am asking, is that you amend this rule so that you may have the opportunity, if you want the opportunity, to offer an amendment to strike it out and then the House will do as it pleases.

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. That is my understanding of the gentleman's position. If I misstated it, I apologize to him

Mr. WIDNALL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. I yield.

Mr. WIDNALL. Does not the substitute bill providing for the 35,000 units of public housing for each year, provide that a workable program and the elimination of slums must be approved by the community before they obtain public housing?

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. That is true. In view of the fact that there are many things required, the 35,000 units per year is very important, when you look at the overall picture, and when our people so generally favor so many things that are worthwhile.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE].

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, the predicament we now find ourselves in is not due to any action on the part of the Committee on Banking and Currency. We went before the Committee on Rules and asked for an open rule. This rule we are discussing is the one we obtained. The gentleman from Virginia complains that this rule reported by his committee is a bad gag rule. But the amendment of the gentleman from Mississippi which the gentleman from Virginia supports is a gag upon the gag. It gives you an opportunity to vote on only one section of the bill providing for public housing. Whether you like public housing or not, I am not going to enter that argument. Unless there is some public housing in this bill, you are going to get no legislation on the subject. Every Senator represents a State in which there is a city with congested areas or slums needing public housing. Those who do not need public housing, and never see it, have a settled aversion to it. But Members who come from Districts that need it are for it. A shining example is the support of public housing by the late Senator Taft who was the acknowledged leader of the Republican Party. Cincinnati, just across the river from where I live, abounds in with public housing largely through his efforts. I have been in conference with him, and I know how earnestly he advocated public housing for his people. Under this bill the Senate will have an opportunity to take it or leave it. It has been so engineered that there will be no conference. If you strike public housing out of this bill the Senate will not agree and the bill will die. We will have no title I, no college housing, no farm housing, no military housing, as provided herein and I am sure you will be compelled to explain to your constituents.

The able gentleman from Alabama [Mr. RAINS] and his committee worked on the reported bill for about a year. They did a great work. The Rules Committee refused a rule after a very short hearing.

If you vote for this gag amendment you are imposing a gag upon a gag. The argument which the gentleman from Virginia made in regard to the rule applies to the amendment which he is about to offer. I hope the amendment will be defeated.

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished minority leader, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN].

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. Speaker, I am sorry we are generating a little heat concerning this legislation. I am honestly convinced that if we are to have any housing bill at all it will be this bill that the Rules Committee has submitted to us.

We, of course, are very jealous of our own prerogatives; we are proud of the House. But we also must recognize that there is another branch of this Congress that is proud also of its prerogatives. Like all legislation, it is a question of give and take in the hope that we can reach a desirable end. There are many who find fault because there is too little public housing. Others say there is too much. Finally, the number of starts is a compromise and necessary to secure the support of the other body.

I think it would be very unfortunate if we went home without renewal of title I, and a continuance of efforts to relieve the drastic housing shortage as far as the military is concerned.

There are also in this legislation other matters like farm housing and college housing that are meeting with more or less demand throughout the country.

The gentleman from Virginia complains about the drastic rule. I know it is drastic, but it is no more drastic than we have had on many occasions in the past week on other pieces of legislation where the Members have had to vote "yes" or "no," on legislation on which if it had been brought up in the regular way would have brought amendments to make the legislation more acceptable. But we had to take it "yes" or "no," and it probably could not have been otherwise, either, because in our efforts to adjourn the Congress at a reasonable date we have to make some of these sacrifices of our privileges.

I say to you this legislation, while it does not meet all the requirements of the President, does not meet all the desires of the committee, we might as well, as the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SPENCE] has well said, face the realities of the situation: It is this bill or none.

Do we want to leave here without any housing legislation at all? If you do you will vote for the Smith amendment, and that will give you your vote as far as public housing or no housing is concerned.

The President does not believe that we should go home without some legislation, but he does not say because his attitude is never dictatorial. He does not say that we cannot go home without passing the bill, but he would like to see us pass some housing legislation before we adjourn. It would make his record of achievements improved.

Unless title I is passed we could well bring about a slowing down of the splendid construction program that is going on in private industry all over this country. Over a hundred thousand starts every month; and that, Mr. Speaker, contributes to the prosperity which we seek here in America. This bill is essential for the continuance of the program to aid private industry to provide the housing the country demands and needs. The building industry I repeat is a vital part of our national prosperity. I say, Mr. Speaker, that the absolute necessity for this public housing item, as the gentleman from Kentucky well said, is that the Senate will not permit any legislation unless we give them some public housing.

Mr. Speaker, we must be realistic about it, let us vote down the amendment to be offered by the gentleman from Virginia. Let us pass the resolution in its present form because that removes us from an unfortunate predicament of our housing legislation. I again repeat it is this bill or no bill and by your vote on the Smith amendment that will be determined.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that amendment will not prevail.

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Does the gentleman have any further request for time?

Mr. ALLEN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield my time back to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLMER] for the purpose of offering an amendment to the rule to carry out what I have described in my previous statement.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COLMER: On page 2, line 7, after the word "amendment" insert: "except one amendment to strike out title V authorizing public housing."

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HALLECK. Under the wording of the gentleman's amendment no other amendment would be in order increasing the amount of public housing?

The SPEAKER. All that would be done would be to strike it out.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, let me say in the beginning that the gentleman from Indiana is correct in his statement as to what this amendment would do. That is to say, and let us get it straight, the amendment which I have offered does not strike public housing but, as the gentleman from Virginia explained a moment ago, it merely makes in order when the bill is read under the 5-minute rule a motion to strike the public housing section. I hope that is perfectly clear.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COLMER. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HALLECK. Then it is kind of a one-sided amendment. Those who would like to increase the amount above 35,000, and of course the committee itself reported a bill providing for 60,000 units, would not have an opportunity to increase it.

Mr. COLMER. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COLMER. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. DIES. If they want to vote for more houses they can vote for the committee bill?

Mr. COLMER. He is talking about this particular amendment, and he is technically correct about it. Of course, if the gentleman from Indiana wants more public housing, there is another way to arrive at it and that is to vote down the previous question on the rule if this amendment prevails or does not prevail; then he can get an open rule and get all the public housing he wants.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. COLMER. I yield.

Mr. HALLECK. I am for the 35,000 units, and that is all I am for. That is plenty, so far as I am concerned.

Mr. COLMER. I am glad to get the gentleman straight on that, because I thought he was worried for a moment that he would not have an opportunity to raise it, and that was a little difficult for me to understand.

The gentleman from Virginia explained just what happened with reference to this housing bill. The Committee on Rules refused to grant a rule on the banking and currency housing bill, and the responsibility for that lies with those who are responsible, and I want to take my share of the responsibility for it as one of the members of that committee. If anybody else wants to take responsibility for it, they have that privilege.

Now, the time then came about, as it always comes about, when pressure is applied, and then a motion was made to reconsider, and this bill was reported out of the committee under a straitjacket rule. Now, we have been accustomed—and I want my liberal friends on the right to listen to this—we have been accustomed to having closed gag rules on revenue bills, but I say to you that this is the first time that we have ever had a closed rule on a public housing bill to my knowledge, and I do not think anybody can gainsay that. But, it is not only a closed rule, but under this rule, if approved here, and which you are going to vote on, and which I opposed in committee, you people over there on my left, the minority, are even denied the privilege of a motion to recommit with instructions. You have just got to take it or leave it.

Now, I say that is not the democratic process. It all comes back to this one question: Is this House going to reverse its position, or is it going to have an opportunity to reverse its position or an opportunity to stand with its traditional position of voting against public housing? Now, you cannot go back home and say, "Well, the Committee on Rules brought this thing out and there was not anything I could do about it; I just had to take it or leave it." You have an opportunity right here and now to say what you want to do about it.

Yes; you know what is going to happen. This bill is going over to the other body, you know, the responsible body over there, the body that has the privilege of legislating—they do not put themselves in any straitjacket—and it is going to come back here with 135,000 units, just as the gentleman said, or 200,000 or some other number from the conservative body over there, and then we are going to be asked, after the conferees meet, to strike a balance and take, well, let us say, half of it, and thereby get more public housing. Now, that is the way the thing has worked heretofore. I wonder sometimes if the people back home really know just what goes on up here and how we put ourselves in this unenviable position and then go back home and try to dodge the issue. The issue here today is whether you want to follow what you had the opportunity to do heretofore, and either vote for or against public housing. If you want to follow that procedure, then vote for this amendment. If you do not, then take the responsibility.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, it has been called to my attention that the part relating to public housing is only that part on page 36. There are other elements contained in that title which do not pertain to public housing. I think the objective of those of us who are opposed to public housing is to have an opportunity to vote on the one section of public housing.

I would suggest to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLMER] that it might be better to offer an amendment to his amendment, confining it to that part of title V which is found on page 36, line 7, to line 10 on page 37, if that is agreeable to the gentleman.

Mr. BARRETT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. BARRETT. Mr. Speaker, the general housing bill, H. R. 11742, now before us for consideration, has many good features, but my only reservation is that it does not go far enough. However, it is a step in the right direction and it contains a number of programs that will keep our housing industry healthy and meet at least some of the housing needs of our less fortunate citizens.

At this point I would like to comment especially on the sections of the bill which deal with low rent public housing and with housing for our elderly citizens.

Frankly, it is a mystery to me why the merits of a public housing program even have to be debated. To those of us who know the terrible problems facing our low income groups, the urgent need for a large low rent public housing program is unquestionable. I find it hard to understand how anyone can oppose public housing. Just as our farmers need special support programs; just as our workingmen need laws to protect their rights; just as our businesses need various forms of Government support, so do our Nation's cities need low rent public housing, which is the only answer to the housing problems of our lower income groups.

The Congress has passed numerous laws designed to help our cities clear away their terrible slums, which are a blot both on the face and the conscience of the Nation. Unfortunately, I do not think the administration is pursuing the slum clearance program nearly as vigorously as it should. Our special Subcommittee on Housing held many days of hearings in various cities throughout the United States, and we learned that the slum clearance and urban renewal program in more ways than one is bogged down by redtape and buckpassing between administrative agencies.

But with the prodding of Congress, the slum clearance program finally seems to be gaining momentum. Nevertheless, if it is ever to get up full steam the Congress must at the same time provide for large numbers of low rent public housing units.

The blunt fact is that most of the unfortunate people now forced to live in slum areas do not have high enough incomes to enable them to afford decent, safe, sanitary private housing. Unless our Government provides decent housing for them at a rent they can afford to pay, these poor unfortunate people will merely be forced to move from one slum area to another.

The opponents of public housing have no answer to this problem and apparently are not concerned about the welfare of our low salaried citizens. Instead of facing it realistically and admitting the need for a large scale public housing program, they either take refuge in double talk or turn their eyes away from the problem which is so real and pressing for the families forced to live in slum areas.

The housing bill now before us provides for 50,000 units of new public housing a year for 3 years. In addition, it would provide an additional 10,000 units a year for 3 years of low rent housing for our forgotten elderly citizens, who have barely enough income to buy food much less pay rent for a decent place to live.

Frankly, I am ashamed of such a pitifully inadequate program. Now the Republican administration recommends a further reduction in the number of public housing units. This I cannot understand because I am doubtful whether 50,000 units of public housing a year can even begin to meet the public housing needs created by the slum clearance and urban renewal programs. It will not even touch the very real need for public housing that exists and will continue to exist in Philadelphia and our other metropolitan areas.

For years the home building industry, backed by the full support of Government housing programs, has built in excess of 1 million units a year for the private housing market, that is for people in the middle or higher income groups who can afford such housing. I think this has been a most desirable achievement because it has furthered the American goal of home ownership and has strengthened our national economy.

But unfortunately, the home building and real estate lobbies have not been satisfied with their tremendous profits. Whatever their motives have been, for some strange reason, they have waged a lobbying campaign against public housing for our lower income families. I can only hope and pray that these opponents of public housing will someday see the light.

In addition to providing 10,000 low rent public housing units a year for elderly citizens, the bill would make elderly single persons eligible under the regular public housing program. This feature of the bill would permit them to leave their dingy rooms and enjoy their remaining years in comfort. However, the administration proposes to strike this provision from the bill.

The bill further sets up an entirely new program for housing for the elderly which offers great promise. Long term, low interest loans would be made available to nonprofit corporations sponsored by charitable, fraternal and civic institutions desiring to build housing for elderly citizens, which would provide them with decent housing at a modest rental. However, the administration has ordered this provision stricken from the bill.

The bill also contains many other important provisions designed to bolster our home building industry and to meet other special housing needs.

To relieve the tight mortgage money situation prevailing in many areas, the bill would liberalize the secondary market program of the Federal National Mortgage Association which supports the private market for FHA and GI loans.

To increase funds for GI loans, the bill would authorize investment of 10 percent of the national service life insurance fund in GI loans in areas where mortgage discounts are heaviest. However, the administration is opposed to this feature also.

I am happy to see that the bill also has provisions to stimulate more FHA section 213 cooperative housing. Special aids to other essential housing programs featured in the bill are: liberalization of the vitally needed military housing program, a 5-year loan program for farm housing, and additional funds for college housing to help our institutions of higher learning meet the strain of ever increasing enrollments.

An extremely important section of the bill would attempt to breathe more life into the slum clearance and urban renewal program. For those families displaced by slum clearance operation whose incomes are just a little too high to make them eligible for public housing, but who can afford private housing, the bill would liberalize FHA mortgage terms to permit 40-year loans with no down payment. It would also permit higher mortgage ceilings so that FHA's urban renewal insurance program can really work in our larger cities.

I am pleased the bill proposes to do justice to the people and small businesses displaced by slum clearance operations. The bill would provide for payment of family moving expenses and also pay small business concerns moving expenses and other losses. Liberal term low interest loans would also be made available through the Small Business Administration to help the relocation of displaced small businesses. However, the administration is against helping these small businesses relocate.

Mr. Speaker, a lot of hard work has gone into this bill and I am glad to say it has many worthwhile features. My only regret is its failure to provide an adequate and realistic public housing program. I can only hope that the legislation which finally emerges this year will correct this failing and provide the large scale low rent public housing program that our country's welfare demands.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my amendment may be amended to provide what the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH] has suggested.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, do I understand that there is an amendment pending now to the rule?

The SPEAKER. There was an amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi, Mr. COLMER.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Speaker, I hope the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi will be defeated.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my original amendment and I offer another amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COLMER: On page 2, line 7, after the word "amendment", insert: "except the provision on page 36, line 7 to page 37, line 9."

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, do I have the floor?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLMER], did have the floor, but he yielded it.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi had the floor, but he yielded it.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I reclaim the floor.

Mr. Speaker, what this does is to carry out my original intention when I spoke a while ago. The reason for this confusion is that this bill was introduced on one day, printed that night and some copies were hurried over from the Government Printing Office to the Committee on Rules by 10:30 o'clock so that we could gag you boys. No one had the opportunity to read or study the bill. We were told, or given to understand, that title V was the public housing title. It appears there are a number of other things in title V. The reason we are asking to restrict the original amendment is so that we may deal solely with the subject that I spoke about in my opening remarks, namely, the opportunity to discuss public housing. The amendment is so put that you can vote any amendments to public housing that you wish. For instance, there are a great many gentlemen here who feel like going along with the other body and increasing this public housing. This gives them the opportunity to do so if they so desire. It would also give you the opportunity to strike it out or to reduce it. That is the change in the amendment.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Is the gentleman certain that the amendment proposed would deal with the Widnall substitute bill, or would it deal with the original bill?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. It follows right after the closed-rule provision on the Widnall bill, so it deals with the Widnall bill only.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. The page numbers, if I understand correctly, referred to in the gentleman's motion to amend are the pages dealing with the Spence bill, not with the Widnall bill.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. The gentleman is right.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Perhaps it would be advisable for the gentleman to amend his amendment to the amendment.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HALLECK. It looks to me as if we had better go on with this rule the way it is and adopt the bill, because the amendment as originally offered refers to the committeee bill. What we are hoping is that the substitute will be adopted.

Mr. SMITH of Virginia. I think it does not make much difference. I withdraw the amendment, Mr. Speaker, and I move the previous question on the Colmer amendment and rule.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Mississippi withdraw the amendment?

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. McCORMACK. My parliamentary inquiry is, the gentleman from Virginia had an hour under the rule and he yielded to the gentleman from Mississippi to offer an amendment. My understanding is that the gentleman from Virginia then lost the floor, control of the time.

The SPEAKER. That is correct.

Mr. McCORMACK. Then the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLMER] offered his amendment. Then he spoke and yielded back his time. Then I was recognized for an hour and I spoke and yielded back my time. Then the gentleman from Mississippi offered a substitute amendment. That meant he would be entitled to be recognized for 1 hour?

The SPEAKER. He withdrew the amendment and offered another amendment.

Mr. McCORMACK. In other words, no other Member now could be recognized for an hour on the substitute amendment, because if it were so, I would want to be recognized.

The SPEAKER. Not if the previous question was ordered.

Mr. COLMER. Was the previous question ordered on my original amendment?

The SPEAKER. On the resolution.

Mr. COLMER. But on the original amendment.

The SPEAKER. On the original amendment. The Chair is willing to take that if that is the desire of the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. COLMER. That is it.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be again reported, so that we may know what we are voting on.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COLMER: On page 2, line 7, after the word "amendment", insert "except one amendment to strike out title V authorizing public housing."

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment to the rule.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. COLMER) there were—ayes 91, noes 128.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HIESTAND. Mr. Speaker, may we have the amendment read once more?

The SPEAKER. Technically, that would be out of order, but without objection the amendment may be read again.

The Clerk again reported the amendment.

Mr. HIESTAND. Mr. Speaker, there is a misunderstanding as to whether the title V referred to is in the Spence bill or the Widnall bill—they differ.

The SPEAKER. That is not a question for the Chair to determine.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 92, nays 299, not voting 41, as follows:

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

HOUSING BILL OF 1956

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 11742) to extend and amend laws relating to the provision and improvement of housing and the conservation and development of urban communities, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 11742, with Mr. EDMONDSON in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. RAINS].

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield briefly to me for the purpose of clarifying what happened a few moments ago with reference to my amendment?

Mr. RAINS. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Chairman, a very unfortunate incident has just happened, and since it is confusing, I think I owe it to the House and for the RECORD to explain the situation.

My amendment was hastily drawn and was inaccurate in that it would not have achieved the desired purpose of giving the Members an opportunity to vote on public housing had it been adopted.

It will be recalled that there are two bills, H. R. 11742 and H. R. 12328, dealing with housing.

The amendment was prepared by me here at the desk just before the rule was called up. Inadvertently I picked up H. R. 11742, which contained the public housing section entitled V and drew my amendment rather hastily, I repeat, to fit that bill. This was a mistake. I should have drawn my amendment to apply to section IV of the bill, H. R. 12328, the bill under consideration.

This error was not discovered until it was too late to correct it. Many Members who voted against the amendment would have voted otherwise had the amendment been correctly drawn to achieve the objective sought.

I regret this mistake exceedingly. And, while it illustrates the difficulty of legislating in this hurried fashion in the dying days of the Congress, I must take full reponsibility for the error.

Therefore, the vote just taken was not a fair test of the sentiments in this House on the public housing question.

Mr. RAINS. Mr. Chairman, this is an important piece of legislation; in fact, it involves authorizations in the billions.

I should like to say to the Members of the House that the Committee on Banking and Currency is not at fault because of the necessity which puts this bill before you in the haste and hurry of the closing hours of the Congress. We presented this bill to the Committee on Rules, as I recall, on June 29 in the hope that we would be able to get an open rule so that all germane amendments would be in order and we could debate this bill under the proper parliamentary procedures and then come out with a bill which was the will of the House and the will of the Senate and the will of the Congress of the United States. So, if there is any feeling of resentment by anybody about the fact that the bill now comes out this late and hobbled with a gag rule, it is not the fault of the members of the Committee on Banking and Currency.

This bill represents an intensive study and long hearings. It represents more than a year's hard work by a subcommittee authorized by special resolution by the House of Representatives to study all of the facets of the housing problem. I want to express publicly my thanks to the members of the subcommittee who traveled with me all over the United States to various cities and sections all over the Nation in order to find out at the grassroots level the housing problems of the country. In my 12 years on the Committee on Banking and Currency, and I measure my words when I say this, there has never been a bill presented to the Congress that has had as much study and constructive hard work as this bill represents today. We had more than 2,500 pages of hearings—not just here in Washington but all across the country. Then we had a month of hearings before the Committee on Banking and Currency. While no piece of legislation is perfect, the bill comes as near as any piece of housing legislation that has ever been presented to the Congress to meet the needs of the housing industry. Before I get into a detailed analysis, I want to bring your attention to several vital factors affecting housing generally. In the first place, the housing business in this country is not in good shape today. Housing starts for the last several months have been falling off at an alarming rate. In fact, in this year in which it was estimated by those in the housing agency that we would have 1,300,000 starts, we are going to do well if we have a million. Interest rates are high across the Nation for everybody who wants to buy and own a home. High discount rates have jumped up like phantoms in every section of the country—6 percent, 7½ percent, 8 percent, and 9 percent for veterans and people who want to utilize the FHA insured loans. The housing industry, as you know, is a very vital segment of the national economy. If Congress were to adjourn without passage of a housing bill, it is my considered judgment it would take a bite out of the national economy at the very minimum of perhaps $12 to $18 billion. Not only would you deny and defeat the people who want so much to own their own homes and to have decent shelter, but you would also adversely affect very seriously the prosperity of the Nation at the same time.

The bill itself, when we presented it to the Committee on Rules on June 29 was blasted by the administration. Although I think they were overtalking themselves. Now when I say it was blasted by the administration, I mean the housing administrator who said it was "ill conceived," "excessive," and so forth. But the plain fact is this: If what he said about the committee bill were true—and I certainly do not think that it is—90 percent or more of it would be applicable to the Widnall bill. The simple truth of the business is, and I want you to know it is that the substitute bill carries 90 percent or more of the same provisions of the bill reported by the Committee on Banking and Currency.

I think you would like to know the main items of difference between the two bills. In general, these are the items of difference:

In the first place, we wrote into the committee bill a section which would effectively provide housing for the old people. As chairman of the subcommittee, I received more mail in support of housing for the elderly than I did for any other section of the bill. In the light of the fact that people are living longer, that a greater percentage of our population is above 65 years, it is absolutely urgent that this Congress make some provision for the elderly people; something more than a token provision for housing for the elderly. So we have in the committee bill a section which would provide for direct Government loans to nonprofit organization to build housing for the elderly. It is our expectation that if that is written into law a great percentage of that housing would be built by private enterprise. That is not in the Widnall bill.

I mentioned a while ago the high discount rates across the country. There are sections of this country, not only in my Southland but even in California, where the high discount rates on mortgage money is almost unbelievable. So we put a section in the Banking and Currency Committee bill, which is before you, to utilize 10 percent of the national servicemen's life insurance fund in GI guaranteed home mortgages. Remember this is the money of GI policyholders; it does not belong to the Government; it belongs to the GI's in this country. We simply would authorize 10 percent of these funds to be invested in guaranteed home loan mortgages, with all of the qualifications and restrictions necessary to keep safe and secure the trust fund of the GI national servicemen's life insurance fund. It would provide $500 million for loans to GI's only. In the high discount areas this is essential. That is not in the Widnall bill.

Mr. McDONOUGH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield.

Mr. McDONOUGH. I want to associate myself with the remarks of the gentleman concerning the use of 10 percent of the National Servicemen's Life Insurance fund for secondary mortgages. I have worked with the chairman of the subcommittee, being a member of the subcommittee that investigated housing, for the past 2 years. We find there is urgent necessity for a second mortgage market to supplement FNMA, and that the investment of 10 percent of National Servicemen's Life Insurance fund in such mortgages would be a great benefit to the interest return. I enjoyed my association with the gentleman in the committee work. I find there was a conscientious effort to study out the housing program across the Nation by the subcommittee in every respect.

Mr. RAINS. I appreciate the gentleman's remarks.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield.

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. I want to congratulate the gentleman from Alabama on the splendid speech he is making. I voted for the committee bill and I expect to vote for the committee bill if I have a chance. If we lose on it, I expect to vote for the Widnall bill. I voted for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COL-

MER], to give the right to every Member to express his will on public housing. I think that is the only controversial matter in this bill. I expect to support the Committee on Banking and Currency. We asked for home rule. I still want home rule. If I cannot get full home rule, I will vote for half of it.

Mr. RAINS. I appreciate the remarks of the gentleman from Georgia, who is one of the most outstanding members of the Committee on Banking and Currency, as we all know.

Mr. VANIK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield.

Mr. VANIK. I would like to associate myself with the remarks of the gentleman from Alabama. I want to point out that when the subcommittee was touring the country, among the cities visited was my city of Cleveland. The need of the secondary mortgage market I think was quite obvious to the committee, more so in Cleveland than in many parts of the country because of the land title situation and the devious requirements incident to home ownership.

I want to commend the gentleman for the fine work he has done on this committee.

Mr. RAINS. I appreciate the gentleman's kind remarks.

I want to get back now to the other differences between the two bills, so that you may know what you are voting on.

There are some differences as reflected in the liberalization of credit in the committee bill. They are minor, in my opinion.

There are some differences in cooperative housing in which the committee bill gives more special assistance to certain cooperatives than does the substitute bill.

The other important difference, I think, is the public housing feature, and this is a title in which the Members are very much interested. The difference between the two bills is this: In the Banking and Currency Committee bill there are authorized 10,000 units per year of housing for each of 3 years for elderly people; there are 50,000 units each year for 3 years of public housing generally, based on need.

In the substitute bill there are 35,000 units only, and these are subject to the workable program requirement. So that is the difference between the two bills on the item of public housing.

I should like to say to you, even though I come from an area where public housing is not as critical as it is in many of the great cities of the country, that it is my considered judgment that we ought not to have legislation on this difficult and important subject of housing without a considerable number of units to assist the cities in clearing slums and in providing for the truly unfortunate and underprivileged. So it is my judgment that the minimum housing we ought to provide under housing is 50,000 units a year.

Apart from these differences, the bills are about the same. In each of the bills there is the item for military housing, title 8 as we knew it in the Housing Act of last year. It is a section of the bill which is very much desired by the military in order to provide some adequate housing on military bases for the men, and this was advocated by General LeMay in his appearance before our committee.

In the bill also, I may say to the friends of agriculture, for the first time in a long time there is a 5-year program in each bill for farm housing through the Farmers' Home Administration. They are identical in each bill.

There is also the college housing program which is, as I recall it, identical in each bill.

And there are the items transferring the various public housing projects to military establishments, and so forth. They are identical in each bill.

So what you actually have is a choice between what I am sure is a better bill—the committee bill—and the substitute bill which is not a bad bill. If the substitute bill had more units of public housing, had really effective provisions to get housing for the elderly, and took care of the lending agencies, I would say myself that it was a good bill. Why not? It represents substantially the work of the Banking and Currency Committee and the Housing Subcommittee as I said, for a full year. But you do have these three major differences. They make the difference between a good housing bill and a bill that does not effectively meet the real needs.

Mr. Chairman, I feel I must comment further upon the administration's actions after the Banking and Currency Committee reported H. R. 11742. The administration issued a press release charging that the committee bill was unrealistic, excessive, and ill-conceived. These charges were an unwarranted attack upon a committee of the House and, in my judgment, were completely unfounded and were a deliberate attempt by the administration to sabotage a good bill. Actually, this was done purposely and in order to throw up a smokescreen to hide the deficiencies and shortcomings of the administration's housing bill, which was an inadequate and a half-hearted effort by the administration to correct known deficiencies of the Federal housing programs.

In broad terms, the committee bill has two primary objectives. The first is to help the home-building industry maintain its vital supporting role to a sound and prosperous overall economy. The second objective of the bill is to provide the necessary aids to meet a number of desirable and pressing special housing needs, for example, housing for the elderly, housing for lower income groups, farm housing, housing vital to slum-clearance operations, college housing, and military housing.

This month, July 1956, finds the home-building industry in one of the most serious conditions that the industry has experienced since the end of World War II. Right at the present time, housing starts are at an unseasonally low rate, FHA and VA applications have continued to decline while on the other hand, mortgage money is the tighest it has been since World War II. As a result, mortgage discounts have been steadily increasing at the expense of the builder and the home buyer who have been caught between rising costs and tightening mortgage money.

Housing starts in May were 24,000 below May 1955. In June, housing starts continued to slide, dropping 3 percent to 104,000 with private starts numbering 102,300. These private starts represented a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1,070,000, the lowest point in 2½ years and approximately 200,000 below June 1955.

The dollar volume of residential construction has declined less than the number of units which, of course, reflects higher costs which pushed to a new high in June. Bigger and better homes are being produced, but this means, of course, that fewer lower-cost homes are being constructed.

It should be noted that May and June housing starts reflect mortgage conditions of 4 to 6 months ago. The much tighter mortgage conditions that now prevail will show up in housing starts 4 to 6 months from now unless some relief is forthcoming. Probable future housing volume is foreshadowed in VA appraisal requests and FHA applications being made at the present time. These, too, have been declining in recent months. VA appraisal requests in May and June were down slightly from April and May but nearly 40 percent below a year ago.

FHA applications have also shown sharp declines over a year ago although currently running about the same level in recent months. It would appear then that housing starts undoubtedly will not increase within the immediate future and may even show a further decline.

At the present time there is no indication that there will be any easing of the mortgage market in the near future. The overall money markets have become very tight during the spring and there has not been any easing of that condition to date. Bond prices fell in February after rising for some months and have continued down ever since.

Although many financial experts have been predicting that mortgage money shortages would be over by spring two events have combined to prevent that development. There has been an enormous demand for credit of all kind due to the tremendous business boom this year. This has been true in every area except for consumer financing where the decrease in new auto sales has meant a reduced demand. Inventory accumulation mostly of raw materials and semi-processed items, always a characteristic of an expansion phase, has been moving quickly and this, too, uses credit.

At the same time, savings have not been building up at a level needed to support all the new investment. This is particularly true for the savings and institutional fund accumulations so important for home building. Funds flowing into the major institutional investors who provide most of the housing credit are below last year. Last year at this time money began to tighten appreciably.

A combination of forces have been at work in the money market place—heavy demand and failure of supply to increase. The result has been, of course, less supply of money to go around for residential mortgage and construction financing. This in turn has resulted in increasingly higher discounts that had to be paid for this type of money.

Coupled with the well-recognized increasing costs of land, labor, community facilities, and materials, this decreasing supply of mortgage money is not only causing total production to fall but the home-building industry is being forced to abandon the low downpayment, low monthly carrying charge pattern of mortgage financing which has been a basic factor in development of mass production home building in the past 20 years. If the present trend continues, the average home buyer will progressively be deprived of the opportunity to acquire a suitable home at terms within his ability to pay.

The conclusion to be drawn from these forces is obvious. That is, of course, that the impact of higher costs, higher discounts, tighter mortgage financing will cause a decrease in the housing starts for this year and future years until some relief is given to the home-building industry. Building throughout the country has reflected the impact of these forces in the gradual decline of building being constructed at the present time and in the planning stage for the future. The industry will need every assistance it can obtain if it is to fulfill its job of providing more and better homes for the families of this country.

The committee bill would provide a much-needed stimulus to the rate of housing construction which is now far below the levels of a year ago. For one thing, the bill would liberalize the credit support to the home-building industry furnished by the mortgage purchase operations of the Federal National Mortgage Association. By lowering the stock purchase requirement, it would reduce the costs of doing business with FNMA so that builders and mortgage lenders can more readily use the support facilities of FNMA. It would authorize advance commitments under FNMA's secondary market operation in order to furnish needed production support to home builders in many parts of the country. It would give special aid to the special assistance program of FNMA which is designed to support such worthwhile housing programs as urban renewal housing, cooperative housing, disaster housing, and military housing. FNMA would be directed to pay par for such mortgages for a limited period and the bill would provide additional funds to support these special housing programs.

To supplement FNMA's support and to combat the excessive discounts which have plagued GI loans in many parts of the country, the committee bill would authorize investment of 10 percent of the national service life insurance reserves in GI mortgages in those parts of the country where discounts are heaviest. This would provide a "shot-in-the-arm" of about $500 million to those areas in greatest needs of additional mortgage funds. Our bill contains protective features which would guarantee absolutely the safety of the national service life insurance fund, and the earnings of the fund would, in fact, be increased by the addition of higher yielding guaranteed mortgages to its portfolio.

In addition, builder participation in the GI and FHA loan programs would be encouraged by a provision in the bill authorizing higher commitments to builders so that they can obtain more liberal construction financing.

Taken together, these measures will provide a much-needed stimulus and should help to forestall any further decline in the home-building industry, which furnishes such a vital underpinning to our overall economy.

For the first time and at long last, our bill would provide aid for a deserving group of our citizenry whose housing needs have been too long neglected. The bill would provide two major programs to help meet the pressing housing needs of our elderly citizens in the 65-years-or-over age brackets.

For our elderly citizens in the most dire need, the committee bill would authorize 10,000 additional low-rent public-housing units a year for a 3-year period. The bill would also make elderly single persons eligible under the regular low-rent public-housing program. Thus, our bill would provide urgently needed housing help to those unfortunates among our elderly citizens who barely have enough income to buy food let alone decent and adequate housing.

As another means of meeting the housing problem facing elderly citizens, the committee bill would establish a new loan program within the Housing and Home Finance Agency. Two hundred and fifty million dollars would be provided for loans to nonprofit corporations desiring to build housing at moderate rentals for elderly citizens. To keep the rentals charged at the lowest possible level, our bill would provide financing to nonprofit charitable institutions at very favorable terms, that is, 50-year loans at 3½ percent interest. The committee bill contemplates that at least part of the financing will be provided by private capital.

H. R. 11742 provides one additional support to elderly citizens who want to buy homes under the FHA-insured loan program. This would be done by permitting a borrower over 60 years of age to borrow the required downpayment from a relative or some other individual.

For low-income families generally, our bill would provide a substantial number of low-rent public-housing units—50,000 units a year for a 3-year period. I believe this program to be the absolute minimum which can in conscience be endorsed.

Everyone would prefer to see the housing needs of our lowest-income families met by private industry. But the blunt and inescapable fact is that the real-estate industry has not yet found a way to supply decent, safe, and sanitary housing at rents which the lowest segments of our population can afford. Aside from the very great pressing need for low-rent public housing for low-income groups generally, the large-scale slum-clearance program—which everyone hopes will soon gain greater momentum—will displace increasing thousands of low-income families who must have subsidized housing aid.

The public housing units authorized by the committee bill fall far below the number which the Senate bill would provide. At the other end of the scale, I believe that the 35,000 public housing units a year for 2 years advocated in the administration housing bill, is too low a quota to meet the minimum need. I sincerely hope that those of my colleagues who have been opposed to public housing—or at least lukewarm to it—will reconsider. I am sure that they want the Nation's slum clearance and urban renewal program to succeed, and frankly, that can never happen unless we provide the public housing needed to rehouse the thousands of families who will be uprooted and who just cannot afford decent private housing.

H. R. 11742 contains a number of provisions designed to make the slum clearance and urban renewal program more effective. For those displaced families who can afford private housing, the committee bill would liberalize credit terms under the urban renewal insurance provisions of FHA's section 221. It would provide for higher mortgage ceilings so that section 221 housing can be built in more cities. It would enable people moving from slum areas to purchase modestly priced homes with a down payment of only $200 to cover closing costs and it would reduce their monthly housing expenses by permitting an FHA-insured loan up to 40 years.

The committee bill would give additional incentive to the production of multifamily rental housing in our cities. It would put pressure upon the FHA Commissioner to recognize a more liberal profit margin which experts in the field have stressed as necessary to attract private sponsors into building under FHA's section 220 program, which is designed to provide rental housing in urban renewal areas.

To provide more urban rental housing generally at modest rentals, our bill would increase the loan-to-value ratio for mortgages under FHA's rental housing program—section 207. This provision should attract additional sponsors by permitting projects to go forward with smaller equity investments.

H. R. 11742 would also recognize the hardship which displaced families and small business concerns suffer as a result of slum clearance operations. It would authorize payment for moving expenses and other losses, and also would authorize the Small Business Administration to make low-cost liberal-term loans to help the relocation of displaced small business concerns.

So far I have been talking almost exclusively about city dwellers. The committee bill does not overlook the housing needs of our Nation's farmers, which in my opinion are even greater than those of urban housing. It would extend title V of the Housing Act of 1949 to provide for a 5-year farm-housing program. Specifically, H. R. 11742 would authorize, first, $450 million for direct farm housing loans to be available during a 5-year period; second, an additional $10 million for contributions by the Secretary of Agriculture to prevent defaults in payments on loans for potentially adequate farms; and, third, an additional $50 million for grants and loans for improvements and repair to keep houses safe and sanitary and also to encourage family-size farms.

The committee bill recognizes that an effective direct lending program under title V is a needed supplement to the insured farm housing loans available under title I of the Bankhead-Jones Act. Loans under the Bankhead-Jones Act meet an important part of farm housing need, but they do not reach all of the area of need by any means. For example, Bankhead-Jones Act loans are limited to owners to economic family-sized farms, whereas loans under title V of the Housing Act of 1949 are not.

Unfortunately, the title V farm housing loan program has been stymied in recent years by a failure on the part of the administration to implement it. Actually, the sum of approximately $500 million authorized by our bill over a 5-year period is not a new loan authority, but an effort to renew the unused loan authority which has accumulated under title V since its inception in 1949. I sincerely hope that by setting up the title V program as a much-needed long-term program to provide low-cost credit on liberal terms to farmers, we can obtain the administration's cooperation so that the title V program can function effectively.

The college housing loan program would be given continued life by authorization of an additional $250 million for such loans. The college housing loan program, first authorized in the Housing Act of 1950, has proved of immeasurable aid to our institutions of higher learning, and it is essential to continue such aid since the need for college housing is becoming more and more acute in view of the ever-increasing number of college students.

The committee bill gives special attention to the housing needs of our military services. The lack of adequate housing is one of the most serious problems facing our military services, and I believe it is vital to improve the efficiency and morale of the soldiers, sailors, and airmen of our Armed Forces by insuring them of an adequate supply of good housing at a reasonable cost.

The title VIII military housing program would be extended for an additional 3 years up to September 30, 1959, and the construction of a total of 150,000 units would be authorized under the program. The average cost per unit would be increased so that the services can build housing which measures up to minimum desirable standards.

The committee bill would also provide for transfer at a fair price of privately sponsored military housing built under title VIII prior to the Housing Amendments of 1955—the so-called Wherry housing—to the military establishments. This would put this housing where it belongs—in the hands of the military—and it would permit the services to improve the standards of such units and to rent them at lower rentals to military personnel. It would also relieve hardship on the present sponsors of the Wherry housing who are facing inevitable competitive pressure as the title VIII military housing program builds up in volume.

The committee bill contains a number of other important amendments affecting FHA programs. For example, it would liberalize loan ceilings for section 213 cooperative housing, and would provide a new commitment device to cooperative sponsors to stimulate the production of cooperative housing. It would also liberalize the FHA title I home improvement program so that home owners could obtain larger loans, with a longer repayment period. Another amendment would make it easier for families to buy existing homes by lowering the downpayment required in connection with an FHA-insured loan.

Another amendment in our bill deserves special mention. It set up a special fund under the Federal National Mortgage Association special assistance program to stimulate more construction of FHA section 203 (i) housing. Section 203 (i) is designed to encourage low-cost housing in outlying and rural areas.

There are other provisions in the committee bill which improve and perfect the existing machinery of Government housing legislation. They are covered in the more detailed summary and section-by-section analysis which I am attaching.

Mr. Chairman, in closing I would like to say that I am proud to have had a part in the creation of H. R. 11742. It is a bill based upon the most expert testimony we could assemble. It is a bill forged from hard work which reflects the problems we found at the "grassroots." It is a bill which recognizes the crucial role of a prosperous home building industry in our national economy. It is a bill which recognizes the diversity of our housing needs and which contains the tools necessary to satisfy those needs. I earnestly implore all of my colleagues to give the committee bill the special attention it deserves and I deeply hope that you will vote down the Widnall substitute, H. R. 12328, and then pass H. R. 11742.

I will be glad now to yield to answer any questions.

Mr. RABAUT. I thank the gentleman. I would like to ask the gentleman whether the secondary mortgage market provision is in both bills.

Mr. RAINS. They are practically the same in both bills, the secondary market is a lot the same.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield.

Mr. LANHAM. Is there any provision in either bill limiting the commission that can be charged veterans? Under the big housing program they are being charged outrageous commissions; in my section of the country in order to get a loan they have had to pay as high as 10 percent.

Mr. RAINS. That is the reference I made a moment ago to the very high discount rates. There is nothing in either bill that will outlaw the charging of discounts. I do not think we have the authority to write it in the bill. It is a private enterprise transaction; but if you liberalize the method we have provided in the committee bill there would be sufficient mortgage credit to take care of the situation. That is what we want to do.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. ROBERTS. I would like to associate myself with the remarks of the gentleman and to compliment him on the very fine job he has done in the field of housing. I would like to ask the gentleman, As I understand it there is provided an amount for rural housing?

Mr. RAINS. That is correct; it is $100 million a year for 5 years.

Mr. SISK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. SISK. Did I understand the gentleman to say that under the substitute which will be offered in the form of the Widnall bill, there will be no provision for the aged? There are no units set aside?

Mr. RAINS. There are no units set aside in public housing and no nonprofit corporation section that would provide direct loans to build houses for the elderly. There are some minor provisions in the FHA bill that would be of assistance to individuals here and there. There is nothing to provide any very substantial amount of housing for the elderly.

Mr. SISK. I may say that from the State of California I have received more letters indicating greater interest on the part of the people in my area in this particular provision which you have in the committee bill providing for housing for the aged than any others.

Mr. RAINS. I may say to the gentleman that it is a good section. If we do not write it into this bill this year the public will demand that we do it next year. Remember what I say.

Mr. SELDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. SELDEN. Mr. Chairman, I commend my colleague from Alabama [Mr. RAINS] and the Housing Subcommittee, of which he is chairman, for the recognition they have given in the housing bill to farm housing needs.

On March 30, 1956, a hearing was conducted in Birmingham, Ala., by the Housing Subcommittee. At that time, I made the following statement in which I discussed current farm housing needs:

TESTIMONY OF REPRESENTATIVE ARMISTEAD I. SELDEN, JR., BEFORE SUBCOMMITTEE ON HOUSING OF THE BANKING AND CURRENCY COMMITTEE, BIRMINGHAM, ALA., MARCH 30, 1956

I. THE NEED FOR BETTER FARM HOUSING

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, at the close of World War II, a great deal of attention was focused on providing better homes for our citizens. In the decade since the war, much urban progress has been made, but the improvement of homes for farmers has lagged.

Undoubtedly there are difficulties in achieving better farm homes. The farm population is widely dispersed and, of course, public housing developments provide no relief for poorly housed farmers. Furthermore, it is difficult to separate the farm home from the farm itself. They are a sort of business entity, and all too frequently farmers are forced to plow their profits back into the farming operation of the business. Consequently, the farm home is very often neglected.

Just what are current farm housing needs? Here again we see that the emphasis has been placed largely on urban rather than farm housing. While there are any number of studies available on urban housing needs, there are virtually none that adequately measure the needs for housing on the farm.

While the Economic Report of the President pays considerable attention to nonfarm housing, farm housing is overlooked. In 1953, the President received a report from his Advisory Committee on Government Housing Policies and Programs, but this, too, failed to cover farm housing problems.

Under the Housing Act of 1949, title 42, United States Code, section 1476, the Secretary of Agriculture was directed "to prepare and submit to the President and to Congress estimates of national farm housing needs and report with respect to the progress being made toward meeting such needs, and correlate and recommend proposals for such executive action or legislation necessary or desirable for the furtherance of the national housing objective."

When I recently requested such farm housing reports from the Department of Agriculture, I was told that none are available—that this provision of the act has been dormant.

Lacking a detailed study of farm housing needs and remedial programs, we can only construct the farm housing picture from census reports.

Today we are considering housing in Alabama and the South, and I think I can give a good example of farm housing needs from my own Sixth district. The last housing figures available from the Census Bureau showed that an average of 34 percent of farm houses in the eight counties of the Sixth District were dilapidated, had no private bath or toilet, and were not supplied with hot water. This 34 percent was an average. In one of these countries, 62 percent of the farm homes were without the conveniences I have cited.

I do not think that this illustration from my district is an exceptional one. The Sixth District of Alabama is in a farm income strata that runs through a large part of the South. In the face of conditions such as these, I believe that farm housing certainly merits the attention that this committee is so well prepared to give it.

II. PROGRAMS THAT PROVIDE FARM HOUSING

As you know, there are three major programs designed to provide housing aid for farmers. Two of these programs are administered by the Farmers' Home Administration, one resulting from the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, and the other from the National Housing Act of 1949.

Under the Bankhead-Jones Act, direct and insured loans are available for housing on family farms of reasonable size. Loans for smaller and part-time farms are covered by title V of the Housing Act of 1949.

A third source of home loan money for farmers is the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944 which is the legislation responsible for the loans administered by the Veterans' Administration.

Bankhead-Jones Act

It is generally recognized that the number of direct loans that the Farmers Home Administration can make under the Bankhead-Jones Act is limited by the size of the appropriation. This appropriation is generally about $19 million a year.

A veteran's preference is extended in the direct loan program and properly so. But as a result of the preference and the size of the appropriation, nonveterans are virtually excluded from this program's benefits. This necessarily limits the program because many of the farmers who have inadequate housing are not veterans.

Under the same act, the Farmers Home Administration can insure farm loans up to a maximum of $100 million, but under this insured loan program, loans are limited to 90 percent of the value of the farm or 90 percent of the cost of acquiring the farm—whichever is less. In Alabama, the average farm is only worth about $6,000 and was probably worth less when it was acquired. Thus these insured loans are often inadequate.

Housing Act of 1949

Under Title V of the Housing Act of 1949, loans are authorized for farms which have a value of production between $250 and $1,199 yearly, and for farms which do not provide the full support of the operator and his family.

This latter program is a small farmer's program, and many of the farms so badly in need of better housing are small farms. The last agricultural census showed that there were about 19,000 farms in my district. Roughly 8,000 of these, or about 44 percent, were small farms that were eligible to participate in the loan program I am now discussing.

Unfortunately, during fiscal 1955 and 1956, the administration did not see fit to request an appropriation for this small farmer's loan program. Recently, the administration, in a reversal of policy, requested $5 million for this program for the remainder of the current fiscal year.

Veterans' Administration Loans

The final major program that includes farm housing is handled by the Veterans' Administration. Both direct and insured loans are authorized under this program. However, I call to the attention of this committee the fact that only a small percentage of the loans made under the Veterans' Housing Program are farm loans.

Through January 25, 1956, the number of farm housing loans made in Alabama by the Veterans' Administration amounted to only 5 percent of all housing loans since the Servicemen's Readjustment Act was passed in 1944. There were 52,859 home loans, but only 2,861 farm home loans in Alabama.

If we compare the dollar amount of farm housing loans in Alabama with other loans under the Veterans' Administration program, we see that farm housing accounted for only $6,843,057, compared with $388,030,902 for other types of home loans during the same period. Farm housing loans—dollarwise—were only 1.7 percent of other loans.

Figures I recently obtained from the Veterans' Administration show that in Tuscaloosa County, the county which contains the largest city in my district, 22 percent of the veterans have been successful in obtaining Veterans' Administration loans. In the seven other counties, which are largely rural, only 7 percent of the veterans have obtained loans. Thus the veterans in the agricultural counties of my district are obtaining only one-third as many loans as veterans in the county with the metropolitan center.

Why are these farm veterans failing to obtain housing loans? It is certainly not because they don't need them. As I have pointed out, a large percentage of rural homes in my congressional district are substandard.

There is reason to believe, however, that farm veterans are not getting loans because certain current loan practices of the Veterans' Administration are not working satisfactorily.

You are undoubtedly aware that in most rural areas, all veterans' loan applications are now being funneled to a private lenders pool known as the voluntary home mortgage credit program. Today, loan applications from rural veterans are passed to the private lenders pool and an effort is made to find loan capital for the rural areas where home loan capital is normally scarce.

Under present Veterans' Administration regulations, VHMCP lenders are allowed to make loans at a discount. For example, if a home seller is asking $10,000 for a home, the VHMCP will only make a loan at a discount, usually 2 percent. In other words, the lender will only make a loan for $9,800 on a $10,000 house, and the some seller is required to absorb the loss. The veteran is prohibited by law from making up the difference to the seller. Many sellers balk at the discount practice.

When the veteran fails to get an insured loan from a private lender, he then applies to the Veterans' Administration for a direct loan. There his application is often denied on the basis that the bona fide offer of capital that was made by a VHMCP lender was not accepted.

The irony here is that the veteran had nothing to do with the nonacceptance of the loan offer. The unsuccessful negotiation was actually between the lender and the seller and the veteran had no choice in it.

The Veterans' Administration says it cannot do otherwise. If it grants direct loans, after VHMCP negotiations fail, sellers will automatically turn down VHMCP offers, knowing that the veterans can then obtain direct loans at full value. This would invalidate the VHMCP and, under the law, the Veterans' Administration must work with private lenders.

There are sound arguments in favor of VHMCP—that it has provided new loan resources for veterans; that loans are undoubtedly well processed by our experienced private realtors; and that the Government's loan activities should not threaten this segment of our private business. Yet, the VHMCP as it now operates often not only does not give the veteran a VHMCP loan, but prevents him from getting a direct loan. Therefore, in my opinion, this program should be carefully reexamined.

III. CONCLUSION

While the present housing programs provide for farm housing, the fact that so few families have taken advantage of the farm loans available indicates the need for a careful reexamination of the entire subject. The presence here today of the Housing Subcommittee of the important House Banking and Currency Committee is an assurance that all phases of Federal housing programs, both farm and urban, are receiving the closest scrutiny. We are very pleased to have you gentlemen here in our State of Alabama, and hope that your stay will be both pleasant and profitable.

Mr. Chairman, it is evident from the recommendations made by the Committee on Banking and Currency in its report on H. R. 11742 that its members have given careful consideration to the problem of farm housing. A long-term program to provide low-cost credit on liberal terms to farmers is certainly an important section of the Housing Act of 1956.

Mr. RAINS. I appreciate the gentleman's remarks.

Mr. FASCELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. FASCELL. I wonder if the gentleman can get me straight as to which one of these bills takes care of the situation we have in Florida since our Supreme Court has ruled unconstitutional slum-clearance programs in conjunction with housing programs?

Mr. RAINS. In the committee bill there is no tie-in at all between slum clearance and the public housing program. In all fairness, I should say that there is a requirement in the Widnall bill which would provide for a workable program. However, from studying the bill, I am convinced that the workable program requirement is not tied to families displaced by slum clearance. There were restrictions that were once in the bill that said that public housing could be used only for the purpose of handling those dislocated by governmental action. That is in neither the Widnall bill nor the committee bill.

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. WIDNALL. I would like to clear up the previous question asked by the gentleman from Florida. While this bill would not require a going slum clearance and urban redevelopment program, it would require a plan of action by the community to remove the slums that may be found in the area.

Mr. RAINS. It is not made a requisite. I shall include as a part of my remarks a summary of the committee bill.

SUMMARY OF H. R. 11742

TITLE I—FHA INSURANCE PROGRAMS

Section 101 dealing with FHA title I home improvement loans provides:

(1) A 2-year extension.

(2) An increase in the maximum loan amount to $3,500 (present ceiling is $2,500) and from $10,000 to $15,000 for loans to improve multifamily structures.

(3) An increase in the maximum loan term to 5 years (present ceiling is 3 years).

(4) A sliding interest rate scale permitting a $5 discount on loans below $1,500 and a $4 discount on that portion of the loan which exceeds $1,500. Presently a $5 discount is charged regardless of loan amount.

(5) Discretionary authority to the FHA Commissioner to waive the present requirement that a new home must be occupied at least 6 months before borrower is eligible for a title I home improvement loan.

Section 102 amends the mortgage insurance program of FHA's section 203 by—

(1) Establishing the same mortgage limits for both new and existing housing. Under present law new construction enjoys a slight differential advantage. To prevent circumvention of FHA inspections, an existing home not built under FHA inspection would have to be at least 1 year old to qualify for the more liberal terms.

(2) Increasing by 5 percentage points the maximum loan which FHA can insure if the loan is closed by someone other than the owner-occupant. Presently a nonowner-occupant can insure up to 85 percent of the amount of the insured loan available to an owner-occupant.

(3) Increasing the maximum loan which can be insured for an individual whose home is damaged or destroyed by disaster to $12,000 (present ceiling is $7,000).

Section 103 would liberalize rental housing insurance under FHA's section 207 by—

(1) Permitting a loan up to 90 percent of value (present ceiling is 80 percent of value).

(2) Increasing loan ceilings to $2,250 per room (present ceiling is $2,000) and up to $2,700 per room for elevator-type structures (present ceiling is $2,400). In high-cost geographic areas the Commissioner is authorized to increase per room maximums by an additional $1,000. These liberalizations would establish loan ceilings per room for section 207 similar to those permitted for urban renewal insurance projects under section 220.

Section 104 would amend cooperative housing insurance under section 213 by providing—

(1) A new device to permit a cooperative sponsor to obtain a commitment for a loan up to 85 percent of replacement cost and proceed with construction before the prospective cooperative has been formed. This would overcome the marketing difficulties involved in the present requirement that the cooperative be sold 100 percent before construction can begin. The sponsor would certify intent to sell to a cooperative upon completion. Until he sells the project, he would be regulated by FHA as to rents, capital structure, and rate of return. Also, if the sponsor fails to sell to a cooperative, he cannot use this special insurance feature again. In all cases the sponsor would be subject to the cost certification requirement of section 227.

(2) Authority to the FHA Commissioner to permit in high-cost geographic areas an additional $1,000 per room in computing the maximum permissible insured loan.

Section 105 would increase the FHA mortgage insurance authorization to make available an additional $3 billion.

Section 106 would amend the urban renewal insurance provisions of FHA's section 220 by—

(1) Providing for a profit and risk allowance of 10 percent of project cost (excluding land) for sponsors of urban renewal insurance projects, although the FHA Commissioner is authorized to prescribe a lesser percentage if he certifies that a 10 percent allowance is unreasonable.

(2) By making it clear that the present mortgage limits permitted for elevator-type projects are also available to the sponsors of garden-type apartments.

Section 107 would liberalize relocation housing insurance under section 221 by—

(1) Increasing the maximum permissible loan to $9,000 and to $10,000 in high-cost areas. (Present ceilings are $7,600 and $8,600, respectively.)

(2) Permitting no downpayment financing by requiring only that the borrower pay $200 in cash to apply toward closing costs.

(3) Increasing the permissible loan maturity from the present 30-year ceiling to 40 years.

Section 108 would amend the cost certification requirement—

(1) By making such certifications incontestable after the Commissioner's approval of the certification, barring fraud or material misrepresentation.

(2) By permitting an allocation of general overhead costs acceptable to the Commissioner to be included in the total certified cost.

(3) By permitting the owner of a multifamily housing project to obtain FHA-insured financing to cover the full amount of rehabilitation cost, provided he presently has sufficient equity in the property. This would correct an inequity in present law. In no case could the FHA-insured loan exceed the maximum loan-to-value ratios permitted by statute.

TITLE II—HOUSING FOR ELDERLY PERSONS

Section 201 would establish a new loan program for rental housing for elderly families and persons, similar to the college housing loan program. This section would provide $250 million revolving fund to the Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency for loans to nonprofit corporations for the construction or rehabilitation of housing for the elderly. No more than $50 million of the loan fund could be outstanding at any one time for related facilities such as cafeterias, community rooms, infirmaries, etc.

The interest rate could not exceed 3½ percent per annum and the maximum loan term would be 50 years. The cost of funds to the Administrator from the Treasury could not exceed 3 percent.

The bill would permit loans only when private capital is not available upon the terms and conditions provided in the bill.

The bill contains a provision prohibiting the use of this housing for transient or hotel purposes.

Section 202 would make low-rent public housing available to elderly persons (65 years or over):

(1) By making elderly single persons eligible for the regular public housing program.

(2) By authorizing the construction of units specifically designed for elderly persons. The section provides 10,000 units annually for a 3-year period beginning July 1, 1956.

(3) By increasing the permissible per room cost for units for elderly persons to $2,250 (present ceiling, $1,750).

Section 203 would amend FHA's regular home insurance program to make it easier for elderly persons to obtain mortgage financing. Where the mortgagor is 60 years of age or older, the bill would permit the required downpayment to be paid by an individual other than the mortgagor.

TITLE III—SECONDARY MORTGAGE MARKET

Section 301 would liberalize the operations of the Federal National Mortgage Association by—

(1) Exempting from the $15,000 limit on loans eligible for purchase the following: (a) Military housing loans insured under section 803 and (b) FHA-insured and VA-guaranteed loans made in Alaska, Guam, and Hawaii.

(2) Reducing the stock purchase requirement to no more than 2 percent.

(3) Permitting advance commitments under the secondary market operations. Such commitments would be issued at a price high enough to provide production support to builders and yet sufficiently below the prices offered by the Association for immediate purchase to discourage excessive sales to FNMA pursuant to advance commitments. No stock subscription would be required unless the mortgage is actually purchased.

(4) Requiring FNMA until June 30, 1957, to pay par for special assistance mortgages.

(5) Increasing the advance commitment funds available for special assistance operations to $400 million (present ceiling is $200 million).

(6) Amending the present revolving fund for section 213 mortgages to make it clear that the $5 million limit per State is on outstanding commitments, in other words to make clear that the State suballocation can "revolve" exactly the same as does the $50 million nationwide revolving fund.

(7) Making it clear that any military housing loan insured under title VIII on or after August 11, 1955, is eligible for special assistance.

(8) Providing a $50 million revolving fund under the special assistance program to support FHA section 203 (i) loans. Section 203 (i) loans are designed to encourage low-cost housing in outlying and rural areas.

Section 302 would establish a new secondary market support program for GI loans. Under its provisions the Secretary of the Treasury could invest up to 10 percent of the reserves of the national service life insurance fund by purchasing VA-guaranteed loans in geographic areas where discounts on GI loans are heaviest. Both current reserves and future premiums could be used. Since the fund's reserves are approximately $5½ billion, the program could supply approximately $550 million in funds to support the market.

Only loans guaranteed after enactment would be eligible for purchase. To protect the fund from loss in case of serious default, the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs would be required to purchase the defaulted loan.

The program would expire on July 25, 1957, the present expiration date for the GI loan benefit of most World War II veterans.

The Federal National Mortgage Association would act as the Treasury's agent to purchase and service loans. Payment for such services is limited to a maximum of three-fourths of 1 percent. Since the GI loans purchased would yield at least 4½ percent, the fund would earn a minimum of 3¾ percent on its mortgage portfolio.

TITLE IV—SLUM CLEARANCE AND URBAN RENEWAL

Section 401 would amend the slum clearance and urban renewal program by—

(1) Eliminating the requirement for a separate redevelopment plan for any part of an urban renewal area to be cleared of slums or redeveloped. The requirement for a separate redevelopment plan is no longer necessary since the elements of such plans are included in the overall urban renewal plan and a separate redevelopment plan serves no useful purpose.

(2) Increasing the authority of the Administrator, without regard to the 10-percent State limitation, to enter into contracts for capital grants for slum clearance and urban renewal projects not exceeding $100 million (present limit, $70 million) with local public agencies in States where more than two-thirds of the maximum capital grants permitted a State have already been obligated.

(3) Providing for payments to individuals, families, and business concerns displaced by urban renewal activities to reimburse them for moving expenses and other losses of property except goodwill. Payments would be limited to $200 for individuals and families, and $5,000 for business concerns.

(4) Providing that an "urban renewal plan" shall not include the construction of additional hotel facilities unless it is shown they are actually needed. The urban renewal plan including the construction of a hotel shall contain a certification that a survey of anticipated profits has been made by a recognized independent firm, and that such survey indicates the need for such additional hotel facilities.

Section 402 would authorize the Housing Administrator to extend urban renewal assistance to major disaster areas, under certain conditions, without regard to requirements that the community must have a workable program for the prevention and elimination of slums, that the urban renewal plan must conform to a general plan of the locality, requirements of public hearings, and certain requirements with respect to the predominantly residential character or blighted character of urban renewal areas.

The FHA sections 220 and 221 urban renewal housing programs would also be amended to permit temporary waiver of the present workable program requirement, and urban planning grants would be permitted for a community affected by a major disaster without regard to the fact that the community's population is 25,000 or greater.

Section 403 would increase the urban renewal planning grant authorization from $5 million to $10 million.

Section 404 would extend to private nonprofit educational institutions of higher learning the same privilege with respect to Government construction planning advances, as that now enjoyed by tax-supported educational institutions of higher learning. Both such types of educational institutions receive equal consideration under provisions of the college housing loan program, and this change would place them on a parity with respect to planning advances.

Section 405 would provide additional assistance to small business concerns displaced from urban renewal areas. The Small Business Administration would be authorized to make loans, under liberal credit standards, to help displaced businesses to relocate. The loans would carry 4-percent interest and could extend for a term of 20 years. The bill would authorize $25 million for such loans.

TITLE V—PUBLIC HOUSING

Section 501 would provide 50,000 low-rent public housing units annually for a 3-year period beginning August 1, 1956. Provision is made for carrying over to subsequent years any unused portion of the annual quota.

Section 502 would direct the PHA to transfer farm-labor camps to local public housing agencies upon their request, without compensation, and within 18 months of enactment. First occupancy preference would be given to low-income agricultural workers, and second preference to other low-income families. In the case of Florida, any public housing agency acquiring such farm labor camps would be required, in the event of the sale of such project, to use the proceeds to construct new facilities for such workers and families.

Section 503 would—

(1) Provide for the transfer of 41 temporary defense housing projects constructed or acquired under the Defense Housing and Community Facilities Act of 1951, and two Lanham Act war housing projects, from the Housing Agency to the Department of Defense, effective July 1, 1956.

(2) Provide that "1951 act" defense housing not transferred to the Department of Defense must be disposed of as expeditiously as possible, not later than June 30, 1958, on a competitive bid basis; project IDA–2D1 at Cobalt, Idaho, to be sold for on-site use only.

(3) Direct the HHFA to convey the Lanham Act Tonomy Hill project (RI–37013) at Newport, R. I., to the Housing Authority of the city of Newport, and the Lanham Act Passayunk project (PA–36011 and PA–36012) in Philadelphia, Pa., to the Housing Authority of the city of Philadelphia.

(4) Amend the Lanham Act by adding a new section 614 to accelerate the disposition of those projects which must be sold for off-site use or as entire projects.

Section 504 would authorize the sale under prescribed conditions of two Government-owned projects, the Chinquapin Village housing project in Alexandria, Va., and the Techwood Dormitory in Atlanta, Ga.

Section 505 would direct the Public Housing Commissioner to authorize certain local housing authorities to make payments in lieu of taxes for past fiscal years. There are 10 cities which would receive payments under this amendment.

TITLE VI—MILITARY HOUSING

Section 601 would extend and liberalize the title VIII military housing program by—

(1) Extending eligibility for military housing insurance to the Canal Zone and Midway Island.

(2) Extending the program for 3 years until September 30, 1959.

(3) The aggregate total of mortgage insurance authorized would be increased to $2,475 million to provide for the construction of an additional 49,000 units (now 101,000). Correspondingly, it increases from $9 million to $21 million the total permissible monthly payment to amortize military housing mortgages. This authorization would cover, in addition to the 150,000 units of title VIII housing, some 82,000 units of Wherry Act housing.

(4) Permitting an average cost per dwelling unit of $16,500.

(5) Permitting the FHA Commissioner to waive or reduce the FHA insurance premium.

(6) Applying to title VIII housing the same net floor area limitations which apply to appropriated funds housing.

(7) Providing that plans and specifications prepared for the military departments follow the principle of modular measure in order that the housing may be built by conventional construction, on-site fabrication, factory precutting, factory fabrication, or any combination of these methods.

Section 602 would establish a new program requiring the Secretary of Defense to acquire the sponsor's interest in existing "Wherry" housing by—

(1) Directing the Secretary of Defense to acquire, operate, and improve such housing.

(2) Providing for the Secretary to acquire such housing by purchase, donation, or other means of transfer or through condemnation.

(3) Establishing a formula to be paid for the sponsor's interest in such housing: (a) the formula would be based upon the FHA Commissioner's estimate of replacement cost less the value of any improvements installed or constructed with appropriated funds, or the actual cost (as defined in sec. 227 (c) of the National Housing Act), if such cost is less than the Commissioner's estimate. The appropriate base would then be adjusted to current cost levels and reduced by an appropriate allowance for physical depreciation; (b) to this amount would be added the current fair market value of all usable personal property and chattels used in connection with the maintenance and operation of such housing not included under the mortgage as security for the outstanding principal obligation; (c) to arrive at the amount to be paid for sponsor's equity, this gross amount would be reduced by the outstanding mortgage obligation against the project. A limit of $1,500 per unit is fixed as the maximum amount payable for the sponsor's equity interest in such housing under this formula.

(4) Providing authority for the Secretary of Defense, or his designee, to acquire Wherry projects through condemnation, if either he or the Wherry owner disagrees with the price established under the prescribed formula.

(5) Authorizing the Secretary of Defense to enter into agreements with the mortgagee for the release of reserves for replacement, taxes, hazard insurance, etc., and the waiver of all future requirements for such accruals once the mortgage is assumed by the Secretary.

(6) Authorizing the Secretary of Defense to assign the housing acquired to military personnel. However, if such housing does not meet existing standards for public quarters, it may be assigned as rental quarters without loss to such personnel of their quarters allowance, until it is renovated to meet such standards.

(7) Establishing a revolving fund with an authorization for an appropriation not to exceed $50 million. This fund would be used for paying the purchase price for housing and other property acquired, principal, interest, mortgage insurance premiums, and all other obligations except those for maintenance and operation, for each project acquired. The fund could also be used for improving or altering such housing after acquisition in order for it to meet the standards established for public quarters. Receipts from rentals and withheld quarters allowances would be paid into the fund.

Section 603 would clarify congressional intent with respect to the rights of local communities to tax the interests of mortgagors under the Wherry Act mortgage insurance program. Alhough it is provided that this interest is not exempt from State or local taxes, the section provides that such taxes must be reduced by (1) any payments in lieu of taxes made by the Federal Government to the local taxing bodies with respect to the property, (2) any expenditures made by the Federal Government for streets, utilities, and other services for or with respect to the property.

TITLE VII—MISCELLANEOUS

Farm housing

Section 701 amends title V of the Housing Act of 1949 to authorize, for a 5-year period beginning July 1, 1956, and ending June 30, 1961, (1) $450 million for farm housing loans, (2) $10 million for contributions by the Secretary of Agriculture to prevent defaults in payments of loans for potentially adequate farms, and (3) $50 million for grants and loans for improvement and repair of certain farm structures.

College housing

Section 702 would increase loan funds for college housing by $250 million, bringing the total authorization for such purpose to $750 million.

Public facility loans

Section 703 would make it clear that public facility loans are available to the Territories and possessions as well as to the continental United States.

Federal savings and loan associations

Section 704 would amend the Home Owners' Loan Act to permit Federal savings and loan associations to increase their maximum permissible uninsured home improvement loan from $2,500 to $3,500, thereby placing them on a parity with the increased loan amounts being recommended for FHA title I home improvement loans.

Federal Home Loan Bank Act

Section 705 would provide for a study by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board of means of improving the services rendered by the savings and loan associations, and would disapprove Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1956, and prevent its taking effect (or, if it has become effective by the time the bill is enacted, would nullify it).

Mr. JONES of Alabama. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. JONES of Alabama. Mr. Chairman, I first should like to pay a most richly deserved tribute to the gentleman who preceded me. I have had the honor and privilege of serving in Congress with Congressman ALBERT RAINS for 10 years. Since we represent adjoining districts, I have followed his work very closely. While he has been an outstanding Congressman in all respects, he has attained special eminence in the field of housing. Ever since he came to Congress in 1945 he has served on the Banking and Currency Committee which has responsibility for the housing bills. As a result of the expertness he acquired, he was honored by being named chairman of the Subcommittee on Housing which handles housing legislation initially. For 4 years he has served in that capacity. In my opinion, and I state my opinion unqualifiedly and without fear of contradiction, he is by far the outstanding authority in the United States today on the subject of housing. His vast store of knowledge with respect to this subject surpasses that of any other individual. This opinion is shared by all who are familiar with his career. He has devoted thousands of hours throughout the years to the mastery of this subject. He has held hearings in various parts of the country to obtain firsthand information at the grassroots level as to the needs of the people and the effectiveness of the programs which have been in existence. We in Alabama are very proud of his accomplishments and know that when he recommends a housing bill we can depend upon its soundness and desirability. I congratulate ALBERT RAINS for his praiseworthy contribution to the preparation of this bill.

I would like to emphasize that H. R. 11742 is not just a public housing bill. It has many other desirable and worthwhile sections. The section which concerns me most is the section providing a 5-year program to improve the housing of our farmers.

It has always seemed unfortunate to me that when housing programs and problems are discussed, it is always with reference to urban housing. I am not questioning the obvious need for federally supported programs to improve the quality of urban housing and to help eliminate city slums. All I ask is that fair and equal treatment be given to the very serious housing needs on our Nation's farms.

In fact, there is evidence that the farm housing problem is actually more serious. The 1950 census of housing showed 20 percent of farmhouses are so dilapidated that they need major repairs or need to be completely replaced. The percentage of urban homes in such sad shape was considerably lower.

The farm housing problem was serious enough in 1950, when farm income was close to 100 percent of parity. Now, with net farm income down nearly $4 billion since 1952, the difficulties facing many farm families in their attempts to correct farm housing deficiences have been multiplied.

The farm housing section of H. R. 11742 would go far toward meeting this serious problem. Section 701 of the bill would extend title V of the Housing Act of 1949 to provide for a 5-year farm housing program.

Specifically, the bill would authorize, first, $450 million for direct farm housing loans to be available during a 5-year period; second, an additional $10 million for contributions by the Secretary of Agriculture to prevent defaults in payments on loans for potentially adequate farms; and, third, an additional $50 million for grants and loans for improvements and repair to keep houses safe and sanitary and also to encourage family size farms.

I am convinced that an effective direct-lending program under title V is a needed supplement to the farm housing loans available under the insured-loan program of title I of the Bankhead-Jones Act. Insured loans under the Bankhead-Jones Act meet an important part of farm housing needs, but they do not reach all of the area of need, by any means.

For example, Bankhead-Jones Act loans are restricted to owners of economic family size farms, whereas loans under title V of the Housing Act of 1949 are not. Title V loans can help low-income farm families on small farms. Others in need of aid include owners of small tracts of land who round out their full-time farm operations with leased land. These small farmers who are denied aid under the insured-loan program of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Act can only be helped through an extension and expansion of the direct-loan program under title V of the Housing Act of 1949.

I would like to emphasize that the repayment record of loans made under the title V farm-loan program has been outstanding. Foreclosures have been few, indeed.

I would like to emphasize also that farm families cannot receive direct-loan assistance under the title V program unless they have been certified by farmer committees as being unable to obtain the necessary credit from private sources.

I would also like to emphasize that the farm housing section of H. R. 11742 does not provide a new loan authority. What it does do is to renew the unused loan authority which has accumulated under the title V program since its inauguration in 1949.

Despite the basic soundness and merit of the title V farm housing loan program, it is distressing to realize that not a single loan has been made under this program since December of 1953.

This has not been because of failure on the part of Congress. Consistently each year we have extended the title V farm housing loan program. In plain fact, it has been sabotaged by the administration's failure to implement it. I think this is but another indication of the indifference and callous attitude toward farmers on the part of the present administration.

H. R. 11742 would establish the title V loan program on a long-range 5-year basis to provide liberal credit for farmers. It is the hope of those of us who are concerned with the farm housing problem that by setting up the program on a long-term basis we can induce a change of attitude on the part of the administration so that the title V program can make a real contribution in helping to solve the farm housing problem.

Mr. ELLIOTT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. ELLIOTT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Housing Act of 1956.

First, I want to say that I think this is the best housing bill that has been before the House in several years, and I want to take this occasion to commend and congratulate the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. RAINS], who served as chairman of the Subcommittee on Housing, for the fine work that he has done in this field during this Congress.

In March of this year, he brought his subcommittee, consisting of himself and the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL] and others, to Birmingham to investigate housing needs in Alabama. I had the privilege of appearing before the subcommittee at that time.

This is a good bill. It contains legislation providing for the continuance of FHA housing; the continuance of, and liberalization of, the FHA repair provisions, increasing the maximum amount of a repair loan from the present $2,500 to $3,500 and extending the repayment period from the present 3 years to 5 years; it provides for a continuance of public housing which, after bitter fights ranging over a period of nearly 8 years now, since the enactment of the Housing Act of 1949, has come to be accepted, fairly generally, as an essential part of any well-rounded housing bill.

The first public housing project to be built in Alabama, following the passage of the Housing Act of 1949, was in my hometown of Jasper, Ala. The project was appropriately named the William B. Bankhead Homes, in honor of the memory of a former Speaker of this House who, for many years, represented the Seventh Congressional District of Alabama, which I now have the privilege to represent. Since then, many other public housing projects have been built all over the Seventh Congressional District of Alabama. It is my understanding that all of them are fully occupied, and that most of them have long lists of persons who are waiting to live in them, if vacancies occur.

I am glad to see the public housing program continue. It will mean that many towns in Alabama will be able to obtain low-rent public housing projects.

I am also glad that this bill contains the provision it does for college housing and military housing, both of which, at this particular time, mean much to Alabama and to the country.

Also, I am happy this bill contains an authorization of $450 million for farm housing. This program was begun by the Housing Act of 1949. I recall the day in the fall of 1949 when the second housing loan of this type to be made in Alabama was closed at Russellville, Ala., and how, a few weeks later, the program was started in Walker County, Ala., by the closing of a loan at Jasper, Ala. The program has meant a great deal to the rural people of the Seventh Congressional District, and it has been a program that has been badly needed. I was disappointed when, in the 83d Congress, the money for this program was practically shut off. This authorization should give the program seventy-five to one hundred million dollars a year, thus enabling it to at least begin to fulfill the real needs of our rural people for housing.

Mr. Chairman, it seems to be entirely too easy to overlook the needs of the rural people, in housing and in other fields. People speak as if slums could occur only in city areas. I submit that some of the worst slums in America exist in the rural areas of the country. The greatest need for housing, by and large, is today in the rural sections of America. There are more houses without bathrooms and plumbing facilities on the farms of America than anywhere else. This bill takes cognizance of that fact, and provides for it in a realistic way, and thus makes me happy to have this privilege of voting for it.

I think many of us overlook the fact that the home-building industry is one of our foremost industries. It is a $10 billion industry. It furnishes jobs for the carpenter, the bricklayer, the painter, the plumber, the plasterer, the paperhanger, the electrician, and the architect. It furnishes jobs to those who produce the lumber, and for those who produce the materials that go into the building of the house, and the furnishing of it as well.

The American home is the center of American family life. It is the cradle of democracy. America's strength is the strength of her families. It is the strength of her homes.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 15 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, for a good many years, since 1937, anyway, we have had each year a housing bill of some type. We have gotten so that we expect housing bills to come on, and we have gotten to think that they are a necessity. A housing bill this year is less a necessity than at any other time.

The Senate passed a housing bill, and the House committee reported out a House bill which went to the Committee on Rules, as you have been advised. Now, in respect to the Senate bill, I think it was the worst, although most comprehensive, housing bill that was ever passed. It was a worse type of bill than even the bill the House committee reported out, if that were possible, causing the administration to characterize these bills in this fashion, and I am reading from a press release by the Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency the day that we went before the Committee on Rules and asked for a rule on the housing bill:

> Unrealistic, excessive, ill conceived are the terms applied today by Albert M. Cole, Housing and Home Finance Agency Administrator, to many of the provisions of the housing bill reported out of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, and came before the House Committee on Rules. Mr. Cole said that the Housing and Home Finance Agency and the administration will continue to press vigorously for a bill that conforms to the principles of the legislation recommended by the President. The President's recommendations were the results of intensive study and consideration, not only of our housing needs but also of how we can best meet them under a sound economy, Mr. Cole said. The bill, as proposed, is unsound in many respects and contains serious excesses of many kinds.

Now, he was speaking for the administration. The Senate bill was decidedly obnoxious to the administration. The House bill was objectionable to the administration in this language used by Mr. Cole.

We commenced to study the bill a little bit following that—perhaps we should have done it before—and we found that there was need in only two particulars for a continuance of any housing bill. The title I modernization provisions expire on September 30, and, as has been said, it was quite essential that something be done before September 30 to continue the insuring of modernization loans.

In addition to that, the administration was somewhat concerned about the military housing. So, all that it was necessary to pass this year was military housing and title I.

In respect to the program itself on FHA financing, I received a letter from Norman P. Mason, Commissioner of FHA, inquiring how long we could continue at the present tempo of home construction with the present authorization. Mr. Mason, on June 29, also the day on which we went before the Committee on Rules, had this to say:

> Pursuant to your request I wish to advise that the insurance authorizations of the Federal Housing Administration are ample at the rates of building currently estimated for fiscal year 1957 to continue its mortgage insurance programs until sometime in June, 1957, without further authorization.

We could go until June 1957, without further authorization for FHA insurance. This program of FHA insurance has to do with so-called section 203's which have to do with the insurance of 1- to 4-family units; section 207's which have to do with multiple-family units; 213's which have to do with cooperative units; 220's which have to do with urban renewals; 221's which have to do with urban relocation; 222's which have to do with servicemen; 223's which have to do with miscellaneous programs, and title VII which has to do with yield insurance.

There was not any necessity for passing any continuance of a public housing program notwithstanding everything which has been said here. There is in the pipeline today in excess of 20,000 unused units authorized. So if the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH] and the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLMER] had been permitted to amend the so-called Widnall substitute to strike out public housing, there would be still in the pipeline unused over 20,000 units that can be constructed this next year. So you do not have to do anything with public housing this year.

Mr. NICHOLSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. NICHOLSON. We have more than 20,000; we have 55,000.

Mr. WOLCOTT. May I explain to the gentleman that I arrived at that 20,000 in this way; that at the present time, in this year, they have only used 4,371 of the 45,000 which we gave them last year, but they are honest enough to tell us that by the time the authority expires on July 31, they are likely to have to use 20,000, instead of 4,000.

The Widnall proposal is the proposal which was referred to by the administration as being the administration proposal. The workable program that has been referred to as a part of the Widnall proposal has to do with some essential objectives before public housing can be used. They have to do with cities providing by codes and ordinances for cleaning up their slums and depressed areas. It must have a comprehensive community plan; neighborhood analysis; administrative organization; financing; and housing for displaced families and citizens' participation.

Although in 1954, when we wrote the 1954 act, public housing had to be tied into slum clearance and urban development, and only to the extent shown it was necessary to find shelter for those who were being displaced by public works incident to slum clearance and urban development, that has been abandoned, and not only abandoned in the Senate bill and in the House bill, but abandoned likewise in the proposals here offered now by the administration through the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL]. I do not agree with them.

In 1955 the Administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency when talking about these restrictions which tied in with slum clearance and urban development said:

> I believe the purposes of these restrictions are essentially sound and should be adhered to.

The President told me that in July 1954. Until the President tells me that he has changed his mind I will not think that anybody else to the contrary notwithstanding is speaking on this question of the necessity for constructing public housing. So it was not necessary to pass any bill for public housing because we have ample authority. It was not necessary to do anything but to continue title I and something about military housing.

The proposal of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL] has been the subject of many conferences on a leadership basis, although they have known right along that I have been against that provision. I surely would have been glad to vote for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi to the rule had it been in such form that it could have been done.

What I am getting at is that the Widnall substitute which has been made in order as the only amendment which can be offered to this bill is a reflection of the administration's desires and is a reflection of the administration's position that only those things which are in the Widnall proposal are necessary for a sound and orderly continuance of the housing program.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BROWN].

Mr. BROWN of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, there are many good features in H. R. 11742. This bill would improve the various FHA insurance programs, would provide a much-needed stimulus to home building and mortgage credit, and would expand and improve other important Government-supported housing programs to meet special housing needs.

I wish to say that the distinguished gentleman from Alabama [Mr. RAINS], I believe, has had more to do with preparing this bill than anyone else. I think he knows more about housing in general than any man in the Nation.

One of the chief virtues of the bill is its recognition of the vexing shortages of mortgage capital which exist in many areas, particularly in the South and West, which are remote from the concentrated pools of investment funds which to a disproportionate degree are concentrated in the northeastern section of the United States. It has always seemed unfair to me that in times of credit stringency—when our smaller towns and communities and rural areas are starving for more mortgage-investment capital—at the same time many other areas enjoy relative plenty.

One of the means of smoothing out this geographic disparity is through a properly functioning Government-supported secondary market. That function is now, of course, carried out by the Federal National Mortgage Association, and in general under the provisions of present law, FNMA is providing substantial support in many areas. But I think its support role can be greatly improved and I am pleased that the bill would provide the means to do so.

Under present law a mortgage lender selling a loan to FNMA must buy stock in an amount equal to at least 3 percent of the principal amount of the mortgage. I think this requirement is too severe and in many ways it is like hitting a man when he is down because a mortgage lender selling to FNMA has been unable to place his mortgage in the private market and is using FNMA only as a last resort. The bill would ease this cost burden of doing business with FNMA and would reduce the stock purchase subscription to no more than 2 percent.

The advance commitment authority which the bill would bestow on FNMA in its regular secondary market operation will help builders to obtain necessary production credit support in areas where they are not now able to do so. The commitment price would be substantially below the market but it would provide the lender and the builder with assured take-out financing so that construction financing can be obtained locally. The bill would also liberalize the special assistance program of FNMA and would provide additional funds for this program which supports deserving types of housing, such as disaster housing, and housing for persons displaced by slum clearance and urban renewal activities.

In addition to improving FNMA's market support operations the bill would permit up to 10 percent of the veterans' national service life insurance reserves to be invested in GI loans in areas of the country where investment funds are in shortest supply as evidenced by excessive and burdensome discounts. The bill guarantees the veterans' insurance fund against loss.

These sections of the bill should improve the mortgage credit situation markedly in many parts of the country and I deeply hope that they will become law.

Special FNMA special assistance support would be granted by the bill to low-cost housing built under section 203 (i) of the National Housing Act. Under this section adequate housing can be built at a lower cost in outlying and rural areas because it does not have to completely meet the sometimes severe requirements imposed upon housing in built-up urban areas. I am most hopeful that the bill will stimulate this type of housing which is needed greatly for our lower income groups.

The bill contains a number of other perfecting improvements to the various FHA programs. For example, it would wipe out the small differential in the amount of down payment required on existing homes as against new homes. The FHA program is now an accepted institution in our land, and I think that the FHA-insured mortgage is one of the reasons why our economy has been able to maintain its strength. I am exceedingly proud to have played a role in the creation by Congress of the FHA amortized mortgage in 1934. Thanks to the long-term low-interest amortized loan which the great bulk of homeowning families enjoy today, we need not dread the specter of mass default and foreclosure which inevitably followed the period of the 1920's when mortgages were not amortized but were payable in full after a certain period, and when the whole mortgage structure was a house of cards resting on precarious foundations of first, second, and third mortgages.

The bill contains important provisions to support housing programs to meet other special housing needs.

I am glad to say that the bill does not overlook the housing needs of our farmers. Too often people think of housing problems as belonging exclusively to city dwellers.

To help meet this problem the bill would provide a 5-year $500 million loan fund for farm housing.

The bill recognizes that an effective direct lending program until title V of the Housing Act of 1949 is a needed supplement to the insured farm housing loans available for some purposes under title I of the Bankhead-Jones Act. Loans under the Bankhead-Jones Act meet some farm housing needs, but they do not reach all of the area of need by any means.

Actually, the sum of approximately $500 million authorized by the bill over a 5-year period is not a new loan authority. It renews and restores funds which the administration has failed to use. By establishing the title V program as a long-term program, I sincerely hope that the administration will stop trying to hamstring the program and will cooperate to really make it work.

Another very deserving program is the college housing loan program, first authorized in the Housing Act of 1950. The skyrocketing student enrollment facing our colleges and universities has created a most serious housing problem. Under the college housing loan program, these institutions are able to obtain liberal financing at a low interest cost and for a long repayment period. This has enabled them to build decent and adequate housing for students and faculty members. I think the college housing loan program has been singularly successful and I want to see it continue on the present basis. The $500 million authorized for such loans to date is virtually exhausted and I strongly endorse the additional $250 million which the bill would provide for loans under this program.

The bill also recognizes the extreme importance of helping our military services to provide good quality housing to military and key civilian personnel. It would permit the military services to build housing of better quality and would increase the program from the present approximately 100,000 units to a new total of 150,000 units.

The housing needs of the military would also be helped by a section of the bill directing the transfer to the military services of the so-called Wherry Act housing, that is, housing built under title VIII prior to the housing amendments of 1955. This would achieve the worthwhile objectives of putting military housing where it belongs under the operation of the military service concerned—enabling the military services to improve the acquired units—and would help prevent hardship to Wherry Act sponsors whose economic solvency is threatened by the growing competition of military housing built under the new title VIII military housing program.

I hope that the day is not too far distant when the private-building and real-estate industries can provide decent housing at prices or rents which our low-income families can afford.

Mr. WOLVERTON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. WOLVERTON. Mr. Chairman, I am in full accord with the aims and purposes of the Housing Act of 1956, now under consideration by the House.

The problem of housing is one that deserves the consideration of Congress. Through a period of years Congress has enacted legislation designed to be helpful in remedying housing shortage, and, to make it easier for families to acquire ownership of houses. Each year it seems that new problems arise that call for changes in existing law. Congress has responded to these new demands to a degree. But full recognition of the need has been difficult to obtain. The result has been compromise legislation that has not always been as effectual as it should have been. The present legislation, H. R. 11742, reported by the House Committee on Banking and Currency, provides many changes in existing law in an endeavor to meet the present-day needs. There is considerable difference of opinion as to the necessity of some or all of its provisions, and, as a result it is expected that substitute measures will be introduced before final action is taken.

It is my personal opinion that there is a greater need for some of the proposals contained in the committee bill than some are willing to concede. It is my intention to vote for such provisions as will most effectively meet the present-day needs. I am strongly of the opinion that good housing and sufficient in number is one of the fundamental requirements of a contented and satisfied people. Consequently, it is an inescapable obligation of Government to make certain that such exists whenever and wherever private interests fail to adequately provide such. The importance of good housing cannot be overlooked as a means of providing good citizenship, as well as healthful and satisfactory living conditions. It is too important to permit it to lag because of failure of private interests to meet the problem. In such cases the Government is not only justified but obligated to step in and meet the need.

The committee bill, H. R. 11742, is a comprehensive bill that merits favorable consideration. It can be correctly termed an omnibus housing bill. It is designed to expand and improve Government assisted housing programs to enable our people to acquire better housing and to assist our communities in their efforts to clear slums, arrest the spread of blight, and in general to promote more wholesome neighborhoods for better family living. The provisions of this bill are the result of an exhaustive and painstaking study and investigation into many phases of the housing and home finance industry. It takes a broad view in its concept of what is needed, and, it provides assistance not only for public housing needs, but also for private builders as well.

An examination of the committee bill will reveal that bill in its numerous and varied provisions is most meritorious, but, in addition to its general worthwhile character, it is particularly commendable in many of its special provisions. As an illustration of this fact, I point to the provision that has been made with respect to elderly persons, either in the single or family status. Under this section of the bill loans can be made to private nonprofit corporations to provide rental housing for such elderly persons. Related facilities would include cafeterias, dining halls, community rooms or buildings, infirmaries or other health facilities, and other necessary facilities in connection with such type of housing. Construction, however, must not be of elaborate or extravagant design or materials. I think we are all aware of the difficulties faced by elderly people in obtaining suitable living conditions due to insufficiency of income and a desire to maintain a degree of independence from the necessity to rely on the willingness of family relationships to take them into their own family group. This so often creates a burden and inconvenience on the family group even though they are willing and anxious to care for their elderly relations. Thus, it can be seen, by this single illustration, how worthwhile the provisions of the pending bill are. Many more illustrations could be given that would include slum clearance, assistance in disaster areas created by floods and forms of disaster, assistance to small business concerns displaced from urban renewal areas, farm housing and farm labor camps, college housing for needy students, and, to enable municipalities to plan for development of appropriate housing and improvements. Much more could be said that would include increased loan provisions for home improvements, mortgage assistance and other numerous and varied programs of assistance designed to improve living conditions that otherwise might be prevented because of inability to obtain loans on terms and rate of interest that could not be met by low income families, even though their honesty was beyond question.

In conclusion, I wish to state that it is my intention, in the first instance at least, to support the committee bill in preference to the substitute that is to be offered. There are many reasons that could be given to justify such action upon my part. Without any attempt to enumerate all of them, I think it is sufficient to refer to only a few, for instance, the provision made to assist our elderly people is not contained in the substitute bill, and, there is a much less number of public housing units provided for. In addition, there are many restrictions and limitations contained in the substitute bill. Giving full and careful consideration to the whole matter, I am convinced that although the substitute bill does contain many provisions that are in the committee bill, yet, on the whole it is not as broad or inclusive in its entirety as is the committee bill. Hence, it is my intention to vote in favor of the committee bill. Of course, if on vote of the House it should be defeated in favor of the substitute bill, then, I would feel it is my duty to support the substitute bill in order that we may have at least some housing legislation at this session of Congress. It is my hope, however, that the House will approve the committee bill instead of and in the place of the substitute bill.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. O'HARA].

Mr. O'HARA of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, when I returned to the 84th Congress, and to the Banking and Currency Committee, on which I had served in previous Congresses, it was to dedicate myself to the task of broadening the horizons of life for those on the western slope waiting for the sunset. I, too, am on that western slope, and perhaps better than those who are younger do I understand the yearning of our senior citizens for a place in our national society broader than dependence, richer than sympathy, however loving.

I came to the 84th Congress fresh from an investigation and a study of the housing needs of our elderly men and women which at my own expense and during the interim between the 83d and 84th Congresses I had conducted with the interest of one close in intimate understanding and with something of the exhilerating zeal of one who throws himself into the advancement of a cause as a holy crusade.

On February 10, 1955, I introduced in this body the first bill for a housing program for our elderly. It envisioned homes for the aging and the aged, both married and single, within their financial means and located in or near the communities in which their children and friends reside and dear to them from memories of the past.

Eleven members of the Banking and Currency Committee, with one former member, the distinguished and beloved gentleman from New York [Mr. DOLLINGER], joined me as sponsors by introducing companion bills.

On February 10, 1955, I spoke from this well soliciting the interest and the help of my colleagues in the cause of obtaining housing—cheerful housing, housing within their means, housing in which age could find not only convenience and comfort, but that which is priceless, the dignity of independence.

AROUSED NATIONAL INTEREST

This, Mr. Chairman, was the start of the intensive drive, which today has become a national crusade enlisting the support of every young man and woman who ever had a mother or a father truly beloved and who wishes for all mothers and fathers, prematurely, in a mechanized youth-devouring age, forced into retirement, to have the chance of living with dignity in a world of ever broadening horizons.

Mr. Chairman, within 2 weeks I received over 5,000 letters. They came from every State in the Union. It seems that the newspapers had reported the matter, not with too much play-up, but because here was something that the great American public, composed of men and women with hearts, was interested in the public response was spontaneous and terrific. I ask my colleagues to consult their files and if I am in error to correct me. At that period the mail from constituents supporting a housing program for the elderly was larger than the combined mail on all other subjects.

I had hoped for a select committee of the House exclusively to devote its attention to this phase of the housing problem. This hope was not realized, but there was created a housing subcommittee chairmaned by the distinguished and very able gentleman from Alabama [Mr. RAINS], who deserves the gratitude of the House and of the country for a work well done and on the pattern of a scholarly and unbiased inquiry and not that of provocative controversy, which makes a loud noise and dies out in the echo of its own shouting.

The Rains subcommittee, however, was charged with the large responsibility of covering the entire field of housing. This included all public housing, military housing, college housing, mortgaging, financing and the many, many programs and phases necessarily, because the very foundations of our national defense were threatened by the woeful lack of housing for the defenders of our country in the armed services, much more time and attention had to be given in the travels and conferences of the subcommittee to military housing than to housing for our senior citizens.

It is to the credit of Chairman RAINS and the subcommittee, and to the Banking and Currency Committee of the House, that in the bill reported out by the committee there are two programs for housing for the aged that if adopted would mark the greatest progress ever made by any country in providing for senior citizens the housing they have earned and deserve and that indeed would be the means of broadening for those on the western slope the horizons of life.

CLOSES DOOR ON THE AGED

In the Widnall substitute, the acceptance of which is to be forced upon us as a compromise, there is no provision whatsoever of any real validity for housing for the elderly. The Widnall substitute closes the door, and nails it tight, on all hope for a housing program in the 84th Congress for our senior citizens.

Mr. Chairman, I am speaking now to the country, to the 5,000 persons who wrote me in 2 weeks' time, to the countless thousands all over the country who have written to their respective Congressmen, to the ministers in the churches and the editors in newspaper sanctums and the men and women everywhere who will not rest until, for our elderly men and women, married and single, now woefully neglected and kicked about, this great rich Nation of ours has provided a housing program better than that of some tribes of the frozen North who, when age and winter came to their parents, sent them marching out in the night and the cold to perish. That way of solving the problem of housing for the aged, solution of the problem by the liquidation of the aged persons who create it, will never be accepted by the American people.

The Widnall substitute, which we are assured will be adopted as a compromise, gives the challenge to the American people. Come the 85th Congress, Mr. Chairman, and as sure as the day follows the night, there will be a select committee delegated to give its exclusive attention to housing for the elderly and from its studies pursued solely in this area will come legislation measuring to the expectations of the American people, attuned to the prayers of good people everywhere and abounding eternally to the credit and glory of the 85th Congress.

In failing to provide a housing program for the elderly, the 84th Congress will have missed the boat. I am utterly dumbfounded that those responsible for the drafting of the so-called compromise bill remembered everybody else and forgot only those who seem to have offended the drafters of this substitute by getting old.

Mr. Chairman, in my opinion the housing bill reported out by the Banking and Currency Committee and which largely was drafted by Chairman RAINS, the members and the staff of the subcommittee is the best housing bill that has been brought to the floor of this Chamber for a number of years. The best proof is that about 90 percent of the wordage in the substitute bill is almost a complete pick-up. The trouble is that in the 10 percent omitted is so much that the country could ill afford to lose. I wish, Mr. Chairman, to repeat that the Congress and the people of this country owe to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. RAINS] gratitude and appreciation. He has labored day and night on the task of perfecting a housing program meeting the needs of all our people and constructively promoting the best interest of the building industry. In its numerous public hearings, under the guidance of its great chairman, the subcommittee has kept steadily and faithfully on the study level. It has sought always facts and expression of honest opinions, never quarreling controversy. The cities that it has visited it has left with the respect of the public, the press and of all the witnesses who appeared before it. Too much credit cannot be given the professional staff, under the direction of John Barriere, which I feel has done one of the outstanding jobs in the history of congressional investigations.

HASTY ACTION ON HOUSING

Once again, as has been our custom for many years, we are taking hasty, last-minute action on housing—one of the principal mainstays of this Nation's economy. Usually we wait until the last possible moment and then go to conference for some kind of a compromise solution with the Senate.

Now we seem to be getting ready to vary that routine. We've managed to wait until the last minute again without too much trouble. But instead of preparing to compromise so that some kind of bill can get through the closing hours and we can all go home, we are considering action that can most easily lead to no housing program for the Nation at all.

This, I submit, would be disastrous to the people of this Nation and its economy. Why can't we debate this housing issue on its merits, and reach some conclusions openly?

It seems to me that it is high time we recognize that, as Charles Abrams put it in the recently published Housing Yearbook:

> We have reached the point in our urban civilization when we must think in terms of salvaging our cities, as we think of salvaging our farms.

From my personal observations, I find that more and more citizens in places of high responsibility are conscious of having arrived at that point. There is an increasing determination to meet the challenge presented.

At the same time it is recognized that the Federal Government holds the key to permanent solutions for urban complexities. Our cities alone can no longer grapple successfully with the problems involved. We have a responsibility to pass housing legislation that will permit the orderly and progressive renewal of the great urban centers of this country.

We have not, however, passed a housing program big enough to have any relationship whatsoever to proven needs since 1949. As for low-income families, it has taken the Federal program 22 years to build as many dwellings as private enterprise has built in 16 months. What is there in the record that causes this Congress to shy away from a modest public-housing program such as is contained in the proposals under consideration?

I believe that it is high time in this country to have a housing program geared to needs, which certainly include at least the 135,000 units of public housing a year that were contemplated when Congress passed the Housing Act of 1949. Let us stop this dilatory attitude on housing matters when the stakes are the decent, healthful, and happy lives of thousands of American citizens.

DISPLACED BUSINESS TENANTS

Mr. Chairman, I should like to turn to another aspect of the slum-clearance program. We must recognize that when large sections of a city are selected for razing and demolition, inevitably hardships are created. There are thousands of small-business enterprises of all types and descriptions who are forced to leave their present business site and their present following of customers. Hardest hit are the small-business tenants who receive no compensation under existing condemnation proceedings for the cost of moving to a new location and for other costs incurred by the dislocation of their business. The need to do equity to these displaced small businesses has at long last been recognized and H. R. 11742 would do two important things to help these small enterprises.

First, it would permit reimbursement for moving expenses and other losses of property—except goodwill—up to $5,000 for any one business.

Second, the bill would provide the Small Business Administration with $25 million to make loans, under liberal credit standards, to help small businesses to relocate. The loans would be at 4 percent interest and could extend for a term as long as 20 years. This provision, I am sorry to say, is not contained in the substitute bill (H. R. 12328).

CONCERNING SECTION 227

Mr. Chairman, I should now like to turn to a special problem arising from the cost certification requirement of section 227 of the National Housing Act. This problem was brought to my attention by the situation in the Hyde Park area of Chicago. Under present law and regulation, it appears that the cost certification requirement works inequitably when applied to the rehabilitation financing of existing structures to the point where the incentive on the part of the owner to improve such properties is almost nonexistent.

The effect of the existing law is to require a property owner to invest additional cash to finance improvements even where he has a substantial equity in the property. I realize that the original intent behind the language in section 227 with respect to rehabilitation financing was to prevent the use of section 207 or section 220 as a device for the owner to withdraw his equity with the proceeds of an FHA-insured loan. I am in general agreement with this objective but believe that section 227 as originally drafted went to far with respect to the rehabilitation of existing structures. It would seem quite desirable in my opinion to permit the owner to cover in full the costs of rehabilitation where he has a sizable equity in the property. It would seem especially desirable to provide additional incentive in view of the great emphasis now being placed upon the role which rehabilitation will play in the urban renewal program to fight the spread of blight.

In order to rectify this inequity with respect to existing construction, and to give additional incentive to rental property owners to improve their properties under sections 207 and 220, H. R. 11742 would amend section 227 to permit insured loans under these sections to cover the full cost of rehabilitation as well as the refinancing of any existing indebtedness provided that the total loan does not exceed the maximum percentage of value permitted by statute. Such a change would permit the owner in most cases to borrow the full cost of rehabilitation, but at the same time would not allow him to take out any of his equity in cash from the mortgage proceeds. While H. R. 12328 contains a comparable provision, I feel it is so restrictive as to afford almost no relief in this area.

HOUSING FOR THE AGED

Mr. Chairman, H. R. 11742 would authorize two important new programs designed to furnish housing relief to elderly families and elderly single persons.

I believe strongly that the case for Government support to the aged in the housing field has been profusely and convincingly demonstrated and that such support should be provided without further delay.

There is statistical and sociological evidence galore to emphasize the problem which results from the disparity between the cost of adequate housing and the ability of many older people to pay for it. For this reason the problem cannot be solved in my judgment without Government support.

The bill would attack the problem of housing for the elderly on several fronts with a combination of programs designed to give both public and private support.

Section 201 of the bill would provide a new program designed to give relief to elderly families and single persons by encouraging the rehabilitation and construction of low-cost housing by private nonprofit groups. The bill would set up in the Housing and Home Finance Agency a new loan program to provide low-cost financing on liberal terms to nonprofit corporations interested in building decent housing for the elderly. The new loan program is substantially similar to the college housing loan program which has been singularly successful and which has provided needed housing to our colleges and universities for housing and related facilities for students and faculty members.

The bill would provide for loans to nonprofit corporations at an interest rate not to exceed 3½ percent per annum and for a term up to 50 years. Loans could be made for the full amount of the project cost. A revolving fund of $250 million would be established from which the loans would be made.

PROHIBITIVE FINANCING COSTS

The Banking and Currency Committee considered the alternative proposal contained in H. R. 12328, the substitute bill being offered by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL] which would call for setting up a new program within the FHA for insured mortgage loans to provide financing for nonprofit corporations to build housing for the elderly. On the surface the proposal in H. R. 12328 would appear to have substantially the same objectives as the program called for in section 201 of the bill.

The basic flaw in the FHA-insured mortgage program proposed in H. R. 12328 is that it would impose prohibitive financing costs upon the sponsoring nonprofit corporation and would therefore defeat the very purpose sought, namely, to provide housing at a low cost to elderly families and persons. Under the mortgage insurance plan the interest would have to be at least 4¼ percent, which is the present rate for FHA rental housing, and when the one-half of 1 percent insurance premium payable to FHA is added, the results would be a gross financing cost to the corporation of at least 4¾ percent. Moreover, the maximum permissible loan term would probably be limited to 40 years which is the maximum term which FHA presently permits for all its multifamily housing operations. In contrast, the bill as reported by your committee would provide 50-year loans at a gross financing cost of 3½ percent.

The significance of these differences can easily be seen when translated in terms of comparative rentals. It is expected that the cost of the typical housing unit which would be built for elderly citizens under H. R. 11742 would be in the neighborhood of $7,000. The probable economic rent for such a unit would be at least $60 per month, if the insured mortgage device were to be employed. Under the program, contained under H. R. 11742, the economic rent for the same unit would be at least $10 per month less, thereby reducing the rent from $60 to $50 a month.

AID TO SPONSORING GROUPS

One of the special features of the bill in my opinion is the opportunity it will afford in many cases to sponsoring groups who will be willing to charge less than the economic rent to their elderly tenants. By subsidizing the difference between the rents to be charged and the economic rent, the sponsoring charitable, civic, fraternal, or other public-spirited nonprofit group, could offer dwelling units to elderly citizens at rent levels more in keeping with their ability to pay. Recognizing that the payment of such a subsidy would naturally place an economic burden on the funds of the sponsoring nonprofit organization, I believe that it is vital that financing be made available to such groups at the lowest possible cost and on the most liberal terms. In this way any rent subsidy which these groups may absorb could be kept to a minimum.

In order to meet the pressing needs of elderly families and persons in the lowest income groups, section 202 of the bill would authorize the construction of 10,000 low-rent public housing units annually for a 3-year period beginning July 1, 1956. The units to be constructed would be designed to meet the special needs of safety and convenience required by elderly persons. Both elderly families and elderly single persons would be eligible.

Frankly, I do not believe that section 202 is at all adequate. It had been my intention to offer an amendment to expand it along the lines of my bill, H. R. 3919, which would provide 250,000 units of public housing for the elderly at the rate of 50,000 units per year over a 5-year period. Unfortunately, the gag rule under which we are operating does not make this possible.

Mr. Chairman, I hope that this committee will vote down the Widnall bill, H. R. 12328, and then approve the Spence bill, H. R. 11742.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. WIDNALL].

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, frankly I did not expect to be in this position several weeks ago when the Spence bill had been reported out of committee and was in the hands of the Rules Committee. The bill I have offered should provide a background for compromising vast differences in opinion with respect to the many phases of our housing law. It takes the best out of the Spence bill, the administration bill, and some out of the Senate bill, phases of the housing law on which there is substantial agreement as to continuance, agreement as to enlargement of the program, and agreement as to betterment of the program.

I would like to pay special tribute to my colleague, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. RAINS], who has worked so hard as chairman of the Subcommittee on Housing, together with the other members of the subcommittee. He has a thorough knowledge of housing and has specialized in this field for years. The Rains housing subcommittee labored for long hours throughout the year hearing testimony throughout the country as to the needs of the people.

In the original Spence bill there are items with which I was personally in disagreement. It was the result of the work of the committee as supported by a majority of the committee, but we found this impasse before the Rules Committee, and we all knew that the only way we could get housing legislation in this session of the Congress was by some form of compromise. The Senate was unwilling to reconsider its bill. The Committee on Banking and Currency of the House was unwilling to reconsider its bill, so that a compromise seemed to be the only thing in order.

My primary interest since I have been a Member of Congress has been to help provide for the orderly development of our housing program. With a view toward breaking the log jam and in an effort to provide a bill acceptable to the House, last Friday I offered a substitute bill. I know that some have objected to what they term a gag rule, but this rule would not have been requested if it were not felt by many that it was the only way in which a housing program could be provided this year, that would be accepted by the Congress.

It seems to me that in the past too much emphasis has been placed on public housing in the overall housing program for the United States. In past years we have had 1,300,000 to 1,500,000 starts, and only a small portion, 35,000 or 45,000 units per year have been in public housing. To read some of the great metropolitan dailies you would think the entire housing program in America consisted of public housing, and that the whole program would rise or fall in accordance with final disposition. I have personally contended that there should be some public housing in any bill, until it was proven that private industry could provide decent housing, with modern sanitary facilities, for the low-income group. I know there are many who sincerely, over the years, have opposed any public-housing program because of the conviction that it had no place in our country.

You will recall that the distinguished Senator, Robert A. Taft, respected for his sound approach toward government, was convinced that at least 10 percent of the housing starts in any one year should be devoted to public housing. Since so much attention is focused on the public housing feature of the full housing program I want specifically to call your attention to the fact that in the substitute bill offered by me there are 35,000 starts in each of 2 years for a total of 70,000. This is in contrast to the program offered in the Spence bill where there would be 60,000 starts in each year for a 3-year period with 10,000 units to be set aside each year for housing for the elderly.

The Senate bill would provide 135,000 units until the authorization was exhausted, which would mean a program over 4 years of 135,000 units per year.

You should understand that in the bill that has been offered by me there is a requirement for what is called a workable program, that is a program for the eradication and elimination of slums. I feel there has been a good deal of misunderstanding with respect to that program. It is my belief that this should be a prerequisite for Federal aid to public housing just as it is a requirement for Federal aid to urban renewal, FHA mortgage extension and the urban renewal housing.

Mr. FISHER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a little clarification at that point?

Mr. WIDNALL. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. FISHER. The gentleman's substitute includes what I think is a very attractive feature regarding the requirement for workable plans in a community before they can be eligible for public housing. As I understand, it was in the legislation that became law in 1954, not only that one but another requirement, and that was the administration's program; but it was not in the bill last year. Mr. Cole made a statement last year on that point. I want to ask the gentleman why it was not also included. He said, and I am quoting:

> Cities develop approved programs of urban renewal prior to participation in Federal public housing aid.
> Public housing be made available only to families displaced by slum clearance projects.

In a letter which was read into the RECORD, volume 101, part 10, page 12982, during consideration of the conference report—the gentleman remembers that, I am sure—the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN] read a letter which was sent up to him that day by Mr. Cole, the Administrator, in which he reiterated that position. I have the quotation here from it.

Now, will the gentleman explain just for our information why that provision which has been part of the administration's program heretofore was left out in the gentleman's substitute?

Mr. WIDNALL. I cannot speak for Mr. Cole on that because I do not have any statement from him, but it is my understanding that they found that in the development of the public housing program it tied it down too much, tied it down unreasonably in execution. There are also some States that could not qualify because of limitation by the constitutions of those States.

Mr. FISHER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further on that point?

Mr. WIDNALL. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. FISHER. Some of us would like to know the administration's point of view with regard to that. That requirement was written into the law in 1954, as the gentleman recalls.

Mr. WIDNALL. That is right.

Mr. FISHER. Last year a change was made in conference. It had worked apparently fairly well, and so far as I know Mr. Cole has not retracted that viewpoint. Does the gentleman know if he has? Or has it come to his attention?

Mr. WIDNALL. The "workable plan" is currently being applied to urban renewal projects but it is not applied to public housing. It was taken out of the law last year.

Mr. FISHER. I am referring at the moment to displaced persons, so to speak, those displaced by slum clearance projects being the ones who would occupy a project. Has the gentleman heard anything from Mr. COLE to the effect he does not insist on the viewpoint it should be written into the law? That was his viewpoint last year.

Mr. WIDNALL. Personally, I have not heard that. The provisions of this bill as far as public housing is concerned meet with his approval.

Mr. FISHER. The gentleman says he believes that. He says he has not heard from him. Is that an assumption on the part of the gentleman? That is what I want to find out. Has Mr. COLE told the gentleman that?

Mr. WIDNALL. I have been told that by people in his department.

Mr. FISHER. Has the gentleman talked to Mr. COLE about that himself?

Mr. WIDNALL. I have not personally talked with him about that.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIDNALL. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I think I can throw some light on this matter. I talked to Mr. Cole and much to my disappointment Mr. Cole is now of the opinion that he wants these 35,000 with a workable program only.

Mr. FISHER. I wanted that clarified and I think it should be clarified.

Mr. VANIK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIDNALL. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. VANIK. A few moments ago the gentleman from Michigan made the statement that there was an abundance of public housing units in the pipeline. Is the gentleman aware of the statement that was made by Mr. Slusser, Public Housing Commissioner, in which he said on July 19:

> That to the best of our knowledge we should be able to contract for between 40 and 45 thousand units by July 31. At the present time that is our expectation based on reports to this office from our regional offices which are dealing with several hundred local housing authorities.

If that is true, it would indicate that there are no units available. Will the gentleman comment on that?

Mr. WIDNALL. I have in my possession a press release made on July 23 by Public Housing Commissioner Slusser in which he said:

> I am confident that the PHA will be able to place under annual contributions contract by July 31 substantially all of the 45,000 units authorized by Congress.

That would mean practically all would be used up.

Mr. VANIK. How does the gentleman reconcile that with the statement made by the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. WIDNALL. Personally, I cannot reconcile the two statements.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIDNALL. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Up to the present time of that 45,000 they have only entered into contracts for new annual contributions for 4,371. Then he went on further and said it was expected before July 31 that they would get another 15,000, I believe he said. So that by July 31 they would have contracted for a a little over 20,000 of the total of 45,000 units. So there will still be 22,500 left.

Mr. VANIK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIDNALL. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. VANIK. If what the gentleman from Michigan says is correct, then there are no more units that will be available, according to Mr. Slusser. Is that not a proper observation of the statement made by both the newspaper statement and the letter addressed to members of the committee?

Mr. WOLCOTT. The gentleman loses sight of the fact that was a 2-year program. The 45,000 will continue for another year.

Mr. VANIK. Is that not only a 1-year program?

Mr. WIDNALL. I believe that contractual authority expires on July 31.

Mr. VANIK. On July 31 of this year.

Mr. WIDNALL. Without any further authorization.

Some reference has been made to lack of anything in this bill for the housing of elderly people. I want to specifically call your attention to three phases of the bill which would help the elderly.

Section 203 of the National Housing Act would be amended to provide that in the case of the purchase of a home by a person 60 years of age or older, the downpayment may be made by a person other than the mortgagor. This provision will benefit many who while having an assured income over the years have not been able to amass an amount sufficient to make the downpayment.

Section 207 of the National Housing Act is concerned with mortgages insured by FHA on rental housing. My bill intends to amend this section so that nonprofit organizations wishing to construct rental units exclusively for elderly persons or their families may have the advantage of an increased loan ratio. My bill provides for mortgage insurance based upon 90 percent of replacement cost in these instances as compared to a further proposal in the bill to increase from 80 percent to 90 percent of value the mortgage-insurance authorization in all other rental housing. It is further provided that the maximum mortgage amount per unit, in units assigned and designed for the elderly, may be $8,100. Church, fraternal, and labor groups have all indicated intense interest in sponsoring rental housing designed exclusively for the elderly. This will make it possible for them to construct that housing.

Three changes are proposed in the public housing section, and I would like to particularly call this to the attention of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. O'HARA]. Extra costs for specially designed public housing for the elderly are authorized. Priorities are established for admission of elderly families to public-housing units, and single persons over 65 will be permitted to occupy public housing, so that in the construction of 35,000 units in any year under my bill, it will be possible for elderly families to obtain quarters in public housing which is exactly what they could have secured under the 10,000 units specifically assigned in the Spence bill. And there are many people who believe that it is unwise to try to set up a program for the future in America to have segregated housing for the elderly.

Mr. O'HARA of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIDNALL. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. O'HARA of Illinois. I wonder if the gentleman ever heard the story of the man who wanted his horse to run. He got a fishpole and he put an ear of corn at the end of the fishpole, just out of reach of the horse. The horse ran faster and faster to catch up with the corn, but it was all rigged to give the horse an expectancy but no chance of realizing the expectancy because, as the fishpole was attached to the buggy, it moved forward just as fast as the horse. Now, does the gentleman not think that his treatment of this very serious problem of housing for the aged is somewhat on the pattern of that corn at the end of the fishpole?

Mr. WIDNALL. No; I do not agree with the statement of the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. O'HARA of Illinois. Then, can the gentleman show one substantial thing that he has in his bill that would help these elderly people?

Mr. WIDNALL. The second provision that I spoke of, which would permit the financing of special housing for the elderly by nonprofit organizations, and there are many throughout the length and breadth of America that have evidenced interest in that type of FHA insurance.

Mr. O'HARA of Illinois. Does the gentleman think that that begins to compare with the provisions in the Rains bill?

Mr. WIDNALL. I do, because I believe it is the way the majority of the people of America would want it handled and not by outright grants from the Government through a direct public-housing program especially designed for the elderly.

Mr. O'HARA of Illinois. Does the gentleman maintain that the majority of the American people wish to give the minimum to our senior citizens?

Mr. WIDNALL. I did not say that.

Mr. OLIVER P. BOLTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIDNALL. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. OLIVER P. BOLTON. I want to compliment the gentleman on the job he has done in putting this bill together. With specific reference to public housing for the aged, is this a requirement, or is it a permissive part of the bill? Am I correct in saying it is permissive?

Mr. WIDNALL. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. OLIVER P. BOLTON. And therefore under the provisions of the public-housing statute in this bill those units which are built for elderly citizens, for our senior citizens, would have to be in accordance with the local plan; is that not correct?

Mr. WIDNALL. That is true.

Mr. OLIVER P. BOLTON. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIDNALL. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. WOLCOTT. I have been asked by some of the Members to clear up a situation that develops in the use to which special housing may be used. In the 1954 act we have this provision in section 513 which says:

> The Congress hereby declares that it has been its intent since the enactment of the National Housing Act that housing built with the aid of mortgages insured under this act is to be used principally for residential use, and that this intent excludes the use of such housing for transient or hotel purposes while such insurance on the mortgage remains outstanding.

It is my understanding, and I should like the gentleman to confirm it if he is of that opinion, that his substitute does not by implication or otherwise repeal or amend any of those provisions of the 1954 act which I have read.

Mr. WIDNALL. I do not believe that my substitute in any way affects or repeals the provisions the gentleman has just read. I believe that is a permanent part of the law.

Mr. SCHENCK. Mr. Chairman, would the gentleman yield?

Mr. WIDNALL. I yield.

Mr. SCHENCK. Mr. Chairman, I should like to commend the gentleman for the fine work he has done in the interest of FHA and other mortgage insurance programs. My questions are to that phase of this situation. It is my understanding that because of the interest rate situation at the present time money for FHA mortgages is quite scarce, particularly on mortgages of 30 years' duration and 5-percent downpayment. I am wondering if the gentleman can give us any information as to what mortgage money will be available or is available or what this Congress can do about it.

Mr. WIDNALL. I believe that under the Fannie Mae provisions in this act it is possible and will be possible to loosen up the market, that there is a liberalization of the use of Fannie Mae and it should materially affect the mortgage market. All the information I have received recently has been to the effect that mortgage funds are flowing better than they did several months ago.

Mr. SCHENCK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. WIDNALL. I yield.

Mr. SCHENCK. It is my information that FHA mortgages are being discounted as much as 5 percent and 6 percent. When a purchaser is buying a home and has to pay a 5 percent or 6 percent discount on the mortgage, that represents a very serious situation.

Mr. WIDNALL. That is true, and that has existed in several sections of the country. It is my hope that through provisions in this bill we are going to get a better flow of mortgage credit. There was a period when many of the lending institutions became loaded up with mortgages and stopped lending. I think they have reached the point where they are going back into the market again.

Mr. SCHENCK. May I say to the gentleman that the building of homes is a tremendously important part of our entire national economy. It includes not only the labor going into the building of the homes, but includes the labor going into the manufacture of all the equipment and the material that goes into the home. So building 1,300,000 homes in a year is a very definite part of our national economy. I would hope that the gentleman's committee would do everything it could to encourage the proper development of home building so long as that development can be justified by the demand of people for housing.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. ADDONIZIO].

Mr. ADDONIZIO. Mr. Chairman, H. R. 11742—the Housing Act of 1956—is a product of months of study and hard work. I am proud to be a member of the special Subcommittee on Housing, whose extensive hearings and reports formed the basis for much of the substance in the bill.

The bill is not a limited purpose of legislation designed to meet 1 or 2 phases of our housing need. Rather, it is a general omnibus housing bill with many worthwhile features which attempt to help all areas of the housing needs of our people. It proposes to do this by introducing new programs and by perfecting existing housing programs.

One section in the bill is designed to prop up our home-building industry which is one of the disturbing soft spots in our economy. Additional stimulus would be furnished by liberalizing the secondary-market support to GI and FHA loans supplied by the Federal National Mortgage Association. For example, the bill would authorize FNMA to issue advance commitments under certain conditions which would help provide much-needed production credit support for builders in many parts of the country. It would also provide additional funds for FNMA's special-assistance program which supports especially deserving housing programs such as cooperative housing, housing for disaster victims, and housing produced in connection with slum-clearance operations.

Another section of the bill recognizes the serious and persistent problem facing our low-income groups. Despite the huge strides in efficiency and productivity which the home-building industry has made in recent years, the plain fact remains that our lowest income groups cannot afford decent, safe, and sanitary private housing. The only answer to the housing needs of our lowest income families is low-rent public housing, which, through Government subsidy, permits rents which these families can pay.

To help meet the housing needs of these low-income families, the bill would provide for the production of 50,000 low-rent public-housing units each year for a 3-year period, a total of 150,000 additional units. Personally, I would have preferred to see the bill contain a larger public-housing program. Certainly a 50,000 unit annual total should be a rock-bottom minimum. Also, at long last, the bill proposes to do something real and tangible to meet the housing needs of elderly families and elderly single persons. The bill would provide housing relief to the elderly in several ways.

First, for those elderly families and single persons in the very low income groups, the bill would provide for 10,000 low-rent, public-housing units for 4 years, specifically for elderly families and single persons 65 years or over. This 10,000 units a year quota would be in addition to the 50,000 units a year the bill authorizes for the regular public-housing program.

Under present law, elderly single persons are not eligible for the regular public-housing program. The bill would eliminate this discrimination against elderly single persons and make them eligible for occupancy in public housing units.

The bill also provides an entirely new program designed to provide decent private housing at modest rentals for elderly families and single persons. It would set up a special loan fund in the Housing Agency to make loans to nonprofit, charitable corporations desiring to build housing for the elderly. By making the financing available at a low interest cost—3½ percent per annum for a long maturity—up to 50 years—the bill would permit these nonprofit corporations to provide good quality housing to elderly tenants at much lower rentals than would otherwise be possible.

Another section of the bill would make it easier for elderly folks to buy homes under the regular FHA program. Quite often the elderly family will have sufficient income to buy a home under the FHA program, but may not be able to meet the downpayment requirement without hardship. The bill would make it possible for another individual to supply the required downpayment.

Of special interest to urban communities are provisions in the bill designed to speed up the national program of slum clearance and urban renewal. In our hearings throughout the country, our subcommittee found that vitally needed slum clearance and urban renewal operations were too often bogged down in a maze of Government red tape and buck passing. It is my belief that passage of this bill will do a great deal to get more momentum into the slum clearance and urban renewal programs.

One of the knottiest problems is that of relocating the families who are forced to move. Since many of these families are in the lowest income groups, the need for additional low-rent public housing units to house such families is urgent. But in addition, we must find means of housing families whose incomes are too high to qualify them for public housing. The bill would expand or liberalize the FHA section 221 program which was originally provided to build sales and rental housing for families displaced by slum clearance and urban renewal operations.

So far, however, the section 221 program has been pretty much a dead letter with practically zero units at all being built. To make the relocation housing insurance program really work, the bill would provide higher mortgage amounts more realistically in tune with the high construction costs in metropolitan centers. It would also make home purchase much easier for displaced families by permitting them to buy with no downpayment. Under the bill they would be required to pay only $200 in cash to cover closing costs. Also, to permit lower monthly mortgage payments, the bill would extend the maximum repayment term from 30 to 40 years.

The bill would also do something to meet the crying need for rental housing at moderate rents in urban centers. It would liberalize the loan provisions for the two important FHA rental housing insurance programs. It would stimulate the production of section 220 rental housing which can be built in areas cleared of slums. It would also provide further incentive to sponsors to build section 207 rental housing projects in other parts of the city.

FHA's cooperative housing program under section 213 would also be given a boost by the bill. Cooperative housing offers great promise for producing modest cost housing, particularly in our larger cities, and I am hopeful that provisions of the bill will step up the production of this much needed housing.

The bill would also provide assistance to other important housing needs. For example, it would provide additional funds for loans to colleges and universities to build the housing acutely needed to cope with the ever mounting student enrollment.

The bill would not neglect the housing needs of farmers. It would provide a 5-year loan program to help eliminate substandard farm housing.

The housing needs of our military forces are given special attention in the bill. The armed services so vital to national security cannot maintain the morale and efficiency of our soldiers, sailors and airmen unless decent and adequate housing can be made available to them and their families. The bill would expand the scope of the military housing program and would make it possible for the military services to provide better quality rental housing for military and key civilian personnel.

Mr. Chairman, I think H. R. 11742 is a "must." It will help keep our housing industry rolling in high gear. And it will go far toward meeting the many special housing needs of the American people. I deeply hope that it will become law this year.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FISHER].

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, if it is agreeable to the gentleman from Kentucky, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. FISHER. Mr. Chairman, I shall vote against the committee bill and I shall vote against the substitute if it is adopted. I am sure the substitute is an improvement after a fashion on the committee bill. It reduces public housing a great deal, down to 35,000 per year for 2 years.

I am opposed to the principle of public housing. It has been said that the late and lamented Senator Taft envisioned and supported this great program. I made a study of some of the speeches he made in support of his position. I think he was a man of considerable statesmanship. If you will go back into those speeches you will see that he always envisioned it as a welfare program when he spoke about public housing, not a socialized program but a welfare program. The idea was that public housing to be justified under our existing free enterprise system should be confined purely to welfare purposes. When it got beyond that it would become socialism and therefore very objectionable, when it got beyond just admitting poor people, unfortunate people, the charity-case level of public assistance. But it has long since passed that stage, as you will find if you study public housing as it has operated in this country.

Not long ago I was reading a story which I could multiply many times, but it illustrates the point. This is from a press report. It stated that the Reverend F. Raymond Baker, Wilmington, Del., Housing Authority, protested increasing up to $4,800 the income that people could have and still be eligible to live in the public housing units up there, that you and I have to pay for for them to live in.

> I have been a member of the Wilmington Housing Authority, and during that time I have been interested in, first, housing for low-income families, and second, keeping the professionals from going too far with public housing.

Then he said:

> This increase that was proposed to $4,800 for a person to still be eligible to have the taxpayers help pay the rent marked the end of public housing for welfare and begins public housing as socialism.

That illustrates the point I am making.

Last year or the year before I offered an amendment which would limit this thing to low-income people. Of course the public housing people hit the ceiling when you do that. They want no part of it. That is demonstrated by the fact that no longer are they willing to hold it down to slum clearance. In the old days to justify this and make it sound innocuous and good, they said, "We have to have a place to put these unfortunate people who are pushed out on the streets when a slum is torn down." That makes sense, so we wrote it into the law in 1954, and we continued it for a year. But since the public housing program has long since passed the low-income stage for tenants, a mass of opposition developed to confining projects to occupancy by low-income people and refugees from slums that are torn down. The professional public housers in opposing the law to restrict occupancy of new projects to displaced slum dwellers, had to show their hands. They no longer make any bones about it. There is no longer any direct relationship at all between slum clearance and public housing as we know it today.

Public housing is now patterned to fit higher income people. Even middle income tenants are no longer a novelty. Yet you and I and every American taxpayer must foot the bill and help pay the rent bills for those people who manage to get themselves entrenched in a public housing unit where the rent is nominal, or in any event less than half of what the units would rent for if rented by private enterprise. So far as slum clearance is concerned, Mr. Chairman, I am informed, and I think correctly, that no more than 20 percent of present occupants of public housing units in this country moved there directly from a dismantled slum tenement. Actually the percentage is probably less than 20 percent.

In the old days when Senator Taft talked about this, he always associated it with slum clearance. But, that is no longer the case. That distinction should be made. A lot of people are falling back on what Senator Taft said. You had better study what he said before you attempt to rely on that as an excuse for going along with this socialization long after it has passed the stage that Senator Taft talked about in his defense and justification of the program. This House has expressed itself in opposition to a continuation of socialized housing repeatedly the past few years. The Members hear from home. They are close to the people, and that accounts for this continuous opposition. All public housing would have been stopped 5 years ago if the other body had not persisted in keeping it going. Let me just for the record give you a few figures on how the House has reacted to this thing in the past few years. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HALLECK] said that he is opposed to public housing, but that it is just a matter of stopping it gradually and getting a good stopping point. We have been trying to find a stopping place to the thing ever since it was authorized by a 5 vote margin here in 1949, after one of the most pressurized lobbying activities in the history of this Congress that got it adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. FISHER. Let us just read this. It is kind of interesting, I think in passing.

In 1951, the House by a vote of 181 to 113 said let us have only 5,000 units.

In 1952, the House by a vote of 192 to 168 said let us have only 5,000 units.

In 1953, by a vote of 245 to 157, the House said let us have none—let us stop it now.

In 1954, by a vote of 211 to 176, the House said let us stop it all now.

In 1955, in the vote on the Wolcott substitute, you recall, by a vote of 217 to 188, the House said, let us cut it all out.

And the gentleman from Indiana says, let us try to find a good stopping place. We have been told that for the last 5 years. Now is the time it will die a natural death—it is a dead duck unless we revive it here today. I, for one, am quite satisfied with the explanation that the distinguished gentleman from Michigan [Mr. WOLCOTT] made when he said that we can go along very well without any housing bill being passed. He documented the reasons why that is true. The program will not suffer.

In respect to military housing, I understand that in the other body a simple resolution has been introduced which would continue the military part of it. Do not worry about it, that will be taken care of. The defense of this country is not going to suffer if this bill is defeated today. So why do you not stand up and vote the whole thing down. We will get along. We will save the taxpayers many billions of dollars too while we are doing it.

We are in as good a position to discontinue this experiment in socialism now as we will be a year from now. The time is ripe. The appropriation committee has repeatedly denounced it in recent years. I happen to have in my hand right now a report on the independent offices appropriation bill, 1954, dated April 17, 1953, and here is what that committee said about public housing then:

> The orginal budget estimates, in carrying out the provisions of the Housing Act of 1949 for the fiscar year 1954, proposed 75,000 dwelling units. The committee is of the opinion that continuation of this program is not justified and is not in accord with the program for economy and a balanced budget.

I am fully aware of the fact that the machinery is greased for the substitute to sail through this body today, and I am sure the substitute will be adopted. The substitute is certainly a vast improvement over the committee bill. I hardly see how anyone could vote for that measure, calling for 180,000 new units with no restrictions of any kind. How anyone could face the folks back home after voting for that bill is too much to believe. So the substitute offered by Mr. WIDNALL is a vast improvement because it does contain the working agreement requirement and reduces the number of new units authorized. But it is still socialized housing and a little pregnancy is, after all, about as bad as a greater amount.

Mr. SCHENCK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISHER. I yield.

Mr. SCHENCK. Does the gentleman have any figures on the cost per unit to construct a public housing unit?

Mr. FISHER. If I can get 1 or 2 additional minutes, I would just like to read that into the RECORD too. I have it right here fresh.

Mr. SCHENCK. Is it approximately $12,000 a year?

Mr. FISHER. Oh, it is a lot more than that. Let me give it to you. Well, the average initial cost runs around $12,000—that is correct. But, that tells a small part of the story.

Mr. SCHENCK. Now $12,000 times 35,000 units would amount to about $420 million in a year plus all the interest in addition to that.

Mr. FISHER. But listen to this. I will try to run through this just as fast as I can. I wish the Members could understand this. It is absolutely amazing—I assure you, it is absolutely amazing.

The Federal subsidy runs approximately 200 percent over the development cost. That is in the hearings. If you want authority for that, read page 1217 of the hearings of the Independent Offices appropriation for 1957. That is all you need to do. It runs roughly 200 percent of the development cost. That would be $24,000, you see, because the initial cost is $12,000. So over a 40-year period, actually the Government is paying in the form of subsidy about $24,000 for each of these units that is built. If you take the original bill which is before us here, where I make my computations— 180,000 units times $24,000 equals $4,320,000,000 over the life of the project for 40 years. Of course, the Widnall substitute calls for less than half as many housing units as does the Spence bill, the committee bill. Therefore the total cost would have to be computed from that, assuming that the substitute is adopted.

Mr. SCHENCK. Does the gentleman mean $24,000 per family unit?

Mr. FISHER. That is correct and that is over the 40-year period. That is the subsidy that the Federal Government pays on each of these things that is built.

Let us see if we can follow through on just one more point. I am glad the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SCHENCK] inquired about cost features. The gentleman believes in sound economy in the spending of the taxpayers' money.

Mr. SCHENCK. Is the gentleman taking from that figure any rental that is received?

Mr. FISHER. No, I am not. Of course, the gentleman understands that none of that rental goes back to the Treasury nor in payment on the bonds which were sold to pay for the project. That is used in the maintenance and operation and the buying of television sets and mowing the lawn for the tenants because the tenants would certainly not want to get out and mow the lawns in these public housing projects. All of that service is furnished, at taxpayers' expense, and more besides. None—or certainly practically none—of the rentals collected on these projects goes into the original cost of the construction or into reducing the annual Federal subsidy to pay on the bonds that have been sold. Rental money is used locally for various purposes. It is used for upkeep, for housekeeping of the premises, for refrigerators, perhaps TV sets, if the local housing authority elects, and things of that kind.

Mr. HIESTAND. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FISHER. I yield.

Mr. HIESTAND. The subsidy referred to is cost less rent?

Mr. FISHER. That is correct. Of course, if any rent goes into a reduction of the subsidy for the project then the project is not operating as it should. Public housing is supposed to be for low-income people who pay low rentals, and there is supposed to be no profit flowing from such an arrangement.

A few moments ago I gave you the totals on the cost of the proposed 180,000 new units which would be authorized under the committee bill. That does not tell the entire story, not by any means. Let me carry it a little further. In addition to the Federal subsidy which I have described, there is a tax windfall. That results from the tax-free bonds that are sold to pay for the construction cost of public housing projects. Those are the only Government bonds today that enjoy that advantage. And there is, of course, a ready market for them. A 2-percent yield on one of these tax-exempt bonds is the equivalent of a yield of 13.33 percent on a taxable bond held by an individual in the $80,000 to $90,000 individual income-tax bracket.

Now, you may ask where I got my figures on the amount of this windfall, in terms of cost to our taxpayers because of loss in revenue from the fact the bonds are tax-exempt. I get it from the report of the President's Advisory Committee on Housing. At page 314 of that report is found this language:

> It is estimated that for units completed under the Housing Act of 1949 the average tax loss (on tax-exempt bonds) will be about $4.90 per unit per month.

Let us do some computing. The $4.90 times 40 years equals $2,352 per unit. And that amount times 180,000 units equals $423,360,000.

Let us go even further in tracing the fantastic cost of this program. According to the Housing and Home Finance Agency the value of the contribution which local communities make by foregoing full ad valorem taxes on the projects occupied by these tenants, less in-lieu payments which are received from the Government, will approximate 50 percent of the Federal contributions over the life of the projects.

That, you can see, is no small item. We have already seen that the Federal subsidy per unit totals $24,000. Well, one-half of that would be $12,000, and $12,000 times 180,000 units equals $2,160,000,000. You see, no tax is collected by local communities from these projects. That is one of the conditions they must agree to before the project is built—that for 40 years not a dime of local taxes will be paid. In addition, streets, sewers, perhaps garbage collection, schools, police protection, and a multitude of other services are made available at the expense of local people and without any cost whatever to the occupants of these socialized projects.

There is one other cost item that should be mentioned. I refer to the administrative cost for handling public housing. That presently runs about $10 million annually. For 40 years that would total $400 million.

Now, when you add all of these cost items—the annual Federal subsidy, the tax windfall that is lost, the net loss in local taxes, and the administrative cost—all over the 40-year life of the projects, for the 180,000 units called for in the pending committee bill, the cost would total $6,880,423,360. You can see it runs into billions.

Already, Mr. Chairman, we have upwards of a half million public housing units in this country. That means we have nearly one-half million families who are wards of the Government so far as housing is concerned. Very few of those came in as displaced slum project tenants. In fact, a large number of them make more money each month than do many people who help pay their rent bills each month. Can you imagine it? How long is this sort of thing going to be tolerated?

I am informed that in Detroit families making as much as $3,800 annually may be eligible to move into a public housing project, and may remain if the income goes up to $4,500. A news report says in Dayton some such tenants earn as much as $5,800. And these reports can be multiplied all over the country. That, Mr. Chairman, is not public welfare. That is not charity. It is socialism because it is not applied to people who are in the public welfare category.

There is more reason, as I see it, why the Government would be justified in helping pay a man's grocery bill, or his medical bill, than his rent bill. Perhaps that will be the next step—not only to pay part of the rent bill each month, but also part of the medical bill, the dental bill, the grocery bill. Just where is this thing going to stop?

Mr. CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. FISHER] has expired.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VANIK].

Mr. VANIK. Mr. Chairman, I want to take this opportunity to urge the adoption of the Housing Act of 1956, as set forth in H. R. 11742.

This spring the House Banking and Currency Housing Subcommittee, under the chairmanship of the Honorable ALBERT RAINS conducted a hearing in Cleveland, Ohio, in which it was brought out that low FHA appraisals and the tight money markets have forced many people into acquiring homes under land contracts and other high-cost devices. In some cases the funds were obtained through second, third or fourth mortgages at discount rates up to 10 percent. It was pointed out that in the Cleveland hearings that money was limited for new construction, and practically unavailable for the purchase of older homes with reasonable downpayments. The purchase of homes under these difficult conditions forced the purchasers to divide them up and sublet them contrary to the zoning laws in order to make current mortgage payments.

It was further pointed out in the Cleveland hearings that the lack of financing for the older residences and the high cost of such financing was creating a wide scale of breakdown of zoning and residential requirements resulting in the creation of new slums much more rapidly than slum clearance could correct the situation.

In Cleveland, as a result of an extensive slum clearance and redevelopment program, thousands of families will have to be relocated. In addition the city is constructing an inner belt highway system which will necessitate the relocation of 900 additional families. On the aggregate 18,000 families will eventually be displaced, of which 3,600 are estimated to be eligible for public housing. Thus in addition to the present supply there is an immediate urgent need in my city for 3,600 public housing units.

Cleveland has uniquely lead the Nation in the development of facilities for senior citizens whom we term as "golden agers." We have constructed a public housing project designed for senior citizens with special facilities for their comfort and for possible infirmities.

I hope that the committee bill will be supported because for the first time provision is made for the construction of special housing facilities for senior citizens, the number of which is increasing in every community in America. In the Nation the population of 65 years and over has grown from 3 million in 1900 to an estimated 15,400,000 in 1960. In the decade 1940 to 1950 the national increase of citizens of 65 and over increased at the rate of 36 percent.

In my community the median income of heads of households of 65 years and over is $2,595 for homeowners, $1,675 for rentals. These people are generally not able to purchase a home under existing laws and there is a tremendous need on the part of these older persons for good low-cost housing. In my community, as well as in most urban districts in this country, there are insufficient rental units available within the economical means of senior citizens and but few of these have been designed for the use of senior citizens.

The legislation submitted by Mr. WIDNALL as a substitute for this bill makes no adequate provision for housing for an important segment of our population. America must be mature enough to recognize its obligation to those citizens who are caught in the squeeze of low income, low pensions, and rising costs of living which constantly widen the gap.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 3 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, as chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, I want to express my appreciation for the splendid work that Mr. RAINS and his subcommittee has done in reporting the housing bill. After long labor, great consideration, and much traveling, the committee reported a bill which deserves to be considered under an open rule by this House. This body has been called the greatest deliberative body in the world, and yet by a rule its mental operations have been shackled. A padlock has been capped on the minds of its Members. We still have the right to deliberate but the right to decide is very limited.

Speech in the House is often futile, but under the circumstances it is more futile than usual. You have the right under the rule to decide whether you will take the bill or the amendment. I am going to vote against the amendment. If the amendment is voted down, I am going to vote for the bill reported by the committee.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VORYS].

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, I voted for the Colmer amendment to the gag rule on this bill. There was a mixup about that amendment which, by its terms, would have permitted a separate vote on public housing. I voted for the amendment, because I am against gag rules and against public housing. If the amendment had been adopted, I think we could have eliminated public housing from this bill. Some disagree. In any case, since the Colmer amendment lost, and this bill therefore comes up on a gag rule, with no opportunity for any amendments, I will vote to substitute the Widnall bill, because it contains less public housing, and requires each locality to provide a workable program for low-rent housing. My community can meet that test. Every community should be forced to meet it.

Other parts of the Widnall bill will provide and improve housing, and the conservation and development of urban communities in many ways. For instance, the bill provides property-improvement loans, housing for the elderly, college housing, military housing, slum clearance, and urban renewal, all of which I support. I think the whole program could be improved if we were permitted to go through it and consider amendments, as we usually do, but this is impossible. Therefore, while all of this detailed discussion and debate is interesting, it is rather futile. While there are things in both bills that I would like to support and others I would like to change, I will support the general administration program as contained in the Widnall substitute bill.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CURTIS].

Mr. CURTIS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this legislation.

It is my privilege to represent an urban district where there is a great deal of interest in public housing and in other housing measures. I was impressed by the statement of the gentleman from New Jersey that this public housing provision is overemphasized in the public mind; that it is in fact but a small part of the legislation now before the House. But, Mr. Chairman, we have a peculiar parliamentary situation here today and I would like to direct a question to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan, ranking minority member of the committee.

Assuming that a Member of this House wants to support a liberal bill for public housing, under the present parliamentary situation would that best be accomplished by voting for the House bill or for the substitute offered by the gentleman from New Jersey, Mr. WIDNALL?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I would say very frankly to the gentleman that the administration is very much opposed to the public housing provisions of the House bill. It is very much in favor of the provisions of the so-called Widnall bill which will be offered, I assume, as a substitute.

The Widnall bill provides for 35,000 public housing units, and is not only sanctioned but is recommended by the administration, and under the situation, it probably is the only public housing that could possibly under the rules be adopted.

So I would say to the gentleman that if he voted for the Widnall substitute, he would best be assured that there would be favorable action for 35,000 units, or, as a matter of fact, 70,000—35,000 each for 2 years; and under this procedure it is the only possibility by which we can be sure of any public housing.

Mr. CURTIS of Massachusetts. One further question: Would the gentleman's answer be the same in regard to housing for the elderly?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I would say that under this situation the only hope we have for housing for the elderly is under the Widnall provisions.

Mr. MORANO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CURTIS of Massachusetts. I yield.

Mr. MORANO. I would like to ask the gentleman from Michigan: Assuming that a Member voted against the Widnall substitute and the Widnall substitute carried, could he have an opportunity to vote for the measure as the chairman of the committee suggested?

Mr. WOLCOTT. If I understand the gentleman, if we voted for the Widnall substitute——

Mr. MORANO. Against the Widnall substitute.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Against the Widnall substitute? In other words, the Widnall amendment is defeated, then the question would come immediately on the committee bill.

Mr. MORANO. No, just the other way around: If a Member voted against the Widnall amendment, yet the Widnall amendment was carried, how then would the Member have an opportunity to vote for housing?

Mr. OLIVER P. BOLTON. In the Widnall bill.

Mr. MORANO. No.

Mr. WOLCOTT. He would not have any opportunity, although it would be theoretically possible to defeat it when you get back in the House.

But if the Widnall amendment is adopted in the Committee it is certain there will be a vote in the House on the Widnall amendment. If the Widnall amendment is defeated in the House then the question would recur on the passage of the House bill reported out by the Banking and Currency Committee.

Mr. MORANO. That is not quite clear to me.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Maybe I did not understand the gentleman's question.

Mr. MORANO. There is an unusual existing parliamentary situation. I favor public housing. I would like to have more public housing than is provided in the Widnall amendment. If I should vote against the Widnall amendment, would I be precluded or foreclosed from voting for some public housing, assuming the Widnall amendment would carry?

Mr. WOLCOTT. Theoretically and practically the gentlemen would be precluded from any more public housing than the 35,000 included in the Widnall amendment.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOLCOTT. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. MARTIN. If the gentleman votes against the Widnall amendment the chances are he gets no housing legislation at all and, therefore, he would defeat the very purpose of his objective.

Mr. MORANO. I wanted to get clear on that. There are those who might like to vote against the Widnall amendment because they feel they can vote for a bill in which there will be more public housing than there is in the Widnall amendment.

Mr. WOLCOTT. If the Widnall amendment is defeated, the gentleman could vote for the committee bill which has many times more than that.

Mr. MORANO. If the Widnall amendment prevailed over a vote I might cast against it, then where would I be?

Mr. WOLCOTT. You would be supporting the 35,000 for 2 years, and that is all.

Mr. MORANO. I would be voting against that?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. VANIK].

Mr. VANIK. Mr. Chairman, a moment ago the gentleman from Ohio indicated he wanted to vote for the most liberal bill and the more liberal proposal. The committee bill is the more liberal one. It provides for 50,000 units plus 10,000 units for our senior citizens. The Widnall bill proposes less. It provides only 35,000 units for 2 years.

Mr. OLIVER P. BOLTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VANIK. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. OLIVER P. BOLTON. The gentleman will concede, I am sure, that it depends upon what the interpretation of the word "liberal" is. If by "liberal" he means individual, then he will vote for the Widnall bill because that means less of State government. If he is in favor of big government he will vote for the committee bill.

Mr. VANIK. The gentleman from Massachusetts inquired as to which bill would provide for the greater number of housing units. It is the committee bill that will do that.

Mr. CURTIS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VANIK. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. CURTIS of Massachusetts. We were informed here that if we vote for the committee bill there would be no public housing in the end.

Mr. VANIK. I cannot agree with that proposition. The committee bill provides for a lot less than the Senate bill. I am sure if the Spence bill is adopted by the House there is strong likelihood it will pass this Congress.

Mr. CRAMER. Mr. Chairman, I wish to point out that on page 45 of the Widnall substitute, H. R. 12328, there is a provision providing the Housing Authority of the city of Tampa, Fla., with authority to pay to local governing bodies $22,959.85 in lieu of taxes for project years ending prior to April 1, 1956, which, as result of action of the Public Housing Commission denying this authority to the Tampa Authority

This action resulted from my request to the Banking and Currency Committee and to Congressman WIDNALL that this provision be included in this bill because it was not included in H. R. 11742, the request having been made to me by the Tampa Authority after H. R. 11742 had been voted out of the committee. The proposed action on this amendment, which in effect substitutes H. R. 12328 for H. R. 11742, will give the Authority the power requested and will make it possible for the local governing authorities to receive this payment.

Also the Widnall substitute provides a more liberal program for housing for elderly in the following respects:

First. Section 104 provides special mortgage insurance aids for private housing to be built for elderly persons and specific low-rent public housing provisions to be made available to elderly persons.

Second. The bill permits the required downpayment of a mortgagor 60 years of age or older to be paid or loaned by a third party under such conditions as the Federal Housing Commissioner prescribes.

Third. As to FHA rental housing, the bill would change section 207 program to provide more liberal mortgage multifamily elderly housing sponsored by nonprofit organizations.

These are steps in the right direction on a serious problem of making homes and housing for the elderly persons more readily available with emphasis on free enterprise as the vehicle for accomplishing this. It also follows the recommendations of the President.

I have long been concerned about this problem and have consulted with my distinguished colleague, Congressman WIDNALL, on this matter on numerous occasions. I am happy to see he has included these provisions in his substitute.

Title III of the bill strengthens the urban renewal provisions of present law and will make it easier for local planning groups to accomplish meritorious urban renewal projects. I have in mind proposed projects in Ybor City and other areas in my district where local citizens are preparing to attack this problem.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. Chairman, H. R. 11742, the general housing bill reported by the Banking and Currency Committee, is first rate housing legislation in my estimation.

One of the great virtues of the bill is its omnibus characteristic. It recognizes the many different types of housing needs in our country and contains provisions to improve and expand a dozen or more worthwhile housing programs.

For example, the bill would attempt to breathe new life in the home building industry by improving the availability of mortgage funds to home buyers and home builders. It would extend and improve the FHA title I home loan improvement program so necessary to the upkeep and modernization of our existing housing inventory. The bill would provide long overdue housing support to elderly families and elderly single persons. It would extend and improve the vital military housing program. It would set up the farm housing loan program under title V of the Housing Act of 1949 on a long-term basis so that farm housing needs can be met. It would provide additional funds for the college housing loan program so that our institutions of higher learning can continue to build urgently needed housing for students and faculty members. The bill would attempt to stimulate much-needed rental housing in urban areas. There are many other important provisions but I cite these few examples to underscore the comprehensive nature of the bill and the support if would give to many areas of housing need.

I would like to address most of my remarks to the most controversial part of the bill, which is of course, the public housing section. For the life of me, I find it difficult to understand why the most urgently needed program is always the most controversial.

Those who know the shocking housing conditions of our city slums at first hand find it hard to comprehend how anyone can oppose a policy designed to correct these conditions and the vicious social evils which these areas breed.

All of us would like to see the private home-building industry, and the private real-estate industry supply decent housing in a decent environment at costs and rentals within the means of our lowest income families. There is no disagreement on that objective. But that is an objective so far unrealized. The blunt fact is that the only way to provide decent sanitary housing to our lowest income groups is through subsidized low-rent public housing. For some reason the word "subsidized" is a scare word. I am not in favor of all forms of subsidy. But I believe with a deep conviction that where a pressing social need exists which cannot be met through private enterprise, the Government must step in and lend a helping hand to local communities. And that is precisely what the low-rent public housing program does.

The public housing sections of H. R. 11742 are must legislation. The 50,000 units a year for a 3-year period, plus 10,000 units a year for a 3-year period for elderly families and single persons, are the absolute minimum which we must have. I would like to see a program of larger scope, but I recognize realistically that we will be lucky to get that many units unless the opponents of public housing should finally repent and see the light.

Now the need for low-rent public housing is a general one for all families in the lowest income groups who cannot afford decent private housing. But there is one phase of public housing need which I think deserves special emphasis. I refer to the public housing units needed in connection with a successful slum clearance program.

Mr. Chairman, I think in this area we find our friends who oppose public housing are on the horns of a dilemma. They are for slum clearance—or at least they pay lipservice to that objective—because they know it would be political suicide to come out and oppose clearance of our terrible slum areas. And yet these same people have the effrontery to oppose a public housing program of the needed magnitude, or indeed of any magnitude. Mr. Speaker, if I have ever seen an instance of hypocritical inconsistency, this is it.

Now everyone knows that when you clear a slum you tear down buildings and dwelling units by the hundreds. There is no mystery about that—that is a simple fact for all to see. Now everyone also knows that the slum clearance laws require by statute that families displaced by slum clearance operations must be rehoused in decent, safe and sanitary accommodations which they can afford.

But what do we find when we examine the income status of the typical family now living in a slum and now being forced in increasing numbers to relocate as a result of slum clearance operations. The facts are incontrovertible. Percentages vary slightly but the simple fact is that at least half of these families have incomes so low that they cannot afford any kind of decent privately owned housing accommodations. If there were no alternative, the only place the people could move is to another slum.

The opponents of public housing can talk until doomsday but they cannot controvert these obvious facts.

Mr. Chairman, there is only one place that these low-income families can go and that is into low-rent public housing units. This is the only way that these families can bring up their children in reasonably decent housing in a reasonably decent environment.

And that, Mr. Chairman, is the dilemma in which the public housing opponents find themselves. Sooner or later they will have to stand up and be counted. They cannot be for slum clearance and against public housing because as I have shown, such an opposition is the height of hypocrisy and inconsistency.

I would like the record to be clear that I recognize that a substantial percentage of families displaced by slum clearance operations are fortunate enough incomewise so that they can afford decent private housing. I think it should be emphasized, however, that this is not always the case when a family happens to be a minority group. The minority group family may have the income but as we all know often does not have the freedom to live where he chooses.

I favor providing whatever legislative aid is necessary to help rehouse the families whose incomes are above the public housing ceilings. I am happy to say that H. R. 11742 has provisions designed to make the FHA section 221 program actually workable. Section 221 in theory was supposed to provide private sales and rental housing for the relocation of displaced families. But in actual fact it has been almost a complete failure. By making the changes proposed in H. R. 11742, I think we can correct this situation. By permitting no downpayment financing up to 40 years and by increasing the mortgage loan ceilings to more realistic levels, I think we can help many families now living in slum areas to move to decent neighborhoods and start on the road to home ownership. I am wholeheartedly for such a development.

But section 221 housing or any other privately owned housing cannot help our most unfortunate citizens who just do not have sufficient income. We must have public housing and we can never make a dent on clearing our Nation of costly disease-breeding vice-generating slums, unless we have a large-scale public housing program going hand in hand with slum clearance operations.

And we will have such a program, Mr. Chairman, make no mistake about it. The opposition is strong and the fight will be never ending and difficult, but in the end we will prevail. Selfish interests and groups callous and indifferent to grave and pressing social need unfortunately can hold the upper hand over the short run. But in this great country of ours, righteousness and justice ultimately prevail and I am confident that the case for low-rent public housing will be no exception.

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. CANFIELD. Mr. Chairman, housing our aging population is a very vital and integral part of a well-planned Government welfare program. This is a fact which must be recognized here today. We must make a determined effort to meet both the economic and the social needs of the growing number of older people in the United States. Recent changes in social-security legislation has been one step in the right direction. Adequate, decent, sanitary, comfortable housing must be the next step in meeting these needs.

As of April 1955 census data indicate that there were 14,018,000 individuals in the United States 65 years or older. In addition, as of that same date there were 33,276,000 individuals between the ages of 45 and 64. The number of persons 65 years and over has been steadily increasing over the past few years and is expected to continue on the upward trend. Income data compiled by Government and private sources indicate that a large percentage of the persons in this 65-or-over age category have incomes of less than $1,000. These elderly persons should not be required to live in substandard homes, nor could they be expected to buy or rent commercial homes at a rate equal to half their income.

The Paterson (N. J.) Evening News in a recent United Press story from Washington discusses the problem as follows:

PROVIDING HOMES FOR AGED TOP UNITED STATES HOUSING PROBLEM

(By Robert F. Morison)

WASHINGTON.—Government officials say the problem of housing for the aged is definitely greater than that involved in providing homes for minority groups.

The oldsters are one of the fastest growing segments of the Nation's population. And, with improved health standards, they are to become more and more numerous, experts say.

Recent census bureau estimates set the present number of men and women 65 and over at 14,128,000, up 15.9 percent from 1950. This was the second fastest growing age group in the Nation.

By 1975 there will be more than 20 million persons 65 and older, the estimate shows.

A Government study soon to get under way will try to establish rules for the guidance of those planning housing for the aged.

The Federal Housing Administration, with its many mortgage insuring programs, has a particular stake in the problem. The agency has called on Walter K. Vivrett, professor of architecture at the University of Minnesota and authority on housing for the aged, to make a study aimed at developing building standards to be applied by FHA in its mortgage insuring programs.

FHA has been approached by church, fraternal, and labor groups for advice on building various types of housing for the aged. More requests are expected in the future, even if the current housing bill before Congress does not contain a special program for the aged.

Among the problems in building houses and apartments for aged persons are where and how the bathroom should be located, should there be wider doors than ordinary to admit wheelchairs, should grab bars be located around the house, should there be bathtubs or showers, 1-story houses or 2, small kitchens or no kitchens in the case of multifamily units, should older persons be housed by themselves or nearer to neighborhoods they know, and whether signal bells should be scattered at strategic points around the house or apartment.

Proper precautions have to be taken, but officials stress that if extreme care is not taken too much may be done. "If we pamper them too much we'll make them feel peculiar," the official explained. However, they must have adequate housing and it must be laid out to make them comfortable, and living as easy as possible.

One other danger faces FHA and that is the possibility of extreme specialization.

"We've got to think of the house as an investment," an official said, "and be sure it has a resale value in the event it must be sold to people who might not want such special features as ramps instead of stairs."

Dr. Vivrett is expected to complete his study in about a month. FHA will then work out regulations to guide future mortgage insuring operations where older persons are concerned.

Recently the Federal-State conference on aging met here and urged an expansion of private home building for older persons. To solve the problem of overspecialization, the conference urged installation of needed devices as hand rails. But it called for small homes that would combine features needed for the aging and younger people buying their first home.

Mr. FEIGHAN. Mr. Chairman, those of us who have fought for adequate public housing to meet the urgent needs of families in the lower income brackets are deeply interested in this legislation. A great deal of investigation and study has gone into the preparation of this legislation. Many Members no doubt feel, as do I, that authority should have been provided for a greater number of public housing units, but it is certainly a step forward. I feel it is appropriate in this connection to bring to the attention of Members of the House another housing development taking place outside the United States, but for which the American taxpayers' money is being used. I have been informed by the International Cooperation Administration that Communist Dictator Tito, last December was given permission to use $4 million of United States counterpart funds to build a lush housing project in Yugoslavia. In addition to that, recently an additional $13 million was authorized for Dictator Tito's use to construct additional lush housing for the Communist elite of Yugoslavia. All of this is in addition to what Tito has been taking out of the American taxpayers' pockets since 1948, which is already in excess of $1 billion.

It is a certainty that the housing project in Communist-occupied Yugoslavia for which the American taxpayer is footing the bill, will in no way compare with the public housing projects authorized in the legislation before us today. In the first instance, I am certain that Dictator Tito will build plush quarters for the Communist elite which certainly is not the case for public housing units contemplated for the American people themselves. It is the common practice of the Communist elite to live in the style befitting kings and czars, and in the grandeur of the nobility of the 19th century. Communist boss Tito and his henchmen have demonstrated an unusual ability to acquire all the comforts, luxuries, and grandeurs befitting a Communist czar. We may be certain that the good people of Yugoslavia who are the exploited victims of the Communist occupiers, will receive little or no benefits whatever from those public housing projects.

In the second instance, the public housing programs authorized for the American people contemplate that all the funds made available for the housing will ultimately be returned to the Public Treasury. Most of the housing projects authorized are on a loan basis. The only part the Government does not have repaid is that subsidy on the rental which is provided in order that the low-income bracket families can have decent housing. The so-called housing project in Yugoslavia is on an outright gift basis. Not one penny of the money used for Tito's de luxe housing projects will ever be returned to the pocketbook of the American taxpayer.

The irony of the situation is that the $17 million of the American taxpayer's money handed over to the dictator Tito represents a sum 2 and possibly 3 times as great as the amount of the taxpayer's money involved in the housing legislation now before us. There has been a great deal of pushing and tugging over this legislation and the usual amount of give and take in debate. All sides will have had their say-so before this legislation is enacted. Congress has had nothing to say about the $17 million handed over to Tito for his de luxe housing program.

It is a sad situation when we Members of Congress have to make a hard fight in order to make possible some badly needed housing for the American people while at the same time a ruthless Communist dictator who is dedicated to destroying everything that represents the American ideals, makes us pay for his de luxe housing under circumstances where all we can do is protest after the fact.

Mr. BYRNE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, we have a choice of two bills on the subject of housing, and since I am anxious to help get as many housing units as possible, I would like to see H. R. 11742 passed by the House. This bill would provide 180,000 public housing units over a 3-year period.

It is vitally necessary to the stable economy of our Nation that the low-rent public housing program be continued. Healthy citizens need a healthy atmosphere. Since 1923 our overall population has increased by about 50 million. Obviously, housing requirements have increased proportionately, but housing construction, even now, does not appear to make adequate provision for those desperately in need of housing.

New private housing costs are actually prohibitive to a great number of people, and particularly to the people of my district. In Philadelphia alone, an average price for a new home privately constructed is approximately $11,500, and rental costs start at about $80 a month in privately owned apartment developments. To many of us, this may not seem unreasonable, but they are really exhorbitant to low-income families who are forced by circumstances to exist in old, substandard housing units in which living conditions leave a great deal to be desired.

Many of my constituents are unfortunately compelled to live in crowded dwellings, some of which have none of the sanitary facilities which you and I take for granted. There are no yards or play areas surrounding such places, and therefore our youngsters are forced to find such amusement or diversion as they can along the streets and in the alleys of the city. This kind of diversion is recognized as a major cause of the high crime rate and the high incidence of juvenile delinquency, and we are experiencing our share of that in Philadelphia. Surely we are agreed that such an atmosphere is not conducive to a physically and emotionally stable family life.

Low-rent public housing and slum clearance go hand in hand to contribute to a better America. Along with such work will be the addition of community facilities, the increase of open space, the reduction of overcrowding, and development of stronger citizen participation.

Good housing is almost a guarantee of good citizens, and I am glad to have this opportunity to speak in behalf of it and vote for it.

Mr. DIGGS. Mr. Chairman, this is the first time a housing bill has come out of a House committee for consideration. All other bills have come out of the Senate and have been passed through conference reports. It represents a historic occasion and I am among those who hope that the House will follow through by giving our Nation at least minimum adequate means to meet the American dilemma in the housing field.

The prominent charge made by opponents to housing measures providing for expansion and improvement in the Government-assisted housing program for the Nation is that the program is socialistic because it puts the Government in the business of paying rent for low-income groups. Yet opponents do not deny, nor do I think anyone can deny, that nationally, adequate housing facilities for low-income families, particularly with reference to minorities and the aged, is one of the major problems for our country.

In Detroit, Mich., including the 1st, 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th, and 17th Congressional Districts, with a population of over 2½ million people, for example, there are a total of 12,081 public housing dwelling units. At the end of last year, by Housing Commission information, there were over 4,000 eligible persons waiting for placement, but for whom no housing was or is available. There were approximately 8,000 applications in total which were unprocessed. Through my own congressional office, I have received numerous letters from constituents who have been waiting for placement—on the eligible list—for as long as 4 years. In Detroit and nationally, it has been established by all the reliable reports we can wish to have that private housing has not been able to meet the needs for better housing, for slum clearance, and elimination of blight areas; that the need for enactment of an adequate Government-assisted program arises specifically from the lack of private housing facilities for people in these low income categories. As the National Housing Conference reports, current house construction is serving the upper income market and the upper half of the middle income market—not the low income groups who pay high rents at the sacrifice of other bare necessities and yet live in ghettos and slum hovels which are health and morale destroying.

The bill which we have before us in H. R. 11742 proposes 50,000 additional dwelling units; the President in his annual message to Congress proposed 35,000 units, yet in 1955, to complete the building program scheduled in the Housing Act of 1949, more than 600,000 low-rent dwellings were required. The total of 810,000 units represented the 1949 attempt of Government to meet the problem of 15 million substandard dwellings reported in the census figures of 1950. In other words, in 6 years when the program was to have been completed, only 199,378 units out of a total of 810,000 had been actually built or underway. Today with national population figures increasing and private housing not able to catch up with them, slum areas are growing. Government has not taken all the steps at its means to solve this problem. It is my understanding that over a period of years, a bank of authorized housing has been built up, which in the President's discretionary power could give approximately 100,000 dwelling units to the Nation. The fund, however, has not been fully utilized and it is regrettable that the President has not seen fit to push and use this authorization when there does exist a very concrete need to do so, as is evident from the reports of every reliable housing and building agency regardless as to its proposal on how to solve the problem.

In their arguments for private housing, the opponents of public assisted programs have not presented a realistic solution to the housing needs for the people in the category having the problem. If they would be realistic in their approach to this situation, a growing feeling is that an alternative and better solution would be to extend veterans' home loan guaranty provisions so that any eligible citizen may purchase a home on Government guaranty of mortgage. In the field of home purchasing, private financing policies of restriction based upon race have made housing, as it pertains to minority groups, an even more severe problem. The National Association of Home Builders reported in January of this year that there is a backlog of effective demand for housing for Negroes alone, of the minority groups totaling 125,000 units annually. If the Government would stand behind or guarantee home mortgage for the citizen up to the limitations of the veterans' housing program, we would be able to make significant progress in solving our national housing problem.

In the meantime, for the current year, a Congress which is conscientious of national welfare should take action to solve a present problem by voting for passage of at least this minimum number of housing units.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Chairman, we have no further requests for time.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I have no further request for time.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule the bill is considered as having been read for amendment. No amendments are in order to the bill except it shall be in order for any member of the Committee on Banking and Currency to move to strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill H. R. 11742 and insert as a substitute the text of the bill H. R. 12328, and such substitute shall not be subject to amendment.

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. WIDNALL moves to strike out all after the enacting clause of the bill H. R. 11742 and insert as a substitute the text of the bill H. R. 12328.

Mr. WIDNALL. Mr. Chairman, it is my belief that the program embodied in this bill provides the tools with which the housing needs of the country can best be taken care of. It contains provisions of importance with respect to modernization and repair of property. A continuance of that program is urgently needed.

It improves the present program by raising the amount that may be borrowed from $2,500 to $3,500; by extending the term of the loan from 3 to 5 years; by making it possible for the Commissioner to waive 6 months of occupancy presently required under the law.

This is a clause in the housing bill that is practically the same in the Spence bill and in the Senate bill. It is urgently needed that we extend the college housing program. There is an additional authorization for $250 million in new college housing and for college facilities. Applications are coming in at the rate of $20 million a month for that program. It includes provision for low-cost housing for displaced persons which has not previously been discussed. It provides a better approach toward slum clearance and urgently needed public housing to be put on a sound and workable basis; a continuance of the new military housing program, and it provides for the disposition of defense housing built under the Lanham Act. It also provides for the acquisition of Wherry Act housing and for a continuance and liberalization of the farm housing program under title V of the 1949 act.

Mr. Chairman, I believe there is much that will improve the existing housing program in this bill. It provides something that we all can join together and vote for, because it has in it the best from all three bills. I urge the adoption of my amendment.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and nine Members are present, a quorum.

Mr. RAINS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the motion.

Mr. Chairman, I assume this is what you call a short horse, 5 minutes on each side. However, on the other hand, I assume that everybody has made up his mind as to how he is going to vote. But, in order for the RECORD to be crystal clear, I want to repeat one or two things I said in my opening statement this morning. The truly vital things that are not in the Widnall bill—and I am not condemning all the elements of the Widnall bill, as I said this morning; they are in the main the provisions which were adopted by the Committee on Banking and Currency. But, the provisions that are left out, and they are urgent and important, are, first of all, the real true helps for housing for the elderly. We had people who came before the committee, representatives of many religious and patriotic organizations who asked that we insert a section in this bill patterned after the college housing program which provided for the building of dormitories for the children, so that the old people could have adequate housing. I am perfectly frank to say that if we are to spend any money of the Government's—and the major portion of this program would not be paid for out of the Federal Treasury, though some of it would to begin with—but if we are willing to spend money for college dormitories, for eating places in colleges, I think we ought to do something for the old folks of America. That is my honest opinion.

As I said this morning, if we do not do it in this bill, we may not be compelled to, but we will be anxious one of these days to have such a bill, because those people are getting to be a great segment of the population and we are not giving them the attention we should.

Let me say one other thing. Away from the metropolitan centers of this country a GI cannot get money for a mortgage loan. It is of no advantage to him to have a continuation of the GI home loan program, because he cannot get mortgage money unless he pays fabulous prices for discounts.

We earmark in the committee bill $500 million—none of it the Government's money, but the GI's money in the national service life insurance fund—and we give the insurance fund not 3 percent but 4½ percent investment, so that some of this money can flow out into these areas away from the big cities, so that the GI's of this country may have a chance to own a home. That is good, intelligent commonsense, I am quite sure.

In addition to that, no matter what the administration may say or anyone else may say, we need more than 35,000 units of public housing even to begin to meet the need. If you were to limit it—and I may say that I am proud that the Widnall bill does not do that—but if you were to limit it to those persons displaced by governmental action only, and let us remember the big highway program and how many people are going to be uprooted because of that, and also of other governmental actions in the big cities, then where will the needy come in?

So I say that the public-housing features in the bill are too small. The bill that came from the other body provided for 135,000 units. The Committee on Banking and Currency realized that it would be impossible to pass any such program as that through the House of Representatives. But we would like to be reasonable. We said 50,000 units and then 10,000 additional earmarked as housing for the elderly.

So, as I say, those are the three outstanding faults with the Widnall bill.

Mr. HALLECK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RAINS. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HALLECK. I must say that I am a little surprised at the gentleman's opposition to this substitute. I recognize his right to oppose it, but I had thought that we had worked out a compromise that we could be for. In any event, let me say to the gentleman that I am quite sure that if this substitute is not adopted the committee bill will be defeated and we will not have any housing bill at all. Would the gentleman want that to happen?

Mr. RAINS. No; the gentleman knows that I had no agreement not to support the committee bill. No such agreement was ever made by me. I am not condemning the Widnall bill in toto, but I am only mentioning those provisions that were in the other bill that were left out of the Widnall bill.

Mr. HALLECK. But as a practical matter—and I do not know what is going to happen on this vote; there may be some Members of the House who do not want any bill at all—we have got to be very careful that we do not wind up without any bill at all. I think that point ought to be made very clear. The Widnall substitute represents a great deal of work that has been done to get a housing bill.

Mr. RAINS. That is correct.

Mr. HALLECK. And to keep this great housing operation going.

Mr. RAINS. Mr. Chairman, I want to say one thing. I do not want to see us without any housing bill. I want to make that clear. We need a housing bill.

Mr. HALLECK. We are about to decide that now.

Mr. RAINS. But I would rather have the committee bill.

Mr. McCORMACK. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. RAINS. I will certainly yield to the distinguished majority leader for a question.

Mr. McCORMACK. It has been brought to my attention that one of the problems in getting the redevelopment housing program going under section 220 has been the variations from project to project in the allowance which the FHA grants for builder's profit. Does this bill do anything to correct this situation?

Mr. RAINS. It certainly does. The situation to which the gentleman refers was brought to our attention during the housing study conducted by our Subcommittee on Housing. Our report on slum clearance and urban renewal pointed out that the FHA has taken an overly conservative position in the matter of the allowance for builder's and sponsor's services profit and risk. The FHA adopted a sliding scale approach under which allowances varied from perhaps 5 to 9 percent from project to project. This approach has not operated to facilitate the construction of redevelopment housing on cleared slum sites under the section 220 program. To correct this situation, the committee bill establishes a uniform approach, providing that the allowance for builder's and sponsor's services, profit and risk shall be a uniform 10 percent of all project costs except land, unless the FHA certifies that 10 percent is unreasonable and by regulation prescribes a lesser uniform percentage to be applicable for all projects and all sponsors. The FHA can reduce the allowance set by the Congress to 9 percent or 8 percent or any other lesser uniform percentage. There is no opportunity to give any project or any sponsor specially favorable treatment, because the allowance is exactly the same for everybody. The substitute bill includes this same uniform approach. There is no difference between the two bills on this matter.

Mr. ROBERTS. Mr. Chairman, I could not fail to point out that Alabama is indeed fortunate and proud to have as the spokesman for housing, and the chairman of the Subcommittee on Housing of the Committee on Banking and Currency, one of her own native sons who is carrying on in the fine tradition and manner of the illustrious Congressman Henry Stegall, who did so much, together with the late Senator Robert Wagner, of New York, and Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, to provide better homes for the people of this great Nation.

This year marks the 20th anniversary of the birth of low-rent public housing contained in the United States Housing Act of 1937 and I am happy in the knowledge that the bill before us will do much to improve the lot of many of our people who have not been fortunate enough to have homes that are decent and conducive to the upbringing of our most precious asset—children of today who will be the citizens of tomorrow. We must remember too that housing is not simply for those who are unable to pay for homes, but affects those who have arrived at the point of paying for a home and those who wish to repair and maintain homes which they already own.

The Government should step up its public housing, still desperately needed by many of our citizens. The Government should act to liberalize the secondary mortgage market; to improve its rural housing program, to step up the slum-clearance and urban-renewal programs, and to liberalize the home repair loan provision of FHA title I. The Government should act to help the farmer with his housing needs. It is upon these topics which I wish to speak briefly.

I also regret that the provision originated and sponsored by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. RAINS] which would provide that the fund accumulated in the National Service Life Insurance Section of the Veterans' Administration will not be made available for veterans' housing. This is a most necessary provision and would, in my opinion, liberalize the mortgage market and enable veterans to obtain loans at a lower rate of interest. This money should be put to work for those whose premiums have made it possible and I also predict that the next Congress will take action to carry out recommendations on this matter contained in section 302 of the Spence bill.

It is not so long ago but what I can recall the sound of President Roosevelt's resonant voice as he said, "I see one-third of a nation ill-housed, ill-clad, ill-nourished." And though we have traveled a long way in housing our Nation since the dark, oppressive days of the depression, it would be callous disregard of present housing needs were we to think the task completed. We still face a housing shortage and this shortage may become a crisis if we do not begin to plan, act, and build now. Part of the demand for housing is resulting from our constantly increasing population. We also suffer from a need for more housing for low-income families, more housing for middle-income families, and more housing for elderly people. Although we are constructing houses at a high rate, most of them are being built for higher-income families while more and more houses are sinking into the substandard class inhabited by persons unable to purchase new high-priced homes.

The Government should act to encourage the construction of new housing for the middle-income group and for elderly persons.

It is with sincere regret that the bill which will probably be adopted—the Widnall bill, H. R. 12328, does not contain any provision that will provide housing for our old people. I believe this is a sad mistake and I predict that in time these worthy citizens will demand and get adequate legislation to supply their needs.

There is a critical nationwide need for public housing. The 1950 census showed there were 15 million substandard dwellings in use. Only an adequate public-housing program, coupled with a less-restricted slum-clearance and urban-renewal program, can help eliminate this situation. If we do not act, we must resign ourselves to seeing many of tomorrow's citizens reared in urban jungles and unhealthy, vice-ridden alleys. Available statistics prove that public housing more than pays its way. A survey of 317 families in Columbus, Ohio, showed that private slums paying full taxes actually yielded less revenue than tax-exempt public housing paying the municipality 10 percent of its net rentals. And it should not be forgotten that the indirect costs of slums are a heavy drain on city treasuries, community chests, and on community well-being. Slums breed crime, delinquency, disease, fire, and social unrest, heavy debts for any community to bear.

The existence of 15 million substandard dwellings is, in my opinion, prima facie evidence that this problem cannot and will not be met by private enterprise. I do not feel that public housing is in competition with decent private housing. Families eligible for public housing are in the lowest income group, well below those for whom private enterprise provides decent dwellings.

Within my own Fourth Congressional District we now have over 1,600 public-housing units. There are also many cities in my district which are desirous of having public housing. It is my understanding that there are already pending at the national housing agency applications for 35,000 units. It is therefore evident that Congress will have to approve more units than the small sum requested in the administration's housing bill, and also that Congress will have to follow through and see that what Congress approves becomes a reality and does not wither away, if we want results.

I am aware that the chairman of this subcommittee has introduced legislation which would provide for 50,000 public-housing units annually for 3 years. At this time I would like to state my approval of this low-rent housing provision and also of the provisions for slum clearance and urban renewal. It is only through the use of both public housing and slum-clearance and urban-renewal programs that this portion of the housing problem can be eventually solved.

A man who is frequently forgotten or abused by the present Republican administration is the farmer, so it is not surprising that his housing needs have also been ignored by the administration. The farmer's needs have already been well covered here this morning. I would just like to state that I believe that it is the present administration of the Farmers' Home Administration which has failed to help the farmers, not the program adopted by Congress. It does not seem reasonable to me for the Farmers' Home Administration to approve only one-fourteenth of all the applications received from Alabama, only one-twelfth of all the applications received nationwide. Over 52,000 applications were received last year while only 1,456 direct loans were made and 2,909 insured commitments were made. Congress intended more than this for the farmer should be given and as the country expands and grows, this subject will become more vital. More attention and study must be given to the impact played by community facilities in the development of new land for housing purposes. Undoubtedly these community facilities will be an increasingly important portion of the cost in the price of new homes. The price of land and the completed lot has risen more in the 5 years than any other factor in the house price. We must be careful that this hidden cost does not place housing beyond the price reach of the mass market in the future. The solution to this problem of community facilities—sewers, water, and roads—may not lie in more direct Federal aid, I do not know, but certain the future welfare and the growth of the Nation makes it imperative that the Federal Government give community facilities its foremost attention.

In conclusion, I believe that a good job has been done by the Rains subcommittee and that the value of its work is apparent to all who are familiar with this problem. Again I wish to compliment the gentleman from Alabama, the members of the subcommittee and the entire Committee on Banking and Currency for the fine work which has been done in the field of housing as this is vitally important to the health and well-being of all of our citizens. The Nation has indeed profited from your labors.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Alabama has expired. All time on the motion has expired.

The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New Jersey to substitute the provisions of H. R. 12328 for the provisions of H. R. 11742.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. SPENCE) there were—ayes 115, noes 24.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DONOHUE. Mr. Chairman, it is indeed most unfortunate that in the hurry and confusion of adjournment rush, it appears now we are going to be negligent in meeting our legislative obligation to continue a Federal housing program that has proved most beneficial to the national welfare for a period of 20 years.

I very deeply regret that the manner in which this legislation is being presented to us today leaves no choice to those conscientious legislators who are vitally interested in trying to help enact a sound and adequate program to enable the multitudinous members of our low- and middle-income groups and the elderly to live in decent homes in accord with our Christian traditions. We have here unfortunately to choose between the most meager housing program that opponents of this objective can devise or no housing program at all.

Under these conditions, of course, I and a great many other Members will vote for the only thing we can, while pledging in our hearts and minds to work unceasingly on for the enactment of the more complete and expanded housing program still vitally needed in this country.

We all realize that the basic problem of providing public housing cannot be severed from the problems of slum clearance and urban renewal programs. The 1950 census showed there were 15 million substandard dwellings now in use in this Nation. Only a full public housing program coupled with a less restricted slum clearance and urban renewal program can eliminate this situation.

If we do not act on this measure before us, the Federal Housing Administration mortgage insurance for veterans and home repair will die next September. If we do not accept this bill, the very modest authorized construction of 35,000 public housing units for the next 2 years will perish, along with the slum clearance and urban renewal program that goes hand in hand with it. The college housing program that has been advocated by our leading educators and that has proved so valuable is continued in this watered-down housing bill, as well as authorization for hospital construction that is in urgent need.

The token housing extension provisions of this bill will at least serve to keep the fundamental program alive. I urge you, then, to vote for it for that reason alone, while at the same time we dedicate ourselves to the expansion and improvement of it at the first opportunity in the future. Let us consciously realize that the family is the basic unit of our national life and the greatest encouragement for good family life and good citizenship is living in a decent home with healthful surroundings.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. EDMONDSON, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 11742) to extend and amend laws relating to the provision and improvement of housing and the conservation and development of urban communities, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution No. 618, he reported the bill back to the House with an amendment reported by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE TO EXTEND

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to extend their remarks on the rule and on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

AMENDMENT OF INTERNATIONAL WHEAT AGREEMENT ACT OF 1949

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 4221) to amend the International Wheat Agreement Act of 1949.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 2 of the International Wheat Agreement Act of 1949, as amended, is amended by inserting before the parenthesis at the end of the first sentence thereof the following: "and the agreement (International Wheat Agreement, 1956) further revising and renewing the International Wheat Agreement for a period ending July 31, 1959, signed by Argentina, Australia, Canada, France, Sweden, the United States, and certain wheat-importing countries."

SEC. 2. Reference in any law to the International Wheat Agreement of 1949 shall be deemed to include the agreement (International Wheat Agreement, 1956) revising and renewing the International Wheat Agreement for a period ending July 31, 1959.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROHIBITING ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES ON AIRPLANES

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I call up the resolution (H. Res. 558) to amend section 610 of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938 to prohibit the serving of alcoholic beverages to airline passengers while in flight, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8000) to amend section 610 of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938 to prohibit the serving of alcoholic beverages to airline passengers while in flight. After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill, and shall continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. ELLSWORTH], and pending that I yield myself such time as I may use.

Mr. Speaker, this is a very simple resolution.

House Resolution 558 makes in order the consideration of H. R. 8000, to amend section 610 of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938. The resolution provides for an open rule and 1 hour of general debate.

The bill provides that domestic airlines shall not sell or serve alcoholic beverages, including wine and beer, while in flight between points within the limits of the 48 States and the District of Columbia.

The purpose of this is to prevent any danger from arising as a result of the consumption of liquor by passengers and to prevent other unnecessary annoyances which might result from excessive drinking while in flight.

The bill was introduced as a result of appeals made by the Airline Pilots Association and the Airline Steward and Stewardesses Association after efforts to obtain relief by industry regulation failed.

Mr. ELLSWORTH. Mr. Speaker, there is no objection on this side to the adoption of the rule. I think the bill is a very good one, and one that should be passed by the House.

I have no further requests for time on this side, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8000) to amend section 610 of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938 to prohibit the serving of alcoholic beverages to airline passengers while in flight.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 8000, with Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. HARRIS] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. DOLLIVER] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The gentleman from Arkansas is recognized.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, this bill sponsored by our esteemed colleague and member of the committee, Mr. JOHN BELL WILLIAMS, of Mississippi, would amend section 610 of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938 to prohibit the serving of alcoholic beverages to airline passengers while in flight.

Really and truly that is all it is, and the bill is just that simple.

This is a short bill and provides simply that air carriers shall not sell or otherwise furnish passengers alcoholic beverages for consumption while in flight between points in the 48 States and the District of Columbia.

The bill has no other purpose than to promote safety in flight. During hearings on the bill, airline pilots and a representative of the Airline Stewards and Stewardesses Association cited several cases of intoxication on the part of passengers which constituted a definite hazard to safety.

This is something in which we cannot afford to take chances. The bill should be passed.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have permission to extend their remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H. R. 8000, a bill to prevent the serving of alcoholic beverages to airline passengers while in flight. The bill is in every way defensible for reasons as follows:

First. The pilots who are charged with the duty of preventing passengers under the influence of alcohol from boarding the plane are now powerless to enforce this regulation because passengers say, "How can you prevent us from boarding a plane when you serve drinks on the plane?"

Second. H. R. 8000 had its origin in the appeals of the pilots' and stewardesses' association. They say:

> A multitude of socially undesirable incidents which have occurred since the liquor service was instituted, as well as the risk of a possible accident resulting from an inebriated passenger has justification for this bill.

Third. A testimony from the pilots and stewardesses in charge of the plane should be heard above all other testimonies. They know their business, and their lives are at stake as much as the passengers' lives are in danger. The airlines definitely should be more sensitive to the warnings of the experts in charge of their planes.

Fourth. One cannot blame the stewardesses for objecting to act as barmaids.

Fifth. Since the bill was formulated and the legislation was pending in the House, six of the largest companies have now gotten together and agree to dispense with the serving of alcoholic beverages while in flight. Strong action by the Congress, as I am sure will be received in the House, will fortify the agreement of the airlines. Opposition to or defeat of the measure on the floor of the House would more than likely encourage the airlines to go back to the practice of serving alcoholic beverages.

Sixth. Liquor service on the planes is becoming so demanding that it seriously interferes with the serving of the meals and tends to make meals the secondary consideration.

Seventh. If liquor is served on the planes, there is far greater temptation for the pilots and crew to imbibe than would be if no liquor was served.

Mr. Chairman, this is in every way a worthy measure and deserves the unanimous support of the House membership.

Mrs. BLITCH. Mr. Chairman, I believe the following letter which I recently wrote to the president of the Air Transport Association and the letter which I received from him which I also include at this point with a copy of the proposed agreement with the CAA will express my feelings about this bill better than anything else I could say here. Mr. Chairman, I urge the House to pass this bill.

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., July 21, 1956.

Mr. S. G. TIPTON,
President, Air Transport Association,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. TIPTON: Thank you for your letter of July 16 enclosing a copy of the Standard Practice Agreement between the airline companies with regard to serving alcoholic beverages on board their aircraft.

As a frequent air traveler, I am acutely aware of the danger of serving alcoholic beverages aboard planes. It is my belief that the proposed agreement would be worse than the present situation because it would have in effect the stamp of official approval.

Air travel is a boon to our age and I boost it and support it every way that I can. The stand the airlines are taking concerning alcoholic beverages is to my mind most inconsistent with the expressed and demonstrated desire of the airlines to make air travel safe, comfortable and efficient.

The position of hostess is one that until the past year or so I felt was equal to that of most any profession a young woman could enter. With the increased drinking on planes—and it is continually growing worse—the standing of the profession of these women has certainly suffered.

Because of the very honest opinions I have expressed to you, I wish to inform you that I am immediately filing a protest to your proposed agreement with the Civil Aeronautics Board. I am calling on the CAB to lend its support to complete prohibition of all alcoholic beverages on planes, and I am urging the majority leader of the House of Representatives to call up the pending bill for passage.

Your letter to me, the proposed agreement and my response are also being entered into the Appendix of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. I hope that my strong feeling on this matter will not deter you from calling upon me at any time I can be helpful to the cause of aviation.

Sincerely yours,

IRIS BLITCH,
Member of Congress.

AIR TRANSPORT ASSOCIATION,
Washington, D. C., July 16, 1956.

Hon. IRIS F. BLITCH,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MRS. BLITCH: Attached is an agreement which has been entered into between American Airlines, Inc.; Eastern Air Lines, Inc.; National Airlines, Inc.; Northwest Airlines, Inc.; Trans World Airlines, Inc.; and United Air Lines, Inc., which regulates the service of alcoholic beverages (not including beer or wine) on board their aircraft. Its terms are self-explanatory. As you will note, it is subject to the approval of the Civil Aeronautics Board, as required by section 412 of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938.

Our surveys indicate that over 80 percent of our passengers enjoy and approve the service of alcoholic beverages by the airlines. This being the case, it has seemed to us that a complete prohibition of the service was unwise, since it interfered unreasonably with the desires of a large majority of our passengers, and that such a prohibition would only be justified if it resulted in positive harm.

We have no evidence that alcoholic beverage service interferes with safety or unreasonably impairs the comfort or enjoyment of a minority of our passengers who do not care to drink, so long as the service is conducted in moderation, with dignity and with due concern for the comfort and convenience of all passengers aboard these airplanes.

It is the purpose of this agreement to assume this middle ground between strict prohibition, which would surely encourage surreptitious drinking on board aircraft, and completely unlimited service, which might, on occasion, be harmful. The standards of service laid down in this agreement do not alter substantially the practices which each airline had already established for itself, and will assure the maintenance of such practices.

Yours very truly,

S. G. TIPTON,
President.

STANDARD PRACTICE AGREEMENT

JUNE 27, 1956.

It is recognized that the determination whether to serve alcoholic beverages aboard air carrier aircraft is one which must be made by the individual carriers, with due regard to applicable laws and regulations and their responsibilities as public-service enterprises. However, in the opinion of the undersigned it is desirable in the public interest to establish a standard practice with regard to such service. Therefore, it is agreed that:

1. For the purposes of this agreement, the term "alcoholic beverage" includes any form of distilled spirits, but does not include beer or wine.

2. None of the parties hereto will, in its advertising or other promotional efforts, emphasize the availability of alcoholic-beverage service aboard any of its flights.

3. Each party hereto will continue its policy of not encouraging the consumption of alcoholic beverages by its customers.

4. None of the parties hereto will serve more than two drinks, each of which shall contain no more than 1.6 ounces (the standard miniature bottle) of any alcoholic beverage, to any one customer.

5. Each party hereto will continue to refuse to serve alcoholic beverages to any person when it has reason to believe that such service will result in such person's becoming objectionable to other passengers.

6. This agreement shall apply to all flights operated by any party hereto between points in the continental United States.

7. This agreement may be executed in separate counterparts, all of which shall constitute a single instrument, and shall become effective when executed by all of the air carriers, operating domestically, serving alcoholic beverages (as defined herein), and when approved by the Civil Aeronautics Board pursuant to section 412 of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938, as amended. This agreement shall remain in force indefinitely, subject to the right of any party hereto to withdraw therefrom upon 6 months' prior written notice to each other party hereto.

C. W. Jacob, American Airlines, Inc.; T. F. Armstrong, Eastern Air Lines, Inc.; A. G. Hardy, National Airlines, Inc.; Donald W. Nyrop, Northwest Airlines, Inc.; Warren L. Pierson, Trans World Airlines, Inc.; R. W. Ireland, United Air Lines, Inc.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. Chairman, I am heartily in favor of the bill, H. R. 8000 introduced by Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi, and also endorsed very heartily by the members of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

I have flown a great many airplanes in my day, starting in 1917 and coming right down to the present moment in our country and in various parts of the world. I think I do know that intoxicating liquor and flying do not mix. I certainly wish to commend Mr. WILLIAMS for his very sensible and convincing argument, and I think I may appropriately say that of all the persons in the House of Representatives, he is the one who should have and did introduce such a bill. He knows that flying is dangerous.

I have been on planes in which the stewardesses spent a great deal of time serving liquor to passengers on the plane. No intoxicated person is theoretically now permitted to board a plane, but the rule is unenforceable. We should give our pilots and stewardesses every opportunity to be at their best when the plane is in flight and they should not be obstructed in their important and serious duties by having to take out time to serve passengers who may want something to drink that is intoxicating. Many persons will wonder why I am so heartily in favor of this bill, when I am the man in Congress who has told them about wine, some kinds of which are intoxicating. I merely talk for wine because wine is the end product of the grape and it is really a beverage rather than a liquor.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I wholeheartedly support this legislation. It should have been approved long ago. The bill is similar to a number of other bills pending before the House, including one by my colleague from Kansas the Honorable WINT SMITH. This bill should be passed without opposition. It ought to be approved as a safety measure. Furthermore, it ought to be approved as a matter of right, commonsense, and decency. Why should people riding on planes be served with liquor. It seems strange that they would even insist on it when they are only on the plane at most for a period of a few hours. As I said a moment ago, it is important that the legislation be approved as a safety measure. No one knows this better than the airline pilots and the stewardesses who are in charge of the planes. They are required to take every precaution available for the safety of the passengers and yet here is one where the stewardesses and the airline pilots have been overruled.

I call your attention to a resolution recently approved by the Airline Pilots Association. It reads as follows:

Therefore, be it resolved, That the Airline Pilots Association is opposed to the serving of alcoholic beverages aboard aircraft, the providing of setups aboard aircraft, or any other practices which will encourage drinking alcoholic beverages on board aircraft.

This legislation is also vigorously supported by airline stewardesses.

Of course, the use of intoxicating liquor does no one any good any time or any where. The excessive use of it is bound to result in harm. The question involved in this legislation goes beyond whether a person favors the use of intoxicating liquor. This involves a question of safety for those who operate the planes, as well as the passengers who ride the planes. I am amazed and disappointed that the management of the airlines would not be glad to cooperate in support of the resolution approved by the Airline Pilots Association. For years the air crews' unions have been urging nonalcoholic rules for domestic flights.

I quote from a statement that appeared in the last issue of Newsweek. Here is what it says:

Crew members have cited cases of overloaded riders slugging pilots, stewardesses cut by exploding champagne bottles, and other social problems of drinking on planes. A spokesman for the Airline Pilots Association points out that two drinks at altitude pack the wallop of four on the ground and that crews still must enforce the rules. "It is quite a job," this man added, "to be a bouncer and a pilot at the same time."

Again, I am deeply concerned that this proposal shall not be lost in the shuffle, but that it be enacted as promptly as may be done.

Mr. ELLIOTT. Mr. Chairman, I commend the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee for bringing H. R. 8000 to the floor for consideration today. I think the bill is badly needed. Last February I introduced a bill similar to the one now under consideration. You are familiar with the provisions of the bill which simply prohibit the serving of alcoholic beverages aboard air carriers.

From my own personal experience as one who travels many air-miles each year between my office here and my home in Jasper, Ala., and from the testimony given before the committee, I am convinced that the serving of alcoholic beverages aboard our air carriers constitutes a hazard to safety. Time and again we know of incidents involving drunken passengers who have disturbed the orderly and efficient operation of our airlines—even to the point of necessitating special landings.

Although there is no evidence to show that liquor and drinking was the cause of any accidents in 1955, I am not willing that we should adopt a policy of wait and see. In this day of increased air travel, I think it is of utmost importance that we take every precaution for the safety and comfort of the air traveling public.

This is not a question of whether or not one condones or condemns drinking. The question to be answered is in terms of the safety and welfare of our citizens who are patronizing the airlines in increasing numbers.

We cannot afford to compromise with safety. I urge the House to approve H. R. 8000.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. DOLLIVER] is recognized.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOLLIVER. I yield.

Mr MULTER. I would like to know what if anything would be done about certain baggage that might contain liquor.

Mr. DOLLIVER. This measure has nothing to do with that.

I am going to be brief as was the chairman of the subcommittee, Mr. HARRIS, who was chairman of the hearings on this bill.

The real support for this bill, Mr. Chairman, comes from the people who operate the planes. The airline pilots and the stewardesses are heartily in favor of this bill.

Just recently I rode from Fort Dodge, my hometown in Iowa, to Chicago on a plane. Aboard the plane was a young pilot from my district who flies for Eastern Airlines. He brought up this very subject and said that his organization and every pilot he knew was heartily in favor of this measure. This had been confirmed by testimony before the committee by the authorized representatives of both the pilots and stewardesses.

The reports before the committee, and the testimony before the committee are replete with evidence that this legislation is very much desired by the people who operate the planes. Indeed, they consider it essential. It is not only a matter of efficient operation of the planes but also of safety.

Mr. COUDERT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOLLIVER. I yield.

Mr. COUDERT. Do I understand that this bill prohibits without limitation or condition the sale of liquor on planes and does not merely authorize the CAB to impose the necessary regulations and so forth?

Mr. DOLLIVER. The bill is very short. I will read it and the gentleman can answer for himself:

(c) No air carrier shall sell or otherwise furnish to its passengers alcoholic beverages (including wine and beer) for consumption while in flight within the limits of the 48 States and the District of Columbia.

Mr. COUDERT. Have the air carriers indicated their support for this legislation?

Mr. DOLLIVER. There are some of the air carriers who are opposed to it.

Mr. COUDERT. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. JUDD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOLLIVER. I yield.

Mr. JUDD. Recently we had a terrible accident over Arizona because warnings that had been given by the persons who operate the planes with respect to safety operations and regulations, had not been heeded in time.

I once was on a plane when one of the passengers who was under the influence of liquor created a situation which was very dangerous. In fact, it was the only time I have ever been really frightened in many years of flying.

Certainly we should not wait until some great tragedy happens as the result of consumption of liquor on planes before we take action to prohibit its use under such hazardous circumstances.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Minnesota has pointed out the real issue in this measure. This is really a safety measure.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOLLIVER. I yield.

Mr. HARRIS. I think it should be said here in view of the fact that our colleague from Minnesota made the statement a moment ago referring to the terrible tragedy that occurred over the Grand Canyon: Our committee has made some investigation of that horrible situation, and I think the record should show very clearly that our investigation here, out there, and in Los Angeles showed that there was no liquor involved anywhere in connection with that incident.

Mr. JUDD. Oh, I was not intending to suggest that; I was merely reminding the House that the people who pilot our planes had long urged that there be changes by the CAA in the safety regulations to meet today's changed conditions with so many more and faster planes. The authorities are now getting around to making those changes. We should make needed changes before accidents happen. We do not want the same sort of disaster to happen again through failure now to prevent drinking on planes.

Mr. HARRIS. I did not want any impression to be left that the Arizona tragedy was due to this cause.

Mr. JUDD. And I was not in any way suggesting that it was due to liquor.

Mr. PHILLIPS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOLLIVER. I yield.

Mr. PHILLIPS. Another matter aside from the safety factor is the treatment of passengers in that form of transportation. I fly west, as we Californians have to. Shortly before dinner time, the stewardess began to serve cocktails to those who wished them, and it was an hour and a half before she was willing or permitted under the regulations to serve dinner until every cocktail drinker on the plane had had his first and second, and nursed it along as long as he wanted to. I wanted dinner at the hour it should have been served. I spoke to the stewardess about it, but she said she could not do anything until this matter of serving the cocktails had been taken care of. I think it is an imposition on the traveling public, and I am very glad indeed to vote for this bill.

Mr. DOLLIVER. I thank the gentleman.

What you have described is one of the incidental factors about this bill. There are a good many people, as has been stated, who do not care to engage in drinking who are irked a great deal on account of those who do. But that is an incidental matter to the real purpose of this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. DOLLIVER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

Mr. Chairman, the real issue here is the question of the operation of civil air planes on a safe basis. As has been pointed out by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. JUDD], there is no reason why we should add to the already great hazards that are incident to flying. Rather, we should legislate to diminish those hazards. We have a fine safety record in this country. Let us pass this bill to further that safety record.

Mr. CURTIS of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOLLIVER. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. CURTIS of Missouri. I have read the report, and the CAB in their letter and the Department of Commerce state that in their judgment there is no safety problem involved. The CAB says it has asked the organizations of flight stewardesses and the airline pilots to document their cases because, they say, there is no evidence that they have found of these alleged dangers. Now, what is the situation? The committee says it did find cases.

Mr. DOLLIVER. I would refer the gentleman to the hearings on this question. Both the stewardesses and the pilots appeared before us and recommended this legislation on the very ground I have suggested, namely, safety.

Mr. CURTIS of Missouri. Did they document it? As I say, the CAB in the committee report says there was no evidence from those groups or anywhere else that it was anything other than talk or theory.

Mr. DOLLIVER. It may be talk and theory, but there is no question in my mind but that the people who operate the planes and who fly the planes are wholeheartedly in favor of this legislation. To my mind, they documented their case fully before the committee as to the safety factor involved.

Mr. CURTIS of Missouri. I think this is a matter, of course, that you can get quite emotionally stirred up about. That is why I wanted to try to bring it back to the reasoning behind it.

Mr. PELLY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOLLIVER. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. PELLY. Would this legislation cover airlines running to our Territories, the Territory of Alaska and Hawaii?

Mr. DOLLIVER. It is confined to points within the limits of the 48 States and the District of Columbia.

Mr. PELLY. Why?

Mr. DOLLIVER. Because of the fact that when you get outside the continental limits of the United States you run into complications with respect to foreign airlines.

Mr. PELLY. You do not with respect to Alaska.

Mr. DOLLIVER. That was a matter that created some difficulties. They may come in later legislation.

Mr. PELLY. I hope it will.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOLLIVER. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. I received a letter from the Stewards and Pilots Association, and, whether they have documented this or not, when you read the letter and the incidents they have had to contend with, no one can conclude otherwise than that this is necessary from a safety angle.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOLLIVER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. KEATING. The gentleman's committee has heard a lot of evidence which we are not able to hear here. May I ask, Was the gentleman's committee unanimous in reporting this bill?

Mr. DOLLIVER. My recollection is there were two votes against it in the committee.

Mr. COUDERT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOLLIVER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. COUDERT. In view of the remarks of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. JUDD], has there been any single disaster attributable to the sale of liquor on planes?

Mr. DOLLIVER. Not that I know of; but I do not think we should wait until a disaster happens before we pass this bill.

Mr. COUDERT. Those pilots have flown many millions of miles?

Mr. DOLLIVER. That is correct.

Mr. COUDERT. Does the CAB request or approve of this bill?

Mr. DOLLIVER. The CAB has not requested it and has not approved it, but they do not run the planes.

Mr. COUDERT. They are responsible for the operation of the planes. The gentleman from Minnesota refers to this as a regulation. Is this not in effect legislating a regulation that could be just as well handled without any bill such as this? The CAB is authorized to limit and to restrict the sale of liquor.

Mr. DOLLIVER. There were some members of the committee who felt that the CAB has the authority to make this regulation but they have refused to do so.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOLLIVER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CELLER. Is there anything to prevent any passenger from buying one, two, or three bottles and taking those bottles on the plane with him and drinking them on the plane?

Mr. DOLLIVER. That is now taken care of in the regulations of the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Mr. CELLER. Does this bill make any change in that regard?

Mr. DOLLIVER. No.

Mr. CELLER. Then, a person can get as drunk as he may wish if he buys those bottles and goes on a plane. Why should you have this limitation as is prescribed in this bill?

Mr. DOLLIVER. Of course, I do not think any gentleman would get himself in that condition.

Mr. CELLER. I would not, but others would.

Mr. DOLLIVER. I urge an affirmative vote on this meritorious legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the author of the bill, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS].

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Mr. Chairman, as my colleague Mr. HARRIS said in the beginning, the purpose of this bill is so simple that it requires little, if any, explanation. However, I think it might be well to tell you what gave birth to this legislation.

Last spring while our committee was considering some aviation legislation, some representatives of the Stewards and Stewardesses Association and the Airline Pilots Association visited my office, and in a general discussion with me regarding desirable and needed changes in the laws and regulations in order to improve the safety factor in civil flying, these people asked me specifically if I would sponsor this legislation. It was at the instance of these people, who actually have to fly the aircraft, that I sponsored this bill, which would prohibit the serving of alcoholic beverages on commercial airliners.

The pilots of these aircraft are charged with the responsibility of caring for the safety of the passengers.

In civil air regulation No. 43.45, presently in effect, the pilot is charged with this responsibility. I quote from that regulation:

> A pilot shall not permit any person to be carried in the aircraft who is obviously under the influence of intoxicating liquor or drugs, except a medical patient under proper care in case of an emergency.

In other words, this regulation places upon the pilot of that aircraft the responsibility to see that no passenger who is under the influence of intoxicating liquor shall board his aircraft.

The pilots tell me that since the airlines have started serving liquor on these aircraft they have found it absolutely impossible to enforce that regulation. That when they see a drunk attempting to board their aircraft, realizing that he may cause them trouble, they do not feel that they can properly and effectively enforce this regulation. The drunk tells them: "You are already serving the stuff on the aircraft, and do you mean to tell me you are going to kick me off because I am drinking?" Now, that is what these boys are up against.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. KEATING. I was just about to say to the gentleman that I thought his previous remark would take care of the point raised by my distinguished chairman [Mr. CELLER], in that he would not be permitted to board the plane if he was in the condition he mentioned in his suppositious case.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. That is right. How is the pilot going to keep him off for being intoxicated if they are serving liquor on the aircraft?

Mr. KEATING. I can see that point, and I just want to call the attention of my chairman to the fact that apparently the present regulations are sufficient to cover his situation.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DONDERO. If there is any good defense of why liquor should be served on aircraft, will you tell this House what it is?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I am afraid I could not present a good defense. Perhaps some of these other people could. But if there is anyone in this House that knows the hazards of flying, I think it is I. Flying, at best, is hazardous, even when everything is in good working order. I can assure you that anything which contributes directly or indirectly to placing an additional hazard on the safety of the passengers in civil aircraft should be eliminated if it is at all possible.

The CAB, which is one of the most arbitrary agencies in our Government—and I do not think anybody will dispute that—has refused to recognize that the problem exists, in spite of the fact that they already have civil air regulations which prohibit persons from boarding an aircraft while under the influence of liquor.

In the beginning it was my thought that the airlines would probably support this legislation if it were extended across the board to apply to all. As a matter of fact, I talked to several representatives of some of the major airlines regarding the legislation and they told me that they would be delighted to see the practice ruled out, because for them it was a nuisance, and they were compelled, because of competition, to serve liquor.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. Chairman, would the gentleman yield to me at that point?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I am glad to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. HARRIS. On the point the gentleman has made, serious consideration has been given by the various domestic trunklines of the country to an agreement among themselves in order to control this through their own actions, but because of the attitude of some of the companies involved no such agreement was ever entered into until after this bill was reported by the committee; is not that right?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. That is exactly right.

Mr. HARRIS. Following the action of the committee in reporting the bill, which indicated that there was a serious problem here, is it not a fact that the 6 major domestic trunklines now have an agreement or a program among themselves to limit the serving of alcoholic beverages in flight?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. That is right. Even they, while opposing this legislation, admit by their actions that the problem exists.

Mr. HARRIS. I think it would be advisable to include that agreements in the RECORD, and I shall do so as part of my remarks.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I thank the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. VORYS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. VORYS. As I heard the gentleman read the regulations, the pilot has the duty of keeping intoxicated people off the plane?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. That is right.

Mr. VORYS. The way it sounded, as the gentleman read it, it would seem as though he had the duty of putting them off after they got "boiled," after they had boarded the plane; is not that correct?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I should think so, whenever possible.

Mr. VORYS. If he is going to stop at various places, does he have the duty of going through the plane and seeing who is intoxicated since they took off and then put them off, and could he be disciplined by the CAB if he did not do it? It seems to me that the present regulations puts an intolerable burden on the pilot that only this proposed legislation will take care of.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I thank my friend from Ohio. He is absolutely right. With this regulation in effect, charging the pilot with the duty and responsibility of providing for the safety of his passengers against actions by intoxicated persons, it is absolutely impossible for him to discharge that duty if the airline itself is following a policy of contributing to the intoxication of the passengers.

Mr. ZABLOCKI. Mr. Chairman, would the gentleman yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. ZABLOCKI. I know the gentleman is deeply interested and concerned, as many of us are, in the safety of passengers in flight. I would like to ask the gentleman if he contends that it is also hazardous to smoke while in flight? I have had the experience where a person who was stone-cold sober failed to put out a cigarette, fell asleep with the cigarette burning, and there was a near catastrophe.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. Of course, smoking on an aircraft is a potential fire hazard.

Mr. ZABLOCKI. Would the gentleman favor the passage of legislation prohibiting smoking while in flight?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I would not advocate it without consulting the people who have to fly the aircraft. If they feel it is a safety hazard such as to require legislation in order to eliminate it, I would be the first to introduce it for them.

Mr. ZABLOCKI. I ask the question in all sincerity, because I know how sincere the gentleman is about this problem.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Mississippi. I know the gentleman is sincere, and recognize that smoking aboard aircraft might well be an additional safety hazard.

Mr. Chairman, I believe this to be meritorious legislation, certainly in the interest of the safety of the air-traveling public, and I urge its approval.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. CELLER].

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Chairman, the question was asked, What good reasons are there for having liquor on board a plane? In the first place, the drinking of liquor is perfectly legal, and if one has the desire to drink liquor and does so one is not violating any law.

Secondly, I remember a story about a little titmouse that came upon a pool of liquor. The titmouse sipped the liquor and then perked up its head and said, "Where the devil is that cat that was chasing me yesterday?" In other words, it gave that little titmouse some courage. Liquor at times is helpful to humans.

A little bit of liquor once in a while even on a plane will not hurt. I am perfectly willing to drink a little liquor on a plane. It does not hurt me. It does not hurt the other passengers who have imbibed just a little liquor. If they drink too much, it is within the province of the stewardesses and those in charge of the plane to stop their imbibing. If there is intemperance then unruly passengers can be forced to disembark.

This bill strikes me as just a matter of appeasement. The old Bryson bill, which would prohibit advertising of intoxicating liquors in publications, has been kicking around this House for many years. That bill apparently cannot get to first base. So, by way of appeasement to the so-called drys, who are unappeasable—they are as unappeasable as inebriates themselves—they demand this bill. There is no reason for this bill. It is just a so-called sop to the drys. The committee that reported it will soon find that the drys will demand more. They will not be satisfied with only this bill.

This bill reminds me of the old days of prohibition. We had these questions up innumerable times. We finally ended the so-called noble experiment, called the 18th amendment. Are we to have those awful days all over again?

I remember during prohibition I went out to a town in the Middle West. I had been riding all night, and I wanted to get something that would warm me up a little bit, because it was a very cold night. I went to a denizen of the town and said, "Where can I get a little something to warm me up?" He said, "You cross the railroad track, go down to your right one block, and there is a schoolhouse. That's the only place in this here town where you cannot get it."

This story illustrates the futility of prohibitive liquor laws. They are unenforcible. They run counter to human wishes.

Let us not run the danger of opening the door on those awful events during prohibition. It strikes me as woefully ridiculous to pass prohibitive legislation at this time and in this era.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read the bill for amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 610 of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"FURNISHING OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES

"(c) No air carrier shall sell or otherwise furnish to its passengers alcoholic beverages (including wine and beer) for consumption while in flight within the limits of the 48 States and the District of Columbia."

With the following committee amendment:

Page 1, line 8, after "flight", insert "between points."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 8000) to amend section 610 of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938 to prohibit the serving of alcoholic beverages to airline passengers while in flight, pursuant to House Resolution 558, he reported the bill back to the House with an amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST ANNE YASGUR KLING

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Un-American Activities, I submit a privileged report (Rept. No. 2915).

The Clerk read the report, as follows:

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST ANNE YASGUR KLING

Mr. WALTER, from the Committee on Un-American Activities, submitted the following report:

The Committee on Un-American Activities, as created and authorized by the House of Representatives through the enactment of Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2) of the 79th Congress, and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress, caused to be issued a subpena to Anne Yasgur Kling, St. Louis, Mo. The said subpena directed Anne Yasgur Kling to be and appear before said Committee on Un-American Activities, or a duly authorized subcommittee thereof, of which the Honorable FRANCIS E. WALTER is chairman, in their chamber, room 516, New Federal Building, 12th and Market, St. Louis, Mo., on June 4, 1956, at the hour of 10 a. m., then and there to testify touching matters of inquiry committed to said committee, and not to depart without leave of said committee. The subpena served on said Anne Yasgur Kling is set forth in words and figures as follows:

"UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

"CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES.

"TO ANNE YASGUR KLING, Greeting: Pursuant to lawful authority, you are hereby commanded to be and appear before the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives of the United States, or a duly appointed subcommittee thereof, on June 4, 1956, at 10 o'clock a. m., at room 516, New Federal Building, 12th and Market, St. Louis, Mo., then and there to testify touching matters of inquiry committed to said committee, and not to depart without leave of said committee.

"Hereof fail not, as you will answer your default under the pains and penalties in such cases made and provided.

"To R. T. Collins and/or G. C. Williams, to serve and return.

"Given under my hand this 16th day of April, in the year of our Lord, 1956.

"FRANCIS E. WALTER,
"Chairman."

The said subpena was duly served as appears by the return made thereon by George C. Williams, who was duly authorized to serve the said subpena. The return of the service by the said George W. Williams being endorsed thereon, is set forth in words and figures, as follows:

"Subpena for Anne Y. Kling before the Committee on Un-American Activities. I made service of the within subpena by personally handing the within-named individual at her residence, 1445 Partridge, St. Louis, at 4:50 o'clock, p. m., on the 24th day of April 1956.

"Dated 4-24, 1956.

"GEORGE C. WILLIAMS."

On May 29, 1956, a telegram was sent to Mrs. Anne Yasgur Kling, which is set forth in words and figures as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 29, 1956.

Personal report delivered.

Mrs. ANNE YASGUR KLING,
1445 Partridge Street, St. Louis, Mo.

Under continuing authority of subpena served upon you April 24, your appearance before Committee on Un-American Activities is hereby postponed from June 4 to Wednesday, June 6, 1956, at 10 o'clock a. m., Courtroom 3, New Federal Building, St. Louis, Mo., instead of room 516, New Federal Building.

FRANCIS E. WALTERS, Chairman.

The said Anne Yasgur Kling, pursuant to said subpena and telegraphic communication, and in compliance therewith, appeared before a subcommittee of the said Committee on Un-American Activities on June 6, 1956, to give such testimony as required under and by virtue of Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2), of the 79th

Congress, and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress. The said Anne Yasgur Kling having appeared as a witness and having been asked the questions, namely:

"Who was the Communist Party organizer in charge of the office during that period of time? (The period referred to was the period of the witness' employment in Communist Party headquarters.)

"Did Ralph Shaw serve in the Armed Forces of the United States, as far as you know?

"Was Shaw a member of the Communist Party at the time you were there?

"Will you tell us, then, the names of such individuals who were members of the Communist Party when you were there who we may not even know about?

"Will you tell us, please, who employed you first in the Communist Party headquarters in St. Louis?"

After Mrs. Kling had testified that she was one of two persons on the Communist Party payroll, the question was asked:

"Who was that other person?

"Did you know Harold Hall?

"Now we would like to know from you, who were members known to you of the railroad group of the Communist Party?

"Do you know to whom the name Bill referred as one of those responsible for electric?

"Do you know to whom the name Sue refers?

"The reference to packing is made here with the names following it of Joe and Helen? Do you know to whom those names refer?

"Can you honestly answer the question as to whether she was a functionary of the Communist Party at any time? ('She' referred to Helen Musiel.)

"Are you acquainted with Helen Musiel?

"Was Dr. Sol Londy a member of the Communist Party during the period that you were a member of the party?

"Were you acquainted with him (Dr. Sol Londy) between 1944 and 1947?"

Which questions were pertinent to the subject under inquiry, refused to answer such questions; and as a result of Anne Yasgur Kling's refusal to answer the aforesaid questions, your committee was prevented from receiving testimony and information concerning a matter committed to said committee in accordance with the terms of the subpena served upon the said Anne Yasgur Kling.

The record of the proceedings before the subcommittee on June 6, 1956, during which the said Anne Yasgur Kling refused to answer the aforesaid questions pertaining to the subject under inquiry, is set forth in fact as follows:

"UNITED STATES
"HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
"SUBCOMMITTEE OF THE COMMITTEE
"ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES,
"St. Louis, Mo., Wednesday, June 6, 1956.

"PUBLIC HEARING

"The committee met at 9:45 a. m., pursuant to recess, in courtroom No. 3, United States Courthouse and Customs Building, St. Louis, Mo., Hon. MORGAN M. MOULDER (chairman of the subcommittee) presiding.

"Present: Representatives MORGAN M. MOULDER, JAMES B. FRAZIER, JR., and GORDON H. SCHERER.

"Present also: Frank S. Tavenner, Jr., counsel; George C. Williams, and Raymond H. Collins, investigators.

"Mr. MOULDER. The committee will be in order.

"(After hearing the testimony of other witnesses, Mrs. Anne Yasgur Kling was called before the committee.)

"Mr. MOULDER. * * * Call the next witness, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Anne Yasgur.

"Mr. ROUDEBUSH. Kling.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mrs. Anne Kling.

"Mr. MOULDER. Hold up your right hand and be sworn, please.

"Do you solemnly swear that the testimony which you are about to give before this committee will be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

"Mrs. KLING. I do.

TESTIMONY OF ANNE YASGUR KLING; ACCOMPANIED BY HER COUNSEL, G. S. ROUDEBUSH

"Mr. ROUDEBUSH. My name is G. S. Roudebush. I am a member of this bar, and represent Mrs. Kling.

"Mr. TAVENNER. What is your name, please?

"Mrs. KLING. Anne Ruth Kling.

"Mr. TAVENNER. What was your maiden name?

"Mrs. KLING. Yasgur, Y-a-s-g-u-r.

"Mr. TAVENNER. How do you spell your last name—Kling?

"Mrs. KLING. K-l-i-n-g.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Where do you reside?

"Mrs. KLING. 1445 Partridge Avenue, University City, postal zone 14, Mo.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Are you a native of St. Louis?

"Mrs. KLING. No.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Where were you born?

"Mrs. KLING. In Bradford, Pa.

"Mr. TAVENNER. When did you move to St. Louis?

"Mrs. KLING. In the summer of 1944.

"Mr. TAVENNER. How long have you been married?

"Mrs. KLING. We were married January 1, 1948.

"Mr. TAVENNER. What was your employment between 1944 in St. Louis and 1948, if any?

"Mrs. KLING. I had various stenographic jobs, but I worked for the Communist Party in the Communist Party office for a period of time. And I sold subscriptions to New Masses magazine.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Where was the Communist Party headquarters located at the time you were employed in the office?

"Mrs. KLING. I think it was on North Seventh Street here in downtown St. Louis.

"Mr. TAVENNER. That employment began when?

"Mrs. KLING. Well, I believe—I am not sure—sometime in the winter of 1945.

"Mr. TAVENNER. How long did the employment continue?

"Mrs. KLING. I started about the winter of 1945, and, well, I left the party payroll at various times to take ordinary stenographic jobs, and it was intermittent between the winter of 1945, probably, to the winter of 1946.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Who was the Communist Party organizer in charge of the office during that period of time?

"Mrs. KLING. Mr. Tavenner, I will tell you anything that you want to know about myself and my activities, anything you want to know, I have nothing to conceal. I engaged in no criminal or no illegal activity.

"But I am not a tattletale, and I don't want to snitch on anybody.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Chairman, may I ask for a direction that the witness answer the question.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer. And, as other witnesses have been advised, we are not directing you to answer the question in the spirit of a threat but for the reason that the committee is not satisfied and does not accept your response to the question, and for the further reason advising you of the possibility of the dangers of contempt proceedings.

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mrs. KLING. Mr. Tavenner, my lawyer advises me that the question of exposure of other individuals simply for the case of exposure is not a settled question in law, and until it is a settled question my conscience would prevent me from tattling on other people.

"Mr. SCHERER. I think we should say that the full bench of the circuit court of appeals recently reversed a ruling of the three members of that court.

"Mr. ROUDEBUSH. May I be heard on that, Mr. Scherer?

"Mr. SCHERER. I am just saying——

"Mr. ROUDEBUSH. I should say that I spoke yesterday on the telephone to counsel for Watkins in that case, and he told me that he was applying for certiorari to the United States Supreme Court.

"Mr. MOULDER. May I say, of course, that you are going under the presumption that we are merely seeking to expose somebody, which is not true. It is a wrong and false presumption.

"Proceed, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. SCHERER. Don't you think we should further say now that we are now considering legislation and that testimony that this witness might give, if she would, would be helpful in that respect.

"Mr. MOULDER. Yes; we would take that position. Such information as you may be in a position to give us might aid this committee in its deliberations and consideration of legislation.

"Now do you still wish to refuse to answer for the reasons which you have given?

"Mrs. KLING. Yes. Telling on other people is an abhorrent thing to me.

"Mr. MOULDER. Proceed, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you acquainted with Ralph Shaw?

"Mrs. KLING. That is the same question essentially. You are asking me to identify a person, and I just can't identify other people.

"I wish you would ask me what I did, how I behaved.

"Mr. SCHERER. You understand, madam, that that is not your responsibility as to whether you are going to tell what you know about other individuals.

"Our society and our courts could not function if any witness that came into a court or into a congressional hearing took it upon himself to say that he is not going to tell what he knows about other people.

"It is distasteful all of the time, even in the courtroom for a person to come in and say that he saw his neighbor beat his wife. He may not want to say that, but merely because he likes that neighbor he can't refuse to tell the court, nor could he refuse to tell a congressional committee what he knows merely because it is distasteful to him.

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mr. MOULDER. Proceed, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. SCHERER. Our whole system of jurisprudence would fall if witnesses could take it upon themselves to say "I don't want to tell what I know about people merely because I don't like to do it, that it is distasteful."

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did Ralph Shaw serve in the Armed Forces of the United States, as far as you know?

"Mrs. KLING. I decline to answer the question in relation to other individuals. I am relying somewhat on counsel's advice that this question of holding people up to public scorn is an open question.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did you substitute in any way and——

"Mr. SCHERER. Just a minute.

"I think we have got to get this record straight, particularly insofar as this witness is concerned.

"If witnesses could come in and say they just don't want to tell what they know about other people because it might have an unfavorable effect upon them—I think I must ask that you direct the witness to answer the question.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is so directed to answer the question.

"Mrs. KLING. My conscience will not permit me to answer.

"Mr. SCHERER. You are refusing to answer solely because your conscience will not permit you to answer?

"Mrs. KLING. Yes.

"Mr. MOULDER. Proceed, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. SCHERER. We should state for the record certainly this committee is not asking these questions for the purpose of exposing any individual. The committee is asking these questions so that it will be better enabled to recommend to the Congress such legislation as it thinks necessary to deal with the Communist conspiracy which still exists in this country.

"Mr. TAVENNER. The committee has received sworn testimony that Ralph Shaw was an organizer of the Communist Party in St. Louis, but that there was a period of time when he was absent while serving in the Armed Forces of the United States.

"Did you carry on the function of an organizer of the Communist Party at any time while Ralph Shaw was not here?

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mrs. KLING. I worked in the Communist Party office sometime during the winter of 1945, and I believe it continued to the winter of 1946 or thereabouts. I left, I quit the Communist Party in the summer of 1947. I have never attended any more Communist Party meetings. That was 9 years ago.

"I understand that I was expelled for desertion.

"That is the story.

"Mr. SCHERER. Then you would have no way of knowing, madam, whether this man Shaw or any of the other individuals about whom Mr. Tavenner wants to inquire are still members of the Communist Party and are still active. You would have no way of knowing?

"Mrs. KLING. That is true. That is absolately true.

"Mr. SCHERER. And it is possible that they might be?

"Mrs. KLING. It is possible; yes.

"Mr. SCHERER. Was Shaw a member of the Communist Party at the time you were there?

"Mrs. KLING. I will answer any question about myself.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct now the witness to answer the question as to whether Shaw was a member of the Communist Party, because obviously he may still be a member of the Communist Party today, and may still be engaged in subversive activities against this country.

"And it may be that we will want to call Shaw or other people connected with Shaw to determine what the Communist conspiracy is doing at this present moment in this area. And as the result, we may want to recommend legislation to the Congress of the United States to deal with the continued activities of the Communist conspiracy.

"Mr. MOULDER. As requested by Mr. SCHERER, the witness is informed that the committee does not accept your response to the question, and you are directed to answer.

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mrs. KLING. What was the question? Excuse me.

"Mr. MOULDER. He asked you if——

"Mr. SCHERER. If Shaw was a member of the Communist Party at the time she was.

"Mrs. KLING. Mr. SCHERER, my conscience will not permit me to name other individuals whom I may or may not have known during the 3 years—9 years ago—that I was in the Communist Party.

"Mr. SCHERER. Yet you understand that people who were in the Communist Party at the time you were there may still be in the Communist Party today?

"Mrs. KLING. I have no way of knowing, Mr. SCHERER.

"Mr. SCHERER. Will you tell us the name—I know you don't have any way of knowing—will you tell us then the names of such individuals who were members of the Communist Party when you were there who we may not even know about?

"Mrs. KLING. I cannot sit here and be a tattletale, Mr. SCHERER. I just can't do that kind of thing.

"Mr. SCHERER. Then, as I understand it, you are refusing to answer my questions solely because you feel that your conscience will not permit you to tell us about individuals who were members of the Communist Party when you were a member of the Communist Party who may be members of the party today.

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mrs. KLING. Yes, Mr. SCHERER; for that reason and for the further reason that it is still an open question as to whether the law compels information about individuals which may not serve a legislative purpose.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct the witness to answer my question.

"Mr. MOULDER. Your response is not accepted by the committee, and you are directed to answer as requested by Mr. SCHERER.

"Mrs. KLING. I cannot answer.

"Mr. MOULDER. All right.

"Proceed, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. TAVENNER. You did not answer the question that I asked you. My question was whether or not during the absence of Mr. Shaw you carried on the functions of an organizer of the Communist Party in St. Louis.

"Mrs. KLING. Let's see. What exactly did I do?

"I don't know that you would call it an organizer. I wrote leaflets. I ran them off on a mimeograph. I may have distributed them on the street corners. I participated actively. I don't believe I ever had the appellation 'organizer.'

"Mr. TAVENNER. My question was whether you served in that capacity during the absence of Mr. Shaw. It would be very easy for you to answer that question 'Yes' or 'No' according to whatever the facts are.

"Mrs. KLING. Well, I would say—

(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mrs. KLING. I was not an organizer.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I asked you if you carried on the duties of an organizer of the Communist Party during the absence of Mr. Shaw.

"Mrs. KLING. The duties as an organizer, yes, I suppose that would be so, never being termed an organizer.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Though you did not have the title of an organizer you carried on the work of Mr. Shaw when Mr. Shaw was in the Army, didn't you?

(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mrs. KLING. I was carrying on work that might be called that of an organizer.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Ralph Shaw was your brother-in-law; wasn't he?

"Mrs. KLING. I will not bring in names, according to my conscience.

(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask you direct the witness——

"Mr. TAVENNER. Excuse me, Mr. Scherer.

(Mr. Tavenner confers with the committee.)

"Mr. MOULDER. The request is made that you be directed to answer, and you are so directed.

"Mrs. KLING. Excuse me. The question again, please?

"Mr. TAVENNER. Will you read the witness the question.

(Whereupon, the record was read by the reporter, as follows:)

"'Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Ralph Shaw was your brother-in-law; wasn't he?'

"Mrs. KLING. Yes.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Had you been a member of the Communist Party before you accepted employment in the Communist Party headquarters?

"Mrs. KLING. Yes.

"Mr. TAVENNER. When and where did you join the Communist Party?

"Mrs. KLING. In St. Louis.

"Mr. TAVENNER. In St. Louis?

"Mrs. KLING. In the summer of 1944.

* * * * *

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you a member of the Communist Party at any time before coming to St. Louis?

"Mrs. KLING. No; I was a member of the Young Communist League in college, and, as a member of the Young Communist League, I wasn't a member of the Communist Party.

"Mr. MOULDER. At what college was that?

"Mrs. KLING. Missouri University.

* * * * *

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did functionaries of the Communist Party appear in your Young Communist League meetings from time to time?

"Mrs. KLING. Well, I will have to think because that was 1943–44. That is 12 and 13 years ago and I really will have to think.

"Whether anybody—well, it could be but I couldn't say for sure.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did any functionary of the Communist Party who appeared before your group ever confer with you after leaving college about your becoming a member of the Communist Party?

"Mrs. KLING. You know I think that when I left college I was so dedicated that I just went up to the Communist Party office and joined.

"Mr. TAVENNER. In Columbia or in St. Louis?

"Mrs. KLING. In St. Louis.

"Mr. TAVENNER. In St. Louis?

"Mrs. KLING. Yes.

"Mr. TAVENNER. How long a period of time before 1944 had you considered yourself a dedicated Communist?

"Mrs. KLING. Well, maybe I used the word dedicated ill-advisedly, but I was probably—let's see. I was a member of the Young Communist League toward the end of 1943 and through 1944, to the best of my knowledge.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Will you tell us, please, who employed you first in the Communist Party headquarters in St. Louis.

"Mrs. KLING. Well, that would involve more names, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Yes; it would involve a name.

"Mrs. KLING. And I think that I will just wait and see what the Supreme Court has to say on this.

"Mr. TAVENNER. May I ask a direction of the witness to answer.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer the question.

"Mrs. KLING. My conscience will not permit me to answer.

"Mr. TAVENNER. How many persons were employed in the headquarters besides you?

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mrs. KLING. I think the Communist Party payroll at that time consisted of two persons, myself and one other.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Who was that other person?

"Mrs. KLING. I cannot answer.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask you direct the witness to answer.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer.

"Mrs. KLING. I cannot answer.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Was that other person the organizer or was it a fellow employee, another person employed by the organizer?

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mrs. KLING. Well, when the men went off to the Army the women of the Communist Party were supposed to take over and run things. But nobody got titles as far as I can remember.

"Mr. TAVENNER. But when the leadership of the Communist Party went in the Army, their wives took over?

"Mrs. KLING. I don't know that they were necessarily wives.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Or the men took over?

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mr. ROUDEBUSH. You said 'or the men took over.'

"Mr. TAVENNER. No. The women took over.

"Mrs. KLING. Yes; I think that when the men went off to war women entered the factories to become riveters, et cetera. That is probably what happened.

"Mr. TAVENNER. You were one of those who wanted to keep the Communist Party going until the men got back?

"Mrs. KLING. Yes; I guess you would say that.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Well, did you maintain a list of the membership of the Communist Party at the time that you acted in that capacity?

"Mrs. KLING. There were lists of members. And I would address envelopes and ask members to attend meetings. Yes; lists were available to me.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you the dues secretary?

"Mrs. KLING. No; I wasn't the dues secretary.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Who was?

"Mrs. KLING. I cannot answer that question, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer.

"Mr. SCHERER. May I interpose one question?

"You know who the dues secretary was, though, do you not?

"Mrs. KLING. Mr. Scherer, I don't really remember. I honestly don't remember.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Do you have any list of the membership?

"Mrs. KLING. Now?

"Mr. TAVENNER. Yes.

"Mrs. KLING. Oh, no; I left the party 9 years ago. And then I was expelled for desertion. That is my understanding.

"Mr. TAVENNER. How did the Communist Party raise the money with which to carry on its operations during the period of time you were serving in the capacity you have described?

"Mrs. KLING. I think it was mainly contributions from members.

* * * * *

"Mr. TAVENNER. How soon after you became a member of the Communist Party in 1944 was it you became employed in the headquarters, Communist Party headquarters in this city?

"Mrs. KLING. I can't give you the exact time, but I believe it may have been around February or March of 1945. But my memory on that is faulty. I was employed but I can't give you the exact date.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Specifically what office was it in which you were employed? Was it on a district level or city level?

"Mrs. KLING. I think it was on the district level. Yes, I think it was the district.

"Mr. TAVENNER. The district level. And the district at that time consisted of the States of Missouri and Arkansas; did it not?

"Mrs. KLING. You know I have forgotten. You may be right. You may be right.

"Mr. TAVENNER. There were at that time organized groups of the Communist Party not only in St. Louis but in what is referred to as outstate Missouri. Isn't that true?

"Mrs. KLING. Yes, yes.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Kansas City and other places.

"Did you say 'Yes'?

"Mrs. KLING. Yes.

"Mr. TAVENNER. How long did you remain in the position that you spoke of in the district headquarters?

"Mrs. KLING. Let's see——

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did you say until 1947? I understood you to so state.

"Mrs. KLING. No; it wasn't—I don't believe—I think it was toward the end of 1946 that I was no longer employed, but I am not absolutely sure.

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mr. TAVENNER. In your earlier testimony you stated 1947, I understood.

"Mrs. KLING. My lawyer advises me that you may be confusing the date I left the party with the date I left working directly for the Communist Party.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Very well. If you will give us the facts, whatever they are.

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mr. TAVENNER. Do you have any document or memorandum that you could use to refresh your recollection?

"Mrs. KLING. No; I am sorry I don't. I am trying very hard to remember for you.

"Mr. ROUDEBUSH. This paper she is looking at, Mr. Tavenner, is notes that I made of what she told me.

"Mr. TAVENNER. That is quite all right.

"Mrs. KLING. As far as I can remember, I sold subscriptions to New Masses magazine from around the fall of 1945 until January of 1946.

"No; that wouldn't be right.

"And I worked at the Communist Party office from around the winter of 1945—yes, this is correct—until the winter of around 1946. I believe this is correct.

"Mr. TAVENNER. The winter of 1946?

"Mrs. KLING. I honestly can't swear to this. I realize I am under oath, and I don't want to make a mistake.

"Mr. TAVENNER. All I want you to do is to be as nearly correct as you can.

"I believe you said you left the Communist Party in 1947.

"Mrs. KLING. Yes, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. What time in 1947?

"Mrs. KLING. It was somewhere in the summer, June or July, possibly August, of 1947, I stopped attending meetings.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did you attend any Communist Party meetings after June or July 1947?

"Mrs. KLING. I don't believe so, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. You are not certain?

"Mrs. KLING. Let's see.

"I am fairly certain, but that is 9 years ago. And while I am under oath, I am not going to say 9 years ago——

"Mr. TAVENNER. You could be mistaken about that?

"Mrs. KLING. Possibly, possibly.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Will you tell the committee whether or not it was the practice in the Communist Party to require the membership to subscribe for the Daily Worker?

"Mrs. KLING. Yes; I think members were—they wanted the members to read the paper; yes.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Why?

"Mrs. KLING. I suppose to inform them on their stand on current events.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Is it not correct that the Daily Worker carried the Communist Party line, the decisions of the Communist Party, which the membership should follow?

"Mrs. KLING. Yes; that is true.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Are you familiar with the activity of Grace Granich in procuring directives from the Soviet Union and having them carried as news articles in the Daily Worker for the purpose of informing the membership of the Communist Party as to the Communist decisions?

"Mrs. KLING. I have never heard of—is it a woman?

"Mr. TAVENNER. Yes.

"Mrs. KLING. No.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Didn't you continue to subscribe to the Daily Worker to a much later date than 1947?

"Mrs. KLING. I may have. I don't think I did, but I may have. I know I wasn't subscribing to it in 1948; I am pretty sure I wasn't. But I can't honestly, you know, say.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did you receive it regularly in 1948?

"Mrs. KLING. I don't really remember. I don't think so. But I don't honestly remember.

"I may have wanted to let the subscription run out and get the paper for nothing.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Why were you interested in receiving the Daily Worker after you had withdrawn from the Communist Party?

"Mrs. KLING. Well, I really—

"You apparently have information that I did, and I guess if you have it then it is correct. But I can't remember that I was interested. I probably was letting a subscription take its normal course and didn't stop it.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mrs. King, I have read into evidence a document entitled 'Proposed Plan for Missouri State Building Conference, March 2 and 3, 1946' which sets forth the Communist Party plan in Missouri. This was at a period when you were in the district office of the Communist Party in St. Louis.

"Mr. MOULDER. Mr. Tavenner, may I interrupt to announce we are pleased and honored to have with us Congressman CHARLIE HALLECK of Indiana, floor leader of the House of Representatives of the United States.

"Proceed.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Yes, sir.

"I would like to read to you this part in the document. The heading of this part of the document is:

" 'THE MINIMUM REQUIREMENTS FOR FULFILLING CONCENTRATION TASKS

" 'It is proposed that the minimum number of recruits shall come from the following industries:

" 'AFL, 26; electrical, 25; shoe, 25 (including AFL shoe workers).

" 'Packing, 25, including "KC" which may mean Kansas City.

" 'Auto, 15, including KC.

"Railroad, 15, including KC. Outstate, 25.

" 'Youth and vets, 25.

" 'Negro and professionals, 100 as a generally minimum figure.

" 'It is proposed that new branches and clubs shall be organized in the following places—'

"I will refer to that a little later.

"Do you recall at this time the success attained by the Communist Party in meeting the minimum requirements for fulfilling the concentration tasks in 1946?

"Mrs. KLING. The Communist Party was always having party-building conferences. They were always putting up goals to be met. And I honestly don't remember whether those aims were achieved or not. I rather think they weren't, but I couldn't swear to it.

"Mr. TAVENNER (continuing to read the document):

" 'It is proposed that new branches and clubs shall be organized in the following places: 5 additional shop branches, at least 1 of these in KC; county clubs in Overland, Kinloch, and Kirkwood.'

"Do you recall whether clubs were organized in Overland, Kinloch, and Kirkwood?

"Mrs. KLING. No; I really don't know.

"Now I went to Kansas City for several months in 1946—I don't know whether you have that information or not—in an attempt to recruit members and build up the Kansas City party. Success was not too great, and I returned to St. Louis, I think, in the fall or the early winter months of 1947.

"Mr. TAVENNER. In Kansas City did you work among the railroad group referred to in this document, in which it was said that there should be 15 recruited in railroad, including Kansas City?

"Mrs. KLING. I don't believe I ever worked directly with any railroad group. I don't think there were any 15 members either.

"Mr. TAVENNER. How many were there?

"Mrs. KLING. Well, let me see. Ten years ago. There may have been 2 or 3.

"Mr. TAVENNER. We have heard testimony here that Otto Wangerin——

"Mrs. KLING. What is the name?

"Mr. TAVENNER. Otto Wangerin, a Communist Party functionary on a national level and one of the members of the railroad unit of the Communist Party—as it was described by the witness but which we think meant that he was one of the railroad commission of the Communist Party on a national level—came here to St. Louis and met with the Communist Party here for the purpose of concentrating work among railroad employees. The testimony is that he stated to the St. Louis group of Communists that the railroads were of vital importance to the Communist Party, that the very life of a democracy such as ours depends upon transportation, and no revolution could be complete unless the Communist Party controlled the railroads. Do you recall the appearance of Mr. Otto Wangerin?

"Mrs. KLING. I really don't. I don't recall him at all. The name isn't familiar to me.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Now you state that here in St. Louis there were 2 or 3 members of the railroad group.

"Mrs. KLING. No. You misunderstood me. I don't know what they had at St. Louis in the railroad group. I was talking about Kansas City.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Kansas City. There were 2 or 3 in Kansas City?

"Mrs. KLING. As far as I know and can remember now.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Do you recall whether Harold Hall was a member of the railroad group here in St. Louis?

"Mrs. KLING. Well, there we come to names again, and I honestly didn't know anything about their railroad group at St. Louis.

"Mr. SCHERER. Did you know Harold Hall?

"Mrs. KLING. I cannot answer that, sir.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct the witness to answer the question.

"Mr. MOULDER. As requested by Mr. SCHERER, the witness is directed to answer.

"Mr. SCHERER. You are refusing to answer it on the basis that your conscience will not permit you to answer?

"Mrs. KLING. But not only that; but also that there may be an open legal question as to whether mere naming of names serves the purpose that the committee desires.

"Mr. SCHERER. We settled that this morning.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I assure you that this is no question of merely naming of names. There is information indicating that Mr. Hall is an important member of the Communist Party in St. Louis today. Your testimony on his activities and just what his activities were in the Communist Party may be of vital importance to us if you will give it to us.

"Mr. SCHERER. For the purpose of determining legislation which the committee now has and presently has under consideration.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Yes, sir.

"Mrs. KLING. Well, frankly I didn't have much to do with the industrial end of the party. I was more, well, how to put it—

"I don't believe I ever planned any of this, whatever it is that you are driving at. My own interests in the ideology were on an intellectual level, and I can't say that I ever concentrated in this area that you are talking about at all. I don't know the workings of it.

"Mr. TAVENNER. The intellectuals in the Communist Party were used by the Communist Party to aid in recruiting in industry, in railroads, and in other vital areas in which the Communist Party was interested. Isn't that true? Wasn't that one of the principal functions of the intellectuals in the Communist Party?

"Mrs. KLING. Well, I will say this for myself personally, that I don't recall signing up any member who was in industry. I myself didn't do this.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I am asking your knowledge about things, not only just what you yourself did. You have told us that you were active in the headquarters of the Communist Party performing the duties normally exercised by an organizer while the leadership of the Communist Party was in the war. You have indicated that you have special knowledge of those things.

"Now we would like to know from you who were members known to you of the railroad group of the Communist Party.

"Mrs. KLING. Well, Mr. Tavenner, for the major period of my activities in the party, the party operated on a neighborhood basis. They had a South Side branch and they had a West Side branch. And I don't recall my participating in any industrial conference or working with any industrial unit. I was working with the neighborhood branches which were organized on the basis of where people lived and not where they worked.

"Mr. SCHERER. Mr. Chairman, she has evaded answering the question of counsel, and I ask you to direct her to answer the question.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness has been evasive, and the committee does respectfully direct you to answer the question.

"Mrs. KLING. I am sorry. I don't want to be evasive. I will try to answer the question. Would you ask me again?

"Mr. TAVENNER. Yes.

"Will you read the question, please?

"Mr. SCHERER. The question was whether or not she knew the names of those individuals who were in the railroad segment of the Communist Party.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I would like for the exact question to be read.

"(Whereupon the record was read by the reporter, as follows:)

" 'Mr. TAVENNER. I am asking your knowledge about things, not only just what you yourself did. You have told us that you were active in the headquarters of the Communist Party performing the duties normally exercised by an organizer while the leadership of the Communist Party was in the war. You have indicated that you have special knowledge of those things.

" 'Now we would like to know from you who were members known to you of the railroad group of the Communist Party.'

"Mrs. KLING. Well, I have to say that I cannot tell names.

"Mr. SCHERER. Mr. Chairman, I ask that you direct the witness to answer the question.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is redirected to answer the question.

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mrs. KLING. Excuse me.

"Mr. MOULDER. You are directed by the committee to answer the question.

"Mrs. KLING. Well, on the grounds of conscience and the question, the open legal question of exposure, I will have to decline the answer.

"Mr. TAVENNER. This very document, issued on the 3d day of March 1946, states that—

" 'In this campaign the aim of every comrade must be to recruit only those who will be active, who will contribute to achieve the following qualitative and quantitative improvements of our party organization.'

"And one of the qualitative items is this:

" 'Qualitative improvement in the existing neighborhood clubs and organization of series of new clubs in the important political and industrial sections.'

"And you have told us that you went to Kansas City for several months that same year after that time and engaged in recruiting work.

"Mrs. KLING. Trying to recruit.

"Mr. TAVENNER. You said that there were 2 or 3 members of the railroad group in Kansas City. Who were they?

"Mrs. KLING. Mr. Tavenner, I honestly don't remember their names. That is 10 years ago, and I don't remember their names.

"Mr. MOULDER. If you could remember, would you tell us?

"Mrs. KLING. No, Mr. MOULDER.

"Mr. ROUDEBUSH. If I may, as we do in court, object to the question as to what she might do.

"Mr. TAVENNER. In this document, issued in March of 1946, pursuant to which you engaged in recruiting work, appears this statement:

" 'Following are some of the proposed assignments:

" 'Electrical—'

"And then the name 'Dottie' appears after that, and the name 'Zollie.' We have had testimony here that Dottie referred to a Mrs. James Sage. We have heard testimony that Zollie referred to Zollie Carpenter.

"Do you know to whom the name 'Bill' referred as one of those responsible for electric?

"Mrs. KLING. I cannot answer for the reasons I gave heretofore.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct the witness to answer.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is respectfully directed to answer the question.

"Mr. TAVENNER. The designation—excuse me.

"Mrs. KLING. I am sorry, but I cannot answer the question on the basis of the previous explanation.

"Mr. MOULDER. You mean you refuse to answer for the same reasons previously stated?

"Mrs. KLING. Yes; that is right.

"Mr. TAVENNER. The designation of youth is made with the names after it of Ray and Sue.

"We have heard evidence that Ray referred to Ray Wolverin. Do you know to whom the name 'Sue' refers?

"Mrs. KLING. Mr. Tavenner, I will have to decline to answer that because I cannot be a tattletale, and also because there is a question of whether naming certain names would be helpful to the developing of legislation on these matters.

"Mr. TAVENNER. The reference to packing is made here with the names following it of Joe and Helen. Do you know to whom those names refer?

"Mrs. KLING. Well, I decline to answer for the same reasons, the same two reasons given in my previous answers.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Wasn't Helen Musiel a functionary of the Communist Party here in March of 1946? By here I mean in St. Louis.

"Mrs. KLING. I will have to decline to answer that question.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct the witness to answer that question.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer.

"Mr. SCHERER. Helen Musiel is a witness that we have under subpena for this very hearing and who has failed to answer that subpena because of an alleged defect in the subpena. So it can be readily seen why this witness' testimony with reference to Helen Musiel is important.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer the question.

"Mrs. KLING. I will decline to answer that. You are questioning me about things that occurred 10 years ago. A lot of the questions I honestly couldn't answer if I wanted to. But I will have to continue to decline the naming of other people because that kind of thing is just abhorrent to me.

"Mr. SCHERER. The matter of Helen Musiel is a very present matter before this committee. Any information that you have regarding Helen Musiel is vitally important to this committee.

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mr. TAVENNER. Can you honestly answer the question I ask you regarding Helen Musiel, if you desired to answer it?

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mrs. KLING. That seems a hypothetical question.

"Mr. TAVENNER. No. You said that there are some people that you could not honestly answer. I am asking you if you can honestly answer that question as to Helen Musiel.

"Mrs. KLING. And the original question was, sir?

"Mr. TAVENNER. Was whether or not Helen Musiel was a functionary of the Communist Party in March 1946.

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mrs. KLING. My best recollection is that I don't know.

"Mrs. TAVENNER. Did you work in the same office with her?

"Mrs. KLING. In March of 1946?

"Mr. TAVENNER. Any time in 1946.

"Mrs. KLING. There we are on names again.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Yes; it is the same name that you couldn't remember a moment ago.

"Mrs. KLING. No. I was answering your specific question as to a specific time, Mr. Tavenner, before. Now you are asking a more general question.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Very well. You are unable to answer as to the specific date of March 2 or 3.

"Can you honestly answer the question as to whether she was a functionary of the Communist Party at any time?

"(The witness confers with counsel.)

"Mrs. KLING. That is another question, sir. And I cannot answer a question like that.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct the witness to answer that question because it is vitally important. And what happened here this morning demonstrates the fallacy of the position she takes.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer.

"Mrs. KLING. I decline to answer for the previous reasons given.

"Mr. MOULDER. May I also ask you, do you know Helen Musiel? Are you acquainted with Helen Musiel?

"Mrs. KLING. Well, I will have to decline to answer that question.

"Mr. MOULDER. And the committee cannot accept that response to the question. You are directed to answer the question.

"I said the committee cannot accept that reason for refusing to answer that question, and you are directed to answer.

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mrs. KLING. In view of the context of the question in relation to what happened this morning, the nonappearance of this person, I would like to state that as of now, I know nothing about this person.

"Mr. MOULDER. As of what?

"Mrs. KLING. As of now I know nothing about this person.

"Mr. MOULDER. I asked you if you were acquainted with her.

"Mrs. KLING. Well, I decline to answer, Mr. Moulder.

"Mr. SCHERER. Did you ever know her?

"Mrs. KLING. I decline to answer on the basis of the previous reasons given.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct the witness to answer.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer.

"Mr. SCHERER. When was the last time you saw Helen Musiel?

"Mrs. KLING. I cannot answer for the reasons previously given.

"Mr. SCHERER. When was the last time you had any contact with Helen Musiel?

"Mrs. KLING. I cannot name names here of other people. I am willing to tell you whatever you want to know about myself and what I did.

* * * * *

"Mr. TAVENNER. Will you tell the committee, please, whether Helen Musiel worked in the same office in the district headquarters of the Communist Party with you.

"Mrs. KLING. I decline to answer because it involves naming another individual, and I don't want to injure other people.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Another notation from the document of March 2 is 'Auto' followed by the name Maries. Do you know to whom Marie refers?

"Mrs. KLING. Gosh, I might and I might not, sir. So I will just have to decline on the basis that I do not want to harm other individuals.

"Mr. TAVENNER. There is also the notation 'Railroad' after which is the name Helen. Is that the same Helen who had the responsibility for packinghouse?

"Mrs. KLING. I will have to decline to answer that on the same grounds previously given.

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mr. TAVENNER. I want at this time also to refer to Schoemehl Exhibit 1. This is a Communist Party document entitled 'Organization Department, Report to Clubs, April 14, 1947' and it reads as follows, or at least part of it does:

"'Following consultation with the national organization commission of our party, the Missouri State board has made a number of important decisions. These decisions are for the purpose of strengthening our party and its leadership in order that our party can fulfill its role in organizing and leading the struggles of our class and our people in Missouri. These decisions on organization include:

"'1. That the Missouri district implement immediately and seriously its concentration policy in the electrical and machine industry by establishing a concentration section plus the assignment of one full-time person to head the concentration work.'

"Who was appointed as a full-time person to head that concentration work, if you know?

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mrs. KLING. I honestly don't know.

"Mr. TAVENNER. You do not know?

"Mrs. KLING. No, sir. If I did know at one time I can't remember now.

"Mr. TAVENNER. The Communist Party did concentrate in the electrical and machine industry; did it not?

"Mrs. KLING. Yes.

"Mr. TAVENNER. At that time Ray Koch, who signed this document as organizational secretary, was in fact the organizational secretary; was he not?

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mrs. KLING. That is a name. I will have to decline to answer Mr. Tavenner, on the same grounds that I won't tattle on other people.

"Mr. TAVENNER. You are certainly not tattling on Ray Koch, whose name is appended to this document as organizational secretary.

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mrs. KLING. Well, if that is what the document says that is what it is.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did you serve under him?

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mrs. KLING. That is a name question again.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer.

"Mrs. KLING. That involves my disclosing a relationship with someone else, which might do harm to him because of my membership at the time. And so I have to decline to answer.

"Mr. SCHERER. What was the reason for declining to answer that question? Would you repeat that?

"Mrs. KLING. That if I answered it might—well, if I were asked if I knew Joe Blow in 1946, and I said I did he might get in trouble because it might be assumed that since I was a member that he was a member.

"Mr. TAVENNER. What about your Government?

"Mrs. KLING. I have a high respect for my Government.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Don't you think your Government will get in difficulty if it doesn't do something about the Communist business, that the Congress may understand what is going on in the Communist Party?

"Mrs. KLING. Well, what is going on? I don't know what is going on in the Communist Party, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Yes. And the only way we can find out is to call before this committee persons who do know. And you are in a position to give us the information as to some of the persons who may still be very active in the organization here in the city at this moment.

"Mrs. KLING. Well, I don't know that, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Now I want to ask you this question: In this original document which I mentioned to you, the one bearing date of March 2 and 3, 1946, reference is made to this, that there should be established at least one professional cell of the Communist Party. What is meant by a professional cell of the Communist Party?

"Mrs. KLING. Well, my interpretation of that would be it would be composed of people who were in the professions—the arts, and sciences, law.

"Mr. TAVENNER. The intellectuals?

"Mrs. KLING. Yes, I suppose you could say that.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Well, you were one of the intellectuals. Were you a member of a professional cell of the Communist Party?

"Mrs. KLING. No, I was not.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Was there a professional cell of the Communist Party during the period that you were active in the district headquarters?

"Mrs. KLING. Let's see. I honestly don't remember. My impression now is that the professionals were in the neighborhood clubs that I mentioned before. Now I am not sure about this.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Let me see if I can refresh your recollection. We have had testimony from Mr. Schoemehl, who was in the Communist Party at the instance of the Federal Bureau of Investigation during the period of time that you were——

"Mr. SCHERER. May I interrupt, Mr. Tavenner?

"Mr. TAVENNER. Yes, sir.

"Mr. SCHERER. Here is a man who testified before this committee under oath and admitted his membership in the Communist Party and told why he was in the Communist Party. Did you know Mr. Schoemehl?

"Mrs. KLING. I don't want to bring in any names.

"Mr. SCHERER. You don't want to bring in any names because it might hurt that individual. How could it hurt Mr. Schoemehl? Mr. Schoemehl appeared before us on Saturday in executive session under oath and admitted his membership in the Communist Party, and told why he was in the Communist Party, and gave us an abundance of testimony. Now what happens to your argument or your statement that it is going to hurt him for you to tell us whether you knew Schoemehl?

"Mrs. KLING. Even on Schoemehl I am willing to say what I did, and talk about party structure and so forth, but not names.

"Mr. SCHERER. Mr. Chairman, I think that we have demonstrated here the utter fallacy of the position of this witness. I ask that you direct the witness to answer the question whether she knew Schoemehl.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer.

"Mrs. KLING. I decline to answer on the grounds as previously stated.

"Mr. SCHERER. Witness, you said here you are going to tell all that you did in the Communist Party. How can you possibly hurt Schoemehl? We want to know what you and Schoemehl did in the Communist Party. He is willing for you to tell what he did, as far as he is concerned.

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mrs. KLING. Well, these are matters of individual conscience. And because Mr. Schoemehl's conscience is not precisely that of mine in this regard, then I cannot follow in his footsteps. Just because one person does something doesn't mean that another person has to.

"Mr. SCHERER. Now Mr. Schoemehl told us about you, told us you were a member of the Communist Party.

"Mrs. KLING. All right.

"Mr. SCHERER. In that respect he was telling the truth; wasn't he?

"Mrs. KLING. Yes, he was. And I have nothing to hide, Mr. Scherer, on that basis.

"Mr. SCHERER. Then you knew him; did you not?

"Mrs. KLING. I will have to decline to answer that.

"Mr. SCHERER. What was your activity with Schoemehl in the Communist Party? It isn't funny. This is serious.

"Mrs. KLING. I am only smiling out of nervousness, Mr. Scherer. I am not very happy here, you understand. As a matter of fact——

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mrs. KLING. I will have to decline to answer that question.

"Mr. MOULDER. Are you about finished with this witness?

"Mr. TAVENNER. No, sir. Will you tell us more about the professional cells of the Communist Party? Were they not considered as supersecret, that the membership of a professional cell of the Communist Party was not to be known even by other Communist Party members other than those on the very highest levels?

"Mrs. KLING. When I was a member and worker in the Communist Party the structure was very loose. And while the rule may have been that nobody was to know about any professional cell in actual practice people did know each other. And I think probably the chief difference in the form of activity was that the professionals met in homes, each other's homes instead of going to party headquarters.

"Mr. TAVENNER. They, in fact, were told not to be at meetings where other members of the Communist Party would see them or know of their identity as members of the Communist Party. Isn't that correct?

"Mrs. KLING. I am not sure. I never heard of a specific directive along that line, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. TAVENNER. That was what was expected of them, wasn't it?

"Mrs. KLING. I can't honestly say.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mrs. Kling, there is a bill pending in Congress now providing certain requirements for members of the legal profession in appearance before congressional committees and in courts with regard to their possible membership in the Communist Party. It is a subject which the chairman of this committee, in December of 1955, while in the course of hearings in Chicago, directed the staff to make a study of and report to the committee.

"Mr. MOULDER. That was the chairman of the full committee.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Of the full committee; yes, sir.

"Mr. MOULDER. Mr. Walter.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Part of the consideration which the committee has been giving has been the activity of lawyers who are members of the National Lawyers Guild and who, at the instance of the Communist Party, have infiltrated that organization. Those lawyers, wherever we have found them, have been members of a professional cell of the Communist Party, the membership of which has been kept ultrasecret. That is one of the reasons that we are endeavoring to discover the extent, the character and extent, of a professional cell of the Communist Party which is reported to be here in St. Louis.

"In the position that you occupied, although it was as long ago as 1946, it seems to me that with the handling of the literature of the Communist Party out of district headquarters, and all the other information that would come to a person in the position that you were in, that you would know about the membership of the professional group of the Communist Party here at that time.

"Now is there any way in which you can aid the committee in regard to that? And when I say aid the committee I am not only speaking of names; I am speaking of the method by which the professional group of the Communist Party operated.

"Mrs. KLING. Well, Mr. Tavenner, as I stated before I honestly don't remember whether at that time when I was working for the Communist Party there was a separate professional cell. I am not sure about that.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Let me see if I can refresh your recollection. I started to do that a moment ago. The committee has received sworn testimony by Mr. Schoemehl that in 1938, which was before you became connected with the party here, the district organizer of the Communist Party assigned Dr. Sol Londe and the person who later became his wife to the organization of a professional cell of the Communist Party in St. Louis, and that Dr. Londe presented to him, Mr. Schoemehl, a directive to permit him to attend Communist Party meetings which were being conducted by Mr. Schoemehl so that they could become acquainted with the method by which Communist Party meetings were operated.

Mr. Schoemehl testified that Dr. Londe and the person who later became his wife, whose name I do not recall—and I am not certain that it is in evidence—attended 2 or possibly 3 of such meetings.

"Now does that refresh your recollection as to the existence of a Communist Party cell when you became a member in 1944 or at any time while you were a member?

"Mrs. KLING. Well, the structure of the structure of the Communist Party was constantly changing. The party was always trying to restructure itself in the branches and so on in order to find ways and means of a more efficient operation, make sure more members got to meetings and so on.

"I believe that from 1944 to 1945 the Communist Party was called the Communist Political Association. And I believe they dropped the cell structure, and that the groups met on a neighborhood basis. Now there may have—when it was restructured again after the establishment of the Communist Party they may have again established a professional cell. I can't swear to it. It could be. As far as I know, there could have been a professional cell at the time I was working in the Communist Party office. And I really can't remember whether it was at the time there were neighborhood groups or regular professional groups.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Well, was Dr. Sol Londe a member of the Communist Party during the period that you were a member of the party?

"Mrs. KLING. I decline to answer on the basis that I don't want to tattle on other people, and that it is an open question as to whether this—the same answer.

"Mr. MOULDER. The committee cannot accept that response to the question, nor your reason for refusing to answer, and we respectfully direct you to answer the question.

"Mrs. KLING. I will have to decline to answer that question.

"Mr. TAVENNER. What was the policy of the Communist Party at the time you were a member with regard to its membership being active in mass organizations?

"Mrs. KLING. Oh, the Communist Party was always eager to extend its influence and to put over its ideas with as many people as possible. And the members were supposed to behave in an exemplary fashion, and by the force of their behavior to convince other people that what they believed was the correct thing to believe.

"Mr. MOULDER. May I ask——

"Pardon me, Mr. Tavenner. Do you know Dr. Londe?

"Mrs. KLING. I decline to answer, Mr. Moulder.

"Mr. MOULDER. For the same reason previously stated by you?

"Mrs. KLING. Yes, sir.

"Mr. MOULDER. And the committee makes the same statement: We cannot accept that as a reason for refusing to answer, and you are directed to answer.

"Mrs. KLING. Well, I will have to decline to answer.

"Mr. MOULDER. Bearing in mind, if you will, the question did not ask you as to whether or not Dr. Londe was a Communist, or refer to any associations between you and him as Communists, but just a pure and simple question as to whether or not you are acquainted with him.

"(The witnes confers with her counsel.)

"Mr. TAVENNER. Have you finished? Would you answer the question, please?

"Mrs. KLING. Yes; I have been acquainted with Dr. Londe.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you acquainted with him between 1944 and 1947?

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mrs. KLING. Mr. Moulder asked me a simple question and I gave a truthful answer. And now you are going to try to involve me in naming names in connection with party activities, and I cannot do that.

"Mr. MOULDER. Mrs. Kling, may I plead with you. I think probably you don't—I will ask you a question. Do you realize the seriousness and the threat of communism as a world conspiracy which seeks to control all free countries?

"Mrs. KLING. Well do you want a personal opinion on this?

"Mr. MOULDER. You don't recognize or see that danger in communism?

"Mrs. KLING. Well, what I don't as an individual see is the value of naming a few people around St. Louis——

"Mr. MOULDER. Our object here is to ascertain information which you possess, that you frankly refuse to give for the reasons which you have stated, which the committee does not accept. I remind you, and I am trying to impress upon you the seriousness of the threat of communism to our democracy, our Nation and all other free countries. And we are seeking to obtain information from you which would aid our Congress, the Congress of the United States, to be better informed to consider legislation to protect our national security against communism under a worldwide conspiracy of communism.

"I am pointing that out to you so that you, as an American citizen can cooperate with this committee in helping us secure legislation and take other steps that might be necessary to protect our national security.

"Mrs. KLING. Well, I appreciate the high purpose of the committee, but as it involves my individual values as to telling on other people——

"Mr. MOULDER. But that is the very point. Don't you think that your own Government and your own country's welfare and freedom and security is far higher and above the position which you take in connection with individuals, which you take in protecting individuals? Don't you think that our Nation's welfare and security is far more important than that?

"Mrs. KLING. I can only answer that a person has to live with himself and with his own conscience. And I couldn't undertake to name a few people that I may or may not remember as being active 9 years ago when I was a member of the party.

"(Representative James B. Frazier, Jr., entered the hearing room at this point.)

"Mr. SCHERER. Madam, would you take that same position if a very close friend and associate of yours had been engaged in violating the Federal Narcotics Act and come in here before our committee and say you just don't want to tell what he did insofar as dispensing narcotics? Would you take that same position if you had that information about him?

"Mrs. KLING. Well, I think that involves something criminal. And I don't feel I was engaged—I never did anything illegal or criminal.

"Mr. SCHERER. We didn't say that you did anything illegal. But the courts have held that the Communist Party is not a political party as we know parties, political parties in this country, but that the Communist Party is part and parcel of an international, criminal conspiracy far greater than any conspiracy to violate the Narcotics Act of the Federal Government. It is the greatest criminal conspiracy the world has ever known. It has been definitely established as such by the decisions of the courts. And the Congress of the United States has said so. So when you say that is a different situation that I presented to you, it is not a different situation at all. In fact, as I have said, the Communist conspiracy certainly is a far more danagerous thing to the security and welfare of this country than is a violation of the Narcotics Act of this country.

"I just wanted to demonstrate to you that the responsibility isn't upon you any more; it is upon the Congress. If it is in the courts it rests upon the court or the people as a whole. And when you are subpenaed to come and testify what you know, you are relieved of any personal responsibility. As I tried to explain to you this morning, the whole system of jurisprudence in this country would fail if a witness that is called into court could say that 'I don't want to tell what I know, even what I know about an accident case. I saw an accident happen, but it happened to be a friend of mine and I don't want to involve him, and I don't want to tell, therefore, whose fault it was.'

"If we followed your seasoning to a conclusion we would have no government at all, no judicial system. I am done preaching.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Chairman, may I have a direction to the witness to answer the question that I asked her, which was whether or not she knew Dr. Sol Londe between 1944 and 1947.

"Mr. MOULDER. I seem to recall that we did inform the witness that the committee did not accept her reply. But, if not why then you are so now advised and requested and directed to answer that question.

"Mrs. KLING. Well, I appreciate Mr. SCHERER's position, but on the basis that there is still an open question that may come before the Supreme Court soon—whether the naming of names is essential to the development of legislation—I decline to answer.

* * * * *

"Mr. TAVENNER. Do you know whether or not there was a State law in Missouri during the time of the operation of the mass organizations when you were a member which required the licensing of an organization for the raising of funds by public subscription?

"Mrs. KLING. No, I don't know that, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. There are some States in which there are laws requiring organizations to procure licenses, such as when a cause party is held for the benefit of the Daily Worker, that a license be procured for that purpose.

"You are not aware of any such law in existence in Missouri while you were connected with the district office, are you?

"Mrs. KLING. No; I wasn't aware of that.

"Mr. TAVENNER. That is a matter that the committee is giving some consideration to.

"(Representative JAMES B. FRAZIER, Jr., withdrew from the hearing room at this point.)

"Mr. TAVENNER. You as an intellectual have been trained in the Communist Party. You are no doubt familiar with the Communist Party history. I want to ask you if you are familiar with the activities of the Trade Union Unity League which, of course, was prior to your membership in the Communist Party, but it was very active a short period before you came in.

"Mrs. KLING. Yes; the name is familiar, but I really don't know anything about it. Was that during the depression?

"Mr. TAVENNER. The Trade Union Unity League was organized in Cleveland August 31, 1929, and was an American section of the Red International of Labor Unions.

"(The witness confers with her counsel.)

"Mr. TAVENNER. Many of the labor unions at that time and for quite a period afterward were affiliated with the Trade Union Unity League. It was succeeded by the World Federation of Trade Unions, with its headquarters in Prague.

"The American Federation of Labor refused to join the WFTU. The CIO, for purposes of its own, did affiliate with it and tried to save it from Communist influence and, upon failing, withdrew from it.

"But the World Federation of Trade Unions, with its headquarters in Prague, continues until this day, and this committee is studying the problem of circulating its official bulletin to labor unions and wherever they think the Communist Party could gain anything by circulating it.

"I want to know if during your period of membership, from 1944 to 1947, the Communist Party here was active in any way in handling among labor unions this official publication of that organization published in Prague.

"Mrs. KLING. Not to my recollection; no.

"I thought that that had gone out of business in the 1930's.

"Mr. TAVENNER. As an organization in this country it did because the American Federation of Labor and the CIO wouldn't stand for it. But it still surreptitiously is circulating its propaganda of a very harmful nature among labor unions in this country. And the question has arisen, and there has been considerable study given to the question, of whether or not there can be a legal answer to the situation of stopping the delivery of it through the mails when it originates from a foreign country."

Because of the foregoing, the said Committee on Un-American Activities was deprived of answers to pertinent questions propounded to said Anne Yasgur Kling, relative to the subject matter which, under Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2) of the 79th Congress, and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress, the said committee was instructed to investigate, and the refusal of the witness to answer the questions, namely:

"Who was the Communist Party organizer in charge of the office during that period of time? (The period referred to was the period of the witness' employment in Communist Party headquarters.)

"Did Ralph Shaw serve in the Armed Forces of the United States, as far as you know?

"Was Shaw a member of the Communist Party at the time you were there?

"Will you tell us then, the names of such individuals who were members of the Communist Party when you were there, who we may not even know about?

"Will you tell us please, who employed you first in the Communist Party headquarters in St. Louis?"

After Mrs. Kling had testified that she was one of two persons on the Communist Party payroll, the question was asked:

"Who was that other person?

"Did you know Harold Hall?

"Now we would like to know from you, who were members known to you of the railroad group of the Communist Party?

"Do you know to whom the name Bill referred as one of those responsible for electric?

"Do you know to whom the name Sue refers?

"The reference to packing is made here with the names following it of Joe and Helen. Do you know to whom those names refer?

"Can you honestly answer the question as to whether she was a functionary of the Communist Party at any time? ("She" referred to Helen Musiel.)

"Are you acquainted with Helen Musiel?

"Was Dr. Sol Londy a member of the Communist Party during the period that you were a member of the party?

"Were you acquainted with him (Dr. Sol Londy) between 1944 and 1947?"

Which questions were pertinent to the subject under inquiry, is a violation of the subpena under which the witness had previously appeared, and her refusal to answer the aforesaid questions deprived your committee of necessary and pertinent testimony and places the said witness in contempt of the House of Representatives of the United States.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Un-American Activities, I offer a privileged resolution (H. Res. 631) certifying the report of the Committee on Un-American Activities as to the refusal of Anne Yasgur Kling to answer questions before a duly constituted subcommittee of said committee, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the Speaker of the House of Representatives certify the report of the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives as to the refusal of Anne Yasgur Kling to answer questions before a duly constituted subcommittee of the Committee on Un-American Activities, together with all of the facts in connection therewith, under seal of the House of Representatives, to the United States attorney for the eastern district of Missouri, to the end that the said Anne Yasgur Kling may be proceeded against in the manner and form provided by law.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SCHERER].

Mr. SCHERER. Mr. Speaker, Anne Yasgur Kling was called before the subcommittee on Un-American Activities last month in the city of St. Louis. She admitted under oath that she had been a member of the Communist Party and that she had been in the employ of the Communist Party in a number of capacities and that she was the sister-in-law of the chairman of the Communist Party of the State of Missouri. She, however, refused to answer any questions relative to the identity of any individuals in the Communist Party who were associated with her or testify as to any of their activities. Particularly, she was asked with reference to individuals who were active in the Communist group in the railroad industry and in the electric industry in the city of St. Louis and in the State of Missouri. She did not invoke the fifth amendment or any constitutional amendment in refusing to identify her fellow Communists although, as I said, she admitted her own membership in the party and her own employment by the party over a period of years. In refusing to answer these pertinent questions, she said and I quote:

But I am not a tattletale and I do not want to snitch on anybody. Telling on people is abhorrent to me.

Then in another place, she said:

My conscience will not permit me to name these individuals whom I may or may not have known during the years, that I was in the Communist Party.

In the opinion of the committee, she is clearly in contempt of the Congress of the United States.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to add to the statement made by the gentleman from Ohio the fact that this case is exactly in point with the case of the United States against Watkins which went to the Circuit Court of Appeals. The circuit court found that it was in contempt to refuse to answer questions without invoking some constitutional privilege.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALTER. I yield.

Mr. YATES. Is not the Watkins case now pending before the Supreme Court?

Mr. WALTER. I do not know whether the petition for certiorari has been applied for or not.

Mr. YATES. I am informed that it has been.

Mr. WALTER. I have no knowledge. But the last pronouncement of the court is that it is contempt, and I feel reasonably certain, as much as I can under present conditions, that this decision of the circuit court would be affirmed.

Mr. SCHERER. I do not think the Watkins case is on all fours with the facts in this case.

Mr. WALTER. This is probably a stronger case.

Mr. SCHERER. Much stronger.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. WALTER) there were—ayes 162, noes none.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute. The Supreme Court by a very strange decision sometime ago ruled that unless it was affirmatively established that a quorum was present there was a presumption that a quorum was not present. Therefore, in order to sustain whatever action is taken by the court in this case, it is necessary to establish the presence of a quorum.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman understand that that applies to the House as well as to committees of the House?

Mr. WALTER. I am very sorry to be compelled to report that the decision is given that interpretation in some quarters, although subsequent expressions of the Supreme Court cast considerable doubt upon the correctness of that interpretation. I want to be abundantly safe.

Mr. HALLECK. If a point of no quorum is made and a quorum is developed, would that not satisfy the gentleman?

Mr. WALTER. Yes. The reason I asked for a division was in the hope that the Speaker would count a quorum.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present?

Mr. KEATING. No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. MASON. Well, Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present, and I make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Two hundred and forty-seven Members are present, a quorum.

So, the resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST JOHN W. SIMPSON

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Un-American Activities, I submit a privileged report (Report No. 2916).

The Clerk read as follows:

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST JOHN W. SIMPSON

Mr. WALTER, from the Committee on Un-American Activities, submitted the following report:

The Committee on Un-American Activities, as created and authorized by the House of Representatives through the enactment of Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2) of the 79th Congress, and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress, caused to be issued a subpena to John W. Simpson, 4539 Page Street, St. Louis, Mo. The said subpena directed John W. Simpson to be and appear before the said Committee on Un-American Activities or a duly authorized subcommittee thereof, of which the Honorable FRANCIS E. WALTER is chairman, in their chamber, room 516, Federal Building, 12th and Market Streets, St. Louis, Mo., on June 4, 1956, at 10 a. m., then and there to testify touching matters of inquiry committed to said committee; and not to depart without leave of said committee. The subpena served upon the said John W. Simpson, is set forth in words and figures as follows:

"UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
"CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES.

"To: JOHN W. SIMPSON, 4539 Page Street, St. Louis, Mo., Greeting:

"Pursuant to lawful authority, you are hereby commanded to be and appear before the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives of the United States, or a duly appointed subcommittee thereof, on June 4, 1956, at 10 o'clock, a. m., at room 516, New Federal Building, 12th and Market, St. Louis, Mo., then and there to testify touching matters of inquiry committed to said committee and not to depart without leave of said committee.

"Hereof fail not, as you will answer your default under the pains and penalities in such cases made and provided.

"To R. T. Collins and/or G. C. Williams, and/or United States marshal to serve and return.

"Given under my hand this 16th day of April in the year of our Lord 1956.

"FRANCIS E. WALTER,
"Chairman."

The said subpena was duly served as appears by the return made thereon by Omar L. Schnatmeier, United States marshal, by James J. Keamer, deputy, who was duly authorized to serve the said subpena. The return of the service by the said Omar L. Schnatmeier, United States marshal, by James J. Keamer, deputy, being endorsed thereon, is set forth in words and figures, as follows:

"Eastern District of Missouri. Subpena for John W. Simpson before the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives.

"I made service of the within subpena by delivering a true copy thereof on the within-named John W. Simpson at St. Louis, Mo., at 6:30 o'clock p. m., on the 9th day of May 1956.

"Dated May 10, 1956.

"OMAR L. SCHNATMEIER,
"United States Marshal.
"By JAMES J. KEAMER,
"Deputy."

On May 29, 1956, a telegram was sent to Mr. John W. Simpson, which is set forth in words and figures as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 29, 1956.
Personal report delivered.
Mr. JOHN W. SIMPSON,
4539 Page Street, St. Louis, Mo.:

Under continuing authority of subpena served upon you May 9, you are hereby directed to appear before Committee on Un-American Activities on Monday, June 4, 1956, 10 o'clock a. m., courtroom 3, New Federal Building, St. Louis, Mo., instead of room 516, New Federal Building.

FRANCIS E. WALTER,
Chairman.

The said John W. Simpson, pursuant to said subpena and the telegraphic communication, and in compliance therewith, appeared before a duly constituted subcommittee on June 4, 1956, to give such testimony as required under and by virtue of Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2), of the 79th Congress, and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress, and his said testimony not having been completed on said day, he appeared before the said subcommittee on the following day, June 5, to resume his testimony. The said John W. Simpson having appeared as a witness and having been asked the questions, namely:

"When and where were you born, Mr. Simpson?

"Where do you live?

"Mr. Simpson, you were employed, were you not, at the time that service was made on you at the Chevrolet plant of General Motors?

"How old are you?

"I ask that you tell us something of your educational background.

"How long have you lived in the city of St. Louis?

"Did you ever go to school?

"Where have you been employed since 1950?

"Are you married?

"Which questions were pertinent to the subject under inquiry, refused to answer said questions, and as a result of said John W. Simpson's refusal to answer the aforesaid questions, your committee was prevented from receiving testimony and information concerning a matter committed to said committee in accordance with the terms of a subpena served upon said John W. Simpson.

"The record of the proceedings before the subcommittee on June 4 and 5, 1956, during which the said John W. Simpson refused to answer the aforesaid questions pertinent to the subject under inquiry, is set forth in fact as follows:

"UNITED STATES HOUSE OF
"REPRESENTATIVES,
"SUBCOMMITTEE OF THE
"COMMITTEE ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES,
"St. Louis, Mo., Monday, June 4, 1956.

"PUBLIC HEARING

"The subcommittee met at 10 a. m., pursuant to call, in room No. 3, United States Courthouse and Customs Building, St. Louis, Mo., Hon. MORGAN M. MOULDER (Chairman of the subcommittee) presiding.

Present: Representatives MORGAN M. MOULDER, JAMES B. FRAZIER, JR., and GORDON H. SCHERER.

"Present also: Frank S. Tavenner, Jr., counsel; George C. Williams and Raymond T. Collins, investigators.

"Mr. MOULDER. The subcommittee will come to order.

"Let the record show that the Hon. FRANCIS E. WALTER, of Pennsylvania chairman of the Committee on Un-American Activities of the United States House of Representatives, pursuant to law and the rules of this committee, has duly appointed a subcommittee for the purpose of conducting this hearing, composed of Representatives JAMES B. FRAZIER, JR., of Tennessee, who sits on my left, GORDON H. SCHERER, of Ohio, who sits on my right, and myself, MORGAN M. MOULDER of Missouri, as chairman.

* * * * *

"Call the next witness.

"Mr. TAVENNER. John Simpson.

"Mr. MOULDER. Hold up your right hand and be sworn, Mr. Simpson.

"Do you solemnly swear the testimony which you are about to give before this committee will be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you, God?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I do.

"Mr. MOULDER. Be seated.

"TESTIMONY OF JOHN W. SIMPSON

"Mr. TAVENNER. What is your name, please, sir?

Mr. SIMPSON. John Simpson.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Do you have a middle initial?

"Mr. SIMPSON. W.

"Mr. TAVENNER. John W. Simpson.

"It is noted that you are not accompanied by counsel. I think you have been present in the hearing room and have heard the explanation I made to other witnesses about their right to counsel.

"You have?

"Mr. SIMPSON. Yes, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. When and where were you born, Mr. Simpson?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I decline to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I ask a direction.

"Mr. SCHERER. Wait a minute.

"I ask you direct the witness to answer the question.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer the question.

"Mr. SIMPSON. I decline to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment.

"Mr. SCHERER. I think we should say to the witness, as we are required to say by the court decisions, that we do not accept your answer.

"We feel that to refuse to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment as to where you were born is not a proper invocation of the fifth amendment. It couldn't possibly incriminate you in any way, shape or form to tell this committee as to when and where you were born. And if you persist in refusing to answer the question, you are in contempt of this committee.

"I ask that you direct the witness to answer the question.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is so advised and directed, and further advised that the statement by Mr. Scherer is not in the spirit of a threat but is to advise you of the dangers which you risk in being guilty of contempt by refusal to answer the question.

"Therefore, you are specifically directed to answer the question.

"Mr. SIMPSON. I am surrounded by a bunch of slick operators, and I am supposed to answer your question and have it twisted all to pieces?

"I continue to decline to answer that question or any other questions on the grounds of the fifth amendment.

"Mr. SCHERER. Or any questions we ask you?

"Mr. SIMPSON. If I answer the question you twist it.

"Mr. SCHERER. You say you are surrounded by a bunch of slick operators?

"Mr. SIMPSON. By a bunch of slick operators.

"Mr. SCHERER. If that is the reason for refusing to answer, the witness is certainly in contempt of this committee, and obviously is not invoking the fifth amendment in good faith. He doesn't even believe he is incriminated, subjecting himself to incrimination by answering the question.

"Mr. MOULDER. Any more questions, Mr. Tavenner?

"Mr. TAVENNER. Yes, sir.

"Where do you live?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I decline to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask you direct the witness to answer the question. And, without repeating what I have said before, Witness, what I said with reference to your refusal to answer the other question applies with equal force to this question.

"Mr. MOULDER. And you are so directed.

"Mr. SIMPSON. I decline to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Simpson, do you want the advice of an attorney before we proceed further?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I can't afford it.

Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Chairman, I suggest that the bar association be called upon to give this man assistance.

"Mr. MOULDER. The Bar Association of the City of St. Louis has offered its services in providing counsel for witnesses if you so desire.

"Do you so desire?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I don't have the money.

"Mr. MOULDER. Well, do you so desire if, without charge, the bar association provides you with counsel without charging you any fee for that service? Do you so desire counsel under such circumstances?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I have no objection.

"Mr. MOULDER. I ask you do you so desire.

"Mr. SIMPSON. Not particularly.

"Mr. MOULDER. Or so request?

"Mr. SIMPSON. Not particularly.

"Mr. SCHERER. Let's pursue this a little further, if you don't mind, Mr. Chairman.

"Mr. MOULDER. Surely.

"Mr. SCHERER. You knew, did you not, before you came into this room today, from the great amount of publicity that the press has given to the fact that the bar association has made available lawyers to witnesses, you knew that fact; did you not?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I think I had better start refusing to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct——

"Mr. SIMPSON. Because I may incriminate myself.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct the witness to answer.

"Mr. MOULDER. You are so directed to answer.

"Mr. SIMPSON. I am going to rely on the grounds of the fifth amendment.

"Mr. SCHERER. Do you read the newspapers?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I refuse to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment, that I don't want to incriminate myself.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Chairman——

"Mr. SCHERER. I suggest we proceed.

"The witness is obviously——

"Mr. MOULDER. I should first make this statement:

"The committee will request the Bar Association of the city of St. Louis to appear and represent you——

"Mr. SCHERER. No, I would'nt agree to that. Not after what this witness said. He said he doesn't want any particularly. He won't tell us whether he knew about the fact that lawyers were available. We don't have to go that far, to call a lawyer in here to represent this man when he says, when he indicates that he doesn't want any, and when he won't even tell us whether he knew about the offer of the bar association to represent individuals who didn't have money.

"Mr. Chairman, I don't think that we are in a position under these circumstances to stop this investigation and force a counsel upon this man, or practically force him.

"(The committee confers.)

"Mr. MOULDER. Mr. Simpson, you are advised that the Bar Association of the city of St. Louis has offered its services providing counsel without charge for witnesses who so request. Therefore, you are temporarily excused as a witness until tomorrow morning, giving you an opportunity to make such a request of the bar association, at which time you are directed to reappear with counsel if you so desire.

"Call your next witness, Mr. Tavenner.

"That is at 9 o'clock in the morning.

"Mr. SIMPSON. Do I get to collect some dough?

"Mr. MOULDER. No, you are not excused yet.

"Call the next witness.

"Mr. MOULDER. The committee will stand in recess until tomorrow morning, at 9 a. m., Tuesday, June 5, 1956, there being present at the time of taking the recess Representatives MOULDER, FRAZIER, and SCHERER.

"(The testimony of John W. Simpson not having been completed Mr. Simpson's testimony was resumed on the following day, June 5, 1956.)

"UNITED STATES
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
"SUBCOMMITTEE OF THE
"COMMITTEE ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES,
"St. Louis, Mo., Tuesday, June 5, 1956.

"PUBLIC HEARING

"The subcommittee met at 9:15 a. m., pursuant to recess, in courtroom No. 3, the United States Court and Customs Building, St. Louis, Mo., Hon. MORGAN M. MOULDER (chairman of the subcommittee) presiding.

"Present: Representatives MORGAN M. MOULDER, JAMES B. FRAZIER, JR., and GORDON H. SCHERER.

"Staff members present: Frank S. Tavenner, Jr., counsel; George C. Williams, and Raymond T. Collins, investigators.

"(Representatives MORGAN M. MOULDER and GORDON H. SCHERER were present at the time of convening.)

"Mr. MOULDER. The committee will be in order.

"Very well, let's proceed. Call the next witness.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. John Simpson, will you return to the witness stand, please.

"Mr. MOULDER. Would you be seated, Mr. Simpson.

"(Representative JAMES B. FRAZIER, JR., entered the hearing room at this point.)

"TESTIMONY OF JOHN W. SIMPSON—RESUMED

"Mr. MOULDER. Mr. Simpson, yesterday afternoon you were provided an opportunity by this committee to seek counsel to represent you, as the committee advised you to do. Have you procured counsel?

"Mr. SIMPSON. The hours of the Bar Association of St. Louis are, Monday and Friday they are 10 to 12, and Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday they are 2 to 4. However, I went to the trouble to call up last night, or this morning, in case the janitor or somebody else was in. Nobody was in.

"Mr. MOULDER. No one was there.

"Did you call or speak or confer with any other attorney?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I don't have the money to pay lawyers.

"Mr. MOULDER. Are you employed now anywhere?

"Mr. SIMPSON. Yes.

"Mr. MOULDER. You do have an income?

"Mr. SIMPSON. Yes.

"Mr. MOULDER. Have you attempted to confer with any attorney to see whether or not they would charge you, or what they would charge you to represent you as counsel?

"Mr. SIMPSON. It is well known what lawyers charge. I don't have the money to pay lawyers.

"Mr. MOULDER. Then you have made no attempt to procure an attorney?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I made an attempt. I called them twice.

"Mr. MOULDER. Do you wish to have counsel to represent you?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I don't particularly care.

"Mr. SCHERER. I take the same position that I did last night.

"It is obvious from this man's statement now and last night that he doesn't want counsel.

"Under the Constitution a man has the right either in court or before a hearing and a committee such as this to represent himself. You can't force counsel upon a man. He has a constitutional right to represent himself. This man evidently doesn't want the advice of counsel.

"Mr. MOULDER. And the committee has no authority or funds, of course, to provide counsel for him.

"Mr. SCHERER. When were you subpenaed?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I don't know. I don't have it with me.

"Mr. SCHERER. Counsel, when was the witness subpenaed?

"Mr. SIMPSON. 16th of April, it says.

"Mr. SCHERER. I will repeat, Witness, the question I asked you last night.

"Do you read the newspapers?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I am going to do the same thing I did yesterday. I am going to plead the fifth amendment and decline to answer.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct the witness to answer.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer.

"Mr. SCHERER. Were you in the room yesterday morning when the chairman of this committee made his opening statement?

"Mr. SIMPSON. Yes, I had to be.

"Mr. SCHERER. You were here.

"Did you hear what he said with reference to the St. Louis Bar Association furnishing counsel for witnesses who were unable to obtain counsel?

"Mr. SIMPSON. Nothing is wrong with my hearing.

"Mr. SCHERER. Did you hear that?

"Mr. SIMPSON. Oh, yes; I heard that.

"Mr. SCHERER. Did you read in the paper prior to your coming here yesterday morning that the bar association of——

"Would you look this way, sir, when I am talking to you. Let the record show that the witness is not even paying attention to this member of the committee while he is talking to him.

"I am asking you this question:

"Did you see in the papers prior to coming here yesterday morning—or did you have knowledge of the fact that the St. Louis Bar Association was furnishing counsel for any witness called before this committee that did not have the funds to secure counsel or was unable to obtain counsel for any other reason?

"Mr. SIMPSON. There is something I don't understand.

"Am I under oath?

"Mr. SCHERER. Yes, you are under oath. You were sworn yesterday.

"Mr. SIMPSON. I didn't know whether it continued.

"Well, will you repeat the question.

"Mr. SCHERER. Would it make any difference whether you were under oath or not, whether you told the truth? Would that make any difference, son?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I refuse to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment and possible self-incrimination.

"Mr. SCHERER. I will repeat my original question.

"Did you know prior to coming into this courtroom yesterday that the St. Louis Bar Association was furnishing counsel for witnesses who were unable to obtain counsel for one reason or another?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I refuse to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment and possible self-incrimination.

"Mr. SCHERER. It is obvious then that we should proceed.

"Mr. MOULDER. Proceed, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Simpson, were you subpenaed by a deputy United States marshal on May 10 to appear as a witness in this hearing?

"(There was no response.)

"Mr. TAVENNER. May I correct my question by stating you were subpenaed on May 9?

"Mr. SIMPSON. Well, I think I can say that there's two dates on here. There's June 4, 1956, and April 16, 1956.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did you take out of your pocket that subpena that was served on you?

"Mr. SIMPSON. Yes.

"Mr. TAVENNER. May I see it, please?

"(Document handed to Mr. Tavenner.)

"Mr. TAVENNER. This subpena bears date the 16th of April 1956. It was served on you, was it not, on the 9th of May? Do you recall?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I don't know.

"Mr. TAVENNER. All right, hand it back to him.

"Mr. MOULDER. Who served the subpena?

"Mr. TAVENNER. A deputy United States marshal.

"Mr. Simpson, you were employed, were you not, at the time that service was made on you at the Chevrolet plant of General Motors?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I refuse to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment and possible self-incrimination.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask you direct the witness to answer the question.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is so directed.

"Mr. SCHERER. You keep in mind what I said to you yesterday, that this committee does not accept your declination to answer. We feel that you are not invoking the fifth amendment in good faith in refusing to answer as to where you were employed, what your date of birth was and your residence.

"Mr. TAVENNER. The committee desires to inquire of you what knowledge you have regarding an organized group of the Communist Party in the automotive business in St. Louis. So I will ask you the question, if you will tell us, please, whether or not there was such an organized group of the Communist Party established within the automotive industry.

"Mr. SIMPSON. I refuse to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment.

"Mr. MOULDER. Did I understand you to say you decline to answer?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I decline to answer because of possible self-incrimination.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Was there such?

"Mr. MOULDER. In connection with that, the purpose of directing you to answer is to warn you, not in the spirit of a threat, of the dangers in which you might be involved in connection with contempt proceedings, and for your own benefit we direct you to answer in order to give you an opportunity to avoid possible contempt proceedings.

Do you still wish to——

"Mr. SIMPSON. I decline to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Do you have any knowledge of Communist Party activities within the automotive industry at the present time?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I decline to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment of the Constitution.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Are you presently a member of any organized group of the Communist Party within the automotive industry?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I decline to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I have no further questions, Mr. Chairman.

"Mr. MOULDER. Any questions, Mr. Frazier?

"Mr. FRAZIER. Yes.

"Are you a member of the Communist Party now?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I decline to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment, of possible self-incrimination.

"Mr. FRAZIER. Have you ever been a member of the Communist Party?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I decline to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment.

"Mr. FRAZIER. That is all.

"Mr. MOULDER. Mr. Scherer, any questions?

"Mr. SCHERER. No.

"I ask you this:

"Yesterday you were asked where you lived at the present time. I am going to repeat that question, keeping in mind the warnings that were given you yesterday.

"Where do you now live?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I decline to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct the witness to answer.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer that question.

"Mr. SCHERER. And where were you born?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I decline to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct the witness to answer.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is so directed.

"Mr. SCHERER. How old are you?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I decline to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment of the Constitution.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct the witness to answer the question.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer, and further advised of the danger in which he places himself in connection with contempt proceedings for arrogantly and without due cause refusing to answer the question.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you tell us something of your educational background.

"Mr. SIMPSON. I decline to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment, of possible self-incrimination.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct him to answer.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer.

"Mr. SCHERER. How long have you lived in the city of St. Louis?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I decline to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment of the Constitution.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct the witness to answer.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer.

"Mr. SCHERER. Did you ever go to school?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I decline to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer the question.

"Do you still decline to answer?

"Mr. SIMPSON. What is the question?

"Mr. MOULDER. We direct you to answer that question.

"Mr. SIMPSON. Which question?

"Mr. MOULDER. Which Mr. Scherer propounded to you. He asked if you ever went to school.

"Mr. SIMPSON. I decline to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment.

"Mr. SCHERER. Where have you been employed since 1950?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I decline to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

"Mr. SCHERER. Are you married?

"Mr. SIMPSON. I decline to answer on the grounds of the fifth amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer.

"Mr. SIMPSON. I still decline to answer.

"Mr. SCHERER. What is your full name?

"Mr. SIMPSON. John William Simpson.

"Mr. SCHERER. I have no further questions."

Because of the foregoing, the said Committee on Un-American Activities was deprived of answers to pertinent questions propounded to said John W. Simpson relative to the subject matter which, under Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2), of the 79th Congress and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress, the said committee was instructed to investigate, and the refusal of the witness to answer the questions, namely:

"When and where were you born, Mr. Simpson?

"Where do you live?

"Mr. Simpson, you were employed, were you not, at the time that service was made on you at the Chevrolet plant of General Motors?

"How old are you?

"I ask that you tell us something of your educational background.

"How long have you lived in the city of St. Louis?

"Did you ever go to school?

"Where have you been employed since 1950?

"Are you married?"

Which questions were pertinent to the subject under inquiry, is a violation of the subpena under which the witness had previously appeared, and his refusal to answer the aforesaid questions deprived your committee of necessary and pertinent testimony, and places the said witness in contempt of the House of Representatives of the United States.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution (H. Res. 632) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the Speaker of the House of Representatives certify the report of the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives as to the refusal of John W. Simpson to answer questions before a duly constituted subcommittee of the Committee on Un-American Activities, together with all of the facts in connection therewith, under seal of the House of Representatives, to the United States attorney for the eastern district of Missouri, to the end that the said John W. Simpson may be proceeded against in the manner and form provided by law.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, in this particular case, John W. Simpson was subpenaed to testify before the Committee on Un-American Activities. He was asked his name. He responded to that question and then interjected the fifth amendment to every other question asked, even as to his address. I could not conceive of a more clear case of contempt.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. HOSMER. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HOSMER. Is it necessary that each one of these citations shall affirmatively show the fact that there was a quorum present in order to comply with the decisions of the Supreme Court?

Mr. WALTER. I think not.

The SPEAKER. Under the rules of the House a quorum is always presumed to be present unless there is a count and it develops that a quorum is not present.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST WILLIAM E. DAVIS

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Un-American Activities I submit a privileged report (Rept. No. 2917).

The Clerk read as follows:

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST WILLIAM E. DAVIS

Mr. WALTER, from the Committee on Un-American Activities, submitted the following report:

The Committee on Un-American Activities, as created and authorized by the House of Representatives through the enactment of Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2) of the 79th Congress, and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress, caused to be issued a subpena to William E. Davis. The said subpena directed William E. Davis to be and appear before said Committee on Un-American Activities, or a duly authorized subcommittee thereof, of the House of Representatives of the United States, of which Hon. FRANCIS E. WALTER is chairman, in their chamber, room 516, New Federal Building, 12th and Market, St. Louis, Mo., on June 4, 1956, at 10 a. m., then and there to testify touching matters of inquiry committed to said committee, and not to depart without leave of said committee. The subpena served upon said William E. Davis is set forth in words and figures as follows:

"UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

"CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES.

"To WILLIAM E. DAVIS, Greeting: Pursuant to lawful authority, you are hereby commanded to be and appear before the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives of the United States, or a duly appointed subcommittee thereof, on June 4, 1956, at 10 o'clock a. m., at Room 516, New Federal Building, 12th and Market, St. Louis, Mo., then and there to testify touching matters of inquiry committed to said committee, and not to depart without leave of said committee.

"Hereof fail not, as you will answer your default under the pains and penalties in such cases made and provided.

"To U. S. Marshal, to serve and return.

"Given under my hand this 16th day of April, in the year of our Lord 1956.

"FRANCIS E. WALTER,
"Chairman."

The said subpena was duly served as appears by the return made thereon by Omar L. Schnatmeier, United States marshal; James J. Keamer, deputy, who was duly authorized to serve the said subpena. The return of the service by the said Omar L. Schnatmeier, United States marshal; James J. Keamer, deputy, being endorsed thereon, is set forth in words and figures as follows:

"Eastern district of Missouri, subpena for William E. Davis before the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives.

"I made service of the within subpena by delivering a true copy thereof on the within-named William E. Davis at 1021 Park Avenue, St. Louis, Mo., at 4:50 o'clock, p. m., on the 8th day of May 1956.

"Dated May 10, 1956.

"OMAR L. SCHNATMEIER,
"United States Marshal.
"By: JAMES J. KEAMER,
"Deputy."

On May 29, 1956, a telegram was sent to William E. Davis, which is set forth in words and figures as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 29, 1956.

Personal report delivered.

Mr. WILLIAM E. DAVIS,
1021 Park Avenue, St. Louis Mo.:

Under continuing authority of subpena served upon you May 8, your appearance before Committee on Un-American Activities is hereby postponed from June 4 to Tuesday, June 5, 1956, 10 a. m., courtroom 3, New Federal Building, St. Louis, Mo., instead of room 516, New Federal Building.

FRANCIS E. WALTER,
Chairman.

The said William E. Davis was not called to testify on the 5th day of June 1956, the day on which he was directed to appear, and was called as a witness on June 6, 1956. The said William E. Davis, pursuant to said subpena and the telegraphic communication, and in compliance therewith, appeared before the said subcommittee on June 6, 1956, to give such testimony as required under and by virtue of Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2) of the 79th Congress, and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress. The said William E. Davis having appeared as a witness and having been asked the questions, namely:

"When and where were you born, Mr. Williams? Mr. Davis, I meant to say?

"How are you employed?

"How long have you lived in St. Louis?

"Were you living in St. Louis in 1950?

"Where were you living in 1951?

"Where did you go to school, Witness?

"Have you had any advice at all from any source as to how you should conduct yourself when you took the stand?

"Were you employed at any time at Emerson Electric Co.?"

Which questions were pertinent to the subject under inquiry, refused to answer said questions, and as a result of said William E. Davis' refusal to answer the aforesaid questions, your committee was prevented from receiving testimony and information concerning a matter committed to said committee in accordance with the terms of the subpena served upon said William E. Davis.

The record of the proceedings before the subcommittee on June 6, 1956, during which the said William E. Davis refused to answer the aforesaid questions pertaining to the subject under inquiry, is set forth in fact as follows:

"UNITED STATES,
"HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
"SUBCOMMITTEE OF THE COMMITTEE
"ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES,
"St. Louis, Mo., Wednesday, June 6, 1956.

"PUBLIC HEARING

"The subcommittee met at 9:45 a. m., pursuant to recess, in courtroom No. 3, United States Courthouse and Customs Building, St. Louis, Mo., Hon. MORGAN M. MOULDER (chairman of the subcommittee) presiding.

"Present: Representatives MORGAN M. MOULDER, JAMES B. FRAZIER, JR., and GORDON H. SCHERER.

"Present also: Frank S. Tavenner, Jr., counsel; George C. Williams and Raymond T. Collins, investigators.

"Mr. MOULDER. The committee will be in order.

"(After hearing the testimony of another witness, Mr. William E. Davis was called before the subcommittee.)

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. William E. Davis.

"Mr. MOULDER. Do you solemnly swear that the testimony which you are about to give will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

"Mr. DAVIS. I do.

"TESTIMONY OF WILLIAM E. DAVIS

"Mr. TAVENNER. You are William E. Davis?

"Mr. DAVIS. That is right.

"Mr. TAVENNER. It is noted that you are not accompanied by counsel. I want to advise you, as it is the practice of the committee with respect to all witnesses who appear before it, that they have the right to counsel if they desire it, and have the right to consult with counsel at any time during the course of the interrogation.

"When and where were you born, Mr. Williams? Mr. Davis, I meant to say.

"Mr. DAVIS. I decline to answer the question on the fifth amendment.

"Mr. SCHERER. I can't hear.

"Mr. TAVENNER. May I have a direction?

"Mr. SCHERER. What was the question?

"Mr. TAVENNER. The question was: When and where were you born?

"Mr. SCHERER. Did he give his name? Did you ask him his name?

"Mr. TAVENNER. I asked him if he was William E. Davis, and he said 'Yes.'

"Mr. SCHERER. Then I ask that you direct the witness to answer the question as to when and where he was born.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer the question.

"Mr. DAVIS. I reassert my privilege.

"Mr. SCHERER. I think we should say to the witness, as we are required to say by the decisions of the court, that of course we do not accept your answer, that we cannot possibly see, sir, how to answer the question as to when and where you were born would incriminate you.

"Therefore, we think you are invoking the fifth amendment, improperly invoking it, in bad faith, and if you persist to refuse to answer the question as to when and where you were born, you are placing yourself in a position of contempt before this committee.

"Do you want to answer the question after my explanation?

"Mr. DAVIS. I reassert my privilege.

"Mr. SCHERER. What do you mean by reasserting the privilege?

"Mr. DAVIS. Privilege under the fifth amendment.

"Mr. SCHERER. Do you honestly perceive that to answer the question—do you honestly believe and contend that to answer the question as to when and where you were born might tend to lead to a criminal prosecution?

"Mr. DAVIS. I reassert my privilege.

"Mr. SCHERER. Do you want a lawyer? Because I am afraid, sir, you are guilty of contempt. Do you want a lawyer to advise you as to whether or not you should answer that question?

"Mr. DAVIS. I reassert my privilege.

"Mr. SCHERER. Do you mean to answer my question as to whether you want a lawyer would tend to incriminate you? I ask you direct the witness to answer the question.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer the question.

"And Mr. Scherer and the committee are anxious to, of course, help you in that respect.

"Mr. DAVIS. I reassert my privilege.

"Mr. SCHERER. It is obvious that this witness came here as the result of attending one of those conferences wherein they advised them to use the fifth amendment no matter what question was asked them.

"I suggest, Mr. Chairman, that counsel be permitted to ask a few more questions.

"Mr. MOULDER. Yes.

"Proceed.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I expect I ought to follow them up.

"Mr. SCHERER. That is what I say.

"Mr. TAVENNER. What is your full name, Mr. Davis?

"Mr. DAVIS. William E. Davis.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Speak a little louder, please.

"Mr. DAVIS. William E. Davis; William Edwin Davis.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Do you presently reside in St. Louis?

"Mr. DAVIS. Yes.

"Mr. TAVENNER. How are you employed?

"Mr. DAVIS. I reassert my privilege.

"Mr. TAVENNER. What is your address in St. Louis?

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct the witness to answer the question as to where he was employed. And I do not want to restate, but, Witness, what I have said to you with reference to the first question asked you, as to where and when you were born, applies also to the question asked you about your employment.

"Mr. MOULDER. You are directed to answer the question, Mr. Davis.

"As we have advised other witnesses, the purpose of so directing you is not to threaten you in any way but to give you an opportunity to be advised that the committee doesn't accept your response to the question; and also to warn you of the possibility of your being in contempt of the Congress of the United States for refusing to answer such a question, such a simple question as you are now refusing to answer.

"Mr. DAVIS. I assert my privilege.

"Mr. TAVENNER. How long have you lived in St. Louis?

"Mr. DAVIS. I assert my privilege under the fifth amendment.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct the witness to answer.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is again directed to answer the question.

"Mr. DAVIS. I reassert my privilege.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you in St. Louis, living in St. Louis as recently as 1954?

"Mr. DAVIS. I was.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you living in St. Louis in 1950?

"Mr. DAVIS. I assert my privilege under the fifth amendment.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Where were you living in 1951?

"Mr. DAVIS. I assert my privilege under the fifth amendment.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct the witness to answer the question as to where he was living in 1951.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer.

"Mr. DAVIS. I reassert my privilege.

"Mr. SCHERER. Where did you go to school, Witness?

"Mr. DAVIS. I reassert my privilege.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct the witness to answer.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer.

"Mr. DAVIS. I reassert my privilege.

"Mr. MOULDER. May I ask a question?

"Do you desire to have counsel or an attorney to advise you and to sit with you here in the hearing room, to advise you during the course of the examination now being conducted? I say, do you desire to have counsel?

"Mr. DAVIS. No.

"Mr. MOULDER. Would you answer the question for the record so that it will indicate?

"Mr. DAVIS. No.

"Mr. SCHERER. Have you had legal advice before you took the stand?

"Mr. DAVIS. I assert my privilege.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct the witness to answer the question.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer.

"Mr. SCHERER. As to whether he had legal advice.

"Mr. DAVIS. I reassert my privilege.

"Mr. SCHERER. Have you had any advice at all from any source as to how you should conduct yourself when you took the stand?

"Mr. DAVIS. I reassert my privilege.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask you direct the witness to answer.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer.

"Mr. DAVIS. I reassert my privilege.

"Mr. SCHERER. Were you born in the United States?

"(There was no response.)

"Mr. MOULDER. The question is were you born in the United States?

"Mr. DAVIS. I assert my privilege.

"Mr. MOULDER. You are directed to answer the question.

"Mr. DAVIS. I reassert my privilege.

"Mr. MOULDER. Are you an American citizen, Mr. Davis?

"Mr. DAVIS. Yes, sir.

"Mr. MOULDER. Are you a natural-born citizen or naturalized citizen?

"Mr. DAVIS. Natural-born.

"Mr. MOULDER. Then you were born in the United States?

"Mr. SCHERER. Is that right?

"(There was no response.)

"Mr. MOULDER. Is that correct? Answer that question.

"Mr. DAVIS. Yes.

"Mr. MOULDER. Where were you born?

"Mr. DAVIS. A question like this is, as the Congressman on the right is always waiting for the door to fly open, you know——

"Mr. MOULDER. I have asked you a question: Where you were born.

"Mr. DAVIS. So he can lower the boom on me.

"Mr. MOULDER. We have no desire to trap you or lower the boom. We asked you a simple and reasonable and fair question. Would you answer the question as to where you were born?

"Mr. DAVIS. I assert my privilege under the fifth amendment.

"Mr. MOULDER. Proceed, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you employed at any time at Emerson Electric Co.?

"Mr. DAVIS. I assert my privilege under the fifth amendment.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you the St. Louis agent of the National Maritime Union at any time prior to 1951?

"Mr. DAVIS. I assert my privilege under the fifth amendment.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Have you at any time held any official position in the United Electrical, Radio, and Machine Workers of America?

"Mr. DAVIS. I assert my privilege under the fifth amendment.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct the witness to answer.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is directed to answer.

"Mr. DAVIS. I reassert my privilege.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Have you held a position under that of an official; that is, such as a steward or other similar type of position?

"Mr. DAVIS. In what?

"Mr. TAVENNER. In the UE.

"Mr. DAVIS. I assert my privilege under the fifth amendment.

"Mr. SCHERER. I again ask that you direct the witness to answer.

"Mr. MOULDER. You are again directed and requested to answer the question.

"Mr. DAVIS. I reassert my privilege.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Do you have any knowledge of Communist Party activities since 1954 at Emerson Electric?

"Mr. DAVIS. I assert my privilege under the fifth amendment.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Are you now a member of the Communist Party?

"Mr. DAVIS. I reassert my privilege.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you ever a member of the Communist Party?

"Mr. DAVIS. I reassert my privilege.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I have no further questions, Mr. Chairman.

"Mr. MOULDER. I neglected to ask you, Mr. Frazier, do you have any questions?

"Mr. FRAZIER. No questions, Mr. Chairman.

"Mr. MOULDER. Mr. Scherer?

"Mr. SCHERER. No questions.

"Mr. MOULDER. The witness is excused, and he may claim his witness fees from the clerk of the committee."

Because of the foregoing, the said Committee on Un-American Activities was deprived of answers to pertinent questions propounded to said William E. Davis relative to the subject matter, which, under Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2) of the 79th Congress, and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress, the said committee was instructed to investigate, and the refusal of the witness to answer the questions, namely:

"When and where were you born, Mr. Williams? Mr. Davis, I meant to say.

"How are you employed?

"How long have you lived in St. Louis?

"Were you living in St. Louis in 1950?

"Where were you living in 1951?

"Where did you go to school, Witness?

"Have you had any advice at all from any source as to how you should conduct yourself when you took the stand?

"Were you employed at any time at Emerson Electric Co.?"

Which questions were pertinent to the subject under inquiry, is a violation of the subpena under which the witness had previously appeared, and his refusal to answer the aforesaid questions deprived your committee of necessary and pertinent testimony and places the said witness in contempt of the House of Representatives of the United States.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Speaker of the House of Representatives certify the report of the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives as to the refusal of William E. Davis to answer questions before a duly constituted subcommittee of the Committee on Un-American Activities, together with all of the facts in connection therewith, under seal of the House of Representatives, to the United States attorney for the eastern district of Missouri, to the end that the said William E. Davis may be proceeded against in the manner and form provided by law.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. MOULDER].

Mr. MOULDER. Mr. Speaker, the facts and circumstances in this case are similar to the Simpson case. The witness was asked where he was born and refused to answer. In addition to that, he was asked numerous other questions which were pertinent and important in connection with our investigation of subversive and communistic activities in the St. Louis area, all of which he refused to answer. Not only did he refuse to answer but he was contemptuous in his attitude and in his conduct in refusing to answer any questions propounded by either counsel or members of the committee. On each and every occasion he was advised that the committee refused to accept his response and he was duly directed to answer and advised of the danger and risk he was taking by refusal to answer.

Mr. SCHERER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOULDER. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. SCHERER. This is the witness that even invoked the fifth amendment when you asked him whether he wanted a lawyer?

Mr. MOULDER. That is correct.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST GEORGE TYNE

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Un-American Activities I submit a privileged report (Report No. 2918).

The Clerk read as follows:

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST GEORGE TYNE

Mr. WALTER, from the Committee on Un-American Activities, submitted the following report:

The Committee on Un-American Activities, as created and authorized by the House of Representatives through the enactment of Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2) of the 79th Congress, and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress, caused to be issued a subpena to George Tyne, Broadhurst Theatre, New York, N. Y. The said subpena directed George Tyne to be and appear before the said Committee on Un-American Activities or a duly authorized subcommittee thereof, of the House of Representatives of the United States, of which the Honorable FRANCIS E. WALTER is chairman, in their chamber, room 1703, United States Courthouse, Foley Square, New York City, N. Y., at the hour of 10 a. m., on August 15, 1955, then and there to testify touching matters of inquiry committed to said committee, and not to depart without leave of said committee. The subpena served on said George Tyne is set forth in words and figures as follows:

"UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES.

"To GEORGE TYNE, Greeting:

"Pursuant to lawful authority, you are hereby commanded to be and appear before the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives of the United States or a duly appointed subcommittee thereof, on 15 August 1955, at 10 o'clock, a. m., at their committee room, 1703 United States Courthouse, Foley Square, New York City, N. Y., then and there to testify touching matters of inquiry committed to said committee, and not to depart without leave of said committee.

"Hereof fail not, as you will answer your default under the pains and penalties in such cases made and provided.

"To Frank Bonora, to serve and return.

"Given under my hand this 1st day of July, in the year of our Lord, 1955.

"FRANCIS E. WALTER,
"Chairman."

The said subpena was duly served as appears by the return made thereon by Frank Bonora, who was duly authorized to serve the said subpena. The return of the service by the said Frank Bonora, being endorsed thereon, is set forth in words and figures as follows:

"Subpena for George Tyne before the Committee on Un-American Activities. I made service of the within subpena by personal service on the within-named George Tyne at Broadhurst Theater, New York City, at 8:05 o'clock p. m., on the 11th day of July 1955.

"FRANK BONORA,
"Investigator."

The said George Tyne, pursuant to said subpena and in compliance therewith, appeared before a duly constituted subcommittee of the Committee on Un-American Activities on August 15, 1955, to give such testimony as required under and by virtue of Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2) of the 79th Congress, and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress. The said George Tyne having appeared as a witness and having been asked the questions; namely:

"Do you know Mr. Lee J. Cobb?

"Was any of the testimony that was given to this committee by Mr. Cobb about you untrue?

"Is it your card? (Card referred to was a Communist Party membership card which was handed to the witness.)

"Were you one of the 1,500 delegates who attended a peace meeting at Mexico City in August of 1949?

"Were you a sponsor of that meeting?

"Were you personally acquainted with Charles Glenn?

"I want to ask you whether or not this was a play designed to carry a Communist message?

"Were you a member of the Communist Party at the time you were engaged as director of this play?

"Mr. Tyne, are you a member of any unions, organized within the field of acting?

"Are you a member of Actors Equity?

"Are you a member of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists?

"Are you aware of the existence within the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists of a caucus composed of members of the Communist Party who are also members of that organization?

"Have you at any time attended a caucus of members of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists who were members of the Communist Party?"

Which questions were pertinent to the subject under inquiry, refused to answer said questions, and as a result of said George Tyne's refusal to answer the aforesaid questions, your committee was prevented from receiving testimony and information concerning a matter committed to said subcommittee in accordance with the terms of the subpena served upon said George Tyne.

The record of the proceedings before the subcommittee on August 15, 1955, during which the said George Tyne refused to answer the aforesaid questions pertaining to the subject under inquiry, is set forth in fact as follows:

"UNITED STATES HOUSE OF
"REPRESENTATIVES,
"SUBCOMMITTEE OF THE
"COMMITTEE ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES,
"New York, N. Y., Monday, August 15, 1955.

"PUBLIC HEARING

"A subcommittee of the Committee on Un-American Activities met at 10 a. m., pursuant to notice, in room 1703 of the Federal Building, Foley Square, New York, N. Y., Hon. FRANCIS E. WALTER (chairman), presiding.

"Committee members present: Representatives WALTER, WILLIS, and SCHERER.

"Staff members present: Frank S. Tavenner, Jr., counsel; Donald T. Appell and Frank Bonora, investigators; and Thomas W. Beale, Sr., chief clerk.

* * * * *

"Chairman WALTER. Have you a witness, Mr. Tavenner?

"Mr. TAVENNER. Yes, sir. I would like to call Mr. George Tyne.

"Mr. Tyne, will you come forward, please?

"Chairman WALTER. Mr. Tyne, will you raise your right hand, please? Do you swear that the testimony you are about to give will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

"Mr. TYNE. I do.

"TESTIMONY OF GEORGE TYNE, ACCOMPANIED BY COUNSEL, MARTIN POPPER

"Mr. TAVENNER. What is your name, please, sir?

"Mr. TYNE. My name is George Tyne.

"Mr. TAVENNER. It is noted that you are accompanied by counsel, will counsel please identify himself for the record?

"Mr. POPPER. Martin Popper, member of the bar of the State of New York.

"Mr. TAVENNER. When and where were you born, Mr. Tyne?

"Mr. TYNE. I was born in Philadelphia, Pa., February 6, 1917.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Where do you now reside?

"Mr. TYNE. I reside in New York City.

"Mr. TAVENNER. At what address?

"Mr. TYNE. 415 Central Park West.

"Mr. TAVENNER. How long have you lived in New York City?

"Mr. TYNE. Well, at this residence, sir?

"Mr. TAVENNER. Begin that way, yes, at that residence.

"Mr. TYNE. The reason I asked, is that I have been out of New York for most of my adult life. At this address, I have been, I think, about 2 years or 3 years.

"Mr. TAVENNER. What is your occupation?

"Mr. TYNE. I am a radio, screen, theater, and television actor.

"Mr. TAVENNER. In what work are you presently engaged?

"Mr. TYNE. I am presently engaged in the theater.

"Mr. TAVENNER. What type of work in the theater?

"Mr. TYNE. As an actor.

* * * * *

"Mr. TAVENNER. I understand from your testimony that you went to California in 1942. I have before me the testimony of Mr. Lee J. Cobb, which was taken before this committee on June 2, 1953. Mr. Cobb described to the committee his Communist Party membership, and the activities in the Communist Party which he was aware of, and he told the committee how he got into the Communist Party and the circumstances under which he left it.

"He advised the committee that in January or February of 1943 he was a member of a group of the Communist Party of which George Tyne, Elliott Sullivan, and Victor Killian were members. In referring to you, he uses the name George Tyne, also known as Buddy Yarus.

"Were you a member of the group of the Communist Party in 1943 of which Mr. Lee J. Cobb was a member?

"(The witness consulted with his counsel.)

"Mr. TYNE. Mr. Tavenner, I would like to say that I see no legislative purpose in this committee and its inquiry into the theater, and I would like to voice my responsibility to the Constitution and say that this committee has no right to invade my inner beliefs and my conscience or my associations.

"Chairman WALTER. Maybe we could shorten this by asking you if you know Mr. Cobb. Do you know Mr. Lee J. Cobb?

"Mr. TYNE. As I said before, my associations and my beliefs are my own.

"Chairman WALTER. That is not an answer to the question. Either answer the question or do not. If you don't, why don't you?

"Mr. TYNE. Because I feel that I have to answer this in my own way, and, secondly, I take no value in the word of a stool pigeon.

"Chairman WALTER. Now, just a moment; Mr. Cobb is not a stool pigeon, and I assume that because you have described him as such you are disturbed because he told about your activities with him in an illegal field. Isn't that why you describe him as a stool pigeon?

"Mr. TYNE. I am disturbed by anybody who appears before this committee as a stool pigeon, who curries favor, who tries to get jobs, and money, and gives names.

"Chairman WALTER. That is not a response to the question. Do you know Mr. Lee J. Cobb?

"Mr. TYNE. I think that—one moment.

"(The witness consulted with his counsel.)

"Mr. TYNE. I must repeat that I find——

"Chairman WALTER. Do you know Mr. Lee J. Cobb?

"Mr. TYNE. I am trying to answer the question.

"Chairman WALTER. You have not answered it at all.

"Mr. TYNE. I have to answer it the way I can answer it.

"Chairman WALTER. Do you know Lee J. Cobb, and I direct you to answer that question.

"Mr. TYNE. I want to say I find this question an invasion of my private——

"Chairman WALTER. Do you know Lee J. Cobb?

"Mr. TYNE. I repeat, sir, this is an invasion of my associations, and——

"Chairman WALTER. The Supreme Court has already passed on that; so you are in error, and now, do you know Lee J. Cobb?

"Mr. TYNE. As far as I know, Mr. Walter, I haven't got your experience with the Constitution and the laws.

"Chairman WALTER. Do you know Lee J. Cobb?

"Mr. TYNE. I must answer that I refuse to have my rights and my private associations invaded, and I cannot answer that question.

"Chairman WALTER. In other words, you refuse to answer the question?

"Mr. TYNE. I refuse to answer because I feel this committee has no right——

"Chairman WALTER. For what reason?

"Mr. TYNE. Because I feel this committee is invading my conscience, and my beliefs, and my rights as a human being, under the Constitution, and as a member of the fourth branch of the Government, the citizenry, and I cannot see any point to the inquiry of this committee, what legislative purpose in knowing——

"Chairman WALTER. For what constitutional reason do you refuse to answer the question?

"Mr. TYNE. I think that I have made my reason quite clear.

"Mr. SCHERER. I think that we should say to the witness that he has not given a sufficient legal reason for not answering the question, and in our opinion he is guilty of contempt.

"Chairman WALTER. Under the recent decisions of the Supreme Court, it is the duty of the committee to warn a witness when he takes the position that you have taken, that he is in contempt. I advise you, or at least I warn you, that in our judgment, you are in contempt for not giving a legal reason for not answering the question.

"(The witness consulted his counsel.)

"Mr. TYNE. I would like to say that I beg to differ with the chairman.

"Chairman WALTER. All right. You have refused to answer the question. Ask the next questtion, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. TYNE. There is no legislative purpose, and their point——

"Chairman WALTER. Let us get over that bridge. I have heard all that about legislative purpose before. We have another purpose, and it is within the law. The Supreme Court has passed on that, and we are doing a very distasteful job in accordance with the law. If you are not going to answer the question, all right. Ask another question, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. SCHERER. Mr. Chairman, before Mr. Tavenner proceeds, may I ask a question?

"Mr. Tyne, Mr. Tavenner read to you the testimony of Mr. Cobb before this committee, and you classify Mr. Cobb as a stool pigeon. Was any of the testimony that was given to this committee by Mr. Cobb about you untrue? You have your opportunity now to say whether the testimony of this man, whom you classify as a stool pigeon, was true or untrue.

"Mr. TYNE. I will use this opportunity. I think this is a variation of the same question, and I feel this is an invasion of my rights as an individual, and I will not talk about my political, personal, or private beliefs, and I stand on my constitutional rights.

"Mr. SCHERER. He didn't say anything about your beliefs. He merely said you were a member of a Communist cell.

"Mr. TYNE. I have answered your question.

"Mr. SCHERER. Mr. Chairman, I ask that you direct the witness to answer my question as to whether or not anything Mr. Cobb said in his testimony before this committee about this witness was untrue.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer that question.

"Mr. TYNE. I say, again, that I stand on the basic rights, the Bill of Rights, of the Constitution, which says that Congress has no right to make inquiries or interfere or question my private beliefs, and the invasion of my associations and of my conscience. There is no legislative purpose in this committee making an inquiry into the theater. This is an area of ideas.

"Chairman WALTER. Just a minute. You are not the theater. You may think you are, but you are not the theater.

"Mr. TYNE. I am a proud member of this theater.

"Chairman WALTER. That is a difference.

"Mr. TYNE. I am a member and I want that clear, and I have worked many years in polishing my craft so I could be in this theater. I am very proud of my profession, and I am proud of my talent.

"Chairman WALTER. Yes, I suppose you are.

"Mr. TYNE. That makes me an integral part of the theater of America, of the United States of America.

Chairman WALTER. But I think that most people in the theater would think that you are presumptuous for attempting to speak for them.

"Will you proceed, Mr. Tavenner?

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Tyne, I have before me a photostatic copy of a Communist Party registration card, which shows that the 1944 card number was 46948, the name is Buddy Yarus, and the address, 2008 Pinehurst, city of Hollywood, county of Los Angeles, State of California. The new card issued December 9, 1944. Will you examine the document please, and state whether or not you recognize it as having been your Communist Party card?

"(A document was handed to the witness.)

"(The witness consulted with his counsel.)

"Mr. TYNE. I think this is the same question, sir, and just in another form.

"Mr. SCHERER. Mr. Chairman, he has not looked at the card, and I think that you should direct him to look at the exhibit which was handed to him.

"Mr. TYNE. I have looked at the card, and I see it.

"Chairman WALTER. Is it your card?

"Mr. TYNE. Again I am not going to answer that, Mr. Chairman, because I feel this is an invasion of my rights and my beliefs.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask you to direct the witness to answer.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer that question.

"Mr. TYNE. I have to repeat, sir, that I stand on my previous answer.

"Chairman WALTER. Which is what?

"Mr. TYNE. That I see no legislative purpose in this committee's inquiry into the theater, and I stand on my constitutional rights, and not only do I stand on it but I feel a responsibility to stand on my constitutional rights that this committee has no right to invade my beliefs, my associations, and how I think.

"Mr. SCHERER. I understand then that you are not relying on the fifth amendment?

"Mr. TYNE. That is right, and I would like to point out that I have no incriminating evidence to hide, and I recognize the validity of the fifth, and I think the people who have used it, and the privilege is wonderful.

"Chairman WALTER. Will you ask the next question, Mr. Tavenner?

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you one of the 1,500 delegates who attended a peace meeting at Mexico City in August of 1949?

"(The witness consulted with his counsel.)

"Mr. TYNE. I must repeat, I think this is the same question, and you are trying to make some association or trying to find out what my political beliefs are.

"Mr. SCHERER. That is not the same question.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer that question.

"Mr. TYNE. I think it is the same question, sir, and the same kind, and I must answer in the same way.

"Chairman WALTER. You are not under any obligation to answer, and you say that you must answer. You are not obliged to answer in that fashion.

"(The witness consulted with his counsel.)

"Mr. TYNE. It isn't a question of obligation. I have a right to answer as I see fit.

"Mr. SCHERER. In refusing to answer Mr. Tavenner's questions as to whether or not you attended this meeting in Mexico City, you are not relying on the fifth amendment; is that right?

"Mr. TYNE. That is right.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you a sponsor of that meeting?

"Mr. TYNE. The same pattern, and the same question.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer that question.

"Mr. TYNE. I repeat, sir, that I have a right not to have my personal affiliations, associations, and beliefs invaded by any committee, and I stand on that as my answer.

"Mr. TAVENNER. In ascribing to the committee the shows in which you participated in California, did you advise the committee that you took part or that you were the director of a show in 1953 entitled 'Going Down the Road'?

"(The witness consulted with his counsel.)

"Mr. TYNE. Yes; I participated in this production.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you its director?

"Mr. TYNE. Yes.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I hand you a photostatic copy of the July 15, 1953, issue of the Daily People's World, published in California. It carries an article over the name of Charles Glenn. Were you personally acquainted with Charles Glenn?

"Mr. TYNE. There we go again. That is the same question, and it is the same pattern. I will not reveal my associations and my beliefs to this committee.

"Chairman WALTER. You are not being asked anything about your beliefs at all. You are being asked whether or not you know Charles Glenn.

"Mr. TYNE. I am being asked about my associations.

"Chairman WALTER. Do you know Charles Glenn?

"(The witness consulted with his counsel.)

"Mr. TYNE. From what I understand of the Constitution, I have a right to peacefully assemble with anyone.

"Chairman WALTER. We are not talking about that, and we are not questioning that. What we are asking you is whether or not you know this man.

Mr. TYNE. I think that I have made my position clear.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct the witness to answer.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct the witness to answer.

"Mr. TYNE. Then I repeat that this committee has no right to invade my political beliefs, and my associations, and my conscience, and I stand on that as my answer. No matter what way you ask me.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Tyne, the reviewer, Charles Glenn, has this to say about the show:

" 'Bourgeois theater entrepreneurs insist upon entertainment values, so called, and an abandonment of a minimizing of a "message"—'

"The 'message' is in quotation marks—

" 'A people's theater must insist on content, on the dramatization of the struggles of the people. It must insist as well on its "message" being clothed in a form lending itself to dramatic and entertainment value. Freedom Stage undoubtedly has this potential in its group, and so does Ellis, and this play proves it.'

"I want to ask you whether or not this was a play designed to carry a Communist message?

"(The witness consulted with his counsel.)

"Mr. TYNE. I think this question really reveals the purpose of this committee in New York City, in the sense that you are trying to control and censor and set up conformity as to what should appear on the stage in America. I think that this is an invasion of the first amendment as I believe it to be.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask you to direct the witness to answer.

"Mr. TYNE. I see no legislative purpose, and incidentally, I think, as I understand the Constitution, that this committee has no right to legislate in this area.

"Chairman WALTER. Just a moment. I think not for your benefit, but I think for the benefit of the record it might be appropriate for me to read a part of the decision in the case of the United States against Josephson, in which the same question was raised.

" 'The argument of the appellant, and the amicus, is in substance that the committee's power to investigate is limited by Congress' power to legislate. Congress is prohibited from legislating on matters of thought, speech, or opinion.

" 'Ergo, a statute empowering a congressional committee to investigate such powers is unconstitutional. The mere statement of this syllogism is sufficient to refute it.'

"That is what the Supreme Court of the United States has had to say about what you are talking about.

"Mr. SCHERER. I want to keep the record straight. I ask that you direct the witness to answer Mr. Tavenner's last question.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer Mr. Tavenner's last question.

"Mr. TYNE. May my attorney answer the legal argument?

"Chairman WALTER. No, I know what he will say.

"Mr. POPPER. I will say that you made an error, first of all, because that wasn't the Supreme Court.

"Chairman WALTER. It is the circuit court of appeals, but the Supreme Court refused to review.

"Mr. POPPER. That is the point. Very recently the Supreme Court decided to review it.

"Chairman WALTER. I am just keeping the record straight.

"Mr. TAVENNER. The chairman directed that you answer the question. You did not reply.

"Mr. TYNE. I have forgotten what the question was.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Will the reporter read the question?

"(Whereupon the reporter read the pending question as above recorded.)

"Mr. SCHERER. That is the question I asked Mr. Chairman to direct the witness to answer.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer the question.

"Mr. TYNE. I feel I have already answered that question in answering the previous questions, and this is the same question.

"Mr. SCHERER. For the record, I think it should be stated that we do not accept his answer, and we feel that the reasons given are not legal reasons for refusing to answer the question. In our opinion the witness is in contempt of the committee. I think that is in conformity with the Supreme Court decision.

"Chairman WALTER. That is correct.

"Mr. SCHERER. I think we should state our position, namely, that my amendment is a basis for a future action by this committee of a citation for contempt.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you a member of the Communist Party at the time that you were engaged as director of this play?

"Mr. TYNE. Here we go again. This is the same question, and I give you the same answer. This is an invasion of my private rights and associations and beliefs, and personal political beliefs, and I stand on that.

"Chairman WALTER. Is that the sole reason for your refusing to answer?

"Mr. TYNE. I also see no pertinency of any legislative purpose.

"Mr. SCHERER. Do I understand that you are not relying on the fifth amendment for refusing to answer this question?

"Mr. TYNE. Exactly, sir, and there is no question of self-incrimination. I have great respect for the fifth amendment and the people who use it.

"Mr. WILLIS. But you are not invoking it?

"Mr. TYNE. I am not invoking the fifth. I personally feel that I have to stand on what I think is my constitutional right which is that this committee or any section of Congress has no right to invade my privacy as a citizen, and my beliefs, and my associations.

"Mr. SCHERER. Even as to your membership in a criminal conspiracy which the Communist conspiracy is? Do you feel that way?

"Mr. TYNE. I am not in a position to argue any opinion.

"Chairman WALTER. Proceed, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Tyne, are you a member of any unions organized within the field of acting?

"(The witness consulted with his counsel.)

"Mr. TYNE. I repeat the answer to this question is the same as the question about my association and my beliefs, and I see no pertinent points or any legislative purpose in answering your question because I think it is an invasion of my rights as an individual, my economic and political beliefs, and my conscience.

"Mr. WILLIS. I think he should be directed to answer the question.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer the question.

"(The witness consulted with his counsel.)

"Mr. TYNE. I have answered the question, and I stand on that.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Are you a member of Actors Equity?

"Mr. TYNE. That is the same question.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Well then answer it.

"Mr. TYNE. I have answered the question.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer the question as to whether or not you are a member of Actors Equity?

"(The witness consulted with his counsel.)

"Mr. TYNE. I must answer in the same way, and I repeat it, and this committee has no right to ask me of my associations and my beliefs and I stand on that as my answer.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Are you a member of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists?

"Mr. TYNE. That is the same question and I give you the same answer.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I ask that the witness be directed to answer.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer the question.

"Mr. TYNE. I repeat, this committee has no right to inquire into my associations, my beliefs, and my conscience.

"Chairman WALTER. In view of the fact that that is not an answer, I am compelled to warn you that you are in contempt of this committee.

"(The witness consulted with his counsel.)

"Mr. TYNE. That is your opinion, and I disagree with it.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Are you aware of the existence within the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists of a caucus composed of members of the Communist Party who are also members of that organization?

"Mr. TYNE. I think that your question is trying to entrap me, and I have already answered, and it is just the same thing all over again with another form and another word.

If you would like me to repeat what I believe and what I stand on, I will.

"Chairman WALTER. Never mind, you have already answered the question.

"Mr. TYNE. I am glad I made myself clear.

"Chairman WALTER. You haven't exactly made yourself clear, but we know what you are saying.

"Mr. TYNE. The committee has made itself clear, and I feel that I have made myself clear.

"Chairman WALTER. All right. Proceed, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. SCHERER. I think that there should be a direction to answer Mr. Tavenner's last question. We do not accept his answer.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer that question.

"Mr. TYNE. I will gladly repeat my previous answer, that this committee or any section of Congress has no right to invade the rights of the individual, his beliefs, his conscience, his associations, and his right to assemble, period.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Have you at any time attended a caucus of members of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists, who were members of the Communist Party?

"Mr. TYNE. This is the same question with a few other adjectives and nouns. I repeat my answer to this question, that I stand on my constitutional right that this committee has no right to invade my rights and my associations.

"Mr. TAVENNER. May I ask a direction?

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer the question.

"Mr. TYNE. Yes, it has gone on, and it is very easy to see. It is getting a little monotonous.

"Chairman WALTER. It is not monotonous to us.

"Mr. TYNE. Certainly it is not to me, because I am very clear in my position. I stand on my constitutional right to say this committee has no right and no legislative purpose in invading this area of my thinking, and my associations, and my beliefs.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Are you aware of any effort made by the Communist Party to exert influence within any union of which you are a member?

"Mr. TYNE. This is another question to try to entrap me, and I repeat——

"Mr. TAVENNER. No, it is an effort to obtain facts, Mr. Tyne, which you apparently are unwilling to give the committee.

"Mr. SCHERER. Facts which, if he wanted to, he could give the committee. I know he has knowledge of the situation.

"(The witness consulted with his counsel.)

"Mr. TYNE. Would you please repeat the question?

"(Whereupon the reporter read the pending question as above recorded.)

"Mr. TYNE. I believe this is the same question in other words. I would like to say again that I think this committee has no right to invade my rights and I would like to see the day when the courts will uphold my feeling about this, and the feeling of a lot of people, that there is no legislative purpose in making inquiries into the theater, or inquiries——

"Chairman WALTER. We made it abundantly clear that we are not making any inquiry into the theater. We are just finding out, if we can, what elements there are in the theater which might at some time or other bring criticism upon decent and innocent people.

"Now go ahead, Mr. Tavenner, and ask the next question.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I have no further questions.

"Mr. TYNE. Does that prove that you have no legislative purpose, that statement that you just made, Mr. Walter?

"Chairman WALTER. Are there any further questions?

"Mr. TAVENNER. No, sir.

"Chairman WALTER. Are you a member of the Communist Party?

"Mr. TYNE. That is the same question.

"Chairman WALTER. Now, right now, are you a member of the Communist Party?

"Mr. TYNE. Mr. Walter, if I were to answer that, that would be in my feeling, personally, that I would be violating the Constitution which says that Congress has no right to invade the beliefs and the associations and the conscience of the individuals of this country. That is my answer.

"Chairman WALTER. Are there any questions?

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask you to direct the witness to answer your last question.

"Chairman WALTER. We will proceed.

"Do you have a question?

"Mr. SCHERER. No."

Because of the foregoing, the said Committee on Un-American Activities was deprived of answers to pertinent questions propounded to said George Tyne relative to the subject matter which, under Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2), of the 79th Congress, and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress, the said committee was instructed to investigate, and the refusal of the witness to answer the questions, namely:

"Do you know Mr. Lee J. Cobb?

"Was any of the testimony that was given to this committee by Mr. Cobb about you untrue?

"Is it your card? (Card referred to was a Communist Party membership card which was handed to the witness.)

"Were you one of the 1,500 delegates who attended a peace meeting at Mexico City in August of 1949?

"Were you a sponsor of that meeting?

"Were you personally acquainted with Charles Glenn?

"I want to ask you whether or not this was a play designed to carry a Communist message?

"Were you a member of the Communist Party at the time you were engaged as director of this play?

"Mr. Tyne, are you a member of any unions, organized within the field of acting?

"Are you a member of Actors Equity?

"Are you a member of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists?

"Are you aware of the existence within the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists of a caucus composed of members of the Communist Party who are also members of that organization?

"Have you at any time attended a caucus of members of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists who were members of the Communist Party?"

Which questions were pertinent to the subject under inquiry, is a violation of the subpena under which the witness had previously appeared, and his refusal to answer the aforesaid questions deprived your committee of necessary and pertinent testimony, and places the said witness in contempt of the House of Representatives of the United States.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution (H. Res. 634) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Speaker of the House of Representatives certify the report of the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives as to the refusal of George Tyne to answer questions before a duly constituted subcommittee of the Committee on Un-American Activities, together with all of the facts in connection therewith, under seal of the House of Representatives, to the United States attorney for the southern district of New York, to the end that the said George Tyne may be proceeded against in the manner and form provided by law.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, George Tyne was a radio performer who was asked questions at certain hearings in New York with respect to his own Communist Party membership, and whether a Communist Party membership card in the name of Buddy Yarus was his Communist Party card. He was also questioned regarding the holding of a so-called peace meeting at Mexico City, of which he was a sponsor. He was asked whether a play, of which he was the director, was designed to carry a Communist message. He was also interrogated concerning the holding of caucus meetings of members of the Communist Party, who were also members of his labor union.

He refused to answer all of the questions asked him. He did not invoke the fifth amendment but said it was a matter of conscience with him not to answer questions concerning the activities that he undoubtedly was engaged in.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALTER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. KEATING. Was he asked whether he invoked the fifth amendment?

Mr. WALTER. Yes; he was asked whether or not he invoked the fifth amendment, and he said he did not invoke the fifth amendment.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST ELLIOTT SULLIVAN

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Un-American Activities, I submit a privileged report (Rept. No. 2919).

The Clerk read as follows:

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST ELLIOTT SULLIVAN

Mr. WALTER, from the Committee on Un-American Activities, submitted the following report:

The Committee on Un-American Activities, as created and authorized by the House of Representatives through the enactment of Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2) of the 79th Congress, and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress, caused to be issued a subpena to Elliott Sullivan. The said subpena directed Elliott Sullivan to be and appear before said Committee on Un-American Activities, or a duly authorized subcommittee thereof, of the House of Representatives of the United States, of which the Honorable FRANCIS E. WALTER is chairman, in their chamber, room 1703, United States District Court Building, Foley Square, New York, N. Y., on August 16, 1955, at the hour of 10 a. m., then and there to testify touching matters of inquiry committed to said committee; and not to depart without leave of said committee. The subpena served upon the said Elliott Sullivan is set forth in words and figures as follows:

"UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

"CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES.

"To ELLIOTT SULLIVAN, Greeting:

"Pursuant to lawful authority, you are hereby commanded to be and appear before the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives of the United States, or a duly appointed subcommittee thereof, on Tuesday, August 16, 1955, at 10 o'clock a. m., at their Committee Room, 1703

United States District Court Building, Foley Square, New York, N. Y., then and there to testify touching matters of inquiry committed to said committee, and not to depart without leave of said committee.

"Hereof fail not, as you will answer your default under the pains and penalties in such cases made and provided.

"To Frank J. Bonora, to serve and return.

"Given under my hand this 29th day of July in the year of our Lord 1955.

"FRANCIS E. WALTER,
"Chairman."

The said subpena was duly served as appears by the return made thereon by Frank J. Bonora, who was duly authorized to serve the said subpena. The return of the service by the said Frank J. Bonora, being endorsed thereon, is set forth in words and figures, as follows:

"Subpena for Elliott Sullivan before the Committee on Un-American Activities. I made service of the within subpena by personal service on the within-named Elliott Sullivan, at room 226, H. O. B., Washington 25, D. C., at 12 o'clock p. m., on the 29th day of July 1955.

"FRANK J. BONORA."

The said Elliott Sullivan, pursuant to said subpena, and in compliance therewith, appeared before a duly constituted subcommittee of the Committee on Un-American Activities on August 16, 1955, to give such testimony as required under and by virtue of Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2) of the 79th Congress, and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress. The said Elliott Sullivan having appeared as a witness and having been asked the questions; namely:

"Which of the unions were you a member of?

"Have you been active in the affairs of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists?

"Have you been active in the affairs of Actors Equity?

"I want to ask you whether or not during the period of time that you have been a member of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists and Actors Equity you have been engaged in mass organization work of any character in response to advice or any understanding that you may have received from the Communist Party or its members.

"Were you a member of a Communist Party group in 1947 in the city of New York?

"Did you become a member of the Communist Party soon after your arrival or at an early date after your arrival in California or at any time while you were in California?

"Is anything that Mr. Berkeley told this committee under oath about you false?

"Will you tell the committee whether or not V. J. Jerome interposed in any activities of Communist Party groups in the city of New York, to your knowledge?

"Was his testimony true or false? (The witness referred to was Nicholas Bela.)

"What were the activities of the Communist Party within those groups? (The groups referred to were the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists and Actors Equity.)

"Did you ever attend a caucus meeting of members of the Communist Party within the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists?

"Will you examine the document, please, and state whether or not in that instance you were carrying out a Communist Party function?

"Mr. Sullivan, are you now a member of the Communist Party?"

Which questions were pertinent to the subject under inquiry, refused to answer said questions, and as a result of said Elliott Sullivan's refusal to answer the aforesaid questions, your committee was prevented from receiving testimony and information concerning a matter committed to said committee in accordance with the terms of the subpena served upon said Elliott Sullivan.

The record of the proceedings before the subcommittee on August 16, 1955, during which the said Elliott Sullivan refused to answer the aforesaid questions pertaining to the subject under inquiry, is set forth in fact as follows:

"UNITED STATES
"HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
"SUBCOMMITTEE OF THE
"COMMITTEE ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES,
"New York, N. Y., Tuesday, August 16, 1955.

"PUBLIC HEARING

"A subcommittee of the Committee on Un-American Activities met at 10 a. m., pursuant to recess, in room 1703 of the Federal Building, Foley Square, New York, N. Y., Hon. FRANCIS E. WALTER (chairman) presiding.

"Committee members present: Representatives WALTER, WILLIS, and SCHERER.

"Staff members present: Frank S. Tavenner, Jr., counsel; Donald T. Appell and Frank Bonora, investigators; and Thomas W. Beale, Sr., chief clerk.

"Chairman WALTER. The committee will come to order.

"Mr. Tavenner, call your first witness.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Elliott Sullivan, will you come forward, please?

"His counsel is not here, and if you will bear with us just a moment, please.

"Chairman WALTER. We will wait a few minutes.

"(Whereupon, a short recess was taken by the committee.)

"Chairman WALTER. Will you raise your right hand, please, Mr. Sullivan?

"Do you swear that the testimony you are about to give will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I do.

"TESTIMONY OF ELLIOTT SULLIVAN, ACCOMPANIED BY HIS COUNSEL, BELLA S. ABZUG

"Mr. TAVENNER. Will you state your name, please, sir?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Elliott Sullivan.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Will counsel accompanying the witness please identify herself for the record?

"Miss ABZUG. Bella S. Abzug, 205 West 34th Street, New York.

"Mr. TAVENNER. When and where were you born, Mr. Sullivan?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. San Antonio, Tex., July 4, 1907.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Will you spell your name, please, sir?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. E-l-l-i-o-t-t S-u-l-l-i-v-a-n.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Where do you now reside?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. New York City.

"Mr. TAVENNER. At what address?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. 2 Peter Cooper Road.

"Mr. TAVENNER. How long have you been a resident of New York City?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. On and off since 1929.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Will you tell the committee, please, what your profession or occupation is?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I am an actor.

* * * * *

"Mr. TAVENNER. I assume that, having followed the profession that you have, both on the stage and television and radio, it was necessary for you to become a member of various unions organized within those fields?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. That is a correct assumption; yes.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Which of the unions were you a member of?

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Well, it is apparent from the various aspects of the industry that I have been in that I have to be a member of the various unions involved, and so it is a matter of public record, but I do insist on challenging your right to ask me this question.

"Mr. TAVENNER. May I have a direction?

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer the question.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I answer it in the way that I have before—that I believe you do not have the power to ask me questions regarding my associations.

"Chairman WALTER. In view of the fact that the Supreme Court has handed down a rather decisive decision recently, I feel that it is my duty to warn you that you have taken an incorrect position, and I again direct you to answer the question.

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Well, it may be your opinion, Mr. WALTER, that this is an incorrect position, but I am firmly convinced that the Bill of Rights was meant to mean what it says, and I insist on my right to challenge your right to ask me about my associations.

"Mr. SCHERER. May I ask a question?

"I understand you are not relying on the fifth amendment in refusing to answer the question asked you by Mr. Tavenner?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. That is correct, but I don't want any inference from that——

"Mr. SCHERER. I understand.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. That I don't believe that the fifth amendment isn't one of the amendments in the Constitution.

"Mr. SCHERER. But in refusing to answer this particular question of Mr. Tavenner you are not relying on the fifth amendment.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I am not taking the position that I am refusing to answer this question, Mr. Scherer. I am answering it in this fashion. If you want to know specifically whether I am invoking my privilege under the fifth amendment, I am not.

"Mr. SCHERER. That is all I want to know.

"I think we should further say to this witness—at least, it is the opinion of this member of the committee—that he is in contempt for refusing to answer this question.

"Mr. WILLIS. I certainly concur in it.

"Chairman WALTER. I don't think it makes any difference to him. So why tell him?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Of course it makes a difference to me, Mr. WALTER, to be in contempt. Why do you say that?

"Chairman WALTER. I was talking to Mr. SCHERER.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I beg your pardon, I thought you were making a public statement and I thought it was in the record that it doesn't make any difference to me. Of course it makes a difference, and I have a wife and two children, and I am very anxious to work and this is a big waste of time as far as I am concerned. The harassment that is involved in this is utter nonsense, and when you make a statement such as you don't think it makes any difference to me, I beg to differ with you very strongly about that. It makes a serious difference to my entire life, my appearance here, and I resent that remark.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Sullivan, have you been active in the affairs of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists?

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Whether I have been active in my unions or not, again is a question which I believe to be an invasion of my personal right to associate with whom I please, and I will answer this question in this way but not under compulsion here.

"Chairman WALTER. Just a moment, let us straighten this out.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. That was a bad sentence, I agree.

"Chairman WALTER. Now that we agree it is a bad sentence, let us go to something else.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask you to direct the witness to answer.

"Chairman WALTER. He was about to answer it after he made that little speech, and he got off on the wrong foot, and now he is going to answer it.

"Mr. SCHERER. Let us keep this record straight. Wait a minute, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I don't believe the witness understands there has been a direction to answer. Maybe I misunderstood.

"Mr. SCHERER. There has not been a direction.

"Chairman WALTER. He started to answer the question and then got off onto something else. It was a bad sentence. Let us get around to this question. Have you been active in the affairs of your union?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Is that the question now?

"Chairman WALTER. Wasn't that the question, Mr. Tavenner?

"Mr. TAVENNER. Have you been active in the affairs of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Again, I respectfully submit that as far as I am concerned, I believe that that question invades my ability to associate with whom I please, and therefore I challenge your power to ask that question.

"Mr. SCHERER. Mr. Chairman, I ask you to direct the witness to answer that question.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer that question.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I do answer this question in the way I have just stated.

"Chairman WALTER. All right. Is that your answer?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Yes, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Have you been active in the affairs of Actors Equity?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. This is the same question again and I answer it in the same way.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer that question.

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Because I believe that the right to associate freely has been fought for and won in unions, I think that it would be my right or any other individual's right to associate with whom they please in unions, but I also believe as I have stated before, that this committee does not have the power to ask me questions relating to my associations.

"Mr. SCHERER. You understand, Witness, that when the chairman directs you to answer a question, the committee is not accepting your answer and that is the reason for the direction to answer. Do you understand that?

"Chairman WALTER. He understands, he is represented by counsel.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I don't know anything about the legalisms, and if this is what you mean, I suppose I will take it.

"Miss ABZUG. The witness is giving his answers to the question.

"Mr. SCHERER. The Supreme Court has said that it is the duty of this committee to say to the witness that we do not accept his answer, and it is the duty of this committee to inquire whether he understands what the direction of the chairman means, and that is the reason I made the statement.

"Miss ABZUG. I can only say, Mr. Scherer, that there is no decision which holds that you do not accept an answer. You are raising a question as to whether he is answering the questions, and he is answering the question as he sees fit.

"Chairman WALTER. Proceed, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Sullivan, the committee has received a great deal of evidence over a number of years that the rank-and-file members, and those who are functionaries of the Communist Party are required by the Communist Party and expected by the Communist Party to take an active part in mass organization work.

"Testimony has been received from a number of individuals that they complied with that understanding and that directive by engaging in work of that type.

"I want to ask you whether or not during the period of time that you have been a member of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists and Actors Equity, whether you have been engaged in mass organization work of any character in response to advice or any understanding that you may have received from the Communist Party or its members.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. If ever there was a loaded question, I just heard it, and I will repeat that the right of people to engage in union activity is one which I think by this time is inalienable, and I do not believe or rather I believe firmly that you do not have the power and the right to question me regarding my associations and my thought and my speech.

"Mr. SCHERER. Again, Mr. Chairman, I ask you to direct the witness to answer the question.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer the question.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I will answer the question by repeating that I challenge this committee's power because I believe its jurisdiction is limited, and I don't believe any branch of the Government can inquire into people's individual beliefs or opinions.

"Chairman WALTER. Didn't you understand the question? Mr. Tavenner wasn't asking you about beliefs or opinions. He was asking you about activities.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Well, as far as I am concerned, I don't know how one can separate activities from beliefs. No one acts without belief.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Are you acquainted with Jerome Robbins?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Yes, I know him. I used to know him. I will amend that definitely, I used to know him.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did you know him between 1944 and 1947?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I don't know what dates.

"Mr. TAVENNER. You said you 'used to know him,' when did you cease to know him?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I am not sure about that.

"Mr. TAVENNER. When he testified before this committee, is that what you have reference to?

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I am sorry; will you repeat the question?

"Mr. TAVENNER. You said that you have ceased to know him, and I am asking whether the time you ceased to know him began at the time he testified before this committee?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I would say that that is the case; yes.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Now, my next question is, did you know him between 1944 and 1947?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. It is possible that I did; yes. I mean those dates, it is possible in those dates I did.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did you attend Communist Party meetings with him?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. You are asking me again a question which is involving my associates and beliefs and I challenge your right to ask it.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I am speaking of your action and your conduct, and I am not asking you about your beliefs.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Well, that is a matter of opinion, and I believe that you are asking me about my beliefs and this is why I answer this question this way.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Robbins testified before this committee that you were a member of the group of the Communist Party of which he was a member, and in order to identify the matter a little further, another person in that group identified by Mr. Robbins was Lloyd Gough, also Jerome Chodorov, and Edward Chodorov, according to the testimony that he gave before this committee in New York, in 1953.

"Were you a member of a Communist Party group in 1947 in the city of New York?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Again I repeat that this question is outside of your power to ask and that is how I answer that.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer that question.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Well, it is almost no longer a question of my rights, but of your lack of power to ask it, to ask questions regarding the tenets within the first amendment.

"Mr. WILLIS. As you said earlier, that is the amendment you are relying on throughout your testimony. You are not invoking the privilege of the fifth amendment in giving testimony against yourself?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. That is correct, sir.

"Mr. WILLIS. And throughout your testimony we may assume that that is the case without repetition?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Yes, you may.

"Mr. TAVENNER. You told the committee that you went to Hollywood in 1937. Did you become a member of the Communist Party soon after your arrival or at any early date after your arrival in California or at any time while you were in California?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Again I challenge your right to ask this question as I have stated before.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer the question.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Well my answer again is along the same lines. I will not violate my rights although I believe you are trying to violate my rights.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did you become acquainted with Martin Berkeley in California?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I knew Martin Berkeley; yes.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Martin Berkeley testified before this committee in 1951 and he described the difficulty that had arisen in the Communist Party in California which necessitated the bringing of V. J. Jerome, then the cultural secretary of the Communist Party in New York City to California to straighten it out, and Mr. Jerome picked Mr. Martin Berkeley for the performance of certain services in connection with that work. He described a faction meeting of the Communist Party which, he said, Elliott Sullivan attended. He is also known as Ely Sullivan. Upon being asked what his occupation was, his reply was that he is an actor.

"Did you attend any faction meeting of the Communist Party which was attended by Mr. Martin Berkeley?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I will repeat my challenge to this committee that it does not have the right to ask me questions regarding my associations and I will say further that the long, tired list of men and women who have appeared before this committee who, in my opinion, have sold their honor and dignity and, in fact, the best traditions of American life for a mess of pottage, for a job, for a movie contract, I believe all these people will be judged and are being judged today by the decent people in this country.

"Mr. SCHERER. You are referring to the witness Berkeley, whose testimony Mr. Tavenner referred to; are you not?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I am referring to him along with others.

"Mr. SCHERER. Along with others?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Yes.

"Mr. SCHERER. Is anything that Mr. Berkeley told this committee under oath about you false? In other words, did he lie to this committee, Mr. Sullivan?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I will challenge your right to ask me that question, Mr. SCHERER.

"Chairman WALTER. Mr. SCHERER's question is whether or not Mr. Berkeley's testimony was true or false.

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I merely repeat what I have said before.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask you to direct the witness to answer the question.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer the question.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. What was the question?

"Chairman WALTER. Was the testimony of Martin Berkeley, adduced by this committee, true or false?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I also believe that you do not have the right to ask me this question.

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I do not believe that you have the power to ask me this question any more than you had the power at the time to ask him those questions.

"Chairman WALTER. But we had the power and the authority to ask him those questions, and the only difference between you and Berkeley is that he answered them and you won't. That is the only difference.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I insist that I am answering your questions to the best of my ability.

"Mr. SCHERER. Mr. Sullivan, you attacked Mr. Berkeley and I am saying this to you. He was under oath when he testified before this committee and you are under oath, and if you say to us now that the man whom you attacked lied about you, then I am going to ask that the testimony of Berkeley and your testimony be referred to the Department of Justice, and we can ascertain whether Berkeley lied. You have the opportunity now to say whether this man whom you attacked lied.

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SCHERER. Here is your opportunity.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Because I am firm in my belief that you do not have the power to ask me any question regarding my associations, I will certainly not engage in any discussion with you under compulsion on this question.

"Chairman WALTER. Proceed, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Will you tell the committee whether or not V. J. Jerome interposed in any activities of Communist Party groups in the city of New York to your knowledge?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I will again say that you are asking me questions that have to do with the area of freedom of speech and of association and I will answer that question in that way.

"Mr. TAVENNER. May I have a direction?

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer that question.

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I answer that in the same way, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you employed by the Federal Theater project?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. No, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. At any time?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. No, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you acquainted with V. J. Jerome?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Again whether I was acquainted with V. J. Jerome or anyone else I believe is a question that invades my associations.

"Mr. WILLIS. He volunteered acquaintanceship with other witnesses.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer that question.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I answer it in the same way, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you acquainted with Mr. Lee J. Cobb?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Yes, I was.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Where did you know him, in California, or New York, or both?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. In California.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Cobb testified before this committee that you and certain other persons were members of the same Communist Party group that he was a member of. Will you tell the committee whether or not you were a member of the Communist Party group of which Mr. Cobb was a member?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Mr. Cobb is among those on the shameful list of people who have given testimony——

"Chairman WALTER. Let me get this straightened out. These people whom you have called shameful have made great contributions to the preservation of this Republic and these people have recognized the mistakes that they have made, and they have testified in closed and open session before this committee. I think they are deserving, and are receiving the credit from the vast majority of the American people.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Not from the papers I read, Mr. Walter.

"Chairman WALTER. If you stop reading the Daily Worker, maybe you will find out the truth.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I beg your pardon?

"Chairman WALTER. Proceed, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Since you raised that point, I am talking about the many, many columnists and editorials in this country that have begun to denounce professional informers.

"Chairman WALTER. You hope. Proceed, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you acquainted with George Tyne, also known as Buddy Yarus, while you were in California?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I know Mr. Tyne, and I am not sure whether it was in California or here.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you acquainted with Victor Killian?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Yes, I was.

"Mr. TAVENNER. While you were in California?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Yes, I was.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were either or both of those persons members of the Communist Party group with you in California?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Again you are asking me a question which has to do with my associations, and I do not believe you have the power to do so.

"Chairman WALTER. You say you did know this man Killian, is that correct?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Yes, I did know him.

"Chairman WALTER. Did you know V. J. Jerome?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Well, whether I knew him or not I believe again is a question which I have raised before, and I have answered it.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Will you tell the committee if you know what the Communist Party was endeavoring to accomplish in Hollywood within the moving picture industry at the time that you were there and at the time that you were a screen actor?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I take it that this question results from the stated purposes of this committee in its investigation in New York, in 1955?

"Mr. TAVENNER. There doesn't seem to be as much distance between New York and Hollywood as geography would indicate.

"Will you please answer the question?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Well time certainly indicates there is a lot of difference.

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I insist that the question is not pertinent, and again I will say to you that I challenge your right, and I do not believe you have the power to ask me this question because it involves the individual guaranty under the Bill of Rights.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Robbins in his testimony, which I referred to a moment ago, said that he was in a theatrical transient group of the Communist Party here in New York between 1944 and 1947. Will you tell the committee, if you know, what the Communist Party was endeavoring to do in the theater?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Well, whether I know or not, again I believe is in the area of private opinion and private thought, and I again say that I do not believe this committee has the power to invade that area with questions.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Will you tell the committee what the Communist Party was endeavoring to do within the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I again repeat my same answer.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Sullivan, were you acquainted with Nicholas Bela?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Yes, I am ashamed to say that I have been.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Are you ashamed to say that because he told this committee facts within his knowledge?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I am ashamed to say it because I believe he is one of those people, I know he is one of those people who has lost his dignity.

"Mr. SCHERER. Is he one of those who testified so that he could get a job or some personal preferment?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. There must be something at stake of that sort, for a man to lower himself to that extent.

"Mr. SCHERER. You people talk about witnesses being smeared. You are smearing this man by claiming that he perjured himself for some personal advancement, isn't that what you are doing?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Well, the worse smear is a word which is used by people for different reasons.

"Mr. SCHERER. You have smeared three witnesses who have testified before this committee.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I don't think I have. If I have smeared them, I don't think it is not merely that I am making this characterization of these people, but I believe many hundreds of thousands of people do.

"Mr. SCHERER. Isn't it a fact that you have stated that they testified falsely and that is perjury, because of some personal advantage that they would get?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I don't think the ultimate outcome or I don't believe the ultimate judgment is going to be either yours or mine, Mr. SCHERER, frankly, and I think it is going to depend upon what the American people feel about people like this.

"Mr. SCHERER. That isn't my question. My question was, isn't it in effect that you have charged these people with perjury, and haven't you smeared these three former associates with you in the Communist Party?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I don't know what the definition of 'perjury' is, but I do know what the definition is of an 'informer.'

"Chairman WALTER. Did they testify falsely when they said that you were a member of a Communist group with them?

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SULLIVAN. That isn't pertinent to my position, Mr. WALTER, and I believe that you do not have the right to ask me this question.

"Mr. SCHERER. I just think we should make it clear, Mr. Chairman, from time to time, who is smearing whom.

"Chairman WALTER. I think it is perfectly obvious.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Bela in the course of his testimony before this committee identified Elliott Sullivan, an actor, as a person known to him to be a member of the Communist Party.

"Was his testimony true or false?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Again I repeat, sir, that this man has forsaken his conscience and has given testimony true or false for undignified reasons.

"Mr. TAVENNER. My question is, was his testimony true or false?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I said regardless of what kind of testimony he gave, whether it was true or false, I believe that this man has forsaken his conscience.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Was his testimony true or false?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I am not going to answer. I will answer that question by telling you again that the question is intended to determine what my beliefs are, and there is no power under this Government that can do that.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask you to direct the witness to answer.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer that question.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I will tell you again, Mr. Walter, and as strongly as I know how, as a human being, that I do not believe that there is any branch of our Government that the very foundation of our Government, the rockbottom pinnacle, or whatever you want to call it, the basis of our democratic Government depends precisely on this very point, that people may not, or no branch of the Government may invade the individual rights of freedom of speech or association.

"Chairman WALTER. Do you suppose that this subcommittee, with its distinguished counsel, who prosecuted Tojo in Japan, would ask a question if he thought it was an improper question? Now, you feel as strongly as you do about it, and I feel as strongly as I do about it, and there is only one way to find out, and I assure you that you will be given that opportunity if I have anything to do with it.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. What are you implying, Mr. Walter?

"Chairman WALTER. I am not implying anything, I am just indicating to you that in my judgment you are in contempt, and I will ask the subcommittee to recommend to the full committee that you be adjudged in contempt, and I will ask the Congress of the United States to pass on such a resolution. We can find out whether or not the arm of Government that is charged with the responsibility of protecting its citizens from subversives has a right to ask the kind of questions and the only questions which will throw light on the conspiracy that we believe you have been a party to.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Well, you are making an accusation, Mr. Walter.

"Chairman WALTER. Well, were you?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I beg your pardon?

"Chairman WALTER. I say have you been a member of the Communist conspiracy, or the Communist Party?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. You don't have the right to ask me that question, because it is not a pertinent question, and it is a question that has to do again, as I say, with my personal beliefs, whether I was or I wasn't.

"Miss ABZUG. I would like to suggest, Mr. Walter——

"Chairman WALTER. You advise your client, and not me.

"Proceed, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I want this straight for the record, that I am not a conspirator, and that I have committed no crime, and I believe that in your statement a moment ago that you made some sort of an inference to that effect, and I resent it.

"Chairman WALTER. I didn't mean to make an inference, I was stating it as plainly as I could, that in my opinion you were a member of the Communist conspiracy.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Didn't you say I was going to have the opportunity? What is contained in a phrase like that, if there isn't some kind of an implied threat?

"Chairman WALTER. Proceed, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Sullivan, you have not seen fit to deny or explain this testimony which very positively identified you as having been a member of the Communist Party. If that testimony be accepted as trustworthy, then during the period of time that you were a member of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists, and during the time that you were a member of the Actors Equity, you were in a position to know what Communist Party activities were going on, if any were going on, within those organizations.

"What were the activities of the Communist Party within those groups?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I will tell you again, and I respectfully submit that I do not believe that you have the power to ask me such a question, because it has to do with my associations, and if this is true there would be no reason why you wouldn't be able to ask me about my religion, and about many other kinds of things.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer the question, Mr. Sullivan.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I answer that question by telling you that I do not believe that you have the power to inquire into personal and private affairs of individuals and I want to say furthermore——

"Mr. TAVENNER. Therefore do you refuse to answer the question?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I am not refusing to answer the question.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Then answer it.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I did answer it.

"Mr. TAVENNER. No; you are explaining, and you are endeavoring to avoid answering the question.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Well, it is a matter of opinion.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Then let me rephrase the question, and put it more directly.

"Did you ever attend a caucus meeting of members of the Communist Party within the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. My answer to that question is that I do not believe you have the power to ask me.

"Mr. TAVENNER. And therefore you won't answer.

"May I ask for a direction?

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer the question.

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I state again that I believe that this committee does not have the right under the first amendment to ask me questions which I believe violate my own personal thinking on this matter, the matter of association.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I have before me a photostatic copy of the July 31, 1952, issue of the Daily Worker, which shows an advertisement under the auspices of the National Council of Arts, Sciences, and Professions. There was a meeting referred to as Peace and Presidential Candidates. Those engaging in the program, or among those engaged were Howard DaSilva, Morris Carnovsky, and Elliott Sullivan. Do you recall the occasion?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I do not, no.

"(A document was handed to the witness.)

"Mr. TAVENNER. Will you examine the document, please, and state whether in the performance of your part of that program you were carrying out a Communist Party function?

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Was your question whether or not I remembered this now?

"Mr. TAVENNER. No; my question was if that advertisement refreshed your recollection, would you tell the committee please whether while engaged in that program you were carrying out what you considered to be a Communist Party function?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I remember being present on this occasion here, and I have certainly no recollection of having carried out any Communist Party ideas or whatever it was you said, and despite that however, I still do not believe that you have the right to ask me this question.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I have before me a copy of the May 5, 1947, issue of the Daily Worker, advertising a Carnival-Bazaar, under the auspices of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, in which Phil Leeds, Elliott Sullivan, George Keane, and others took part.

"Will you examine the document, please, and state whether or not in that instance you were carrying out a Communist Party function?

"(A document was handed to the witness.)

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Chairman WALTER. The committee will stand in recess for 10 minutes.

"(A brief recess was thereupon taken by the committee.)

"Chairman WALTER. The committee will be in order.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Was there a question pending?

"(Whereupon the reporter read the pending question as above recorded.)

"Mr. SULLIVAN. In answer to this question, all of these questions which you have been asking me, and which I assume you will be asking me, are in the area of my associations, of where I entertained, and what I do as an individual, and I will say now, as I have all morning been answering these questions, that I will answer all of these questions in the same way. That is to say that my understanding of this form of government and our democracy is that this committee nor any other committee like it, has the right or the power to ask me such questions.

"Mr. TAVENNER. May I have a direction?

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer that question.

"Mr. TAVENNER. The committee does not accept your reason for your refusal to answer, and you are now being directed to answer the question.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I don't take the position that I am refusing to answer your questions. I am taking the position that I am answering your questions to the very best of my ability and my answer to the directed question is again that I do not believe that this committee has the right and the power and that it should not assume such right to ask me questions which are enunciated under the first amendment of the Bill of Rights.

"Chairman WALTER. Because you believe that we have no authority to ask these questions, you decline to answer them; is that right?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I am not declining to answer, Mr. Walter. I am answering.

"Mr. SCHERER. Obviously the witness is declining to answer, and just giving reasons for refusal to answer.

"Mr. TAVENNER. It is a statement by the witness which is not a factual reply to anything that I have asked.

"Chairman WALTER. That is right. Go ahead and ask another question.

* * * * *

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I have a statement, Mr. Walter, that I would like to read.

"Chairman WALTER. Just a moment.

"Mr. SULLIVAN. May I read this, Mr. Walter?

"Chairman WALTER. We will put it in the record if it is relevant.

"Mr. Sullivan, are you now a member of the Communist Party?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. Mr. WALTER, I don't believe that you have the right to ask me any question having to do with my personal beliefs or associations.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask you to direct the witness, Mr. Chairman.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer the question.

"Are you a member of the Communist Party?

"Mr. SULLIVAN. I will tell you again, I answer that question by saying that I do not believe, or I challenge the right of this committee to ask such a question.

"Chairman WALTER. The witness is excused."

Because of the foregoing, the said Committee on Un-American Activities was deprived of answers to pertinent questions propounded to said Elliott Sullivan relative to the subject matter which, under Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2) of the 79th Congress, and under House Resolution No. 5 of the 84th Congress, the said committee was instructed to investigate, and the refusal of the witness to answer the questions, namely:

"Which of the unions were you a member of?

"Have you been active in the affairs of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists?

"Have you been active in the affairs of Actors Equity?

"I want to ask you whether or not during the period of time that you have been a member of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists and Actors Equity, you have been engaged in mass organization work of any character in response to advice or any understanding that you may have received from the Communist Party or its members.

"Were you a member of a Communist Party group in 1947 in the city of New York?

"Did you become a member of the Communist Party soon after your arrival or at any early date after your arrival in California or at any time while you were in California?

"Is anything that Mr. Berkeley told this committee under oath about you false?

"Will you tell the committee whether or not V. J. Jerome interposed in any activities of Communist Party groups in the city of New York to your knowledge?

"Was his testimony true or false? (The witness referred to was Nicholas Bella.)

"What were the activities of the Communist Party within those groups? (The groups referred to were the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists and Actors Equity.)

"Did you ever attend a caucus meeting of members of the Communist Party within the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists?

"Will you examine the document please, and state whether or not in that instance you were carrying out a Communist Party function?

"Mr. Sullivan, are you now a member of the Communist Party?

"Which questions were pertinent to the subject under inquiry, is a violation of the subpena under which the witness had previously appeared, and his refusal to answer the aforesaid questions deprived your committee of necessary and pertinent testimony and places the said witness in contempt of the House of Representatives of the United States."

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution (H. Res. 635) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the Speaker of the House of Representatives certify the report of the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives as to the refusal of Elliott Sullivan to answer questions before a duly constituted subcommittee of the Committee on Un-American Activities, together with all of the facts in connection therewith, under seal of the House of Representatives, to the United States attorney for the southern district of New York, to the end that the said Elliott Sullivan may be proceeded against in the manner and form provided by law.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, Mr. Sullivan is employed in the theatrical field, and was asked concerning his attempts to organize parts of his profession in the Communist Party. He was also interrogated concerning Communist Party activities within labor unions of which he was a member, whether or not in taking part in certain programs he was carrying out a Communist Party function, and his own membership in the Communist Party. He refused to answer pertinent questions propounded to him but did not invoke the fifth amendment.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST PETER SEEGER

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Un-American Activities, I submit a privileged report (Rept. No. 2920).

The Clerk read as follows:

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST PETER SEEGER

Mr. WALTER, from the Committee on Un-American Activities, submitted the following report:

The Committee on Un-American Activities, as created and authorized by the House of Representatives through the enactment of Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2) of the 79th Congress, and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress, caused to be issued a subpena to Peter Seeger. The said subpena directed Peter Seeger to be and appear before said Committee on Un-American Activities, or a duly authorized subcommittee thereof, of the House of Representatives of the United States, of which the Honorable FRANCIS E. WALTER as Chairman, in their chamber, room 1703, United States courthouse, Foley Square, New York, N. Y., on August 18, 1955, at the hour of 10 a. m., then and there to testify touching matters of inquiry committed to said committee; and not to depart without leave of said committee. The subpena served upon Peter Seeger is set forth in the words and figures as follows:

"UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
"CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES.

"To PETE SEEGER, Route 9–D, Beacon, N. Y., Greeting:

"Pursuant to lawful authority, you are hereby commanded to be and appear before the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives of the United States, or a duly appointed subcommittee thereof, on 18 August, 1955, at 10 o'clock a. m., at their committee room, 1703 United States Courthouse, Foley Square, New York City, N. Y., then and there to testify touching matters of inquiry committed to said committee, and not to depart without leave of said committee.

"Hereof fail not, as you will answer your default under the pains and penalties in such cases made and provided.

"To United States marshal, New York City, N. Y., to serve and return.

"Given under my hand this 1st day of July, in the year of our Lord, 1955.

"FRANCIS E. WALTER,
Chairman.

The said subpena was duly served as appears by the return made thereon by John F. Pickett, deputy United States marshal, southern district of New York, who was duly authorized to serve the said subpena. The return of the service by the said John F. Pickett, being endorsed thereon, is set forth in words and figures, as follows:

"Received this writ at New York, N. Y., on July 12, 1955, and on July 14, 1955, at Route 9–D, Beacon, N. Y., I served it on the within-named Pete Seeger by leaving the original thereof with him.

"THOMAS J. LUNNEY,
"U. S. Marshal, SDNY.
"By: JOHN F. PICKETT,
"Deputy U. S. Marshal, SDNY."

The said Peter Seeger, pursuant to said subpena, and in compliance therewith, appeared before a duly constituted subcommittee of the Committee on Un-American Activities on August 18, 1955, to give such testimony as required under and by virtue of Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2) of the 79th Congress, and under House Regulation 5 of the 84th Congress. The said Peter Seeger having appeared as a witness and having been asked the questions; namely:

"May I ask you whether or not the Allerton Section was a section of the Communist Party?

"Did you take part in this May Day program under the auspices of the music section of the cultural division of the Communist Party?

"Did you sing this particular song on the Fourth of July at Wingdale Lodge in New York?

"Were you chosen by Mr. Elliott Sullivan to take part in the program on the weekend of July Fourth at Wingdale Lodge?

"Did you take part in that performance?

"Have you been a member of the Communist Party since 1947?

"Will you examine it please and state whether or not that is a photograph of you?

"It is noted that the individual mentioned is wearing a military uniform. That was in May of 1952, and the statute of limitations would have run by now as to any offense for the improper wearing of the uniform, and will you tell the committee whether or not you took part in that May Day program wearing a uniform of an American soldier?

"Did you also teach at the Jefferson School of Social Science here in the city of New York?

"Are you a member of the Communist Party now?"

Which questions were pertinent to the subject under inquiry, refused to answer said questions, and as a result of said Peter Seeger's refusal to answer the aforesaid questions, your committee was prevented from receiving testimony and information concerning a matter committed to said committee in accordance with the terms of the subpena served upon said Peter Seeger.

The record of the proceedings before the subcommittee on August 18, 1955, during which the said Peter Seeger refused to answer the aforesaid questions pertaining to the subject under inquiry, is set forth in fact as follows:

"UNITED STATES
"HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
"SUBCOMMITTEE OF THE
"COMMITTEE ON
"UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES,
"New York, N. Y.,
"Thursday, August 18, 1955.

"PUBLIC HEARING

"A subcommittee of the Committee on Un-American Activities met at 10 a. m., pursuant to recess, in room 1703 of the Federal Building, Foley Square, New York, N. Y., the Honorable FRANCIS E. WALTER (chairman) presiding.

"Committee members present: Representatives WALTER, WILLIS, and SCHERER.

"Staff members present: Frank S. Tavenner, Jr., counsel; Donald T. Appel and Frank Bonora, investigators; and Thomas W. Beale, Sr., chief clerk.

"Chairman WALTER. The committee will be in order.

"(After the completion of the testimony of several other witnesses, Mr. Peter Seeger was called as a witness.)

"Chairman WALTER. Will you call your next witness, Mr. Tavenner?

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Peter Seeger, will you come forward, please sir?

"Chairman WALTER. Do you swear that the testimony you are about to give will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

"Mr. SEEGER. I do, sir.

"TESTIMONY OF PETER SEEGER, ACCOMPANIED BY HIS COUNSEL, PAUL L. ROSS

"Mr. TAVENNER. You are Mr. Peter Seeger?

"Mr. SEEGER. That is my name.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Will you spell your last name, please?

"Mr. SEEGER. S-e-e-g-e-r.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Will counsel accompanying the witness please identify himself for the record?

"Mr. ROSS. Paul L. Ross, New York City.

"Mr. TAVENNER. When and where were you born, Mr. Seeger?

"Mr. SEEGER. I was born in New York in 1919.

"Mr. TAVENNER. What is your profession or occupation?

"Mr. SEEGER. Well, I have worked at many things, and my main profession is a student of American folklore, and I make my living as a banjo picker, sort of damning in some people's opinion.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Has New York been your headquarters for a considerable period of time?

"Mr. SEEGER. No; I lived here only rarely until I left school and after a year or two or a few years living here after World War II, I got back to the country where I always felt more at home.

"Mr. TAVENNER. You say that you were in the Armed Forces of the United States?

"Mr. SEEGER. About three and a half years.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Will you tell us, please, the period of your service?

"Mr. SEEGER. I went in in July 1942, and I was mustered out in December of 1945.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did you attain the rank of an officer?

"Mr. SEEGER. No. After about a year I made Pfc, and just before I got out I got to be T–5, which is the equivalent of a corporal's rating, a long hard pull.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did you become a member of the Reserves?

"Mr. SEEGER. No, I did not.

* * * * *

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Seeger, prior to your entry into the service in 1942, were you engaged in the practice of your profession in the area of New York?

"Mr. SEEGER. It is hard to call it a profession. I kind of drifted into it and I never intended to be a musician, and I am glad I am one now, and it is a very honorable profession, but when I started out actually I wanted to be a newspaperman, and when I left school——

"Chairman WALTER. Will you answer the question, please?

"Mr. SEEGER. I have to explain that it really wasn't my profession. I picked up a little change in it.

"Chairman WALTER. Is it your profession?

"Mr. SEEGER. It is my profession.

* * * * *

"Mr. TAVENNER. The committee has information obtained in part from the Daily Worker, indicating that over a period of time, especially since December of 1945, you took part in numerous entertainment features.

"I have before me a photostatic copy of the June 20, 1947, issue of the Daily Worker. In a column entitled 'What's On,' appears this advertisement:

" 'Tonight—Bronx, hear Peter Seeger and his guitar, at Allerton section housewarming'.

"May I ask you whether or not the Allerton section was a section of the Communist Party?

"Mr. SEEGER. Sir, I refuse to answer that question whether it was a quote from the New York Times or the Vegetarian Journal.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I don't believe there is any more authoritative document in regard to the Communist Party than its official organ, the Daily Worker.

"Mr. SCHERER. He hasn't answered the question, and he merely said he wouldn't answer whether the article appeared in the New York Times or some other magazine.

"I ask you to direct the witness to answer the question.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer.

"Mr. SEEGER. Sir, the whole line of questioning——

"Chairman WALTER. You have only been asked one question, so far.

"Mr. SEEGER. I am not going to answer any questions as to my associations, my philosophical or religious beliefs or my political beliefs, or how I voted in any election or any of these private affairs. I think these are very improper questions for any American to be asked, especially under such compulsion as this.

"I would be very glad to tell you my life if you want to hear of it.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Has the witness declined to answer this specific question?

"Chairman WALTER. He said that he is not going to answer any questions, any names or things.

"Mr. SCHERER. He was directed to answer the question.

"Chairman WALTER. Yes.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I desire to offer the document in evidence and ask that it be marked 'Seeger Exhibit No. 1,' for identification only.

"Chairman WALTER. Mark it and let it be received.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I have before me a photostatic copy of the April 30, 1948, issue of the Daily Worker which carries under the same title of 'What's On' an advertisement of a 'May Day Rally: For Peace, Security and Democracy.' The advertisement states:

" 'Are you in a fighting mood? Then attend the May Day rally.'

"Expert speakers are stated to be slated for the program, and then follows a statement, 'Entertainment by Pete Seeger.' At the bottom appears this: 'Auspices Essex County Communist Party,' and at the top, 'Tonight, Newark, N. J.'

"Did you lend your talent to the Essex County Communist Party on the occasion indicated by this article from the Daily Worker?

"Mr. SEEGER. Mr. WALTER, I believe I have already answered this question, and the same answer.

"Chairman WALTER. The same answer. In other words, you mean that you decline to answer because of the reasons stated before?

"Mr. SEEGER. I gave my answer, sir.

"Chairman WALTER. What is your answer?

"Mr. SEEGER. You see, sir, I feel——

"Chairman WALTER. What is your answer?

"Mr. SEEGER. I will tell you what my answer is.

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SEEGER. I feel that in my whole life I have never done anything of any conspiratorial nature and I resent very much and very deeply the implication of being called before this committee that in some way because my opinions may be different from yours, or yours, Mr. WILLIS; or yours, Mr. SCHERER; that I am any less of an American than anybody else. I love my country very deeply, sir.

"Chairman WALTER. Why don't you make a little contribution toward preserving its institutions?

"Mr. SEEGER. I feel that my whole life is a contribution, that is why I would like to tell you about it.

"Chairman WALTER. I don't want to hear about it.

"Mr. SCHERER. I think that there must be a direction to answer.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer that question.

"Mr. SEEGER. I have already given you my answer, sir.

"Mr. SCHERER. Let me understand. You are not relying on the fifth amendment, are you?

"Mr. SEEGER. No, sir, although I do not want to in any way discredit or depreciate or deprecate the witnesses that have used the fifth amendment, and I simply feel it is improper for this committee to ask such questions.

"Mr. SCHERER. And then in answering the rest of the questions, or in refusing to answer the rest of the questions, I understand that you are not relying on the fifth amendment as a basis for your refusal to answer?

"Mr. SEEGER. No; I am not, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I desire to offer the document in evidence and ask that it be marked 'Seeger Exhibit No. 2,' for identification only.

"Chairman WALTER. Mark it and let it be received.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I have before me a photostatic copy of the May 4, 1949, issue of the Daily Worker, which has an article entitled 'May Day Smash Review Put on by Communist Cultural Division, On Stage,' and the article was written by Bob Reed. This article emphasizes a production called Now Is the Time, and it says this:

" 'Now is the Time was a hard hitting May Day show of songs and knife-edged satire. New songs and film strips walloped the enemies of the people in what the singers called "Aesopian language." '

"Then there is bracketed off in the article this paragraph:

" 'Now Is the Time was a hard hitting May Day show of songs and knife-edge music section of the cultural division of the Communist Party. Script by Lee Hays.'

"And other persons, including Peter Seeger. Lee Hays is recited to be the MC, or master of ceremonies.

"Did you take part in this May Day program under the auspices of the music section of the cultural division of the Communist Party?

"Mr. SEEGER. Mr. Chairman, the answer is the same as before.

"Mr. SCHERER. I think we have to have a direction.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer the question.

"Mr. SEEGER. I have given you my answer, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. The article contains another paragraph as follows:

" 'This performance of Now Is the Time was given in honor of the 12 indicted Communist Party leaders.'

"And then it continues with Bob Reed's account of the show:

" 'This reviewer has never seen a show which stirred its audience more. Add up new material, fine personal and group performances, overwhelming audience response—the result was a significant advance in the people's cultural movement. Now is the Time is that rare phenomenon, a political show in which performers and audience had a lot of fun. It should be repeated for large audiences.'

"Mr. Lee Hays was asked the question while he was on the witness stand as to whether or not he wrote that play and he refused to answer. Do you know whether he was the originator of the script?

"Mr. SEEGER. Do I know whether he was the originator of the script? Again my answer is the same. However, if you want to question me about any songs, I would be glad to tell you, sir.

"Chairman WALTER. That is what you are being asked about now.

"Mr. TAVENNER. All right, I will ask you, but I would like to introduce that document in evidence and ask it to be marked "Seeger Exhibit No. 3," for identification only and to be made a part of the committee files.

"Chairman WALTER. Mark it and let it be received.

"Mr. TAVENNER. You said that you would tell us about the songs. Did you participate in a program at Wingdale Lodge in the State of New York, which is a summer camp for adults and children, on the weekend of July Fourth of this year?

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SEEGER. Again, I say I will be glad to tell what songs I have ever sung, because singing is my business.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I am going to ask you.

"Mr. SEEGER. But I decline to say who has ever listened to them, who has written them, or other people who have sung them.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did you sing this song, to which we have referred, 'Now Is the Time,' at Wingdale Lodge on the weekend of July Fourth?

"Mr. SEEGER. I don't know any song by that name, and I know a song with a similar name. It is called Wasn't That a Time. Is that the song?

"Chairman WALTER. Did you sing that song?

"Mr. SEEGER. I can sing it, and I don't know how well I can do it without my banjo.

"Chairman WALTER. I said, did you sing it on that occasion?

"Mr. SEEGER. I have sung that song, and I am not going to go into where I have sung it. I have sung it many places.

"Chairman WALTER. Did you sing it on this particular occasion? That is what you are being asked.

"Mr. SEEGER. Again my answer is the same.

"Chairman WALTER. You said that you would tell us about it.

"Mr. SEEGER. I will tell you about the songs, but I am not going to tell you or try to explain——

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer the question. Did you sing this particular song on the Fourth of July at Wingdale Lodge in New York?

"Mr. SEEGER. I have already given you my answer to that question, and all questions such as that. I feel that it is improper to ask about my associations and opinions. I have said that I would be voluntarily glad to tell you any song, or what I have done in my life.

"Chairman WALTER. I think it is my duty to inform you that we don't accept this answer and the others, and I give you an opportunity now to answer these questions, particularly the last one.

"Mr. SEEGER. Sir, my answer is always the same.

"Chairman WALTER. All right, go ahead, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you chosen by Mr. Elliott Sullivan to take part in the program on the weekend of July Fourth at Wingdale Lodge?

"Mr. SEEGER. The answer is the same, sir.

"Mr. WILLIS. Was that the occasion of the satire on the Constitution and the Bill of Rights?

"Mr. TAVENNER. The same occasion, yes, sir.

"I have before me a photostatic copy of a page from the June 1, 1949 issue of the Daily Worker, and in a column entitled 'Town Talk,' there is found this statement:

" 'The first performance of a new song, If I Had a Hammer, on the theme of the Foley Square trial of the Communist leaders, will be given at the testimonial dinner for the 12 on Friday night at St. Nicholas Arena * * *. Among those on hand for the singing will be * * * Pete Seeger, and Lee Hays—'

"and others whose names are mentioned.

"Did you take part in that performance?

"Mr. SEEGER. I shall be glad to answer about the song, sir, and I am not interested in carrying on the line of questioning about where I have sung any songs.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I ask a direction.

"Chairman WALTER. You may not be interested, but we are, however. I direct you to answer. You can answer that question.

"Mr. SEEGER. I feel these questions are improper, sir, and I feel they are immoral to ask any American this kind of question.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Have you finished your answer?

"Mr. SEEGER. Yes, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I desire to offer the document in evidence and ask that it be marked 'Seeger Exhibit No. 4,' for identification only and to be made a part of the committee files.

"Mr. SEEGER. I am sorry you are not interested in the song. It is a good song.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you present in the hearing room while the former witnesses testified?

"Mr. SEEGER. I have been here all morning; yes, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I assume then that you heard me read the testimony of Mr. Kazan about the purpose of the Communist Party in having its actors entertain for the benefit of Communist fronts and the Communist Party. Did you hear that testimony?

"Mr. SEEGER. Yes; I have heard all of the testimony today.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did you hear Mr. George Hall's testimony yesterday in which he stated that as an actor, the special contribution that he was expected to make to the Communist Party was to use his talents by entertaining at Communist Party functions? Did you hear that testimony?

"Mr. SEEGER. I didn't hear it; no.

"Mr. TAVENNER. It is a fact that he so testified. I want to know whether or not you were engaged in a similar type of service to the Communist Party in entertaining at these features.

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SEEGER. I have sung for Americans of every political persuasion, and I am proud that I never refuse to sing to an audience, no matter what religion or color of their skin, or situation of life. I have sung in hobo jungles, and I have sung for the Rockefellers, and I am proud that I have never refused to sing for anybody. That is the only answer I can give along that line.

"Chairman WALTER. Mr. Tavenner, are you getting around to that letter? There was a letter introduced yesterday that I think was of greater importance than any bit of evidence adduced at these hearings, concerning the attempt made to influence people in this professional performers guild and union to assist a purely Communist cause which had no relation whatsoever to the arts and the theater. Is that what you are leading up to?

"Mr. TAVENNER. Yes; it is. That was the letter of Peter Lawrence, which I questioned him about yesterday. That related to the trial of the Smith Act defendants here at Foley Square. I am trying to inquire now whether this witness was party to the same type of propaganda effort by the Communist Party.

"Mr. SCHERER. There has been no answer to your last question.

"Mr. TAVENNER. That is right; may I have a direction?

"Mr. SEEGER. Would you repeat the question? I don't even know what the last question was, and I thought I have answered all of them up to now.

"Mr. TAVENNER. What you stated was not in response to the question.

"Chairman WALTER. Proceed with the questioning, Mr. Tavenner.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I believe, Mr. Chairman with your permission, I will have the question read to him. I think it should be put in exactly the same form.

"(Whereupon the reporter read the pending question as above recorded.)

"Mr. SEEGER. 'These features'; what do you mean? Except for the answer I have already given you, I have no answer. The answer I gave you, you have, don't you? That is that I am proud that I have sung for every American, Americans of every political persuasion, and I have never refused to sing for anybody because I disagreed with their political opinion, and I am proud of the fact that my songs seem to cut across and find perhaps a unifying thing, basic humanity, and that is why I would love to be able to tell you about these songs, because I feel that you would agree with me more, sir. I know many beautiful songs from your home county, Carbon, and Monroe, and I hitchhiked through there and stayed in the homes of miners.

"Mr. TAVENNER. You are getting away from the question. My question was whether or not you sang at these functions of the Communist Party. You have answered it inferentially, and if I understand your answer, you are saying you did.

"Mr. SEEGER. Except for that answer, I decline to answer further.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did you sing at functions of the Communist Party, at Communist Party requests?

"Mr. SEEGER. I believe, sir, that a good 20 minutes ago, I gave my answer to this whole line of questioning.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Yes; but you have now beclouded your answer by your statement, and I want to make certain what you mean. Did you sing at the Communist Party functions which I have asked you about, as a Communist Party duty?

"Mr. SEEGER. I have already indicated that I am not interested, and I feel it is improper to say who has sung my songs or who I have sung them to, especially under such compulsion as this.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Have you been a member of the Communist Party since 1947?

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SEEGER. The same answer, sir.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer that question.

"Mr. SEEGER. I must give the same answer as before.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I have a throwaway sheet entitled "Culture Fights Back, 1953," showing entertainment at the Capitol Hotel, Carnival Room, 51st Street at 8th Avenue, in 1953, sponsored by the Committee To Defend V. J. Jerome. It indicates that Pete Seeger was one of those furnishing the entertainment. Will you tell the committee, please, whether or not you were asked to perform on that occasion, and whether or not you did, either as a Communist Party directive, or as what you considered to be a duty to the Communist Party?

"Mr. SEEGER. I believe I have answered this already.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Are you acquainted with V. J. Jerome?

"Mr. SEEGER. I have already told you sir, that I believe my associations, whatever they are, are my own private affairs.

"Mr. TAVENNER. You did know, at that time, in 1953, that V. J. Jerome was a cultural head of the Communist Party and one of the Smith Act defendants in New York City?

"Mr. SEEGER. Again the same answer, sir.

"Mr. SCHERER. You refuse to answer that question?

"Mr. SEEGER. Yes, sir.

"Chairman WALTER. That is understood.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I desire to offer the document in evidence and ask that it be marked 'Seeger Exhibit No. 5' for identification only.

"Chairman WALTER. It will be so marked and received.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I hand you a photograph which was taken of the May Day parade in New York City in 1952, which shows the front rank of a group of individuals, and one is in a uniform with military cap and insignia, and carrying a placard entitled 'censored.'

"Will you examine it please and state whether or not that is a photograph of you?

"(A document was handed to the witness.)

"Mr. SEEGER. It is like Jesus Christ when asked by Pontius Pilate, 'Are you king of the Jews?'

"Chairman WALTER. Stop that.

"Mr. SEEGER. Let someone else identify that picture.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that he be directed to answer the question.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer the question.

"Mr. SEEGER. The question—'Do I identify this photograph'?

"Chairman WALTER. Yes.

"Mr. SEEGER. I say let someone else identify it.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I desire to offer the document in evidence and ask that it be marked 'Seeger Exhibit No. 6.'[1]

[1] See Lee exhibit No. 1.

"Chairman WALTER. Make it a part of the record.

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. TAVENNER. It is noted that the individual mentioned is wearing a military uniform. That was in May of 1952, and the statute of limitations would have run by now as to any offense for the improper wearing of the uniform, and will you tell the committee whether or not you took part in that May Day program wearing a uniform of an American soldier?

"Mr. SEEGER. The same answer as before, sir.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer that question.

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SCHERER. I think the record should show that the witness remains mute, following the direction by the chairman to answer that question.

"Mr. SEEGER. The same answer, sir, as before.

"Mr. SCHERER. Again I understand that you are not invoking the fifth amendment?

"Mr. SEEGER. That is correct.

"Mr. SCHERER. We are not accepting the answers or the reasons you gave.

"Mr. SEEGER. That is your prerogative, sir.

"Mr. SCHERER. Do you understand it is the feeling of the committee that you are in contempt as a result of the position you take?

"Mr. SEEGER. I can't say.

"Mr. SCHERER. I am telling you that that is the position of the committee.

"Mr. TAVENNER. The Daily Worker of April 21, 1948, at page 7, contains a notice that Pete Seeger was a participant in an affair for Ferdinand Smith. Will you tell the committee what the occasion was at which you took part?

"Mr. SEEGER. I hate to waste the committee's time, but I think surely you must realize by now that my answer is the same.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Do you know whether Ferdinand Smith was under deportation orders at that time?

"Mr. SEEGER. My answer is the same as before, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I think that he was not under deportation orders until a little later than that.

"Chairman WALTER. What is his name?

"Mr. TAVENNER. Ferdinand Smith, a Communist Party member and former vice president of the maritime union.

"My purpose in asking you these questions, Mr. Seeger, is to determine whether or not, in accordance with the plan of the Communist Party as outlined by Mr. Kazan and Mr. George Hall, you were performing a valuable service to the Communist Party, and if that was the way they attempted to use you.

"Mr. SEEGER. Is that a question, sir?

"Mr. TAVENNER. That is my explanation to you, with the hope that you will give the committee some light on that subject.

"Mr. SEEGER. No; my answer is the same as before.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did you also perform and entertain at various functions held by front organizations such as the American Youth for Democracy? I have here photostatic copies of the Daily Worker indicating such programs were conducted in Detroit in 1952, at Greenwich Village, on May 10, 1947, and again at another place in March of 1948.

"Did you entertain at functions under the auspices of the American Youth for Democracy?

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SEEGER. The answer is the same, and I take it that you are not interested in all of the different places that I have sung, and why don't you ask me about the churches and schools and other places?

"Mr. TAVENNER. That is very laudable, indeed, and I wish only that your activities had been confined to those areas.

"If you were acting for the Communist Party at these functions, we want to know it. We want to determine just what the Communist Party plan was.

"Mr. SCHERER. Witness, you have indicated that you are perfectly willing to tell us about all of these innumerable functions at which you entertained, but why do you refuse to tell us about the functions that Mr. Tavenner inquires about?

"Mr. SEEGER. No, sir; I said that I should be glad to tell you about all of the songs that I have sung, because I feel that the songs are the clearest explanation of what I do believe in, as a musician, and as an American.

"Mr. SCHERER. Didn't you just say that you sang before various religious groups, school groups?

"Mr. SEEGER. I have said it and I will say it again, and I have sung for perhaps——

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SCHERER. You are willing to tell us about those groups?

"Mr. SEEGER. I am saying voluntarily that I have sung for almost every religious group in the country, from Jewish and Catholic, and Presbyterian and Holy Rollers and Revival Churches, and I do this voluntarily. I have sung for so many, many different groups, and it is hard for perhaps one person to believe, I was looking back over the 20 years or so that I have sung around these 48 States, that I have sung in so many different places.

"Mr. SCHERER. Did you sing before the groups that Mr. Tavenner asked you about?

"Mr. SEEGER. I am saying that my answer is the same as before. I have told you that I sung for everybody.

"Chairman WALTER. Wait a minute. You sung for everybody. Then are we to believe, or to take it that you sang at the places Mr. Tavenner mentioned?

"Mr. SEEGER. My answer is the same as before.

"Chairman WALTER. What is that?

"Mr. SEEGER. It seems to me like the third time I have said it, if not the fourth.

"Chairman WALTER. Maybe it is the fifth, but say it again, and I want to know what your answer is.

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SEEGER. I decline to discuss, under compulsion, where I have sung, and who has sung my songs, that I have helped to write as well as to sing them, and who else has sung with me, and the people I have known. I love my country very dearly and I greatly resent this implication that because some of the places that I have sung and some of the people that I have known, and some of my opinions, whether they are religious or philosophical, or I might be a vegetarian, making me any less of an American. I will tell you about my songs, but I am not interested in telling you who wrote them and I will tell you about my songs, and I am not interested in who listened to them.

"Mr. TAVENNER. According to the Daily Worker there was a conference program of the Civil Rights Congress on April 2, 1949, at which you were one of the performers.

"On August 27, 1949, the People's Artists presented a summer musicale at Lakeland Acres picnic grounds, Peekskill, N. Y., for the benefit of the Harlem chapter of the Civil Rights Congress, at which you were a participant.

"At another meeting of the Civil Rights Congress of New York, around May 11, 1946, you were a participant.

"Will you tell the committee, please, under what circumstances you performed, because you have said that you sang at all sorts of meetings, and now under what circumstances were your services acquired on those occasions?

"Mr. SEEGER. My answer is the same as before, sir. I can only infer from your lack of interest in my songs that you are actually scared to know what these songs are like, because there is nothing wrong with my songs, sir. Do you know——

"Mr. SCHERER. You said you want to talk about your songs, and I will give you an opportunity. Tell us what songs you sang at Communist Party meetings?

"Mr. SEEGER. I will tell you about the songs that I have sung anyplace.

"Mr. SCHERER. I want to know the ones that you sang at Communist Party meetings, because those are the songs about which we can inquire. Just tell us one song that you sang at a Communist Party meeting.

"Mr. SEEGER. Mr. SCHERER, it seems to me that you heard my testimony, and that is a ridiculous question, because you know what my answer is.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. George Hall testified that the entertainment that he engaged in at the instance of the Communist Party, and for the Communist Party were not songs of a political character. He did say, however, that he was expected by the Communist Party to perform in order to raise money for the Communist Party.

"Now, did you, as Mr. Hall did, perform in order to raise money for Communist Party causes?

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SEEGER. I don't care what Mr. Hall says, and my answer is the same as before, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. That you refuse to answer?

"Mr. SEEGER. I have given my answer.

"Mr. SCHERER. Was Mr. Hall telling the truth when he told the committee about the entertainment he engaged in at the instance of the Communist Party?

"Mr. SEEGER. I don't feel like discussing what Mr. Hall said.

"Mr. TAVENNER. The American Committee for Yugoslav Relief has been designated as a front organization. According to the October 22, 1947, issue of the Daily People's World, in California, Pete Seeger headed the list of entertainers to appear at a picnic given by the southern California chapter of that organization.

"Did you participate in that program?

"Mr. SEEGER. If you have 100 more photostats there, it seems silly for me to give you the same answer 100 more times.

"Mr. TAVENNER. What is your answer?

"Mr. SEEGER. It is the same as before, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. There are various peace groups in the country which have utilized your services, are there not?

"Mr. SEEGER. I have sung for pacifists and I have sung for soldiers.

"Mr. TAVENNER. According to the Daily Worker of September 6, 1940, you were scheduled as a singer at a mass meeting of American Peace Mobilization at Turner's Arena, in Washington, D. C.

"What were the circumstances under which you were requested to take part in that performance?

"Mr. SEEGER. My answer is the same as before, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. You were a member of the American Peace Mobilization, were you not?

"Mr. SEEGER. My answer is the same as before.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you not a delegate to the Chicago convention of the American Peace Mobilization on September 5, 1940?

"Mr. SEEGER. My answer is the same as before.

"Chairman WALTER. Is that organization subversive?

"Mr. TAVENNER. Yes.

"Chairman WALTER. What is the name of it?

"Mr. TAVENNER. American Peace Mobilization, and it was the beginning of these peace organizations back in 1940.

"Did you take part in the American Peace Crusade program in Chicago, in April of 1954?

"Mr. SEEGER. My answer is the same as before.

"Of course, I would be curious to know what you think of a song like this very great Negro spiritual, I'm Gonna Lay Down My Sword and Shield, Down by the Riverside.

"Mr. TAVENNER. That is not at all responsive to my question.

"Mr. SEEGER. I gave you my answer before I even said that.

"Mr. TAVENNER. If you refuse to answer, I think that you should not make a speech.

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did you also perform a service for the California Labor School in Los Angeles by putting on musical programs there?

"Mr. SEEGER. My answer is the same as before, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did you teach in the California Labor School?

"Mr. SEEGER. My answer is the same as before, sir.

"Mr. SCHERER. I think for the record you should state whether the California Labor School has been cited.

"Mr. TAVENNER. It has.

"Mr. SCHERER. As subversive and Communist dominated?

"Mr. TAVENNER. Yes, it has been.

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did you also teach at the Jefferson School of Social Science here in the city of New York?

"Mr. SEEGER. My answer is the same as before, sir.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct him to answer.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer. Did you teach at the Jefferson School here at New York?

"Mr. SEEGER. I feel very silly having to repeat the same thing over and over again, but my answer is exactly the same as before, sir.

"Chairman WALTER. Has the Jefferson School of Social Science been cited?

"Mr. TAVENNER. Yes, and it has been required to register under the 1950 Internal Security Act.

"Mr. SCHERER. There are a number of people here who taught at that school, Mr. Walter.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I desire to offer in evidence a photostatic copy of an article from the September 21, 1946, issue of the Daily Worker which refers to music courses at Jefferson School, and I call attention to the last sentence in the article wherein the name Peter Seeger is mentioned as a leader in one of the courses.

"I ask that it be marked 'Seeger Exhibit No. 7.'

"Chairman WALTER. It is received and so marked.

"Why don't you insert it in the record at this point, because there can be no objection to inserting it.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I insert it in the record at this point:

"'SEEGER EXHIBIT NO. 7

"'[Daily Worker, New York, Saturday, September 21, 1946]

"'Music courses at Jefferson School

"'Three new courses in music will be offered by the Jefferson School of Social Science, 575 Avenue of the Americas, for the fall term beginning September 30.

"'The music of Beethoven, a series of 10 Tuesday evening forums, with records and discussions, of representative works of the great creative epochs of Beethoven's life, will be led by Irwin Freundlich. Mr. Freundlich is on the faculty of the Juilliard School of Music.

"'Horace Grenell, president of Young People's Records, will lead a workshop course in Creating Music.

"'A People's Songs Workshop, under the supervision of Waldemar Hille, former professor of music at Elmhurst College, will offer practical sessions in writing new songs and in selecting and editing songs for publication. The workshop leaders will include Herbert Haufrecht, Peter Seeger, Lee Hayes, and others.'

"According to the March 18, 1948, issue of the Daily Worker, it is indicated that you would entertain at a musical presented by the Jefferson Workers Book Shop. According to the November 25, 1948, issue of the same paper you would perform also under the auspices of the Jefferson School of Social Science. Also you were a participant in a program advertised in the Daily Worker of June 1, 1950, put on by the Jefferson School of Social Science, and according to an issue of February 15, 1954, of the same paper, you were expected to play and lecture on songs and ballads in the Jefferson School.

"Will you tell the committee, please, what were the circumstances under which you engaged in those programs, if you did?

"Mr. SEEGER. My answer is the same as before, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Did you also engage in performances for the Labor Youth League in 1954?

"Mr. SEEGER. My answer is the same as before. Do you think that I sing propaganda songs or something?

"Mr. TAVENNER. In 1947, what was your connection with an organization known as People's Songs?

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SEEGER. I take the same answer as before regarding any organization or any association I have.

"Chairman WALTER. What was People's Songs, Mr. Tavenner?

"Mr. TAVENNER. People's Songs was an organization which, according to its issue of February and March 1947, was composed of a number of persons on the board of directors who have been called before this committee or identified by this committee as members of the Communist Party, and the purpose of which, from information made available to the committee, was to extend services to the Communist Party in its entertainment projects.

"Mr. Lee Hays was a member of the board of directors, was he not, along with you, in this organization?

"(Witness consulted with counsel.)

"Mr. SEEGER. My answer is the same as before, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you not the editor of People's Songs, and a member of the board of directors in 1947?

"Mr. SEEGER. My answer is the same as before.

"Mr. TAVENNER. You were actually the national director of this organization, were you not?

"Mr. SEEGER. My answer is the same as before.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Was the organization founded by Alan Lomax?

"Mr. SEEGER. My answer is the same as before.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Was the booking agent of People's Songs, an organization known as People's Artists?

"Mr. SEEGER. My answer is the same.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Will you tell the committee please whether or not during the weekend of July 4, 1955, you were a member of the Communist Party?

"Mr. SEEGER. My answer is the same as before, sir.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Were you a member of the Communist Party at any time during the various entertainment features in which you were alleged to have engaged?

"Mr. SEEGER. My answer is the same.

"Mr. TAVENNER. Are you a member of the Communist Party now?

"Mr. SEEGER. My answer is the same.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask for a direction on that question.

"Chairman WALTER. I direct you to answer.

"Mr. SEEGER. My answer is the same as before.

"Mr. TAVENNER. I have no further questions, Mr. Chairman.

"Chairman WALTER. The witness is excused.

"The committee will stand in recess until 2 o'clock.

"(The committee thereupon recessed at 12:40 p. m., to reconvene at 2 p. m., the same day.)"

Because of the foregoing, the said Committee on Un-American Activities was deprived of answers to pertinent questions propounded to said Peter Seeger relative to the subject matter which, under Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2) of the 79th Congress, and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress, the said committee was instructed to investigate, and the refusal of the witness to answer the questions, namely:

"May I ask whether or not the Allerton Section was a section of the Communist Party?

"Did you take part in this May Day program under the auspices of the music section of the cultural division of the Communist Party?

"Did you sing this particular song on the Fourth of July at Wingdale Lodge in New York?

"Were you chosen by Mr. Elliott Sullivan to take part in the program on the weekend of July Fourth at Wingdale Lodge?

"Did you take part in that performance?

"Have you been a member of the Communist Party since 1947?

"Will you examine it please and state whether or not that is a photograph of you?

"It is noted that the individual mentioned is wearing a military uniform. That was in May of 1952, and the statute of limitations would have run by now as to any offense for the improper wearing of the uniform, and will you tell the committee whether or not you took part in that May Day program wearing a uniform of an American soldier?

"Did you also teach at the Jefferson School of Social Science here in the city of New York?

"Are you a member of the Communist Party now?"

Which questions were pertinent to the subject under inquiry, is a violation of the subpena under which the witness had previously appeared, and his refusal to answer the aforesaid questions deprived your committee of necessary and pertinent testimony and places the said witness in contempt of the House of Representatives of the United States.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution (H. Res. 636) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the Speaker of the House of Representatives certify the report of the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives as to the refusal of Peter Seeger to answer questions before a duly constituted subcommittee of the Committee on Un-American Activities, together with all of the facts in connection therewith, under seal of the House of Representatives, to the United States attorney for the southern district of New York, to the end that the said Peter Seeger may be proceeded against in the manner and form provided by law.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, Peter Seeger was asked a number of questions concerning his activities in the Communist movement and concerning his connection with a Communist school in which the committee felt that he was an instructor. He was also questioned regarding his activities at Wingdale Lodge, a summer camp in New York. He refused to answer any of these questions but did not invoke the fifth amendment.

On the contrary, he specifically stated that he was not relying on the fifth amendment but that he just did not feel that the committee had any right to pry into his personal affairs.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST OTTO NATHAN

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Un-American Activities, I submit a privileged report (Rept. No. 2921).

The Clerk read as follows:

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST OTTO NATHAN

Mr. WALTER, from the Committee on Un-American Activities, submitted the following report:

The Committee on Un-American Activities, as created and authorized by the House of Representatives through the enactment of Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2), of the 79th Congress, and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress, caused to be issued a subpena duces tecum to Otto Nathan, 55 East 10th Street, New York, N. Y. The said subpena duces tecum directed Otto Nathan to be and appear before said Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives of the United States, or a duly appointed subcommittee thereof, of which the Honorable FRANCIS E. WALTER is chairman, on Tuesday, May 29, 1956, at the hour of 10 a. m., in room 226, Old House Office Building, Washington, D. C., then and there to testify touching matters of inquiry committed to said committee, and not to depart without leave of said committee, and to produce any, and/or all, United States passports issued to him by the Secretary of State, United States Department of State, Washington, D. C., or by any agent, agency, division, or bureau of the Secretary of State or the Department of State and received for the purpose of, or used to, travel outside the continental limits of the United States. The said subpena duces tecum served upon the said Otto Nathan is set forth in words and figures as follows:

"UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
"CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES.

"To Dr. OTTO NATHAN, Greeting:

"Pursuant to lawful authority you are hereby commanded to be and appear before the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives of the United States, or a duly appointed subcommittee thereof, on Tuesday, May 29, 1956, at 10 o'clock a. m., at their committee room, 226 Old House Office Building, Washington, then and there to testify touching matters of inquiry committed to said committee, and not to depart without leave of said committee.

"You are hereby commanded to bring with you and produce before said committee, or a duly authorized subcommittee thereof, the following: and he is to produce any, and/or all, United States passports issued to him by the Secretary of State, United States Department of State, Washington, D. C., or by any agent, agency, division, or bureau of the Secretary of State or the Department of State and received for the purpose of, or used to, travel outside the continental limits of the United States.

"Hereof fail not, as you will answer your default under the pains and penalties in such cases made and provided.

"To Frank Bonora or R. T. Collins, to serve and return.

"Given under my hand this 7th day of May, in the year of our Lord, 1956.

"FRANCIS E. WALTER,
"Chairman."

The said subpena duces tecum was duly served as appears by the return made thereon by Ray T. Collins, who was duly authorized to serve the said subpena duces tecum. The return of the service by the said Ray T. Collins being endorsed thereon, is set forth in words and figures as follows:

"Subpena for Dr. Otto Nathan, before the Committee on Un-American Activities.

"I made service of the within subpena by personal service on the within-named Dr. Otto Nathan, 55 East 10th Street, New York City, N. Y., at 11:25 o'clock a. m., on the 10th day of May, 1956.

"Dated 10 May, 1956.

"RAY T. COLLINS."

On May 28, 1956, the following telegram was sent to Dr. Otto Nathan which is set forth in words and figures, as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 28, 1956.

Personal report delivered.

Dr. OTTO NATHAN,
55 East 10th Street, New York, N. Y.:

Under continuing authority of subpena served upon you May 10, your appearance before Committee on Un-American Activities is hereby postponed from May 29 to Tuesday, June 12, 1956, 10 o'clock a. m.

FRANCIS E. WALTER, Chairman.

The said Otto Nathan, pursuant to the said subpena and said telegraphic communication, appeared before a subcommittee of said Committee on Un-American Activities, on the 12th day of June 1956, to give such testimony as required under and by virtue of Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2), of the 79th Congress, and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress. The said Otto Nathan having appeared as a witness and having been asked the questions, namely:

"Now, forgetting any question respecting any beliefs or any associations, tell us now whether or not you have ever been a member of the Communist Party.

"Was that affidavit true or was it false?

"Now, you are identified, or have you been identified, with the National Council of Arts, Sciences, and Professions?

"Do you know a person by the name of Mary Price?"

Which questions were pertinent to the subject under inquiry, refused to answer such questions, and as a result of the said Otto Nathan's refusal to answer the aforesaid questions, your committee was prevented from receiving testimony and information concerning a matter committed to said committee in accordance with the terms of the subpena duces tecum served upon said Otto Nathan.

The record of the proceedings before the said subcommittee on June 12, 1956, during which the said Otto Nathan refused to answer the aforesaid questions, is set forth as follows:

(A subcommittee of the Committee on Un-American Activities, consisting of Representatives FRANCIS E. WALTER, chairman, CLYDE DOYLE, BERNARD W. KEARNEY, and GORDON H. SCHERER, met in the caucus room, Old House Office Building, Washington, D. C., on Tuesday, June 12, 1956, and hearings were conducted by the said subcommittee during that day, Otto Nathan being called as the last witness.)

Mr. ARENS. Otto Nathan, please.

The CHAIRMAN. Will you raise your right hand?

Do you solemnly swear that the testimony you are about to give will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

Mr. NATHAN. I do.

"TESTIMONY OF OTTO NATHAN, 55 EAST 10TH STREET, NEW YORK, N. Y., ACCOMPANIED BY HIS COUNSEL, LEONARD BOUDIN, 25 BROAD STREET, NEW YORK, N. Y., AND DAVID J. LEVY, OF MAASS, DAVIDSON, LEVY, FRIEDMAN & WESTON, 100 PARK AVENUE, NEW YORK, N. Y.

"Mr. ARENS. Kindly identify yourself, sir, by name, residence, and occupation.

"Mr. NATHAN. Otto Nathan, 55 East 10th Street, New York City, associate professor of economics, New York University.

"Mr. ARENS. You are appearing today, Doctor, in response to a subpena which was served upon you by the House Committee on Un-American Activities?

"Mr. NATHAN. Yes, sir; but, Mr. Chairman, I would like to state here for the record that I have not been informed of the purpose of the present investigation and on the scope of my testimony.

"My counsel has requested, by letter of May 14, 1956, and repeatedly afterwards, to be advised as to the nature and purpose of the inquiry and the bills under consideration, but we have had no reply up to date. There has been no reply up to date.

"Mr. ARENS. Are you represented by counsel today?

"Mr. NATHAN. Yes; I am.

"Mr. ARENS. Identify yourselves, counsel, please.

"Mr. BOUDIN. There are two counsels, Leonard B. Boudin, of 25 Broad Street, one of Dr. Nathan's counsel.

"Mr. LEVY. I am David J. Levy, a member of the law firm of Maass, Davidson, Levy, Friedman & Weston, 100 Park Avenue, New York City, counsel for the estate of Albert Einstein, of which Dr. Nathan is executor and cotrustee.

"Mr. ARENS. Does your subpena require you to produce certain documents, Doctor?

"Mr. NATHAN. Yes.

"Mr. ARENS. Do you have those documents with you?

"Mr. NATHAN. I have the passport here, Mr. Counsel.

"Mr. ARENS. Do you have another document, the new passport?

"Mr. NATHAN. I have the new passport here, but I am not willing to hand it over to the committee.

"Mr. ARENS. May I respectfully suggest, Mr. Chairman, that this witness be at this time ordered and directed to transmit physical custody of this document to the committee?

"The CHAIRMAN. You were subpenaed to produce certain documents?

"Mr. NATHAN. Yes, sir.

"The CHAIRMAN. Documents you have with you and you are directed to deliver them over to the committee in accordance with the terms of the subpena duces tecum.

"(Representative KEARNEY left the hearing room.)

"Mr. NATHAN. Mr. Chairman, I am willing to disclose everything in the passport, to read it into the record, everything the passport shows and says, and counsel can supervise me while I am doing that.

"The CHAIRMAN. You have been directed to deliver the subpena.

"Mr. NATHAN. I beg your pardon.

"The CHAIRMAN. You have been directed to deliver the passport over to the committee.

"Mr. NATHAN. I have been directed to produce a passport, and I am producing it here and I am willing, Mr. Chairman.

"The CHAIRMAN. Give it to the counsel.

"Mr. NATHAN. Mr. Chairman, I don't feel that I am able to give the passport to the committee upon advice of counsel. I should like to state the reasons for my unwillingness to hand the passport over to the committee.

"First, the passport represents physical evidence of my right to travel, which is a natural right of every American citizen as established by the United States Court of Appeals in the District of Columbia. This passport was granted me after 2½ years of delaying tactics by the State Department and only after successful litigation by me. I do not want to run the risk of again being without a passport and thereby being again limited in my movements.

"Secondly, I feel——

"The CHAIRMAN. You, of course, are not intimating that we are going to keep your passport, are you?

"Mr. NATHAN. I beg your pardon?

"The CHAIRMAN. You are not intimating that we are going to keep your passport?

"Mr. NATHAN. I don't know, Mr. Chairman. I learned from the newspaper that last week two witnesses which appeared here have not had their passports returned.

"The CHAIRMAN. They will get their passports, there is no question about that.

"Mr. ARENS. Where were you born?

"Mr. BOUDIN. The witness hasn't finished his statement, Mr. Arens.

"The CHAIRMAN. Why do you not file whatever your lawyer gave you?

"Mr. BOUDIN. It may be the committee may find this satisfactory.

"The CHAIRMAN. All right.

"Mr. NATHAN. The second point is that the committee cannot justify its demand, which is unauthorized and unlawful:

"The passport is not needed by the committee as evidence, because I am willing to read everything it shows into the record. The counsel on the committee may verify it as I do so.

"The subpena merely requires me to produce the passport, but the passport remains my property and cannot be taken away from me as long as I am willing to establish whatever it shows.

"The retention of the passport by the committee, however temporary, is unauthorized and, in addition, would be an unlawful and unreasonable seizure under the fourth amendment of the Constitution.

"The retention of the passport would not only be tantamount to suspension of my rights which it evidences, but would infringe upon the authority of the executive branch of the Government which issued it, and upon the judicial branch which ordered its issuance.

"Mr. Chairman, I would like to say once more that I am ready and willing to read into the record everything this passport shows and says and that counsel can verify me while I do so.

"I would also like to say that I should have liked to submit a photostatic copy of the passport to the committee, but I was advised by the photostaters in New York that they are not permitted to photograph passports of the United States.

"I have finished my statement.

"Mr. ARENS. Where were you born?

"Mr. NATHAN. I was born in B-i-n-g-e-n, Germany.

"Mr. ARENS. When did you enter the United States?

"Mr. NATHAN. I entered the United States the first time late in September 1930. I don't know the exact date. I think it was the 30th of September 1930.

"Mr. ARENS. Are you a naturalized citizen?

"Mr. NATHAN. I am a naturalized citizen.

"Mr. ARENS. When were you naturalized?

"Mr. NATHAN. Exactly 17 years ago today on June 12, 1939, in the southern district of New York, and I would like to say I am very proud to be an American citizen. I was proud of it the day I was naturalized. I became a citizen after I acquainted myself with the United States and after I had been a teacher here at several universities and having become well acquainted with what it means to be an American citizen.

"I became an American citizen because I wanted to; I was not born an American citizen. I was always proud to be an American citizen, to fight for the values and the ideals which the United States and the American people have always been guided by.

"Mr. ARENS. Have you ever received a United States passport?

"Mr. NATHAN. Yes, sir; I have received a United States passport.

"Mr. ARENS. Let us take the chronology of the passports which you have received. When did you receive your first passport?

"Mr. NATHAN. In 1939.

"Mr. ARENS. Where did you go on that passport?

"Mr. NATHAN. I went to Europe.

* * * * *

"Mr. ARENS. And then, since you made that trip, have you made application for still another passport?

"Mr. NATHAN. Yes; I made an application for another passport in December 1952.

"Mr. ARENS. Now, in the course of the proceedings in your application for a passport, did you have an interview with the officials of the Department of State?

"Mr. NATHAN. Yes; I did.

"Mr. ARENS. During the course of that interview, were you interrogated as to whether or not you had ever been a member of the Communist Party?

"Mr. NATHAN. Yes; I was. I was interrogated.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you answer the questions?

"Mr. NATHAN. Mr. Counsel——

"Mr. ARENS. Just a moment, please, sir. Did you answer the questions propounded to you by the officials of the Department of State as to whether or not you had ever been a member of the Communist Party?

"Mr. NATHAN. Mr. Counsel, I think you know the answer. The answer is in the records which were deposited with the State Department and with the district court in the District of Columbia and with the court of appeals in the District of Columbia.

"Mr. ARENS. Would you answer the question that is outstanding on this record now?

"Mr. NATHAN. There is no need for me to answer that question again.

"Mr. ARENS. Answer it.

"Mr. NATHAN. I don't see any need for answering it.

"Mr. ARENS. Mr. Chairman, I respectfully suggest that the witness be ordered and directed to answer the question.

"The CHAIRMAN. Answer the question.

"(The witness conferred with his counsel.)

"Mr. BOUDIN. Repeat the question.

"Mr. ARENS. The essence of the question is: During the conferences with the officials of the Department of State in the process of your trying to procure a passport, were you interrogated as to whether or not you are or have been a member of the Communist Party?

"(The witness conferred with his counsel.)

"Mr. NATHAN. Would you repeat the question, please, Mr. Counsel?

"Mr. ARENS. Mr. Chairman, this is the third time right here in a row.

"When you were interrogated by the officials of the Department of State, did they ask you whether or not you had ever been a member of the Communist Party?

"Mr. NATHAN. I think I said before that they did ask me.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you refuse to answer the question as to whether or not you had been a member of the Communist Party?

"(The witness conferred with his counsel.)

"Mr. NATHAN. I did not refuse to answer.

"Mr. ARENS. What did you say?

"Mr. NATHAN. I submitted an affidavit.

"Mr. ARENS. Have you ever been a member of the Communist Party?

"Mr. NATHAN. Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a statement here concerning the questions about my political beliefs, as well as about my political and private associations.

"First, I believe that under the first, fourth, and ninth amendments to the Constitution this committee has not the right to inquire into the political beliefs or political and private associations of Americans.

"Secondly, I further believe that any question about my political beliefs or political and private associations is not within the jurisdiction of this committee or pertinent to the purpose of the present investigation by the committee.

"Thirdly, although my political beliefs and associations have been widely known for many years and also I have always believed in stating them publicly at any time and place of my own choosing, among others in the court of appeals in Washington, I am for the reasons stated above not able as a matter of conscience and principle to answer any questions by this committee as to my political beliefs or political and private associations.

"Mr. ARENS. Now, forgetting any question respecting any beliefs or any associations, tell us now whether or not you have ever been a member of the Communist Party.

"Mr. NATHAN. With reference to the statement which I have just presented to the committee, I refuse to answer that question.

"The CHAIRMAN. I direct the witness to answer the question.

"Mr. NATHAN. I refuse to answer in view of the statement which I have just read.

"Mr. SCHERER. I think we should say that we do not accept his answer.

"Mr. ARENS. Are you a member of the Communist Party?

"Mr. NATHAN. In view of the statement which I have just read, I am not able and not willing to make any statement about my political beliefs and associations.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct the witness.

"The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer the question.

"Mr. NATHAN. I have said a moment ago that I have had great pride in becoming an American citizen 17 years ago today. Before I became an American citizen——

"The CHAIRMAN. You are so proud of being an American citizen, why do you not answer these simple questions?

"Mr. NATHAN. Because I feel it is an infringement of my first amendment rights, Mr. Chairman. I have stated many times what my political beliefs are at times and places of my own choosing and I do not feel your committee has the right to ask me those questions.

"Mr. SCHERER. Then I understand that in refusing to answer the question, you are not relying on the fifth amendment?

"Mr. NATHAN. No, I am not relying on the fifth amendment. I am relying on the first, fourth, and ninth amendments.

"Mr. ARENS. Now, I lay before you a photostatic copy of an affidavit:

" 'STATE OF NEW YORK,

" 'County of New York, ss:

" 'Otto Nathan, being duly sworn, deposes and says:

" 'I am not now and never have been a member of the Communist Party.

" 'Sworn to before me the 20th day of April 1953.'

"I ask you if that is your signature appended to that affidavit?

"Mr. NATHAN. Sir, I am unable to verify here a photostat which you submit to me without showing me the original.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you make an affidavit on April 20, 1953?

"Mr. NATHAN. I answered that question before, Mr. Counsel, that I submitted an affidavit to the State Department. There is no need to ask me that question a second time.

"Mr. ARENS. Wait just a second.

"Did you submit an affidavit to the Department of State under date of April 20, 1953, reading as follows: 'I am not now and never have been a member of the Communist Party'?

"Mr. NATHAN. I don't recall the date but I have made that statement.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you make it available to the Department of State?

"Mr. BOUDIN. Would you mind not pounding on the table?

"Mr. ARENS. I do not mean to reflect any discourtesy, Counsel. Counsel's comments are snide and he is not reflecting credit upon the bar. Did you at any time in April of 1953 submit an affidavit to the Department of State that you were not and have never been a member of the Communist Party?

"Mr. NATHAN. First of all, Mr. Counsel, it's not necessary that you raise your voice when you speak to me.

"Secondly, I have not understood the question, and I would like to have it repeated.

"Mr. ARENS. I will repeat it the third time. Did you submit an affidavit to the Department of State in April of 1953, that you were not and had never been a member of the Communist Party?

"Mr. NATHAN. I do not know, Mr. Counsel, why you repeat asking me the question. I answered it twice before in the affirmative.

"Mr. ARENS. Was that affidavit true or was it false?

"Mr. NATHAN. I resent that question, Mr. Counsel.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that you direct the witness to answer the question.

"The CHAIRMAN. Just a minute. Answer the question.

"Mr. NATHAN. Mr. Chairman, I resent the implications that I have made a statement under oath which should not be correct. I refuse to answer. I think there is a limit beyond which counsel may not be permitted to go.

"I stand here on the record of 63 years. Nobody has ever suggested that a statement which I have made under oath was not correct.

"Mr. SCHERER. Was it correct? You can say now.

"Mr. NATHAN. No, I am not going to answer that question now, Mr. Congressman.

"Mr. ARENS. In 1948——

"Mr. NATHAN. I would very much like the chairman to ask the counsel not to ask such insulting questions.

"Mr. ARENS. If the affidavit was truthful——

"Mr. NATHAN. I don't want to be insulted by you, Mr. Counsel. In any law court of the United States a sworn affidavit is taken as truthful until proven to the contrary. Do you have proof that it's not true?

* * * * *

"Mr. ARENS. Now, are you identified, or have you been identified, with the National Council of Arts, Sciences, and Professions?

"Mr. NATHAN. I said before, Mr. Counsel, that I do not intend to make any kind of statements about my political and private associations. I don't want to make any statements about that.

"Mr. ARENS. Mr. Chairman, I respectfully suggest that the witness be ordered and directed to answer that question.

"The CHAIRMAN. Answer the question.

"Mr. NATHAN. Mr. Chairman, in view of the statement which I read before, I do not intend to make here today before this committee any statement about my political or private associations because I do not feel that the committee under the first, fourth, and ninth amendments has the right to inquire into those associations.

"The CHAIRMAN. In other words, you refuse to answer the question for the reasons given before?

"Mr. NATHAN. For reasons which I have stated before.

"Mr. ARENS. Now I lay before you a photostatic copy of a program of the Cultural and Scientific Conference for World Peace of the National Council of Arts, Sciences, and Professions, bearing a list of a number of sponsors, including a person identified here as Dr. Otto Nathan, and ask you whether or not you are that person?

"Mr. NATHAN. I am one of the five or six hundred sponsors of that conference; yes, sir.

"Mr. ARENS. Do you know a person by the name of Mary Price?

"Mr. NATHAN. Sir, I do not intend to make any statements about my private associations.

"Mr. SCHERER. I ask that he be directed to answer.

"The CHAIRMAN. Do you know a Mary Price?

"Mr. NATHAN. I just said, Mr. Chairman, that I do not feel that I should make any statements about my private acquaintances and associations.

"The CHAIRMAN. You are not being asked anything except whether or not you know this person.

"Mr. NATHAN. I refuse to answer that question in view of the statement which I made before."

Because of the foregoing, the said Committee on Un-American Activities was deprived of answers to pertinent questions propounded to said Otto Nathan, relative to the subject matter which, under Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2) of the 79th Congress, and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress, the said committee was instructed to investigate, and the refusal of the witness to answer the questions, namely:

"Now, forgetting any question respecting any beliefs or any associations, tell us now whether or not you have ever been a member of the Communist Party.

"Was that affidavit true or was it false?

"Now, are you identified, or have you been identified, with the National Council of Arts, Sciences, and Professions?

"Do you know a person by the name of Mary Price?"

Which questions were pertinent to the subject under inquiry, is a violation of the subpena duces tecum under which the witness had previously appeared, and his refusal to answer the aforesaid questions, deprived your committee of necessary and pertinent testimony and places the said witness in contempt of the House of Representatives of the United States.

Mr. WALTER. I offer a resolution (H. Res. 637) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the Speaker of the House of Representatives certify the report of the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives as to the refusal of Otto Nathan to answer questions before a duly constituted subcommittee of the Committee on Un-American Activities, together with all the facts in connection therewith, under seal of the House of Representatives, to the United States attorney for the District of Columbia, to the end that the said Otto Nathan may be proceeded against in the manner and form provided by law.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, Otto Nathan was interrogated concerning his membership in Communist organizations as well as his activities in the National Council for Arts, Sciences and Professions. He was also questioned regarding his acquaintanceship with Mary Price. He refused to answer pertinent questions asked him. He did not rely upon the fifth amendment but stated that the questions that we asked him were not pertinent to the investigation. He chose to decide what was pertinent to our inquiry, and in so doing I am sure placed himself in contempt. He refused to answer the pertinent questions that were propounded.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken and the Speaker announced that the "ayes" appeared to have it.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Speaker, would the gentleman from Pennsylvania yield to me?

Mr. WALTER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. KEATING. Does not the gentleman agree with me that in voting on these resolutions all of us who are here should be very careful to vote audibly, if we do not have a rollcall?

Mr. MASON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALTER. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MASON. The fact is that under the statement made by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALTER] that the Supreme Court presumes that there is no quorum unless a quorum is established as a fact, regardless of our rules, as to every one of these resolutions we have passed with the exception of the first one, we cannot say there was a quorum present.

Mr. WALTER. I do not agree with the gentleman. I am sure that having established a quorum it is presumed now that a quorum is present.

Mr. MASON. Look around and count a quorum.

Mr. WALTER. I could count a quorum, I will say, and the Speaker has so ruled.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Speaker, would the gentleman from Pennsylvania yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. WALTER. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. KEATING. Does not the Speaker agree with the gentleman from New York that it is very important that all Members vote audibly on these resolutions?

The SPEAKER. The Chair always assumes that a quorum is present, unless upon counting it is established a quorum is not present. Otherwise every bill we pass except by rollcall vote could be challenged. That would be my decision, notwithstanding anything that might happen in any other place in the Government.

Mr. JACKSON. Mr. Speaker, with all due deference to the ruling of the Chair, in view of the statement made here a short while ago that this particular case will be ruled out unless the fact is established, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Two hundred and twenty-four Members are present, a quorum.

So the resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST ARTHUR MILLER

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Un-American Activities, I submit a privileged report (Rept. No. 2922).

The Clerk read as follows:

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST ARTHUR MILLER

Mr. WALTER, from the Committee on Un-American Activities, submitted the following report:

The Committee on Un-American Activities, as created and authorized by the House of Representatives through the enactment of Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2), of the 79th Congress, and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress, caused to be issued a subpena to Arthur Miller. The said subpena directed Arthur Miller to be and appear before the said Committee on Un-American Activities, or a duly authorized subcommittee thereof, of which the Honorable FRANCIS E. WALTER is chairman, on Thursday, June 14, 1956, at 10 a. m., at their committee room, 226 Old House Office Building, Washington, D. C., then and there to testify touching matters of inquiry committed to said committee, and not to depart without leave of said committee. The subpena served upon the said Arthur Miller is set forth in words and figures as follows:

"UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

"CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES.

"To ARTHUR MILLER, Greeting:

"Pursuant to lawful authority, you are hereby commanded to be and appear before the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives of the United States, or a duly appointed subcommittee thereof, on Thursday, June 14, 1956, at 10 o'clock a. m., at their committee room, 226 Old House Office Building, Washington, D. C., then and there to testify touching matters of inquiry committed to said committee, and not to depart without leave of said committee.

"Hereof fail not, as you will answer your default under the pains and penalties in such cases made and provided.

"To William A. Wheeler, to serve and return.

"Given under my hand this 1st day of June, in the year of our Lord, 1956.

"FRANCIS E. WALTER,
"Chairman."

The said subpena was duly served as appears by the return made thereon by William A. Wheeler, who was duly authorized to serve the said subpena. The return of the service by the said William A. Wheeler being endorsed thereon, is set forth in words and figures, as follows:

"Subpena for Arthur Miller before the Committee on Un-American Activities. I made service of the within subpena by personal service on the within-named Arthur Miller, at Reno, Nev., First National Bank Building, 15 First Street, at 3:30 o'clock p. m., on the 8th day of June 1956.

"Dated June 8, 1956.

"WILLIAM A. WHEELER."

Prior to June 11, 1956, Mr. Lloyd K. Garrison, attorney for Arthur Miller, requested by long-distance telephone message, a postponement of the hearing as a matter of convenience to his client, which postponement was agreed to, after which the following letter was received by the committee:

JUNE 11, 1956.

Mr. RICHARD ARENS,
Director, House Committee on Un-American Activities, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. ARENS: This is to confirm our telephonic conversation in which you adjourned the appearance of our client, Mr. Arthur Miller, before the House committee from Thursday, June 14, to Thursday, June 21, at 10 a. m.

I am now trying to reach Mr. Miller in Reno to confirm this date. I have every reason to suppose that it will be feasible, but I will communicate with you definitely about this as soon as I have reached Mr. Miller, which should be some time today or tomorrow.

Very truly yours,

LLOYD K. GARRISON.

P. S.—Since I dictated this I have reached Mr. Miller and he has assured me that he will be present on June 21 at the appointed hour.

The said Arthur Miller, pursuant to the said subpena and the said letter from his attorney, and in compliance therewith, appeared before a subcommittee of the Committee on Un-American Activities on June 21, 1956, to give such testimony as required under and by virtue of Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2), of the 79th Congress, and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress. The said Arthur Miller having appeared as a witness and having been asked the questions, namely: "Can you tell us who was there when you walked into the room?

"Was Arnaud D'Usseau chairman of this meeting of Communist Party writers which took place in 1947 at which you were in attendance?" which questions were pertinent to the subject under inquiry, refused to answer said questions, and as a result of said Arthur Miller's refusal to answer the aforesaid questions, your committee was prevented from receiving testimony and information concerning a matter committed to said committee in accordance with the terms of a subpena served upon said Arthur Miller.

The record of the proceedings, before the subcommittee on June 21, 1956, during which the said Arthur Miller refused to answer the aforesaid questions pertinent to the subject under inquiry is set forth in fact as follows:

"HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
"COMMITTEE ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES,
"Washington, D. C.,
Thursday, June 21, 1956.

"The committee met at 10 a. m., pursuant to recess, in the caucus room of the House Office Building, Hon. FRANCIS E. WALTER (chairman of the committee) presiding.

"Present: Representatives WALTER, WILLIS, KEARNEY, and SCHERER.

"Present also: Richard Arens, staff director.

"The CHAIRMAN. The committee will be in order.

"Let the record show that the chairman has appointed a subcommittee consisting of Representatives WILLIS, SCHERER, KEARNEY, and myself.

* * * * *

"Call your witness.

"Mr. ARENS. Mr. Arthur Miller?

"Will you kindly remain standing while the chairman administers the oath?

"The CHAIRMAN. Raise your right hand, please.

"Do you swear the testimony you are about to give will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?

"Mr. MILLER. I do.

"TESTIMONY OF ARTHUR MILLER, ACCOMPANIED BY HIS COUNSEL, JOSEPH L. RAUH, JR.

"Mr. ARENS. Please identify yourself, sir, by name, residence, and occupation.

"Mr. MILLER. My name is Arthur Miller. I live in Roxbury, Conn. I am a playwright.

"Mr. ARENS. You are appearing today, Mr. Miller, in response to a subpena which was served upon you by the House Committee on Un-American Activities?

"Mr. MILLER. That is correct.

"Mr. ARENS. And you are represented by counsel?

"Mr. MILLER. That is correct.

"Mr. ARENS. Counsel, will you identify yourself?

"Mr.. RAUH. My name is Joseph L. Rauh, R-a-u-h, Jr.

"Mr. ARENS. Mr. Miller, please tell the committee where and when you were born?

"Mr. MILLER. I was born on October 17, 1915, in New York City.

"Mr. ARENS. And give us a word, please, sir, about your formal education.

"Mr. MILLER. I went to public schools in New York City, to James Madison High School, Abraham Lincoln High School, the University of Michigan. I have a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Michigan and an honorary doctor of humane letters.

* * * * *

"Mr. ARENS. Kindly tell the committee, Mr. Miller, the dates on which you at any time have made application for a United States passport.

"Mr. MILLER. I couldn't be exact about the first application because I don't have the information with me, but to the best of my recollection it would be in 1946, I believe. That is when I received the passport. I am reasonably certain of that.

"Mr. ARENS. Your application was in 1946 and did you then, pursuant to the application, receive a passport?

"Mr. MILLER. Yes; I did.

"Mr. ARENS. Now tell us about any renewal of that particular passport.

"Mr. MILLER. That passport was renewed in Rome. I am sorry, I have given the passport to the State Department in my recent applications so I don't have all this information at my fingertips.

* * * * *

"Mr. ARENS. You applied in 1946 for a passport which was issued to you in 1947?

"Mr. MILLER. I believe that is the case.

"Mr. ARENS. Then it was renewed pursuant to an application filed in Rome shortly thereafter, a couple of years thereafter.

"Mr. MILLER. Yes; a couple of years thereafter.

"Mr. ARENS. When was your next passport application, do you recall?

"Mr. MILLER. The next one was in March of 1954.

"Mr. ARENS. Was a passport issued to you pursuant to that application?

"Mr. MILLER. No; it was not.

"Mr. ARENS. Then did you take any action respecting the application after there was a declination to issue the passport in 1954?

"Mr. MILLER. I did not take any action afterward but I did take action; I made an approach to the State Department via my attorney. I think I could explain the circumstances which would make this——

"Mr. ARENS. You withdrew your passport application; did you not?

"Mr. MILLER. I had no further use for a passport.

"Mr. ARENS. Excuse me.

"Mr. MILLER. I am sorry. I was just going to say that the passport was required because I was invited to go to England, rather to Brussels, Belgium, by the American-Belgian Society, which is a society in Belgium for the enhancement of relations between the United States and Belgium and they offered to pay my transportation and my expenses from New York to Belgium for the opening of a stage theater production of one of my plays called Crucible.

"I got the cable on Monday evening. I returned the cable, saying that I would love to be there. I applied for renewal of my passport on the following day, which was Tuesday. I had to be in Brussels on the following Tuesday, that was the opening of the play, so consequently, and the Belgian Airlines do not run on Monday, so I would have had to have had a passport no later than Friday. Consequently, it was a big rush, it is an abnormally short time to ask for a passport and the week passed and I heard nothing from the State Department, so I instructed Mr. Garrison, my attorney, to call and find out whether I would have it that afternoon or not.

"This was sometime Friday afternoon and Mrs. Shipley, of the State Department, told Mr. Garrison that she could not issue one without further investigation. He then explained that the passport would be useless to me. I had no plans to go to Europe whatsoever except for this free trip which I wanted to take any time after that. That was the end of the conversation with the State Department.

"Mr. ARENS. Then do you have pending at the present time a passport application with the Department of State?

"Mr. MILLER. Yes; I do. I applied, I guess this is the fifth week now. I applied 4½ weeks ago. I wanted to go to England.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you in 1955 have an employment arrangement contemplated with the Youth Board down in New York City?

"Mr. MILLER. I had no employment arrangement with the Youth Board. I had an employment arrangement with an independent motion-picture producing company called Combined Artists, Inc. My contract with Combined Artists, Inc., was to the effect that I engage myself to write the outline and the finished screen play of a motion picture on the subject of juvenile delinquency.

"Mr. ARENS. That was to be in conection with the activities or work of the Youth Board, was it not?

"Mr. MILLER. The Youth Board was to cooperate with me in the research which would be required for me to write this script.

"I ought to say that the city of New York, this was a kind of odd contract which I must confess to this day baffles me slightly. But the nature of the contract was, as I understand it, that the city of New York, in return for the cooperation which it would give me in just permitting me to go along with the Youth Board workers into the streets at night and the slum areas and learn what I could from the children, would get 5 percent of the moneys of this picture, which could be a sizable amount of money if successful, and would not spend 5 cents on the city's part and had no other obligation.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you in the course of your negotiations or relationships with the Youth Board in New York City have occasion to appear before the board to express to the board certain actions which you allegedly took in connection with a previous passport application?

"Mr. MILLER. Yes.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you make that appearance before the Youth Board in November of 1955? Do you recall the approximate time?

"Mr. MILLER. It was about that time. I am not very good about dates but it was in that time; yes.

"Mr. ARENS. Was there a controversy that arose with respect to whether or not you should be permitted to continue with your labors in connection with this script?

"Mr. MILLER. There was an attack launched upon my political fitness to write a screen play by one newspaper; it began with one newspaper and remained with one newspaper, for quite a time.

"Mr. ARENS. Now, did you appear before the board and, among other things, say to the board in the course of the discussion substantially what I am now quoting from the minutes of the board? [Reading:]

" 'Finally, some 2 years ago, I issued a statement which was printed in the press in reply to a State Department statement, and in this I categorically denied that I am supporting the Communist cause or contributing to it or was under its discipline or domination.

" 'Furthermore, in my application at about the same time for renewal of my passport, I had signed under the penalties of perjury that statement that I was not a member of any subversive organizations. I cite these statements, which, of course, are still true because they are part of the public record and have been for a long time.'

"I ask you now, Mr. Miller, if you made the statement before the Youth Board which I have just read to you from the minutes of that board of November 29, 1955?

"Mr. MILLER. I believe you read it correctly; yes, sir.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you in your passport application deny under oath that you had supported the Communist cause or contributed to it or were under its discipline or domination?

"Mr. MILLER. The oath that I referred to was the standard oath that I had taken some years before in my first application for a passport. My understanding of the oath was that I wouldn't have been foolish enough to have tried to mislead the New York City Youth Board by referring to an oath which everybody signs who gets a passport if I had not in this case mistakenly understood the oath years later.

"Mr. ARENS. Mr. Miller—I beg your pardon.

"Mr. MILLER. Just one thing. I was asked—I am not yet clear whether there were minutes of that meeting at which I was present—I was asked by the chairman of the Youth Board whether this was the standard oath that I was referring to or whether it was some special oath. I said, 'No, it was the standard oath.'

"Now, I would have had to be a singularly obtuse individual to have referred the gentleman to an oath which he could have found by going across the street to the Passport Bureau if I had any impulse there to mislead him.

"I understood at that time—it was my recollection at the time, and I certainly would have signed such an oath had it been there—that that was the common oath taken. Oaths are in newspapers very often now, and that was my understanding at the time.

"I am sorry I made an error. It was by no means any attempt to mislead anybody. It was just by faulty memory of what I had signed some years before.

"Mr. ARENS. I am a little puzzled. You say you are sorry you made an error. What error?

"Mr. MILLER. I mistook that kind of oath for the oath that anyone takes who signs a passport application. I was referring to the oath that I had signed when I had taken out my passport application some years earlier.

"Mr. ARENS. Now I lay before you the photostatic copy of a passport application signed by one Arthur Miller in 1947—April 1947—and ask you if that is a true and correct reproduction of the passport application which you signed in 1947 and submitted to the Department of State in an attempt to procure a passport?

"Mr. MILLER. Yes, it is.

"Mr. ARENS. Is this the document to which you were alluding in your conversation with the Youth Board when you told the Youth Board that you categorically denied to the State Department under oath that you had been supporting the Communist cause or contributing to it or were under its discipline or domination? Is that the document to which you were alluding in your statement before the Youth Board?

Mr. MILLER. I beg your pardon. There seems to be a slight misunderstanding. When my passport—if I might I could clear this up in a moment.

"When my passport was denied by the State Department, I issued a statement in reply to a public statement by the State Department in which I denied such affiliations. That was what I was referring to in that particular wording that you are speaking of.

"Mr. ARENS. Well, did you sign a statement under oath to the Department of State in the course of your attempt to procure a passport in 1947 in which you denied that you had ever been supporting the Communist cause or contributing to it or were under its discipline or domination?

"Mr. MILLER. The only statement I have ever signed in relation to the State Department is the oath here in this passport application.

Mr. ARENS. Now, do you see in that passport application there any oath which in essence is a denial of support of the Communist cause or contribution to it or being under its discipline or domination?

"Mr. MILLER. No, I do not. I have just tried to explain, sir, that that was an error on my part in referring to the oath as I did. I would in any case have signed such an oath had it been in the passport application, and I have just stated that I made an error and I made the error in all good faith because I would have been a very stupid man to have referred to a passport application, thinking that no one would have the sense to look at it. I thought that is what I had said.

"The CHAIRMAN. Answer the questions, Mr. Miller.

"Mr. MILLER. I am sorry.

"Mr. ARENS. Am I clear that your present statement is that as of 1947, when you made this passport application to the Department of State, you would have taken an oath that you had never supported the Communist cause or contributed to it or been under its discipline or domination?

"Mr. MILLER. I was referring here to 19—the second attempt to get a passport in that document.

"Mr. ARENS. Let us get this record clear now.

"Would you in 1947 have taken an oath, even though you are now mistaken as to whether or not you did take one—would you have taken an oath in 1947 that you had not contributed to the Communist cause, supported it, or been under its discipline?

"Mr. MILLER. I would have taken an oath that I was never under the discipline of the Communist Party, the Communist cause; yes. I would have made a statement that I had been affiliated from time to time with organizations that were cited as Communist-dominated organizations but I would have certainly taken an oath at any time in my life that I was never under the discipline of the Communist Party or the Communist cause.

"Mr. ARENS. And would you have then taken an oath that you had never contributed to the Communist cause?

"Mr. MILLER. Well, that question would involve the later citation of certain organizations which I may have contributed a dollar or two to in the past which would now be called contributing to the Communist cause.

"The CHAIRMAN. What organizations are you referring to?

"Mr. MILLER. I have none in particular in mind.

"The CHAIRMAN. You had organizations in mind when you made that statement.

"Mr. MILLER. Well, let me think.

"I understand the Joint Anti-Fascist Committee has been cited. I believe that from time to time I would contribute to some drive of theirs during and after the Spanish Civil War; that would be one.

"The CHAIRMAN. But that was not cited after this?

"Mr. MILLER. I say, he is asking me whether I could take such an oath and I don't know the date of these citations.

"The CHAIRMAN. You said these organizations were cited after the date of your application for passport?

"Mr. MILLER. It is possible, sir, that some of them were cited before. I don't want to make that, I don't want to lay up against this definition any such line. I am trying to tell you as frankly as I can what the truth is.

"(Representative DOYLE entered the hearing room.)

"Mr. ARENS. Mr. Miller, is it a fair summary, and if it is not you take issue with me, because we do not want to misinterpret your situation, is it a fair summary to say that in 1955, when you appeared before the Youth Board and this controversy arose respecting what you have described as your political beliefs, that you told the Youth Board in essence that you had never contributed to the Communist cause, that you had never been under Communist discipline, and that you had made an oath to your Government to that effect when you made application for your passport?

"Mr. MILLER. No; I would contest that, sir.

"Mr. ARENS. You straighten us out as to what the position was that you took before the Youth Board when the controversy arose respecting yourself in 1955.

"(The witness conferred with his counsel.)

"Mr. MILLER. I would like to refresh my memory with just a glance at my statement there so I could——

"Mr. ARENS. The part which I read to you is here. It has been underlined so that I would be able to refer to it here in this session today.

"Mr. MILLER. I would just like to clear one think up and this, perhaps—no, I guess it isn't technical.

"There are two statements referred to here, I think reasonably clearly, although it may seem to be a little meshed together.

"It says here that—

"'Finally, some 2 years ago, I issued a statement which was printed in the press in reply to a State Department statement.'

"That is a press statement. I believe I have a copy here which you can look at if you don't have a copy of it, and in this I categorically denied that I was supporting the Communist cause or was contributing to it or was under its discipline or domination. That was in reply, that press statement, to a State Department statement which said, in effect, that the State Department was exercising its right to deny a passport to anyone who it was believed was then under the domination of the Communist Party, and so forth.

"In my statement to the press I said I was not, and that I was not supporting any Communist cause, and that is what that statement refers to.

"Now, in addition, following that, there is a reference to this oath which I would like to separate. One is in error, the other is not. The oath I mistook in my memory for being the kind of oath that you refer to.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you, in essence, say to the Youth Board that you were not and had not been under Communist Party discipline and that you had not contributed to the Communist Party?

"Mr. MILLER. I dispute that, sir.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you admit to the Youth Board that you had been under Communist Party discipline and that you had been contributing to Communist causes?

"Mr. MILLER. I was never under Communist Party discipline so, therefore, I would not be called upon to admit.

"As for contributing to causes, front groups and so forth, I won't deny that. I am here to tell you the truth and I wouldn't deny it there.

"The issue there, quite clearly, was whether I was trustworthy enough to write a screen play on juvenile delinquency without warping the truth about this very grave problem. Now, I understood perfectly why they would be concerned about this; I would be, too.

"I tried to indicate with what I said to them that this would not be the case and they already had an outline of this picture which was not written under duress, was not written while I was under attack at all, I was perfectly calm and quiet. It had been written some weeks or months before and they had all their experts and they themselves had been very enthusiastic about this outline, so there was no question about warping the material. All I was trying to get across was that I was not then supporting any group that might indicate that I would warp this material or that would make me untrustworthy.

"Mr. ARENS. That was the essence of your position before the Youth Board; was it not?

"Mr. MILLER. Substantially.

"Mr. ARENS. Now, Mr. Miller, in 1947, the very year in which you made this passport application in which you stated to the Youth Board the fact that you had sworn to the Department of State you had never been enmeshed in Communist activities, were you a sponsor of the World Youth Festival to be held in Prague?

"(The witness conferred with his counsel.)

"Mr. MILLER. I beg your pardon, sir. You are not correctly summarizing.

"Mr. ARENS. Well, I will read it to you again. You said on this record under oath that I gave a correct recitation of what you said. I will read it to you again.

"Mr. MILLER. Excuse me.

"Mr. ARENS. The statement made by you before the Youth Board was:

"'Finally, some 2 years ago, I issued a statement which was printed in the press in reply to a State Department statement and in this I categorially denied that I am supporting the Communist cause or contributing to it or was under its discipline or domination.'

"You signed that under oath.

"Did you make the statement which I have just read to you before the Youth Board in New York City in 1955?

"Mr. MILLER. I made the statement but I question your interpretation of it.

"Mr. ARENS. Aside from my interpretation, did you make that statement?

"Mr. MILLER. Without request.

"Mr. ARENS. All right.

"Now, in 1947, the year in which you made the application for your passport, and a passport was issued to you, were you a sponsor of the World Youth Festival held in Prague, Czechoslovakia?

"Mr. MILLER. Excuse me, sir. It is perhaps a misunderstanding on your part. The moot application in this controversy was the one that was denied. I was not either literally or in my mind referring to any other because this was the one that was being brought up in the press and this was the one that was at issue. There was no issue about the previous passports because they had been granted. This was the one that had not been granted and this was the one I was referring to.

"Mr. ARENS. Now, in 1947, were you a sponsor of the World Youth Festival to be held at Prague, Czechoslovakia?

"Mr. MILLER. I could not recall that, but if there is any evidence——

"Mr. ARENS. I should like to refrseh your recollection. I lay before you now a photostatic copy of the New York Times——

"(The witness conferred with his counsel.)

"Mr. ARENS. Of May 25, 1947, entitled 'The Dance: Prague Festival.'

"'A movement, rather late in getting underway but vigorous, nevertheless, has been started to see that the American dance is represented at the World Youth Festival to be held in Prague from July 20 to August 17, under the auspices of the World Federation of Democratic Youth.'

"Among the sponsors listed here is a person described as Arthur Miller. I lay that before you and ask you if that helps refresh your recollection?

"Mr. MILLER. Well, I would add, of course, that there were a good many other——

"The CHAIRMAN. Answer the question.

"Mr. MILLER. Mr. Walter, as far as I know I have no memory of it but I would not deny that I had done this.

"Mr. ARENS. I respectfully suggest that this exhibit be marked and appropriately identified and incorporated by reference in the record.

"(The document was marked 'Exhibit No. 1' and filed for the record.)

"Mr. ARENS. Now, in 1947 did you have difficulty with the Department of State over an incident in which the Department of State refused to sponsor transportation for students and participants attending this World Youth Festival? Do you recall any incident of that character?

"Mr. MILLER. I don't, but I would like to say now that in those times I did support a number of things which I would not do now.

"The CHAIRMAN. What things did you support that you would not support now?

"Mr. MILLER. I would not support now a cause or movement which was dominated by Communists.

"The CHAIRMAN. But you did at that time?

"Mr. MILLER. I did, yes.

"Mr. ARENS. Now I lay before you this photostatic copy of the New York Times, Wednesday, June 11, 1947, entitled 'Miller Fails in Plea.'

"'Efforts to obtain financial assistance for the project to send Arthur Miller's play, All My Sons, to the Prague Youth Festival this summer proved disappointing at a meeting yesterday of theatrical business people and representatives of the company.'

"There is also in this article reference to an incident which I shall now describe by reading another excerpt from the article concerning a gathering.

"'The gathering adopted the following resolution, recommended by Mr. Miller, to be wired to the Department of State:

"'"Urge you seriously to reconsider refusal to sponsor availability of transportation for students and participants attending World Youth Festival in Prague this summer. To my knowledge the participants have no special political affiliations."'

"I lay that now before you and ask you whether that refreshes your recollection and ask you as to your participation in the incident?

"(The witness conferred with his counsel.)

"Mr. MILLER. This is of a slightly special nature and I would like to make one comment about it.

"Mr. ARENS. Please do.

"Mr. MILLER. It does refresh my recollection.

"Somebody wanted to do my play. I didn't know who they were but I was always in favor of having my plays done. As I recall, there was no money to send them over and I wanted to do what I could to have that play sent over.

"This particular thing, I believe, was just in the normal course of an author's life. I would have done it if they had wanted it to go to Australia.

"Mr. ARENS. I respectfully suggest, Mr. Chairman, that this document be marked and appropriately identified and incorporated by reference in the record.

"The CHAIRMAN. It will be incorporated.

"(The document was marked 'Exhibit No. 2' and filed for the record.)

"Mr. ARENS. Did you in this year 1947 sign a statement released by the Civil Rights Congress which, among other things, reads as follows:

"'The Communist Party is a legal American political party. We see nothing in their program, record, or activities either in war or peace to justify the enactment of the repressive legislation now being urged upon the Congress in an atmosphere of an organized hysteria.'

"Do you have a recollection in April of 1947, under the auspices of the Civil Rights Congress, in participating in the release of that statement?

"Mr. MILLER. Well, I wouldn't say that I participated in the release.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you sign the statement?

"Mr. MILLER. Sir, I don't—these things were coming across my desk.

"Mr. ARENS. I lay before you the document now and see if it refreshes your recollection. It is the Communist Daily Worker of Wednesday, April 16, 1947, indicating that 100 prominent Americans had issued this statement, including a person described here as Arthur Miller. I lay that before you and ask you if that refreshes your rccollection.

"Mr. MILLER. I see my name here. I will not deny I signed it. I just don't have any recollection of it.

"Mr. ARENS. I respectfully suggest, Mr. Chairman, that this document be marked and appropriately identified and incorporated in the record by reference.

"The CHAIRMAN. So ordered.

"(The document was marked 'Exhibit No. 3' and filed for the record.)

"Mr. ARENS. Now I lay before you the Washington Post of Tuesday, May 20, 1947, the very year we are considering here.

"Mr. MILLER. I beg your pardon, sir. I wish to establish one fact. You say the year that we are now considering?

"Mr. ARENS. We are considering the year 1947.

"Mr. MILLER. I realize that you are doing that but I have stated twice now and I want to make myself clear that the Youth Board statement was referring to that issue which was the last application of mine, which was denied, and the oath there.

"Mr. ARENS. Since you took issue with me on that, let me read to you a statement which you made before the Youth Board pinpointing it specifically:

" 'My only point here is that these things have been a public record, I mentioned, a year and a half, but actually I received my first passport in 1946 and the same holds true on that passport.'

"Do you recall making that statement before the Youth Board when there was a declination respecting your alleged fitness or unfitness to participate in that work?

"(The witness conferred with his counsel.)

"Mr. MILLER. I would have to see the context of that statement.

"Mr. ARENS. Would you kindly look at it?

"The CHAIRMAN. I respectfully suggest that the record shows that the transcript which he is now examining was supplied to this committee as a verbatim transcript by the Youth Board pursuant to a subpena which was issued on the board by the committee.

"The CHAIRMAN. All right.

"Mr. MILLER. What I was referring to here was the question of being under the discipline of any Communist movement. I think that was the issue in this whole debate here.

"Mr. ARENS. That is correct.

"Mr. MILLER. I said I was not under the discipline of the Communist Party.

"Mr. ARENS. You had not been in 1946 and 1947 and the years prior to the time you had the controversy with the Youth Board?

"Mr. MILLER. That I was not under anyone's discipline.

"Mr. ARENS. Yes.

"Mr. MILLER. I was not implying there that I had never signed any petition or been involved, as you are indicating here; that was not what I was saying.

"Mr. ARENS. Would you kindly look at an advertisement appearing in the Washington Post of May 1947, 'Rob Communists of Their Rights?—Then Yours Go Out the Window, Too.'

"It is an advertisement protesting the flagrant violation, punitive measures directed against the Communist Party, and signed by a number of persons, including one Arthur Miller, identified as a playwright.

"I ask you if you have a recollection of lending your name to that cause or movement?

"Mr. MILLER. I see my name here. I would not deny I might have signed it.

"Mr. ARENS. I respectfully suggest that document be marked and appropriately identified and incorporated by reference in the record.

"The CHAIRMAN. Let it be marked.

"(The document was marked 'Exhibit No. 4' and filed for the record.)

"Mr. ARENS. In 1947, were you cognizant of the proceedings then pending in this country against a Communist agent known as Gerhart Eisler?

"Mr. MILLER. I remember reading about him.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you sign a statement in protest of the prosecution of Gerhart Eisler?

"Mr. MILLER. I don't recall that, sir.

"Mr. ARENS. I lay before you now a press release of 1947 of the Civil Rights Congress protesting the shameful persecution of the German anti-Fascist refugee, Gerhart Eisler, signed by a number of persons, including a person identified as Arthur Miller, playwright. I ask you if that refreshes your recollection.

"Mr. MILLER. I recall this. I would like to say, though, that I did sign a lot of things in those days.

"The CHAIRMAN. Wait a minute.

"Did you sign that or is that a press release?

"Mr. MILLER. Oh, no——

"Mr. ARENS. That is a press release, Mr. Chairman, indicating the names of people who signed it. He has now identified it, or at least admitted his signature to the press release.

"Mr. MILLER. I am not denying being the sponsor of many of these things.

"Mr. ARENS. I lay before you a passport application——

"Mr. MILLER. At the present time I would not be doing it; that is all. This is the only point I want to make.

"Mr. ARENS. We will go on up into the years in chronological order. We want to stick with 1947 now and then we will move up a little later.

"Now I lay before you the passport application of a person where the signature Samuel Lipzen appears but the photograph is that of Gerhart Eisler.

"Did you know at the time you signed that statement protesting the persecution of Gerhart Eisler that he was a top-ranking agent of the Kremlin in this country and that, among other things for which he was being pursued by our Government, was passport fraud?

"Mr. MILLER. Sir, I would have had no knowledge of that, and in those days I would not have had the mood of investigating these things at all. I tell you quite frankly, this suited the mood that I was in and I would never have gone to any trouble about investigating that kind of thing in relation to a cause.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you participate in a statement issued by the Civil Rights Congress with reference to Eisler?

" 'The hysterical atmosphere contrived around the case indicates that this incident involving a German Communist kept here against his will is intended as the initial phase of a sweeping attack upon the entire labor and progressive movement in the United States.'

"Do you recall issuing a statement in conjunction with others under the auspices of the Civil Rights Congress in 1947 bearing on this case?

"Mr. MILLER. I would like to make another point and that is——

"Mr. ARENS. Answer first of all whether or not you have a recollection.

"Mr. MILLER. I don't recall it.

"Mr. ARENS. Look at this exhibit here and see whether or not it helps refresh your recollection.

"Mr. MILLER. My point is simple.

"Mr. ARENS. First tell us whether or not this refreshes your recollection, whether or not you recall participating in the issuance of that statement and then go on with your statement.

"Mr. MILLER. I do not recall participating in it. I do not deny I may have done it. I do not have a memory of these things. It is 10 years ago.

"I would just make this simple point, and that is that I would have had no knowledge of the details here and they would not have been of great interest to me at the time. I was acting not as an investigator or as a lawyer, as someone who would be careful to any great degree about what he was supporting providing that it met the mood of the time that I was living in.

"Mr. ARENS. We will get into that proposition a little later. I want to know whether or not you can tell us whether you have a recollection.

"Mr. MILLER. I do not.

"Mr. ARENS. I respectfully suggest that this be marked as an exhibit and appropriately identified and incorporated by reference in the record.

"The CHAIRMAN. Mark it a part of the record.

"(The document was marked 'Exhibit No. 5' and filed for the record.)

"Mr. ARENS. Did you during this period which we have been discussing, we are beginning in 1947 and coming on right up; did you during this period know a man by the name of Millard Lampell?

"Mr. MILLER. I did; yes.

"Mr. ARENS. Did Millard Lampell, to your knowledge, recollection, solicit you to participate in a movement called Veterans Against Discrimination of the Civil Rights Congress?

"Mr. MILLER. I would not recall that, sir. I don't remember that.

"Mr. ARENS. Do you recall Millard Lampell enlisting you to join in the movement to attack the House Committee on Un-American Activities?

"Mr. MILLER. No, sir.

"Mr. ARENS. Do you recall an attack on the House Committee on Un-American Activities in which you were a participant?

"Mr. MILLER. I would say that in all probability I had supported criticism of the Un-American Activities Committee.

"Mr. ARENS. Would you want to give us a little bit clearer characterization of what you mean by the word 'criticism' of the House Committee on Un-American Activities?

"Mr. MILLER. I probably would have signed statements opposing the committee.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you sign statements or lend your name, prestige and influence toward a movement to abolish the Committee on Un-American Activities?

"Mr. MILLER. I have no memory of that.

"Mr. ARENS. I lay before you now a photostatic copy of a letter on the letterhead of the Veterans Against Discrimination of Civil Rights Congress, Millard Lampell, chairman, who, as the record reflects, has been identified as a hard-core Communist, which says:

" 'The Un-American Committee can and must be abolished.'

"Among others, the sponsors include the name of one Arthur Miller. I ask you whether or not that refreshes your recollection as to any of your activities?

"Mr. MILLER. My connection with this organization was, well, I might as well answer your question.

"I would say yes.

"Mr. ARENS. Mr. Chairman, I suggest that this be marked and appropriately identified and incorporated by reference in the record.

"The CHAIRMAN. It will be marked.

"(The document was marked 'Exhibit No. 6' and filed for the record.)

"Mr. ARENS. Now I lay before you a copy of an announcement of a mobilization, a rally, mobilized against the House Un-American Activities Committee, held under the auspices of the Civil Rights Congress, in which 1, 2, 3, 6 people are to speak at Manhattan Center in New York City, 3 of whom have been publicly identified as Communist agents, including on this list of people who are to speak at this rally to destroy the House Committee on Un-American Activities, one Arthur Miller.

"I ask you whether or not you are the Arthur Miller and whether or not you have a recollection of participating in that rally?

"Mr. MILLER. I am not clear whether I was a speaker or not.

"Mr. ARENS. The advertisement would so indicate, would it not?

"Mr. MILLER. Well, I have found that more than once there was a slight use of license, so to speak, and I found myself listed as a speaker many times, or several times at least. I recall people saying to me that I had made a speech somewhere some weeks ago and I would say, 'Where?' I had been a sponsor of something but I had not made a speech.

"I don't recall making that speech. It is quite probable that I supported it.

"Mr. ARENS. I respectfully suggest that the document be marked, appropriately identified, and incorporated by reference.

"The CHAIRMAN. It may be marked.

"(The document was marked 'Exhibit No. 7' and filed for the record.)

"Mr. DOYLE. May I ask what year that is, counsel?

"Mr. ARENS. 1947.

"Mr. KEARNEY. Mr. Miller, on the use of your name on these various organizations that held rallies where your name is listed as a speaker, did you ever make any protest against the use of your name?

"Mr. MILLER. I would occasionally; yes. I would try to find whoever was responsible, which was not always easy. It was always after the fact, of course, and there was no way for me to redress the thing. I did make remonstrances.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you remonstrate the use of your name appearing in the public print in connection with a public caravan to come to Washington to protest the hearings by the House Un-American Activities Committee in which they were exposing Communists in Hollywood?

"Mr. MILLER. No; I would not have protested that. I was supporting that.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you participate in the caravan?

"Mr. MILLER. No; I did not.

"Mr. ARENS. Do you recall participating in a movement to defend Howard Fast?

"Mr. MILLER. If I can see the material?

"Mr. ARENS. I lay before you now a photostatic copy of a dodger of a protest meeting for Howard Fast 'and other victims' of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, signed by approximately a dozen people that are called to action here, including a person listed as Arthur Miller, and ask you whether or not you are the Arthur Miller?

"Mr. MILLER. Yes, and I would like to be permitted to make one comment.

"Mr. ARENS. We would be very glad to have you do so.

"Mr. MILLER. That was my opinion at the time. It did reflect my opinion that in my experience I know really very little about anything except my work and my field, and it seemed to me that the then prevalent, rather ceaseless, investigating of artists was creating a pall of apprehension and fear among all kinds of people.

"The CHAIRMAN. But did you know that those very artists were the chief source of supply for the funds that were used by the Communists in the United States? Did you know that when you were defending these people that they were the people who contributed thousands of dollars monthly in order to assist in the organization of labor unions that were Communist dominated?

"Did you know that?

"Mr. MILLER. Mr. WALTER, I will tell you——

"The CHAIRMAN. Or did you not care?

"Mr. MILLER. Quite frankly, that was not the consideration in my mind. The consideration in my mind was that, as far as I could see, there was a distinct pall of apprehension and fear. People were being put into a state of great apprehension and they were——

"The CHAIRMAN. Apprehension of what, Mr. Miller?

"Mr. MILLER. Well, in some cases just punishment and in some cases unjust punishment.

"The CHAIRMAN. Do you know of any artist who was prosecuted as a result of any information obtained from these hearings who was not a member of the Communist apparatus?

"Mr. MILLER. Quite frankly, sir, that wouldn't have been the issue in my mind, if you are asking me to tell you the truth.

"The CHAIRMAN. You are talking about the issue in your mind and, in view of the fact that you have raised this question repeatedly about your mood, your mind, may I ask you if you changed your mind since the revelations concerning Mr. Stalin have been made?

"Mr. MILLER. My mind was, I have been in—let me put it this way:

"I suppose that a year has not gone by that I have not altered my opinions or beliefs or approach to life, and long before that I had shifted my views as to my relations or my attitude toward Marxism and toward communism.

"The CHAIRMAN. When did you change your views about Marxism?

"Mr. MILLER. This is not, I was not, a Saul of Tarsus walking down a road and struck by a bright light. It was a slow process that occurred over years of really through my own work and through my own efforts to understand myself and what I was trying to do in the world.

"The CHAIRMAN. This is very interesting to me because within the last few hours there came to my office a very prominent lawyer who told me of a number of performers who had invoked the fifth amendment, and they did it largely because they did not want to be placed in the position of being an informer, but he said that there now has come to them an appreciation that the greatest informer in the world is the man who now speaks for the Communists, namely, Mr. Khrushchev. It was a very interesting thing, and he said that six of these performers now want to come before our committee and testify, people who invoked the fifth amendment.

"Mr. ARENS. Mr. Miller, this mood that you are talking about to defend people in the arts did not strike you apparently in 1945 with reference to Ezra Pound, did it?

"Mr. MILLER. I was very troubled by Ezra Pound's condition and to this day I think it is a tragic fact and I could not tell you right now in any cogent way what I think should have been done with Ezra Pound.

"My instinctive feeling is that he should have been let alone.

"Mr. ARENS. You must have changed your mind then since 1945; did you not?

"Mr. MILLER. I probably did, yes.

"Mr. ARENS. Let us clear the record.

"Who was Ezra Pound?

"Mr. MILLER. Who is Ezra Pound?

"Mr. ARENS. Who was he?

"Mr. MILLER. Ezra Pound is one of the great poets of this century.

"Mr. ARENS. And you, in effect, said in that statement which appeared in New Masses that he ought to be shot; did you not?

"Mr. MILLER. I don't recall such a statement.

"Mr. ARENS. Well, let me read it to you.

"Mr. MILLER. By the way, you didn't permit me to finish my statement.

"Mr. ARENS. I beg your pardon; go right ahead.

"Mr. MILLER. It happened one night I had bought a new radio during the war and I had a shortwave set and I turned on the shortwave and there was a voice which I had never heard but which spoke perfectly good American advocating the destruction of the Jewish people and justifying the cremation of Jews, and I was quite astonished because it was such a common American accent, and I waited to the end, and it was being broadcast from Italy, and it was Ezra Pound.

"I think I can be forgiven for feeling slightly perturbed about this man, but I will say now, despite that, it is a difficult and hard issue to settle, and I think it's a tragic one and sometimes there are no easy answers.

"Mr. ARENS. Ezra Pound was a poet who, during the war, was issuing statements and was writing plays and issuing poems which were anti-Communist and which were against the interests at that time of the United States of America.

"Is that not the essence of what he did? He was a propagandist, a writer; was he not?

"Mr. MILLER. Excuse me, sir. I had never had any knowledge of Ezra Pound's views at all, quite frankly, until I heard that broadcast and I realized that this man was a Mussolini propagandist who was broadcasting from the Rome radio.

"Mr. ARENS. That was in 1945?

"Mr. MILLER. Yes.

"Mr. ARENS. Before your sympathies were aroused to defend the artists, poets, and playwrights who were being brought before this committee. Now, is that not correct as a matter of chronology?

"Mr. MILLER. Whether that was before, yes.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you not write in New Masses, in effect, criticizing those who would defend Ezra Pound on the same basis that you defended the Hollywood Ten?

"Mr. MILLER. I would like to see the statement, if I may.

"Mr. ARENS. I would like to show it to you and I would like to read for the record some of the statements.

"'Arthur Miller, writing for the New Masses'—

"which, of course, has been identified as the Communist publication repeatedly. Perhaps I had better read a good deal of it here so there will be no indication of taking anything out of context.

"Mr. MILLER. I trust you.

"Mr. ARENS. Now, with that background, and you correct me if I make a misrepresentation, Ezra Pound in 1945 was writing poems, plays, radio addresses which were anti-Communist and which were against the interest of this country, the United States of America, was he not?

"Mr. MILLER. There was also a war going on.

"Mr. ARENS. That is correct.

"Here is Arthur Miller's statement in 1945.

"'In the belief that Ezra Pound's trial for treason is of high importance to the future direction of American letters, and poetry in particular, I should like to offer my commentary on the reaction of five poets and a critic to the Pound case in the newspaper P. M. of Sunday, November 25. The majority of the reactions are alarming.

"'All six agree that Pound's contribution to literature was of the highest order. With this no man can argue.

"'If I may be pardoned some nonpoetical language, the boys are cutting the baloney pretty thick. Shapiro ought to know that Pound is not accused of not "reversing his beliefs" but of aiding and abetting the enemy by broadcasting propaganda calculated to undermine the American will to fight fascism. And Mr. Aiken ought to know by now that Pound did not betray himself to "man in the abstract" but to Mussolini whose victims are, to be sure, now buried and abstract, but who was a most real, most unpoetical type of fellow.'

"The article winds up:

"'In conclusion, may I say that without much effort one could find a thousand poets and writers who understand not only why Pound was dangerous and treasonous, but why he will be even more so if released. In a world where humanism must conquer lest humanity be destroyed, literature must nurture the conscience of man. A greater calamity cannot befall the art than that Ezra Pound, the Mussolini mouthpiece, should be welcomed back as an arbiter of American letters, an eventuality not to be dismissed if the court adopts the sentiments of these four poets.'

"I lay that article now before you appearing in the New Masses, and ask you whether or not you are the person who wrote that article in 1945 protesting the position of those who would excuse Ezra Pound because he was a poet and an artist?

"Mr. MILLER. Mr. Arens, I would like to make several points here which I think are of great importance.

"Ezra Pound was a—in the first place, this was a time of war. He was literally and in every conceivable way a traitor and there was no question about it, I don't think, in anybody's mind. I would not now say that I share all these sentiments by any means. This is a long time ago. I don't think I would be quite as virulent about it now.

"I, however, can understand quite easily how I could have felt this way. I felt this man threatened me personally. I am a Jew.

He was for burning Jews and you will have to pardon my excitement at the time if that was the situation.

"Mr. ARENS. I want this record to show that I am not undertaking by this question to defend Ezra Pound; I am only pointing out by this exhibit what would appear to be, absent any explanation, and inconsistency at least.

"(Representative Jackson entered the hearing room.)

"Mr. KEARNEY. Pound was convicted as a traitor and served time?

"Mr. ARENS. As were the 12 Communists.

"Mr. JACKSON. May I ask him a question?

"The CHAIRMAN. All right.

"Mr. JACKSON. I would like, in view of the witness' strong words of denunciation of Mr. Pound for his expressions of anti-Semitism and his understandable resentment of them, did you ever subsequently, and particularly since the denunciation in the Soviet Union of Stalin, ever make a public statement denouncing the shocking evidence of anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union?

"Mr. MILLER. I am sorry to say that there was none. I am sorry to say something worse, that I was not shocked. This last stuff has been no great shock to me. I have had intimate evidence from a man I know who had a brother in the Soviet Union and who was, as I remember it, the editor or writer for some literary magazine there and who this man told me, I can't remember now because it's possibly 3 years ago, 4 years ago, he had completely dropped out of sight and was no longer responding to any mail. They were two brothers.

"This fellow told me that he thought that he had been the victim of purely anti-Semitic things.

"Now I have ceased these kinds of statements, as I said, which were befitting the frame of mind I was in. I ceased issuing statements right and left except when I am personally involved because I found I was being tangled in stuff that I was really not prepared to defend 100 percent, and I am ashamed to say that I should have and I did feel I was not completely ignorant of this. It isn't a matter of Khrushchev. I knew this before Khrushchev.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you know it in 1952 when you signed a statement in defense of the 12 Communist traitors who were convicted in Foley Square in New York City?

"Mr. MILLER. That I would make a differentiation about, quite frankly. This is a question which verges on, I don't know under what law this prosecution took place.

"Mr. ARENS. Under the Smith law, conspiring to overthrow the Government of the United States by force and violence. That is part of the International Cominform apparatus.

"Mr. MILLER. I am opposed to the Smith Act and I am still opposed to anyone being penalized for advocating anything. I say that because of a very simple reason.

"I don't believe that in the history of letters there are many great books or great plays that don't advocate. That doesn't mean that a man is a propagandist. It is in the nature of life and it is in the nature of literature that the passions of an author congeal around issues.

"You can go from War and Peace through all the great novels of time and they are all advocating something. Therefore, when I heard that the United States Government wanted to pass a law against the advocacy without any overt action, I was alarmed because I am not here defending Communists, I am here defending the right of an author to advocate, to write.

"Mr. SCHERER. Even to advocate the overthrow of this Government by force and violence?

"Mr. MILLER. I am now speaking, sir, of creative literature. These are risks and balances of risks.

"The CHAIRMAN. We will have a recess of about 5 minutes.

"(A short recess was taken with the following committee members present: Representatives WALTER, DOYLE, WILLIS, KEARNEY, JACKSON, and SCHERER.)

"(Representative VELDE entered the hearing room.)

"The CHAIRMAN. The committee will be in order. Proceed.

"Mr. SCHERER. Mr. Chairman, I was asking the witness a question which I would like to pursue.

"Witness, counsel asked you about your protesting the prosecution of the 12 Communists in Foley Square, and you said that you had protested that prosecution and, in explanation of that action on your part, you said 'I am opposed to the prosecution of anyone for advocating anything.' Do you recall that you made that statement?

"Mr. MILLER. Yes.

"Mr. SCHERER. You understood, did you not, that the 12 Communists were prosecuted for advocating, teaching, and urging the overthrow of this Government by force and violence through unlawful means? Now, my question is, do you mean that you would be opposed to the prosecution of anyone today for advocating the overthrowing of this Government by force and violence? I cannot draw any other conclusion.

"Mr. MILLER. Mr. SCHERER, there is another conclusion which I would like to speak on for just one moment. The Smith Act, as I understood it and as I understand it now, does lay penalties upon advocacy.

"Mr. SCHERER. Upon what?

"Mr. MILLER. Upon advocacy of beliefs or opinions, and so forth. What I felt strongly about then——

"Mr. SCHERER. Not opinions. It does not lay any upon opinions.

"Mr. MILLER. I am not that close to the text of it, but my understanding of it is that advocacy is penalized or can be under this law. Now, my interest, as I tell you, is possibly too selfish, but without it I can't operate and neither can literature in this country, and I don't think anybody can question that.

"Mr. SCHERER. I am not asking you about advocacy generally.

"Mr. MILLER. Yes, sir; but, sir, I understand your point.

"Mr. SCHERER. I do not understand yours.

"Mr. MILLER. I was trying to make it clear, sir. My point is simply that, if there is a penalty upon advocacy, what my protest was about was that idea taking hold so that people could say depending upon the ideas ruling the society at any particular time would depend the liberty of advocacy of any particular idea at any time.

"In other words, if advocacy of itself becomes a crime, in my opinion, or can be penalized without overt action, we are smack in the middle of literature, and I don't see how it can be avoided. That is my opinion. That is, where I can understand yours, I ask you to understand mine.

"Mr. SCHERER. We are not talking about literature. These 12 Communists were on trial for advocating the violent overthrow of this Government by force and violence.

"Does your theory or your belief carry so far as for you to sit here today and say that you are opposed to prosecution of anyone who today would advocate, teach, and urge the overthrow of this Government by force and violence, limiting it to that? Let us leave literature out of that.

"Mr. MILLER. You see, you are limiting it to that.

"Let me put it quite simply. If a man were outside this building and telling people to come in and storm this building and blow it up or something of that sort, I would say, "Call out the troops." There is no question in my mind about that. That is advocacy, but in the Smith Act, as I understand it, it is applicable and can be applied, given a sufficient public backing, to literature.

"Now, in my opinion, that cannot be equated with the freedom of literature without which we will be back in a situation where people as in the Soviet Union and as in Nazi Germany have not got the right to advocate.

"Mr. SCHERER. Let us go into literature. Let me ask you, do you believe that today a Communist who is a poet should have the right to advocate the overthrow of this Government by force and violence in his literature, in poetry or in newspapers or anything else?

"(The witness confers with his counsel.)

"Mr. MILLER. I tell you frankly, sir, I think if you are talking about a poem I would say that a man should have the right to write a poem just about anything.

"Mr. SCHERER. All right.

"Mr. JACKSON. Let me ask one question. Then I understand your position is that freedom in literature is absolute?

"Mr MILLER. Well, I recognize that these things, sir, are not, the absolutes are not absolute.

"Mr. JACKSON. My interpretation of your position is that it is absolute that a writer must have, in order to express his heart, absolute freedom of action?

"Mr. MILLER. That would be the most desirable state of affairs, I say; yes.

"Mr. SCHERER. Even to the extent of advocating the violent overthrow of the Government of the United States at this time?

"Mr. MILLER. Frankly, sir, I have never read such a book.

"Mr. SCHERER. I did not say you have read it. I am asking you what your opinion is with reference to it.

"Mr. MILLER. I think a work of art—my point is very simple. I think that, once you start to cut away, there is a certain commonsense in mankind which makes these limits automatic. There are risks which are balanced. The Constitution is full of those risks. We have rights, which, if they are violated, or rather used in an irresponsible way, can do damage. Yet they are there and the commonsense of the people of the United States has kept this in sort of a balance. I would prefer any day to say yes, there should be no limit upon the literary freedom, than to say you can go up this far and no further, because then you are getting into an area where people are going to say, "I think that this goes over the line," and then you are in an area where there is no limit to the censorship that can take place.

"Mr. SCHERER. Do you consider those things that you have written in the New Masses as an exercise of your literary rights?

"Mr. MILLER. Sir, I never advocated the overthrow of the United States Government. I want that perfectly clear.

"Mr. SCHERER. I did not say you did. I want to get what you consider literature.

"Mr. MILLER. I didn't advocate that. I wouldn't call it especially an exercise in freedom. It was simply an effusion of mind. It didn't require a mandate to do it. The Masses was widely circulated. Writers were writing for it. Some of the greatest writers today have written for the New Masses.

"Mr. SCHERER. Then you believe that we should allow the Communists in this country to start actually physical violence in the overthrow of this Government before they are prosecuted?

"Mr. MILLER. No, sir; you are importing.

"Mr. SCHERER. I cannot draw any other conclusion from what you said.

"Mr. MILLER. You fail to draw a line between advocacy and essense. Our law is based upon acts not thought. How do we know? Anybody in this room might have thoughts of various kinds that could be prosecuted if they were carried into action, but that is an entirely different story.

"Mr. VELDE. May I say something here? As you sit in this room in your present mood, are you opposed to the Smith Act? Would you advocate its repeal?

"Mr. MILLER. Sir, I have not got the Smith Act in front of me. I could tell you my sentiment as it relates to the Smith Act. I take responsibility for that opinion. In other words, I am opposed to the laying down of any limits upon the freedom of literature, and I am opposed to it because I think that that way lies a kind of repression of literature which is disastrous.

"In the Soviet Union there has been nothing written of any value in 25 years. You cannot lay down those limits and expect that they will just go that far.

"Mr. VELDE. I understand. In my opinion, you have a perfect right to advocate the repeal of the Smith Act if you want to.

"Mr. MILLER. I am just making one mitigation. I don't know the Smith Act well enough for me to sit here under oath and say that I am opposed to every single word in it. I couldn't do that because I don't believe I have ever read the thing. All I know is that that provision, according to the widest publication of the press, is in it, and I would be opposed to that provision.

"Mr. VELDE. In any event, Mr. Miller, you have not had a change of heart since 1947, during the trial of the 12 Communists?

"Mr. MILLER. In relation to censorship, I have always had the same opinion.

"Mr. SCHERER. This is not censorship.

"Mr. MILLER. Perhaps I used the word closely, but in relation to the limitation of the artist's right in society, I am opposed to it.

"Mr. SCHERER. All of us believe in freedom.

"Mr. KEARNEY. You are putting the artist and literature in a preferred class.

"Mr. MILLER. I thought we were going to get to this and it places me in a slightly impossible position, and I would be lying to you if I said that I didn't think the artist was, to a certain degree, in a special class. The reason is quite simple and maybe absurd but, if you are asking me what I think, I will tell you.

"Mr. JACKSON. One brief question.

"The CHAIRMAN. Let him finish that question.

"Mr. MILLER. I would like to answer Mr. Kearney.

"Mr. JACKSON. Very well, sir.

"Mr. MILLER. Most of us are occupied most of the day in earning a living in one way or another. The artist is a peculiar man in one respect. Therefore, he has got a peculiar mandate in the history of civilization from people, and that is he has a mandate not only in his literature but in the way he behaves and the way he lives.

"Mr. SCHERER. He has special rights?

"Mr. KEARNEY. Please.

"Mr. MILLER. I am not speaking of rights.

"Mr. KEARNEY. I would like to have the question I asked answered.

"The CHAIRMAN. He is trying to answer.

"Mr. KEARNEY. There are interruptions.

"Mr. MILLER. The artist is inclined to use certain rights more than other people because of the nature of his work.

"Most of us may have an opinion. We sit once or twice a week or we may have a view of life which on a rare occasion we have time to speak of. That is the artist's line of work. That is what he does all day long and, consequently, he is particularly sensitive to its limitations.

"Mr. KEARNEY. In other words, your thought as I get it is that the artist lives in a different world from anyone else.

"Mr MILLER. No, he doesn't, but there is a conflict I admit. I think there is an old conflict that goes back to Socrates between the man who is involved with ideal things and the man who has the terrible responsibility of keeping things going as they are and protecting the state and keeping an army and getting people fed.

"Mr. ARENS. Now, Mr. Miller, in June of 1947, did you participate in a call of cultural leaders for a bill of rights conference to be held in the Henry Hudson Hotel in New York City?

"(The witness confers with his counsel.)

"Mr. ARENS. Do you recall participating in that call for the conference?

"Mr. MILLER. I beg your pardon, sir, I was just talking.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you in 1949 in June participate in a call for a conference on civil rights, to be held in the Henry Hudson Hotel in New York City?

"Mr. MILLER. What year was this?

"Mr. ARENS. 1949.

"Mr. MILLER. Could I see that?

"Mr. ARENS. Yes; I lay before you this call to conference which, among other things, charges the FBI with being peeping Toms and using paid informers and going into every lodge, home, church, political meeting, and labor organization; something has to be done about it so you have a call to conference in New York City in 1949. Do you recall that [handed]? The name Arthur Miller appears there as one of those who is attacking the FBI.

"Mr. MILLER. I wouldn't deny having done this.

"Mr. ARENS. Do you recall attending the conference?

"Mr. MILLER. I don't believe I did, sir.

"Mr. ARENS. At the conference, according to the New York Times, there was a resolution introduced for the purpose of defending all the victims of the Smith Act about which we have been talking, but the conference decided it would not defend all the victims of the Smith Act; it would not defend the Trotskyites.

"According to this article, Paul Robeson, who was there, said:

" 'In speaking for denial of civil liberties to the Socialist Workers Party, Mr. Robeson asked the conference, "Would you give civil rights to the Ku Klux Klan?"

" '"No," chorused the delegates.

" '"These men are the allies of fascism who want to destroy the new democracies of the world," the singer shouted. "Let's not get confused. They are the enemies of the working class."'

"According to this article in the New York Times, July 18, 1949, this civil-rights conference in which you participated in setting up, or to which you lent your name, would deny civil liberties to the Trotskyites although they would give them to Communists.

"Do you recall the position of the Civil Rights Congress as reported by the New York Times in 1949?

"Mr. Miller. I recall. I would say that I would have signed this but I would add now that, first of all, it was not my speech you just quoted. It was someone else's.

"Mr. ARENS. I understand. I just asked you whether or not you were there.

"Mr. MILLER. I would have to say as well that this did not represent my view then.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you protest this position?

"Mr. MILLER. Well, I didn't protest here but I was very put out that anyone who had been prosecuted in that sort of way should not be defended.

"Mr. ARENS. Were you present at the session?

"Mr. MILLER. I don't believe so, sir. I don't believe I was there.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you remonstrate with the leadership of this Civil Rights Congress?

"Mr. MILLER. I did not know about this position at the time because it was a general lapse of interest in what was going on, but I would say the degree of responsibility that is implied in my signing that thing, and I think it was wrong. I think that the Trotskyites or anybody else who suffered the penalties of a law should be defended regardless of opinion if he is brought up for prosecution under that law.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you learn of the position of this Civil Rights Congress that civil rights are for everybody including the Communists but not for Trotskyites? Did you learn of it at any time before I just read it to you?

"Mr. MILLER. I couldn't recall that. I think I have set forth my position on that.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you learn of the attacks by the Civil Rights Congress on the Federal Bureau of Investigation as fascism, American style?

"Mr. MILLER. I don't recall anything of that kind.

"Mr. ARENS. Now, did you know a man by the name of Kazan?

"Mr. MILLER. I did.

"Mr. ARENS. What was your relationship with Mr. Kazan?

"Mr. MILLER. He was the director of two of my plays.

"Mr. ARENS. And was he subsequently exposed as a Communist?

"Mr. MILLER. I believe so; yes.

"Mr. ARENS. And did he subsequently testify and admit that he had been a Communist, and identified before an agency of his Government people whom he had known as members of the conspiracy?

"Mr. MILLER. Yes.

"Mr. ARENS. And did you then in 1953 criticize Mr. Kazan as a renegade intellectual?

"Mr. MILLER. No.

"Mr. ARENS. As an informer?

"Mr. MILLER. No.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you protest the position of Kazan when he testified before his Government and said, in effect, he had been a Communist, and identified people as Communists?

"Mr. MILLER. I have never made the statement about Elia Kazan's testimony in my life.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you at any time to any person level a criticism at Kazan because of his testimony before a committee of his Government in which he identified people as Communists?

"Mr. MILLER. I discussed Kazan's testimony, or not his testimony. I didn't know what his testimony was exactly, but I have discussed him with one or two people in my life.

"Mr. ARENS. Just answer the question. After Kazan had been your producer, worked with you in your plays and came down to Washington and testified before a congressional committee, 'Yes, I have been a Communist. Yes; I identify so-and-so and so-and-so as people who were in the conspiracy with me,' did you criticize him for that position? Did you break with him?

"Mr. MILLER. Are you asking me whether I broke with him? Is that the question?

"Mr. ARENS. The question is pretty clear, I believe. What was your position with reference to Kazan after he testified before a congressional committee?

"Mr. MILLER. You are putting two things together.

"Mr. ARENS. Take them one by one, any way you want to.

"Mr. MILLER. The fact is I broke with him, although that word is not descriptive of my act.

"Mr. ARENS. We will use the word 'disassociate,' then.

"Mr. MILLER. I am not at all certain that Mr. Kazan would have directed my next play in any case. I am not one to go about in the streets proclaiming my private business, and the public or whoever is interested would not know that perhaps other elements had come into this situation which have absolutely no political interest, and I would venture to say have no interest for this committee. The fact is that he did not direct any more of my plays. It may be in the future he will. I have said that in the New York Post, I believe. I believe I said that. I hesitate to take the brunt of this kind of characterization, so to speak, not really for political reasons but because there are private reasons involved here which I don't believe are of interest here.

"Mr. DOYLE. Mr. Chairman, may I interrupt? I do not think we should take the time of this committee to have this witness put in a position where he tells about his private business.

"The CHAIRMAN. Well, of course not. He is volunteering this statement.

"Mr. DOYLE. I do not think we should let him volunteer these confidential matters of his business and profession. They are not a concern of this committee.

"The CHAIRMAN. That is right.

"Mr. DOYLE. I object to that procedure. I do not think we have any business leaving this witness in that position.

"The CHAIRMAN. There is no disposition to do that.

"Mr. DOYLE. Let us stop it then and go to the issue.

"The CHAIRMAN. All right.

"Answer the question.

"Mr. ARENS. The question is: Did you attack Kazan because he broke with the Communist Party and testified before a congressional committee?

"Mr. MILLER. I stated earlier, sir, that I have never attacked Kazan. I will stand on that. That is it.

"Mr. ARENS. That is the answer, then. Did you join with others in protesting the enactment of the Internal Security Act in 1950?

"Mr. MILLER. I don't even remember what the act was, to tell you the truth, and I am not prepared to deny or affirm it. You will have to show it to me. If it seems familiar, I will identify it.

"Mr. ARENS. Were you an initiating sponsor of an emergency defense conference held in New York City in 1952 for the purpose of protesting the enforcement of the Internal Security Act?

"Mr. MILLER. I have no recollection of it whatever.

"Mr. ARENS. Now, do you recall in 1948 the proposed visit of the Red Dean of Canterbury to the United States and any participation you may have had as a part of the welcoming committee?

"Mr. MILLER. Are you asking me whether I did that?

"Mr. ARENS. Yes, sir. Do you recall it? Do you have a recollection of it?

"Mr. MILLER. I don't, but I probably did it. That is my answer.

"Mr. ARENS. Were you a member of the National Council of Arts, Sciences, and Professions?

"Mr. MILLER. Yes.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you know at the time that you were a member of this of its Communist control and leadership?

"Mr. MILLER. Well, I suspected that the Communists were in control of it. I couldn't say that I knew it.

"Mr. ARENS. Excuse me. Did you protest at any time the control of the organization by the Communist Party?

"Mr. MILLER. In itself as such, no, but I did have actually no contact with these people excepting as I was being circulated for my name and various things and my participation in the Waldorf Peace Conference. Beyond that I don't recall having any business with them. I would have from time to time perhaps taken issue on some particular thing with some person or other, but I wouldn't have lodged a formal protest. I didn't lodge a formal protest.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you lend your name as a sponsor of the peace parleys of the World Congress for Peace held in Paris?

"Mr. MILLER. I don't believe that that is accurate. It is the only one that I actually believe I had nothing to do with.

"Mr. ARENS. I lay before you now a photostatic copy of that organization World Congress for Peace to be held in Paris. Among the sponsors listed there is a person by the name of Arthur Miller. I ask you whether or not you have a recollection of that [handing].

"Mr. MILLER. The reason that I doubt this—I am not willing to swear that this is not so, but the reason that makes me doubt it is that while I have supported such causes without question, whenever the issues got—and there were several times which I can't pinpoint now, but I just vaguely remember where something was going to be carried into the international sphere, I would like to make the point that there I was loath, and I think there is no case that I would say I was ready to support criticism of this country abroad. I want to just amplify that for 1 second. It is very important to me because it does make a difference to me. This is involved in this because it is an international thing, and it is usable in Europe.

"After the denial of my passport by the State Department I was literally besieged by foreign newspapermen. Many of them, as far as I know they were all from non-Communist, and most of them in the country I know little about, France. They were from the rightist press and from the center press. They were after me to the point where I had to go to my home in Roxbury and hide out there because they wanted me to carry on a fight about this in the European press against the United States, and I refused to do it, and I refused to do it for a good reason, and that is that, whatever I may have supported, and however it looks, I do draw a line between criticism of the United States in the United States and before foreigners.

"The CHAIRMAN. Do I understand that representatives of the foreign press——

"Mr. MILLER. In New York.

"The CHAIRMAN. In New York tried to prevail upon you to attack your Government for publicity purposes in the nations they came from?

"Mr. MILLER. Sir?

"The CHAIRMAN. Are those people still employed in this country?

"Mr. MILLER. I wouldn't know. I would have no way of knowing. The statement is slightly extreme, sir, as compared to the facts. I don't think it needs me to say that the passport denial business is widely publicized in Europe, and many of these people feel disabled in the face of the Communist mockery of democratic institutions when they try to defend this, and many of them feel, I am sure, that it is an unwise policy in many cases, especially someone—not only in my case, but I think there was a question of a visa for Graham Greene once.

"The CHAIRMAN. I am talking about a particular thing because I think that those people ought not to be permitted to work in this country.

"Mr. MILLER. I am just telling you what I know. That is that they were eager, as a matter of fact the brunt of their tone and of their method of talking to me on the telephone was to aggravate this thing into an international issue of sorts, and I refused to do it because I don't believe, in other words, that anybody in Europe has got anything to teach us much in that regard, and it was a dishonest thing, it would have been a dishonest thing for me to have done. I felt very deeply about it. I felt very hurt about it because I believe I am a good representative of this country abroad and my plays are shown everywhere where there is a theater abroad.

"Mr. ARENS. Do you have that position with respect to Red China?

"Mr. MILLER. What position?

"Mr. ARENS. The position that you did not want to participate in anything affecting international relations.

"Mr. MILLER. No. In the last few years I would not participate in anything that was a Communist front of any kind.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you participate in a movement to embrace Red China by this country?

"Mr. MILLER. I recall nothing of the kind.

"Mr. ARENS. I lay before you a photostatic copy of a document called Far East Spotlight for Friendship with New China, calling for friendship cargoes to new China, a launching dinner; and the sponsors of the dinner or those who sent personal messages of support include one Arthur Miller. I ask you if that refreshes your recollection [handed].

"Mr. MILLER. This was, as it says here:

" 'The China Welfare Appeal, a new relief drive to aid the Chinese people.'

"It was headed up by Madam Sun Yat-sen, widow of the founder of the Chinese Republic. My recollection of this would be that, on the basis of its relief which is not what I was talking about a moment ago at all, I would have supported it.

"Mr. VELDE. What was the date of that?

"Mr. ARENS. May 1949.

"Did you support the China Welfare Appeal in the propaganda statement which they issued over the country:

" 'Not only has the export of medical supplies from the United States been made subject to burdensome restrictions and procedures, but a virtual embargo has been placed on all shipments to China. The history of such restrictions shows that they did not begin with recent events in Korea.'

"I lay before you a photostatic copy of a letter on the letterhead of the China Welfare Appeal, and ask you whether or not, although your name appears here on the letterhead, you lent yourself knowingly to that cause and movement?

"Mr. MILLER. You say my name does appear on the letter?

"Mr. ARENS. This is the reverse page. It had to be photostated on both sides. The name of Arthur Miller appears there [handed].

"Mr. MILLER. It is the China Welfare Appeal. As I recall, there was a need for medicines and penicillin, et cetera, which they weren't permitted to buy or something of that sort. I did support this.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you also support the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee in the Spanish Refugee Appeal for which funds were solicited and transmitted to the Communists in Spain in 1949, and again in 1951?

"Mr. MILLER. This is not in mitigation of these other things. I think the Spanish case is quite different, however. I have always been, since my student days, in the thirties, a partisan of Republican Spain. I am quite proud of it. I am not at all ashamed. I think a democracy was destroyed there. I would have carried through pretty generally my feelings of the thirties into the forties, as regards the Spanish Civil War refugees.

"Mr. ARENS. Now, do you recall, in view of your observations respecting your plays being played abroad, coauthoring a play, Listen My Children?

"Mr. MILLER. Coauthoring a play?

"Mr. ARENS. Yes, sir.

"Mr. MILLER. No; I don't.

"Mr. ARENS. Or do you recall authoring a play, Listen My Children?

"Mr. MILLER. What year would this have been?

"Mr. ARENS. 1939.

"Mr. MILLER. 1939?

"Mr. ARENS. Yes, sir; with Norman Rosten?

"Mr. MILLER. Oh, yes. Yes; I do.

"Mr. ARENS. I lay before you now an original document in handwriting which we procured from the Library of Congress as the document there for the purpose of copyright. Could you tell us whether or not that is your handwriting, or Rosten's handwriting of this play which was there for copyrighting?

"Mr. MILLER. It isn't mine.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you coauthor with Rosten this play?

"Mr. MILLER. I did.

"Mr. ARENS. I would like to read you part of this play.

"Mr. MILLER. I beg your pardon, sir.

"Mr. ARENS. Yes.

"Mr. MILLER. My recollection is clear now. I wrote a sketch about when I had been on relief in—well, when I got out of college. It was not long after.

"Mr. DOYLE. What year was that that you got out of college?

"Mr. MILLER. I graduated in June of 1938.

"Mr. DOYLE. 1938?

"Mr. MILLER. And I subsequently got on to the Federal writers, Federal theater project, and I wrote a farcical sort of a play about standing and waiting in a relief office, and that was, I think, what you are referring to. It was a one-act sketch which was later amplified. Nothing ever came of it, I am glad to say.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you know that Norman Rosten was a Communist when you collaborated with him in the play Listen My Children?

"Mr. MILLER. I wouldn't know anything about that.

"Mr. ARENS. In 1936 he was publicly identified in the Daily Worker as a member of the Young Communist League.

"Mr. MILLER. I wouldn't make a comment about that. I wouldn't know anything about it. I would be inclined strongly to say that it wasn't true.

"Mr. ARENS. Let me lay before you a photostatic copy of the Communist Daily Worker of December 10, 1936, a public proclamation.

"Mr. MILLER. I can't prove as to whether he was a Communist or not. It is impossible.

"Mr. ARENS. I asked if you knew. If you do not know, that is the answer.

"Mr. MILLER. By the way, I would add that that doesn't mean he was a Communist, does it?

"Mr. ARENS. If he was a member of the Young Communist League?

"Mr. MILLER. I am just asking a question.

"Mr. ARENS. Did Listen My Children pertain to congressional investigating committees?

"Mr. MILLER. If it did, then it is not what I am talking about. What I am talking about is another thing. This is a long time ago.

"Mr. ARENS. Let me read:

" 'Curtain slowly opens. The committee members are engaged in activity of an extraordinary variety, amid an equally extraordinary environment. Profuse flag bunting over the walls. There are several huge clocks ticking ominously. Also a metronone which is continually being adjusted for tempo change.

" 'Secretary, at desk, pounds typewriter and, as alarm clock rings, she feeds the committeemen spoonfuls of castor oil. * * *

" 'In center of room, in rocker, sits a man. He is securely tied to chair, with a gag in his mouth and a bandage tied over his mouth. Water, coming from a pipe near ceiling, trickles on his head. Nearby is a charcoal stove holding branding irons. Two bloodhounds are tied in the corner of room.'

"Was that the play that you coauthored with Norman Rosten? Is that an accurate description of the play Listen My Children?

"Mr. MILLER. I would say that I find it amusing. I don't see what is so horrific about that. I think it is a farce. I don't think anybody would take it seriously that way.

"The CHAIRMAN. It is a little corny.

"Mr. MILLER. I was not, by the way, the author of that scene. I am saying this out of a kind of professional jealousy of my own writing.

"Mr. ARENS. Was it likewise just a little farce, your play You're Next, by Arthur Miller, attacking the House Committee on Un-American Activities?

"Mr. MILLER. No, that would have been quite serious.

"Mr. ARENS. Did you know that the play You're Next, by Arthur Miller, attacking congressional investigating committees, was reproduced by the Communist Party?

"Mr. MILLER. No; I have no knowledge of it.

"Mr. ARENS. I lay before you now a photostatic copy of the Communist Daily Worker of New York, Wednesday, June 18, 1947:

" 'New York State Communist Party Building Congress—Program—'

"including You're Next by Arthur Miller.

"Mr. MILLER. Sir, you can't tax me with that.

"Mr. ARENS. I ask you only whether or not you knew it, sir.

"Mr. MILLER. I did not know it, and I say that you can't tax me with that. My plays have gone all over the world by all kinds of people, including the Spanish Government theater where Death of a Salesman has run longer than any modern play in history. I take no more responsibility for who plays my plays than General Motors can take for who rides in their Chevrolets. It is impossible. You can't do that. I am not a policeman to say you can do this or not. Plays are produced and people produce them.

"Mr. SCHERER. Before the Communist Party would use such a play it had to follow the Communist line?

"Mr. MILLER. Nothing in my life was ever written to follow a line. I will go into that if you will.

"Mr. ARENS. In view of your observations respecting your plays abroad, did you donate the rights of your play, All My Sons, to the Polish League in Poland?

"Mr. MILLER. Polish League of what?

"Mr. ARENS. League of Women in Poland, in 1947, September.

"Mr. MILLER. I don't remember it, but I will tell you this: You can't get any money out of Poland; and you can't get any money out of Russia; and you can't get any money out of any place on the other side of the Iron Curtain. It is quite possible—I have no recollection of it at all—that they simply took the royalties that were probably not even there and applied them to this fund. I have no communication, to my knowledge, from anybody.

"Mr. DOYLE. May I ask whether there is an identification of that, that the Polish League of Women is a Communist organization?

"Mr. ARENS. Yes, sir; a branch of the Congress of American Women. I should like, if you please, sir, if it would refresh your recollection, to read you an article appearing in the Daily Worker, September 29, 1947.

"Mr. MILLER. You say the Congress of American Women. Yes, they asked me to do this on the basis of a relief drive that they were having for the Polish children.

"Mr. ARENS. Then you have a recollection of donating the royalties of your play?

"Mr. MILLER. I just said so, sir.

"Mr. ARENS. Now, I believe you alluded a few moments ago to your play The Crucible; is that correct?

"Mr. MILLER. Crucible.

"Mr. ARENS. Yes, sir.

"Mr. MILLER. Yes.

"Mr. ARENS. Are you cognizant of the fact that your play The Crucible with respect to witch hunts in 1692 was the case history of a series of articles in the Communist press drawing parallels to the investigations of Communists and other subversives by congressional committees?

"Mr. MILLER. I think that was true in more than the Communist press. I think it was true in the non-Communist press, too. The comparison is inevitable, sir.

"Mr. ARENS. What have been your activities or associations with Howard Fast?

"Mr. MILLER. In what respect?

"Mr. ARENS. Do you know him?

"Mr. MILLER. I have met him.

"Mr. ARENS. How long do you know him?

"Mr. MILLER. I don't know how to describe that.

"Mr. ARENS. Well, have you collaborated with him?

"Mr. MILLER. Collaborated with him?

"Mr. ARENS. Yes, sir.

"Mr. MILLER. No, sir.

"Mr. ARENS. Are you cognizant of the promotion of yourself by Howard Fast?

"Mr. MILLER. No.

"Mr. ARENS. I lay before you a copy of the Communist Daily Worker of November 8, 1955, "I Propose Arthur Miller as the American Dramatist of the Day, by Howard Fast." Were you cognizant of his promotion of yourself as the dramatist of the day?

"Mr. MILLER. Let me say one thing about that sort of thing. The appreciation of dramatic values by people who have behind them an attachment, a remorseless attachment to the political line, is of no import to me. I don't believe it when they are against me and I don't believe it when they are for me. In this case I take no compliment out of this for one simple reason. That is, it happens that the Crucible, which, by the way, I began thinking about in 1938 and which they now say was written about the Rosenbergs about whom I had not heard when I started to write this play, it happened that the line in that play coincided at that moment. I have another example of that to which I will go into. This is not literary or dramatic criticism. This is a political artcle. You are taxng me with what he says. Now, the next play, as with Death of a Salesman which they called a decadent piece of trash in the Daily Worker, they were against it. I am not going to guide myself by what they think or don't think. From time to time I am sure Howard Fast or similar critics of plays have praised or blamed one or another of a hundred writers, all of whom you can't tax with that criticism. It isn't fair.

"Mr. ARENS. Now, your present application for a passport pending in the Department of State is for the purpose of traveling to England; is that correct?

"Mr. MILLER. To England, yes.

"Mr. ARENS. What is the objective?

"Mr. MILLER. The objective is double. I have a production which is in the talking stage in England of A View From the Bridge, and I will be there to be with the woman who will then be my wife. That is my aim.

"Mr. ARENS. Have you had difficulty in connection with your play, A View From the Bridge, in its presentation in England?

"Mr. MILLER. It has not got that far. I have had the censor in England giving us a little trouble, yes, but that is general. A lot of American plays have that difficulty.

"Mr. ARENS. Do you know a person by the name of Sue Warren?

"Mr. MILLER. I couldn't recall at this moment.

"Mr. ARENS. Do you know or have you known a person by the name of Arnaud D'Usseau, D-'-U-s-s-e-a-u?

"Mr. MILLER. I have met him.

"Mr. ARENS. What has been the nature of your activity in connection with Arnaud D'Usseau?

"Mr. MILLER. Just what is the point?

"Mr. ARENS. Have you been in any Communist Party sessions with Arnaud D'Usseau?

"Mr. MILLER. I was present at meetings of Communist Party writers in 1947, about 5 or 6 meetings.

"Mr. ARENS. Where were those meetings held?

"Mr. MILLER. They were held in someone's apartment. I don't know whose it was.

"Mr. ARENS. Were those closed party meetings?

"Mr. MILLER. I wouldn't be able to tell you that.

"Mr. ARENS. Was anyone there who, to your knowledge, was not a Communist?

"Mr. MILLER. I wouldn't know that.

"Mr. ARENS. Have you ever made application for membership in the Communist Party?

"Mr. MILLER. In 1939 I believe it was or in 1940 I went to attend a Marxist study course in the vacant store open to the street in my neighborhood in Brooklyn. I there signed some form or another.

"Mr. ARENS. That was an application for membership in the Communist Party; was it not?

"Mr. MILLER. I would not say that. I am here to tell you what I know.

"Mr. ARENS. Tell us what you know.

"Mr. MILLER. This is now 16 years ago. That is half a lifetime away. I don't recall and I haven't been able to recall and, if I could, I would tell you the exact nature of that application. I understood then that this was to be, as I have said, a study course. I was there for about three or four times perhaps. It was of no interest to me and I didn't return.

"Mr. ARENS. Who invited you to attend?

"Mr. MILLER. I wouldn't remember. It was a long time ago.

"Mr. ARENS. Tell us, if you please, sir, about these meetings with the Communist Party writers which you said you attended in New York City.

"Mr. MILLER. I was by then a well-known writer. I had written All My Sons, and a novel Focus, and a book of Reportage about Ernie Pyle and my work with him on attempting to make the picture the Story of GI Joe. I did the research for that, so that by that time I was quite well known, and I attended these meetings in order to locate my ideas in relation to Marxism because I had been assailed for years by all kinds of interpretations of what communism was, what Marxism was, and I went there to discover where I stood finally and completely, and I listened and said very little, I think, the four or five times.

"Mr. ARENS. Could I just interject this question so that we have it in the proper chronology? What occasioned your presence? Who invited you there?

"Mr. MILLER. I couldn't tell you. I don't know.

"Mr. ARENS. Can you tell us who was there when you walked into the room?

"Mr. MILLER. Mr. Chairman, I understand the philosophy behind this question and I want you to understand mine.

"When I say this, I want you to understand that I am not protecting the Communists or the Communist Party. I am trying to and I will protect my sense of myself. I could not use the name of another person and bring trouble on him. These were writers, poets, as far as I could see, and the life of a writer, despite what it sometimes seems, is pretty tough. I wouldn't make it any tougher for anybody. I ask you not to ask me that question.

"(The witness confers with his counsel.)

"Mr. MILLER. I will tell you anything about myself, as I have.

"Mr. ARENS. These were Communist Party meetings, were they not?

"Mr. MILLER. I will be perfectly frank with you in anything relating to my activities. I take the responsibility for everything I have ever done, but I cannot take responsibility for another human being.

"Mr. ARENS. This record shows, does it not, Mr. Miller, that these were Communist Party meetings?

"(The witness confers with his counsel.)

"Mr. ARENS. Is that correct?

"Mr. MILLER. I understood them to be Communist writers who were meeting regularly.

"Mr. ARENS. Mr. Chairman, I respectfully suggest that the witness be ordered and directed to answer the question as to who it was that he saw at these meetings.

"Mr. JACKSON. May I say that moral scruples, however laudable, do not constitute legal reason for refusing to answer the question. I certainly endorse the request for direction.

"The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer the question, Mr. Miller.

"Mr. MILLER. May I confer with my attorney for a moment?

"(The witness confers with his counsel.)

"Mr. MILLER. Mr. Walter, could I ask you to postpone this question until the testimony is compelted and you can gage for yourself?

"The CHAIRMAN. Of course, you can do that, but I understand this is about the end of the hearing.

"Mr. ARENS. This is about the end of the hearing. We have only a few more questions. The record reflects that this witness has identified these meetings as the meetings of the Communist writers.

"In the jurisdiction of this committee he has been requested to tell this committee who were in attendance at these meetings.

"Mr. DOYLE. If I understand the record, the record shows that he answered that he did not know whether there were any non-Communists there, or not. I think the record so shows.

"Mr. MILLER. I would like to add, sir, to complete this picture, that I decided in the course of these meetings that I had finally to find out what my views really were in relation to theirs, and I decided that I would write a paper in which, for the first time in my life, I would set forth my views on art, on the relation of art to politics, on the relation of the artist to politics, which are subjects that are very important to me, and I did so and I read this paper to the group and I discovered, as I read it and certainly by the time I had finished with it, that I had no real basis in common either philosophically or, most important to me, as a dramatist. I can't make it too weighty a thing to tell you that the most important thing to me in the world is my work, and I was resolved that, if I found that I was in fact a Marxist, I would declare it; and that, if I did not, I would not declare it, and I would say that I was not; and I wrote a paper and I would like to give you the brunt of it so that you may know me.

"The CHAIRMAN. Have you got the paper?

"Mr. MILLER. I am sorry, sir. I think it is the best essay I ever wrote, and I have never been able to find it in the last 2 or 3 years. I wish I could. I would publish it, as I recall it, because it meant so much to me. It was this: that great art like science attempts to see the present remorselessly and truthfully; that, if Marxism is what it claims to be, a science of society, that it must be devoted to the objective facts more than all the philosophies that it attacks as being untruthful; therefore, the first job of a Marxist writer is to tell the truth, and, if the truth is opposed to what he thinks it ought to be, he must still tell it because that is the stretching and the straining that every science and every art that is worth its salt must go through.

"I found that there was a dumb silence because it seemed not only that it was non-Marxist, which it was, but that it was a perfectly idealistic position, namely, that first of all the artist is capable of seeing the facts and, secondly, what are you going to do when you see the facts and they are really opposed to the line? The real Marxist writer has to turn those facts around to fit that time. I could never do that. I have not done it.

I want to raise another point here. I wrote a play called All My Sons which was attacked as a Communist play. This is an example of something you raised just a little while earlier about the use of my play in the Communist meeting, of a different sketch that I had written. I started that play when the war was on. The Communist line during the war was that capitalists were the salt of the earth just like workers, that there would never be a strike again, that we were going to go hand in hand down the road in the future. I wrote my play called All My Sons in the midst of this period, and you probably aren't familiar with it—maybe you are—that the story is the story of an airplane manufacturer, an airplane parts manufacturer who sends out faulty parts to the Air Force.

"Therefore, what happened was that the war ended before I could get the play produced. The play was produced. The Communist line changed back to an attack on capitalists and here I am being praised by the Communist press as having written a perfectly fine Communist play. Had the play opened when it was supposed to have opened; that is, if I could have sold it that fast, it would have been attacked as an anti-Communist play.

"The same thing has happened with Salesman. Death of a Salesman in New York was condemned by the Communist press.

"The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Miller, what has this to do——

"Mr. MILLER. I am trying to elucidate my position on the relation of art.

"Mr. ARENS. Was Arnaud D'Usseau chairman?

"Mr. SCHERER. Just a minute. Mr. Chairman, may I interrupt?

"The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

"Mr. SCHERER. There is a question before the witness; namely, to give the names of those individuals who were present at this Communist Party meeting of Communist writers. There is a direction on the part of the chairman to answer that question.

"Now, so that the record may be clear, I think we should say to the witness—Witness, would you listen?

"Mr. MILLER. Yes.

"Mr. SCHERER. We do not accept the reasons you gave for refusing to answer the question and that it is the opinion of the committee that, if you do not answer the question, that you are placing yourself in contempt.

"(The witness confers with his counsel.)

"Mr. SCHERER. That is an admonition that this committee must give you in compliance with the decisions of the Supreme Court.

"Now, Mr. Chairman, I ask that you again direct the witness to answer the question.

"The CHAIRMAN. He has been directed to answer the question, and he gave us an answer that we just do not accept.

Mr. ARENS. Was Arnaud D'Usseau chairman of this meeting of Communist Party writers which took place in 1947 at which you were in attendance?

"Mr. MILLER. All I can say, sir, is that my conscience will not permit me to use the name of another person.

"(The witness confers with his counsel.)

"Mr. MILLER. And that my counsel advises me that there is no relevance between this question and the question of whether I should have a passport or there should be passport legislation in 1956.

"Mr. ARENS. Mr. Chairman, I respectfully suggest that the witness be ordered and directed to answer the question as to whether or not Arnaud D'Usseau—A-r-n-a-u-d—the last name is D-'-U-s-s-e-a-u—was chairman of the meeting of the Communist Party writers in New York City in 1947 at which you were in attendance.

"The CHAIRMAN. You are directed to answer the question.

"Mr. MILLER. I have given you my answer, sir.

"Mr. ARENS. I ask you now, sir, whether or not Sue Warren was in attendance at this meeting of the Communist Party writers held in New York City in 1947?

"Mr. MILLER. I have given you my answer.

"Mr. VELDE. Do you know Sue Warren?

"Mr. JACKSON. Do you decline to answer the question?

"(The witness confers with his counsel.)

"Mr. MILLER. I tell you, sir, that I have given my answer.

"Mr. JACKSON. I am not satisfied with that. That is entirely too vague. What I want is a positive statement as to whether or not you will answer that question.

"(The witness confers with his counsel.)

"Mr. MILLER. Sir, I believe I have given you the answer that I must give.

"The CHAIRMAN. Let us get that straight. As I understand, you decline to answer the question for the reason that you gave when you declined to answer the first question, or at least when you gave an answer that was not deemed acceptable; is that it?

"Mr. MILLER. That is correct.

"Mr. ARENS. Were you proposed for membership in the Stuyvesant Branch, 12th Assembly District, of the Communist Party by Sue Warren?

"Mr. MILLER. To my knowledge——

"Mr. ARENS. In 1943?

"Mr. MILLER. To my knowledge, I would not know that. I would have no knowledge of it.

"Mr. ARENS. Have you made application for membership in the Communist Party?

"Mr. MILLER. I answered that question.

"Mr. ARENS. I put it to you as a fact and ask you to affirm or deny the fact that you did make application for membership in the Communist Party and that the number of your application is 23345.

"Mr. MILLER. I would not affirm that. I have no memory of such a thing.

"Mr. ARENS. Do you deny it?

"Mr. MILLER. I would deny it.

"Mr. ARENS. Mr. Chairman, that will conclude the staff interrogation of this witness.

"The CHAIRMAN. Are there any questions?

"Mr. VELDE. I would just like one question. We mentioned Norman Rosten a while ago, with whom you collaborated in a play in 1938, I believe it was. Do you know where he is today?

"Mr. MILLER. He is in New York City.

"Mr. VELDE. Do you have any contacts with him at the present time?

"Mr. MILLER. Yes.

"Mr. VELDE. Are you engaged in any business with him?

"Mr. MILLER. No. He is a writer. I know him.

"Mr. VELDE. That is all.

"(Representative DONALD L. JACKSON withdrew from the hearing room at this point.)

"Mr. DOYLE. I have one question.

"The CHAIRMAN. Mr. DOYLE.

"Mr. DOYLE. I have no questions but I want to make this brief observation. With your recognized ability in your specialized field, based on your testimony here that I have heard, let me ask you one question. Why do you not direct some of that magnificent ability you have to fighting against well-known Communist subversive conspiracies in our country and in the world? Why do you not direct your magnificent talents to that, in part? I mean more positively?

"Mr. MILLER. Yes, I understand what you mean. I think it would be a disaster and a calamity if the Communist Party ever took over this country. That is an opinion that has come to me not out of the blue sky but out of long thought. I tell you further that I have been trying for years now. I am not a fictionalist. I reflect what my heart tells me from the society around me. We are living in a time when there is great uncertainty in this country. It is not a Communist idea. You just pick up a book review section and you will see everybody selling books on peace of mind because there isn't any.

"I am trying to delve to the bottom of this and come up with a positive answer, and I have had to go to hell to meet the devil. You can't know what the worst is until you have seen the worst, and it is not for me to make easy answers and to come forth before the American people and tell them everything is all right when I look in their eyes and I see them troubled.

"I believe in democracy. I believe it is the only way for myself and for anybody that I care about; it is the only way to live; but my criticism, such as it has been, is not to be confused with a hatred. I love this country, I think as much as any man, and it is because I see things that I think traduce certainly the values that have been in this country that I speak. I would like more than anything else in the world to make positive my plays and I intend to do so before I finish. It has to be on the basis of reality.

"The CHAIRMAN. Mr. Miller, I trust that you will raise your important voice in what must be apparent to you now as a conspiracy. I am frank to admit that I participated in some myself. I remember making a rather sizable contribution to this Anti-Fascist Committee because they were moving Jews away from Germany, and I know that a great many other people did but, it is indeed significant that, in all of these causes in which you participated because of the persecution of the Jewish people you never moved toward the assistance of people who were being persecuted by the Communists. That, I think, is very unfortunate.

"Mr. MILLER. I think it is not only unfortunate. It was a great error.

"Mr. KEARNEY. Do you think——

"Mr. MILLER. Let me finish this.

"Mr. KEARNEY. Pardon me.

"Mr. MILLER. In the face of an overwhelming ideal it has been the common experience of mankind, both good people and bad people, that detail goes by the board and fades into the walls. I believe now in facts. I look at life as to see what is happening, and I have no line. I have no preconception. I am devoted to what is going on. The hardest thing to do is to tell what is going on. It is easy to talk about the past and future, but nobody knows what is happening now.

"Mr. KEARNEY. Do I get from your answer now that you consider yourself more or less a dupe in joining these Communist organizations?

"Mr. MILLER. I wouldn't say so because I was an adult. I wasn't a child. I was looking for the world that would be perfect. I think it necessary that I do that if I were to develop myself, as a writer. I am not ashamed of this. I accept my life. That is what I have done. I learned a great deal.

"The CHAIRMAN. You have learned a great deal and made a greater contribution to what we think you now stand for than you realize because, by the errors that you committed, you are serving a very loud note of warning to a lot of other people who might fall into what you did, quite obviously."

Because of the foregoing, the said Committee on Un-American Activities was deprived of answers to pertinent questions propounded to said Arthur Miller, relative to the subject matter which under Public Law 601, section 121, subsection (q) (2) of the 79th Congress, and under House Resolution 5 of the 84th Congress, the said committee was instructed to investigate, and the refusal of the witness to answer the questions, namely: "Can you tell us who was there when you walked into the room?

"Was Arnaud D'Usseau chairman of this meeting of Communist Party writers which took place in 1947 at which you were in attendance?" which questions were pertinent to the subject under inquiry, is a violation of the subpena under which the witness had previously appeared, and his refusal to answer the aforesaid questions deprived your committee of necessary and pertinent testimony, and places the said witness in contempt of the House of Representatives of the United States.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution (H. Res. 638) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the Speaker of the House of Representatives certify the report of the Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives as to the refusal of Arthur Miller to answer questions before a duly constituted subcommittee of the Committee on Un-American Activities, together with all the facts in connection therewith, under seal of the House of Representatives, to the United States attorney for the District of Columbia, to the end that the said Arthur Miller may be proceeded against in the manner and form provided by law.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. CELLER. Mr. Speaker, here is a man of great talent, Arthur Miller, famous as a playwright, whose plays have been successfully produced in various parts of the world.

He is a Pulitzer prize winner for his play, The Death of a Salesman. He wrote Crucible, A View from the Bridge and All My Sons.

Passage of a contempt citation certainly will not help us abroad. Propagandawise our political status will not be helped—indeed will be hurt in foreign parts.

In France it will be said that an American of exceptional talent must languish in jail—witness the fate of Arthur Miller.

Miller's play, A View From the Bridge, is about to be produced in London, and I can readily see a reviewer of the play in the London Times saying: "In America the reward for writing a great play may at times be imprisonment."

What travesty.

We are our worst enemies. Watch and see how those who wish us ill will seize upon our improvidence—in distant parts.

What is his sin? He was candid in his examination. He told about all his own associations. He spoke openly and freely about his own views. He refused on conscience to play the role of informer. He would not disclose names at a meeting some 10 years ago. He refused to invoke the fifth amendment. Voluntary disclosure of names is one aspect of this difficult problem. But involuntary and collusive disclosure is another.

There is something obnoxious about an informer. One looks askance upon a squealer—an informer.

To what legislative end can the names sought help? Possession of these names is not for purposes of enforcement. Enforcement is not a congressional function. Certainly there is no legislative purpose to be served.

Our security apparatus must be very weak indeed if we have to depend upon coercion of individuals to live the life of informers. We seriously indict ourselves if we pass this bill of indictment.

Are there no other sources of information?

Are we saying that Arthur Miller is the only source for knowledge of these names at any meeting he attended?

What about our intelligence agencies, FBI and CIA?

What about the career or professional informer? Our intelligence system must be greatly weakened if we must rely upon men like Miller to ferret out Communists.

The Athenians forced hemlock upon Socrates. Are we to coerce Miller?

Like Miller, Socrates refused to forsake his unorthodox views. He refused to conform. History has condemned Athens. Counsel and members of the Committee on Un-American Activities seemed to question Miller concerning his plays. Note the following colloquy:

Mr. ARENS. Did Listen My Children pertain to congressional investigating committees?

Mr. MILLER. If it did, then it is not what I am talking about. What I am talking about is another thing. This is a long time ago.

Mr. ARENS. Let me read:

"Curtain slowly opens. The committee members are engaged in activity of an extraordinary variety, amid an equally extraordinary environment. Profuse flag bunting over the walls. There are several hugh clocks ticking ominously. Also a metronome which is continuously being adjusted for tempo change.

"Secretary, at desk, pounds typewriter and, an alarm clock rings, she feeds the committeemen spoonfuls of castor oil. * * *

"In center of room, in rocker, sits a man. He is securely tied to chair, with a gag in his mouth and a bandage tied over his mouth. Water, coming from a pipe near ceiling, trickles on his head. Nearby is a charcoal stove holding branding irons. Two bloodhounds are tied in the corner of room."

Was that the play that you coauthored with Norman Rosten? Is that an accurate description of the play Listen My Children?

Mr. MILLER. I would say that I find it amusing. I don't see what is so horrific about. I think it is a farce. I don't think anybody would take it seriously that way.

The CHAIRMAN. It is a little corny.

Mr. MILLER. I was not, by the way, the author of that scene. I am saying this out of a kind of professional jealousy of my own writing.

Mr. ARENS. Was it likewise just a little farce, your play You're Next, by Arthur Miller, attacking the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Mr. MILLER. No, that would have been quite serious.

Mr. ARENS. Did you know that the play, You're Next, by Arthur Miller, attacking congressional investigating committees, was reproduced by the Communist Party

Mr. MILLER. No; I have no knowledge of it.

Mr. ARENS. I lay before you now a photostatic copy of the Communist Daily Worker of New York, Wednesday, June 18, 1947: "New York State Communist Party Building Congress—Program," including You're Next by Arthur Miller.

Mr. MILLER. Sir, you can't tax me with that.

Mr. ARENS. I ask you only whether or not you knew it, sir.

Mr. MILLER. I did not know it, and I say that you can't tax me with that. My plays have gone all over the world by all kinds of people, including the Spanish Government theater where Death of a Salesman has run longer than any modern play in history. I take no more responsibility for who plays my plays than General Motors can take for who rides in their Chevrolets. It is impossible. You can't do that. I am not a policeman to say you can do this or not. Plays are produced and people produce them.

Mr. SCHERER. Before the Communist Party would use such a play it had to follow the Communist line?

Mr. MILLER. Nothing in my life was ever written to follow a line. I will go into that if you will.

As another point in the testimony we have the following between counsel and Miller:

Mr. ARENS. Are you cognizant of the fact that your play The Crucible with respect to witch hunts in 1692 was the case history of a series of articles in the Communist press drawing parallels to the investigations of Communists and other subversives by congressional committees.

Mr. MILLER. I think that was true in more than the Communist press. I think it was true in the non-Communist press, too. The comparison is inevitable, sir.

To his credit, when Miller landed in London recently at a press conference he showed no rancor, no misgivings; he praised the United States and its institutions; he decried anti-Americanism. He refused to give any comfort to Communist portrayals of this country. He defended his country to the core and gave it wholehearted support—as any patriotic American would.

I associate an author with his book, as I do a composer with his music, a painter with his painting, a dramatist with his play. Miller's plays are the very embodiment of our traditional American freedoms. Jefferson and Lincoln had philosophies not unlike that underlying Miller's works.

I feel kindly disposed toward Miller. I do not know him personally. I do know him through his dramas. Hurt him, you hurt his works. Imprison him, you chain his efforts. Condemn him, you bespatter his plays.

A Miller is not born every day. A Miller comes rarely. Do we foster talent, the type he has, by way of jail? Somehow I instinctively react unfavorably to a contempt citation against a man like Miller. Maybe I am a bit sensitive. But putting him in prison because he refused on conscience to become an informer seems like breaking a Stradivarius violin because you don't like the music it gives forth. It's like hurling mud at a Goya because of the material of the tapestry. It is as blasphemous as hurling a stone at a stained glass window of a cathedral because of its color scheme.

Maybe my premise is wrong, to wit: that I want a different rule applicable to a talented playwright like Miller than to the ordinary citizen. That is not the case. Miller was most cooperative, frank and respectful to the committee. The testimony includes 38 pages. Almost throughout his answers were responsive and objective, open and honest. He refused to hedge behind any constitutional guarantees. Only during the last few pages do we find any reluctance to answer—and then on conscience he refused to "inform" on others. He was never arrogant or testy or contumacious. But all these factors were lost sight of. Even the chairman complimented him. Note the following:

Mr. KEARNEY. Do I get from your answer now that you consider yourself more or less of a dupe in joining these Communist organizations?

Mr. MILLER. I wouldn't say so because I was an adult. I wasn't a child. I was looking for the world that would be perfect. I think it necessary that I do that if I were to develop myself as a writer. I am not ashamed of this. I accept my life. That is what I have done. I learned a great deal.

The CHAIRMAN. You have learned a great deal and made a greater contribution to what we think you now stand for than you realize because, by the errors that you committed, you are serving a very loud note of warning to a lot of other people who might fall into what you did, quite obviously.

I say that on balance, weighing all the circumstances, the legal and moral facets, the committee might have censured him and left it at that. Contempt citation is too harsh.

There are plenty of precedents for less harsh action by the committee.

I herewith set forth precedents—as same appeared in brief of Miller's counsel—where a refusal on grounds of conscience to answer a specific question by an otherwise respectful and cooperative witness—like Miller—has not been followed by a citation for contempt:

(a) Witness No. 1 testified before this committee (Communist Infiltration of Radiation Laboratory, pt. 1, p. 356 ff.) that he had been a member of the Communist Party from 1937 to 1941. He refused to say whether another person was known to him as a member of the Communist Party. He was not cited for contempt.

(b) Witness No. 2 testified before this committee (Communist Infiltration of Radiation Laboratory, pt. 1, p. 373 ff.) that she had been a member of the Communist Party from 1937 to 1941, but refused to answer questions about others. She was not cited for contempt.

(c) Witness No. 3 testified before this committee (Communist Infiltration of Atomic Bomb Project, pt. 3, p. 3417 ff.) that he had been a member of the Communist Party from 1938 to 1943. He refused to give the names of the other members of his group. He was not cited for contempt.

(d) Witness No. 4 testified before this committee (Communist Infiltration of Atomic Bomb Project, pt. 3, p. 3453 ff.) that she had been a member of the Communist Party from 1939 to 1943. She refused to identify anyone as a member of her group. She was not cited for contempt.

(e) Witness No. 5 testified before this committee (Communist Activity in the Philadelphia Area, pt. 4, p. 4006) that she had attended meetings of the Communist Political Association in 1946, but declined to say whether she had attended meetings at the home of designated persons. She was not cited for contempt.

(f) Witness No. 6 testified before the Subcommittee (Subversive Influence in the Educational Process, pt. 6, p. 721 ff.) on Internal Security of the Senate Judiciary Committee that he had been a member of the Communist Party from 1936 to 1942, but refused to say whether or not a designated person had been a member of his group. He was not cited for contempt.

(g) Witness No. 7 testified before the same subcommittee (Subversive Influence in the Educational Process, pt. 12, p. 1023 ff.) that he had been a member of the Communist Party from 1935 to 1943, but refused to say who had been the senior professor in his group at a certain university. He was not cited for contempt.

(h) Witness No. 8 testified before the same subcommittee (Army Information and Education Program, p. 1498) that he had been a member of the Communist Party on two separate occasions but refused to identify others. He was not cited for contempt.

(i) At least four witnesses before this same subcommittee refused to answer questions about other persons during an investigation of the Southern Conference Educational Fund. These witnesses, though named by others as members of the Communist Party, denied membership and then refused to answer many questions, including questions pertaining to others. None of the witnesses were cited for contempt.

(j) Witness No. 13 admitted before the Permanent Investigations Subcommittee of the Senate Government Operations Committee (State Department Information Program—Information Centers, part 8, p. 486) and admitted that he was a Marxist and Socialist. He refused to answer numerous questions relating to his Marxist beliefs. He was not cited for contempt.

In each of the cases referred to above except those of witnesses 7 and 13 the refusals to answer were on grounds of conscience. Witness No. 7 pleaded the fifth amendment when asked to name someone else, but he was informed by the chairman that this constituted no defense since he had waived the privilege by testifying about his own activities in the Communist Party. Nevertheless he was not cited for contempt. Witness No. 13 pleaded the fifth amendment though the committee publicly took the position that this amendment was not a lawful defense; he was not cited for contempt.

It should be noted that most of the above persons, unlike Arthur Miller, were or had been in the Communist Party, and for extended periods of time, and therefore could have given a great deal of information about others. It is also to be noted that many of the above investigations, unlike that of Arthur Miller, concerned matters of serious import to our national security such as our atomic energy project. I urge this House committee to compare the activities of these witnesses and of those associated with them with Arthur Miller's attendance at 3 or 4 meetings of a Marxist study group in 1940 and 5 or 6 meetings of Communist Party writers in 1947.

Indeed in punishing a man like Miller the real punishment is the finding out that his tormentors in this very House are wrong.

Future Members of this body, years hence, might very well say that our action today is deplorable and that instead of giving him a halo we gave him a noose.

Mr. KLEIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD and include a letter sent by Arthur Miller to the Committee on Un-American Activities.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. KLEIN. Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to this particular citation for the reason that I am convinced that Arthur Miller is not a Communist, nor is it claimed by the committee that he is.

While he is technically in contempt for having refused to give the names of others who were present at certain meetings, I believe it is going far afield from any legitimate legislative purposes of the committee to request such information.

I can understand his reluctance to answer these questions and, in fact, have been informed that there have been times in the past when the committee refrained from citing witnesses for contempt under similar circumstances.

Because he explained his position fully, I am inserting at this point in the RECORD a copy of a letter dated July 6, 1956, sent by Arthur Miller to the Honorable FRANCIS E. WALTER, chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, together with a memorandum submitted by his attorneys. I trust that the Members will vote against this citation.

JULY 6, 1956.

Hon. FRANCIS E. WALTER
Chairman, House Committee on Un-American Activities, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. WALTER: I am informed by my attorneys that at times in the past the House Committee on Un-American Activities has refrained from citing witnesses for contempt under circumstances not very different from those obtaining in my hearing. I would therefore like to present to your committee certain considerations which have moved me to decline the naming of those few people I recall as having been present at the meetings of Communist writers which I attended in 1947. I write here in the same spirit with which I entered the hearing room; I believed then and I believe yet that my own candor in speaking of my past associations is my best defense, for I know myself to be a person devoted to democratic institutions and opposed to totalitarianism, and the record of my work and my life, looked at as a whole, must, I believe, stand as proof of this.

The meetings in question occurred nearly 10 years ago. At that time the Communist Party, as far as I was aware, had not been declared a conspiracy but was legally recognized and accorded the common privileges of a political party; its candidates had run openly for office and its name was listed on the ballot. Association with it at that time entailed no criminal penalties. Literature published by the Communist Party was freely available in bookstores; its magazines and newspapers could be found on any newsstand. Only shortly before, the United States and Russia had been wartime allies. On the ground of their participating in illegal actions, therefore, I cannot justify myself naming these people. But in addition, the 5 or 6 whose names I know are, to my knowledge, as they were at the time, free-lance writers or minor figures in the theatrical world, and they have had no governmental or industrial function. Thus, it seems to me that from the standpoint of their dangerousness I should have to overlook the facts as I understand them, and to adopt a standard of behavior for myself based upon the concept that unless one does, in fact, agree to name anyone at all who one knew to have been associated at some time with the Communist Party, one must of necessity regard oneself as, first, in contempt of Congress, and secondly, as one who is shielding enemies of the Nation. I should like to examine these two deductions, and to show why I believe they do not follow from my unwillingness to name other people.

I have never believed that the rightness or wrongness of human actions can be judged on general principles. To kill a man, for instance, is murder, yet to kill him in battle is not the same as to kill him in a duel, or by accident in an automobile, or in the throes of a sudden passion. In consequence, I believe that although in this situation I could not in good conscience take the name of another, it is nevertheless possible that certain individuals under certain circumstances might well inform upon earlier associates without incurring what seems to me to be a drastic moral penalty. I can conceive that a man, misled and tricked by Communists, and in possession of firsthand knowledge of plans being carried through by them to harm this country, would wish to frustrate those plans, and in rightful anger against the perpetrators, bring their names easily to his lips.

I could not condemn such an action, but my case is quite different. I have no knowledge of any plan on the part of these people, past or present, detrimental to society or otherwise. I have no knowledge of any crime or criminal. I am left, therefore, with but two possible justifications for informing on these people; either that they misled or tricked me almost 10 years ago, made a dupe of me, and in return deserve my retaliation, or that in my view the cause of democracy would be somehow served by naming them. I emphasize before I proceed further, that I am speaking here of myself and of a specific situation in which I find myself, and that I am not attempting to lay down a general rule for all exigencies.

The truth is that no individual tricked or misled me. It was rather that history—my growing up in the depression and maturing in the midst of war, and many forces in my personal life—for a time led me to seek in Marxism a fount of authority from which might flow a stream of values, ethical, political, and dramaturgic, in which I could wholly have faith.

I matured at a time when authority in this country was shaken more violently and was less certain of itself than at any time, perhaps, with the exception of the Civil War period. My venturing into these few meetings was not, therefore, the responsibility of anyone but myself. I was a young man without experience, but I was an adult, and no one promised or offered me any inducement or profit.

What I sought to find from without I subsequently learned must be created within, namely, a standard of values and a personal vision of what is and what must come to be in society and the world. If the episode was unfortunate in that it marked me for what I was not, it was also a rather inevitable result of a hundred social and psychological forces maturing within me at a certain time of my life and in a certain place. To bring the names of others into this matter now would be to blame them, and in my estimate this would distort and falsify my history.

The specific nature of these particular meetings is also of moment to me as I deliberate upon the course I take now. I was never aware of any business transacted there excepting a running discussion of the relationships between the philosophy and credo of Marxism and the literary arts. In truth, I was not there to engage in political activity but to resolve the contradictions of belief which had always assailed me, belief not only about capitalism, but about what made literature good or bad, what the responsibilities were of the artist toward his fellow men, and so on. My recollection is that stories and poems were read at these meetings; current plays, novels and authors were discussed with an eye to perceiving which were "Marxist" and why. After a few such discussions I wrote a paper setting forth, for the first time in my life, my ideas about these questions, and I did so in order to locate myself once and for all as regards the tenets of Marxism. In writing the paper and in reading it to the group, it became obvious to me that these people did not possess the wisdom I sought, and more importantly, that from no outer source could I ever derive a satisfactory philosophy but must heed the commands which spoke from within me. Philosophically, if I might raise to that austere level a set of instinctive perceptions and insights, it was clear as well that I had no place in the Marxist scheme of things if only because it was inconceivable to me that a creative artist could or ought to be controlled by ideological requirements of any kind whatsoever.

If I say now, as I said at my hearing, that I came away convinced that my temperament and my viewpoints were diametrically opposed to those of Marxists, it is no contradiction to add that I yet hold in high respect my own motives and impulses which led me to strive toward that decision. It was not enough for me to know that I was uncertain about my beliefs and understanding, I had to actively seek answers. And it is that seeking, that kind of quest for ultimate truths which in itself is perhaps the core of my character and my talent, for whatever there is of originality and vigor in my plays is the result of discovery and the excitement that accompanies discovery. Thus, as I contemplate the act of naming these writers now I cannot escape a sense of casting a disfiguring ridicule upon my own actions in quest, actions done in good faith and issuing not in crime but, in my opinion, in a heightened sensibility toward the values which must be preserved in a democratic society.

What I would protect here is not Communists or wrongdoers but my responsibility for my own actions. I say this for a particular reason, and it is that I believe myself to be a patriotic citizen, and my works a credit to this Nation; if that is true then I am, like any man, at least the sum of my experience, and I must accept my unwise acts with the wise, for all together have made me what I am. I have said, and I repeat, that the picture Marxism would draw of society and the nature of man is not true; the future Marxism predicted is not true; the moral claims of Communists to a more humane philosophy is a tragic sham, and the demands Marxism would enforce upon the artist are suicidal if accepted by him. Yet, since it was I and I alone, my own mind and spirit, which pressed me toward an investigation of my relation to Marxist thought some years ago, it is I who must accept the consequences of that quest.

There is one further point I would make because the matter is not widely understood outside the small circle of theater artists, and even there not always with the clarity it deserves. Like a few other dramatists I have not spent my career writing for hire. One is paid nothing for writing a play for the stage until and unless the public pays to see it. I have spent as long as 3 years on a single work and without the slightest assurance it would run 2 weeks when it was finished. I choose my own subjects and develop each work alone and independently, and each work carries my name and none other. For 20 years now I have spent the better part of every day forming and testing my vision of man and society, my sense of what is truly going on in the world around me, for a play such as I write has no force if it has not the force of evident truth. These plays speak my deepest feelings and are the most complete and unmitigated expressions of my viewpoints toward every kind of social manifestation and institution.

In the profoundest sense, therefore, these plays are myself, for good or for ill, and I have not the slightest doubt that they are both humane and democratic works which could not have been written excepting by one devoted to the democratic hope for man and that concept of his nature. If now, by virtue of my willingness or unwillingness to answer a single question about the identity of certain other writers and by this sudden standard my whole character and citizenship are to be judged, then it means to me that the labor of revelation lasting over 20 years is brought down to nothing in a single moment, and the daily struggle I have waged to speak clearly and in the most public of public places—the American stage—is altogether mocked.

Had I hidden my opinions and my views, my sense of reality, and my apprehensions for my fellowmen, and written trivia in the common commerce of the stage, I should perhaps feel differently, or had I sold my talent for security as I could have done a hundred times. But I have gladly risked everything time and again for the freedom our stage blessedly permits, that freedom to expose my thoughts untrammeled and unhired. Now to have to prove my fidelity to freedom, an idea to which the heart of my works is dedicated, would be an action in travesty of my labor itself.

If I must be judged, let me be judged by what my native impulses lead me to do rather than what necessity now makes opportune. If in truth I have done evil, the naming of others surely cannot mitigate that evil or erase it, and the refusal to name them cannot make that evil worse than it was. Nor can I believe that such a willingness betokens, in itself, respect for the Congress, or that in this instance unwillingness is a mark of disrespect, let alone of contempt. As I have done, so I do now, resting my case not upon protections of the law but on the spontaneous revelations in my works and on the record of my life. I cannot confess another man, therefore, and I ask the committee to consider where true respect lies in such a case and where contempt; it is no news to the world that there are words of agreement and assent which, in truth, demean, and conscientious reservations which magnify the dignity of the state.

Respectfully yours,

ARTHUR MILLER.

MEMORANDUM INDICATING POLICIES AND PRECEDENTS WHICH WOULD SUPPORT THE ACTION OF THE HOUSE COMMITTEE ON UN-AMERICAN ACTIVITIES IF IT REFRAINED FROM CITING ARTHUR MILLER FOR CONTEMPT

JULY 6, 1956.

On June 25, 1956, we requested 10 days within which to submit a memorandum indicating wherein, under existing precedents and in the light of Mr. Miller's testimony, the Committee on Un-American Activities might properly refrain from citing Mr. Miller for contempt. On June 27, 1956, the committee responded that the determination whether or not Mr. Miller would be recommended for citation for contempt of the Congress would be held in abeyance for a period of 10 days. We appreciate this allowance of 10 days which has made this memorandum possible.

At the outset, we must inform the committee that Mr. Miller respectfully declines to transmit to the committee the names of the persons who were in attendance at the 1947 meetings of Communist Party writers about which he was interrogated by the committee. Mr. Miller informed the committee at the hearing on June 21, that he would testify about his own activities frankly and fully, but that his conscience would not permit him to use the name of another person. Mr. Miller has carefully reconsidered his position in deference to the committee's renewed request in its letter of June 27. He has concluded that he could not live with himself if he were to do other than adhere to the position which he took before the committee.

We submit that this ought not to end the committee's consideration of all the circumstances of the case before arriving at a final decision as to whether or not Arthur Miller should be cited for contempt. As the precedents set forth in this memorandum will show, this committee on a number of occasions has refrained from citing witnesses for contempt who declined to name other people. And, as we hope also to show, in the light of these precedents, Arthur Miller's case presents the strongest possible grounds for withholding action.

I. ADDITIONAL MATERIAL FOR THE COMMITTEE'S CONSIDERATION

Mr. Miller has asked us to submit to the committee the following additional material which reinforces his testimony before the committee and gives further evidence of his faith in democracy and his irreconcilable opposition to communism:

1. Copy of Arthur Miller's affidavit to the State Department dated June 25, 1956.

This affidavit, submitted in support of his application for a passport, constitutes a concise summary of his past activities and a strong and explicit statement of his convictions, and we believe that the committee would find it illuminating and helpful.

2. Copy of Arthur Miller's affidavit to the State Department dated July 3, 1956.

This affidavit contains additional data, not referred to in the committee's hearings, drawn from Arthur Miller's writings and further reflecting his democratic faith. We would particularly draw the committee's attention to pages 15 to 18 which have to do with Arthur Miller's relations with the foreign press. These pages show the patriotic position which he has consistently taken with the foreign press—refusing to lend comfort to Communist portrayals of this country, expounding its culture at the request of the State Department, and, as in the case of his interview in the leading Icelandic newspaper Morgunbladid of October 7, 1954, protesting vigorously against the tyrannical suppressions of liberty in Russia.

3. Translation of the Interview With Arthur Miller published in the Icelandic newspaper Morgunbladid of October 7, 1954.

This translation, submitted to the State Department and certified as correct by the consulate general of Iceland in New York on July 5, 1956, shows the vast gulf separating Arthur Miller from the Communists. It deserves special attention because of the strategic importance of Iceland to this country.

In view of the precedents referred to below for withholding contempt citations, we submit that these documentary evidences of Arthur Miller's outspoken democratic faith should be carefully considered and taken fully into account by the committee.

II. AUTHOR MILLER'S COOPERATIVENESS AS WITNESS BEFORE THIS COMMITTEE

Mr. Miller was a cooperative and helpful witness before the committee, answering all questions forthrightly except for the single matter of giving certain names which his conscience would not permit him to do. Mr. Miller was questioned in detail about his travel abroad and his applications for passports. He answered all these questions.[1] He testified that he had applied for and received a passport in 1946 or 1947 and that this passport was renewed in Rome "a couple of years thereafter." (Transcript, p. 872.) He testified that he applied for a passport in March of 1954 and that this application had been denied. (Transcript, p. 872.) He testified that he had an application for a passport pending at the present time. (Transcript, p. 874.) He testified that:

"After the denial of my passport by the State Department [in 1954], I was literally besieged by foreign newspapermen. Many of them, as far as I know they were all from non-Communist and most of them in the country I know little about, France. They were from the rightist press and from the center press. They were after me to the point where I had to go to my home in Roxbury and hide out there because they wanted me to carry on a fight about this in the European press against the United States, and I refused to do it and I refused to do it for a good reason, and that is that, whatever I may have supported and however it looks, I do draw a line between criticism of the United States in the United States and before foreigners." (Transcript, pp. 928–929.)

Mr. Miller was questioned in detail about his relationship with the New York Youth Board and about his past connections with certain Communist-front organizations, such as the Joint Antifascist Refugees Committee, the World Youth Festival, the Civil Rights Congress, etc. Mr. Miller answered all such questions frankly and without reserve. (Transcript, pp. 893 to 940.)

Mr. Miller was asked whether he had ever had any connections with the Communist Party. He answered this question with all the detail at his command after the lapse of

---

[1] Although we are confining this memorandum to existing legislative precedents, we feel duty bound to point out here that a witness is not guilty of contempt unless the questions he refuses to answer are "pertinent to the questions under inquiry," which in this case related to "passports." The Government must plead and prove the pertinency of each question a witness refuses to answer, and it is not enough to show that such questions might have led to later relevant questions. Bowers v. United States (202 F. 2d 447 (CADC, 1953)).

many years. He testified that in 1939 or 1940 he attended 3 or 4 meetings of a Marxist study course held in a "vacant store open to the street in my neighborhood in Brooklyn." (Transcript, pp. 941–942.) He testified that in 1947 he attended about 5 or 6 meetings of "Communist Party writers." (Transcript, p. 941.) Mr. Miller testified that "I went there to discover where I stood finally and completely. * * * I decided in the course of these meetings that I had finally to find out what my views really were in relation to theirs * * * and I discovered * * * that I had no real basis in common either philosophically or, most important to me, as a dramatist." (Transcript, pp. 942, 945.)

Mr. Miller held nothing back from the committee, no matter how painful nor far remote in time, except the names of certain writers at 5 or 6 meetings of Communist Party writers in 1947. In response to the question as to who was present, Mr. Miller testified:

"Mr. Chairman, I understand the philosophy behind this question and I want you to understand mine.

"When I say this I want you to understand that I am not protecting the Communists or the Communist Party. I am trying to and I will protect my sense of myself. I could not use the name of another person and bring trouble on him. These were writers, poets, as far as I could see, and the life of a writer, despite what it sometimes seems, is pretty tough. I wouldn't make it any tougher for anybody. I ask you not to ask me that question" (Transcript, p. 943.)

When pressed to respond he replied:

"I will be perfectly frank with you in anything relating to my activities. I take the responsibility for everything I have ever done, but I cannot take responsibility for another human being." (Transcript, p. 943.)

And again:

"All I can say, sir, is that my conscience will not permit me to use the name of another person." (Transcript, p. 948.)

This one declination to answer was in no sense a pro-Communist act, for Mr. Miller made it clear to the committee that his earlier cooperation with Communist-front organizations had been not only "unfortunate" but "a great error" (transcript, p. 953); that it would be a "disaster and a calamity" if the Communist Party ever took over this country (transcript, p. 952); and, above all, that he believed in democracy and loved his country as much as any man (transcript, p. 952).

It was after these statements that the chairman concluded the hearing with the following remarks:

"You have learned a great deal and made a greater contribution to what we think you now stand for than you realize because, by the errors that you committed, you are serving a very loud note of warning to a lot of other people who might fall into what you did, quite obviously.

"The committee is now adjourned." (Transcript, p. 954.)

Certainly this committee, in exercising its discretion, will wish to consider the respectful and cooperative nature of Mr. Miller's testimony.

III. ALTERNATIVE COURSES OF WITHHOLDING NAMES WHICH ARTHUR MILLER REJECTED

A subpenaed witness who is unwilling on grounds of conscience to disclose the identity of those whom he had formerly known as Communists, has alternative courses. Of the several courses open to Mr. Miller, he chose the one which was most creditable to him and most helpful to the committee.

1. He could have relied upon the fifth amendment when asked about his own activities and then relied upon the same provision when asked about others. The chairman adverted at the hearing to a "number of performers who had invoked the fifth amendment * * * largely because they did not want to be placed in the position of being an informer." (Transcript, p. 903.) By invoking the fifth amendment, a witness is legally safe, but he thereby deprives the committee of much information about himself which may be helpful.[2]

2. A second course—and one apparently utilized from time to time despite its unethical nature—is to testify about oneself and then forget the names of other persons. Sometimes this course is combined with the naming of one or more persons already known to the committee. Thus it would have been easy enough for Mr. Miller to have identified D'Usseau (previously identified by witnesses before this committee, Investigation of Communist Activities in the New York City Area, pt. II, p. 1306), and then to have forgotten the names of the writers whom he had seen 5 or 6 times 9 years ago. But this course he rightly rejected.

3. The course taken by Mr. Miller—to disclose all details of his own past conduct and then honestly tell the committee he is unable within his conscience to identify other people—is not as safe as the other alternatives available to a witness in the position of Mr. Miller. But it is a more honorable course and one that provides the committee with information which may prove helpful to it.

IV. PRECEDENTS FOR REFRAINING FROM CONTEMPT CITATIONS

In the pamphlet entitled "This Is Your House Committee on Un-American Activities," prepared and released by this committee on September 19, 1954, the following question and answer appear:

"35. Does the committee endeavor to cite all of those witnesses who exhibit contempt for the committee in their appearance before the committee?

"No. The committee feels that it would be an unnecessary burden to the Department of Justice and the courts to pursue action against all such persons. The public record of such action by these individuals is believed sufficient to show the true nature of their contempt, arrogance, and perfidy."

Certainly, if the committee would consider not citing a witness who had been guilty of "arrogance and perfidy," the committee should now consider not citing one who has been respectful and cooperative. Moreover, Mr. Miller is a public figure in a field sensitive to public opinion, and the public record, carefully documented by this committee, with his admitted past political mistakes, has been given wide publicity and is there for all to see.

A formal statement of the Internal Security Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee has recognized the problem of conscience that may arise when a witness is asked to become an informer. The subcommittee has stated that it "made every effort to induce educators who had left the Communist Party to testify fully at all times. * * * And in almost every case, they were not pressed into extensive identifications of former associates when a reluctance to do so became apparent." (Report on Subversive Influence in the Educational Process, 83d Cong., 1st sess., p. 4.) The considerations underlying this policy of the Internal Security Subcommittee are, we submit, pertinent to Mr. Miller's case.

In the short time available to us, we have not been able to make an exhaustive search of the precedents before this and other committees dealing with subversive and un-American activities. But the precedents we have found in our brief search leave no doubt that a refusal on the grounds of conscience to answer a specific question by an otherwise respectful and cooperative witness has often not been followed by a citation for contempt. A summary of these precedents here follows. We have omitted the names of the witnesses in order that, if this memorandum should ever become public, they may be spared further notoriety. Also, we have made no examination of any cases which have been before the committee during the present session of Congress and in which, therefore, action might still be taken if it has not already been taken.

(a) Witness No. 1 testified before this committee (Communist Infiltration of Radiation Laboratory, pt. 1, p. 356 ff.) that he had been a member of the Communist Party from 1937 to 1941. He refused to say whether another person was known to him as a member of the Communist Party. He was not cited for contempt.

(b) Witness No. 2 testified before this committee (Communist Infiltration of Radiation Laboratory, pt. 1, p. 373 ff.) that she had been a member of the Communist Party from 1937 to 1941, but refused to answer questions about others. She was not cited for contempt.

(c) Witness No. 3 testified before this committee (Communist Infiltration of Atomic Bomb Project, pt. 3, p. 3417 ff.) that he had been a member of the Communist Party from 1938 to 1943. He refused to give the names of the other members of his group. He was not cited for contempt.

(d) Witness No. 4. testified before this committee (Communist Infiltration of Atomic Bomb Project, pt. 3, p. 3453 ff.) that she had been a member of the Communist Party from 1939 to 1943. She refused to identify anyone as a member of her group. She was not cited for contempt.

(e) Witness No. 5 testified before this committee (Communist Activity in the Philadelphia Area, pt. 4, p. 4006) that she had attended meetings of the Communist Political Association in 1946, but declined to say whether she had attended meetings at the home of designated persons. She was not cited for contempt.

(f) Witness No. 6 testified before the Subcommittee (Subversive Influence in the Educational Process, pt. 6, p. 721 ff.) on Internal Security of the Senate Judiciary Committee that he had been a member of the Communist Party from 1936 to 1942, but refused to say whether or not a designated person had been a member of his group. He was not cited for contempt.

(g) Witness No. 7 testified before the same subcommittee (Subversive Influence in the Educational Process, pt. 12, p. 1023 ff.) that he had been a member of the Communist Party from 1935 to 1943, but refused to say who had been the senior professor in his group at a certain university. He was not cited for contempt.

(h) Witness No. 8 testified before the same subcommittee (Army Information and Education Program, p. 1498) that he had been a member of the Communist Party on two separate occasions but refused to identify others. He was not cited for contempt.

(i) At least four witnesses before this same subcommittee refused to answer questions about other persons during an investigation of the Southern Conference Educational Fund. These witnesses, though named by others as members of the Communist Party, denied membership and then refused to answer many questions, including questions pertaining to others. None of the witnesses was cited for contempt.

(j) Witness No. 13 admitted before the Permanent Investigations Subcommittee of the Senate Government Operations Committee (State Department Information Program—Information Centers, pt. 8, p. 486) and admitted that he was a Marxist and Socialist. He refused to answer numerous questions relating to his Marxist beliefs. He was not cited for contempt.

In each of the cases referred to above except those of witnesses 7 and 13 the refusals to answer were on grounds of conscience.

---

[2] This is because a witness may not tell all about himself and then plead the fifth amendment to avoid testifying about others. Rogers v. United States (340 U. S. 367, 371).

Witness No. 7 pleaded the fifth amendment when asked to name someone else, but he was informed by the chairman that this constituted no defense since he had waived the privilege by testifying about his own activities in the Communist Party. Nevertheless he was not cited for contempt. Witness No. 13 pleaded the fifth amendment though the committee publicly took the position that this amendment was not a lawful defense; he was not cited for contempt.

It should be noted that most of the above persons, unlike Arthur Miller, were or had been in the Communist Party, and for extended periods of time, and therefore could have given a great deal of information about others. It is also to be noted that many of the above investigations, unlike that of Arthur Miller, concerned matters of serious import to our national security such as our atomic energy project. We urge the committee to compare the activities of these witnesses and of those associated with them with Arthur Miller's attendance at 3 or 4 meetings of a Marxist study group in 1940 and 5 or 6 meetings of Communist Party writers in 1947.

Our brief research into precedents additionally discloses that most of the witnesses who have been cited for contempt are entirely distinguishable from Mr. Miller. Some of them were contemptuous of the committee in their demeanor as well as in law and questioned the propriety and jurisdiction of the committee in a hostile fashion. Still others refused to answer questions which were preliminary or inconsequential in nature. Exceedingly few of the witnesses cited for contempt were friendly, dispassionate, and calm in their demeanor. Moreover, those persons who were respectful in manner and nevertheless cited for contempt, had been affiliated with the Communist Party over extended periods of time and could have given testimony based on certain knowledge of the facts. Mr. Miller, on the contrary, could not be certain who attended the meetings of the Communist Party writers as members of the Communist Party and who attended the meetings for the same purpose of inquiry and soul-searching as he did.

Our investigation has failed to disclose the citing of any witness who, in the words of the chairman, served "a very loud note of warning to a lot of other people who might fall into what" Mr. Miller did.

V. SOME FINAL CONSIDERATIONS

The problem of conscience in cases of this sort is real and persistent, as it is in other areas of American life. We respect, for example, the right of a citizen to decline to bear arms even in time of war, if religious scruples forbid. In such cases it is necessary to distinguish between the true and the false conscientious objector. The determination is not always easy, but we do not refuse to make it because the task is difficult.

By the same token we recognize that the determination of when to respect a plea of conscientious unwillingness to inform and when to reject it may sometimes present the committee with hard choices, but this fact alone should not justify lumping all the cases together. At one end of the spectrum may be cases of Communist Party members with extensive information to offer; cases of obstreperous and defiant witnesses; cases involving Government and defense work in sensitive areas where every bit of knowledge may be important to the country. At the other end of the spectrum are cases such as Arthur Miller's, involving none of these elements. In between there may be various gradations.

We urge the committee not to part company with its own precedents and shut its eyes to the differences between one case and another. We have shown that in the light of those precedents, if there were ever a case for withholding punishment it is Arthur Miller's. His own democratic faith is beyond question. He was praised by the chairman for his recognition of past errors. He has promoted our democratic cause abroad. He was a cooperative and respectful witness. He answered all questions about himself. He did not seek refuge in the fifth amendment. He did not hide behind a conveniently forgetful memory. The persons he declined to name were dramatists and poets, unconnected with any government or defense activity. The few meetings he attended with them were taken up exclusively with discussions of Marxism at the literary level. He parted from these writers in opposition to their views. All this was 9 years ago.

We trust that the committee, considering all these factors, will not think it necessary for the protection of society to add to the ordeal which he has already undergone the further penalty of criminal punishment.

Respectfully submitted.

LLOYD K. GARRISON.
JOSEPH L. RAUH, Jr.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from California [Mr. JACKSON].

Mr. JACKSON. Mr. Speaker, as stated in the committee report, Arthur Miller, playwright, appeared before the committee under oath on June 21, 1956.

He was before the committee for an inquiry based on his alleged activities in Communist front organizations and to the extent that the questions dealt with these matters Mr. Miller answered the questions. However, in the course of the inquiry, it developed in the answers of the witness that he had in times past attended meetings at which there were in attendance individuals who were known to him to be members of the Communist Party. Inasmuch as the scope of the inquiry related to the activities of a number of Communist Party members during the period in question Mr. Miller was asked to identify those who were known to him personally to have been members of the Communist Party at that time, and who were in attendance at the meetings in question.

Mr. Miller declined to give the committee any information as to the identity of those individuals, relying not upon any provision of the Constitution in his declination, but upon his moral scruples. It is well based in the law that one cannot decline to answer pertinent and relative questions out of moral scruples no matter how laudable they may be. It should be pointed out and should be made perfectly clear on the record that if a declination of this kind is permitted by the committee, that is to say, a declination to answer questions not based upon legal grounds, it will certainly establish a very clear pattern for the future so far as witnesses are concerned and will in a large part destroy the utility of your House committee.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JACKSON. I yield.

Mr. MULTER. This committee's investigations, I assume, are being carried on for the purpose of determining what legislation, if any, should be presented to the House; am I right?

Mr. JACKSON. The gentleman is right.

Mr. MULTER. Will the gentleman tell the House please what legislation has been interfered with that you could not prepare or could not propose because you do not know the names of certain persons that associated with this man?

Mr. JACKSON. As the committee was very much interested in this particular period and in those who were members of the Communist Party because of an investigation in the area of passport frauds prevalent at that time it was the purpose of the committee and presently is the purpose of the committee to make such recommendations, as may be considered necessary to the House in that area. Whether or not the individuals concerned, who were said by Mr. Miller himself to have been members of the Communist Party, were able to give the committee information in that area, we do not know due to his declination.

Mr. MULTER. The point of my inquiry is—what difference does it make whether it was John Jones or Joe Smith or whether it was 1 person or 10 persons who are Communists? The fact has been established that there have been many Communists engaged in these activities, and I cannot see what difference it makes as to whether it was one person or another or a great number more or less. You have the facts as to the participation of these Communists in these activities. Why cannot you now bring in proposed legislation without this information that this man refused to give you on the grounds that would require him to "squeal", to use the colloquial term, about people who may or may not be Communists?

Mr. JACKSON. I would say to the gentleman that the crux of any conspiracy is those who comprise it. We have abundant testimony to indicate that there is and has been a sinister Communist conspiracy in this country. Unless we determine who the members of that conspiracy are and in what activity they are or have engaged, there is no purpose to be served by any investigation in the area. We believe it to be within the discretion of a witness to make a determination in his own mind as to whether or not individuals he knew to be members of the Communist Party are still members or are not members, nor whether they engaged or are still engaged in illegal activities. That is a matter for determination by the committee.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JACKSON. I yield.

Mr. WALTER. Of course there has been a studied attempt made for a long time to convince the American people, or those who do not care what the facts are, that the Committee on Un-American Activities has but one function, and that is to write legislation.

I would like to call to your attention the powers and duties of the committee:

The Committee on Un-American Activities, as a whole or by subcommittee, is authorized to make from time to time investigations of (i) the extent, character, and objects of un-American propaganda activities in the United States, (ii) the diffusion within the United States of subversive and un-American propaganda that is instigated from foreign countries or of a domestic origin and attacks the principle of the form of government as guaranteed by our Constitution, and (iii) all other questions in relation thereto that would aid Congress in any necessary remedial legislation.

Arthur Miller was not subpenaed for the purpose of squealing on anybody, as he and his high-priced lawyers would have you believe. He was subpenaed because there was information that he had been a Communist, that he was associated with Communists in these meetings, and at the moment he was applying for a passport to travel abroad. His request for a passport was denied. It was denied a year ago. The committee, in its efforts to write the kind of legislation necessary with reference to the issuance of passports, was interested in knowing who those groups were that were Communists.

Mr. MULTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JACKSON. I yield.

Mr. MULTER. Is it not a fact that you have established a conspiracy? You have done a good job establishing that there is and was a conspiracy, and we know there are participants who are Communists. Obviously, from the reading of the duties by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALTER] you are not a prosecuting agency. You have never pretended to be. What purpose can be served by determining whether or not this man's passport was properly or improperly issued? You have all the facts. What difference does it make whether there are 1 or 2 or 5 or more involved in this conspiracy? The fact has been established that there was a conspiracy. Why do you not proceed to legislate?

Mr. JACKSON. The committee is still investigating passport frauds. Merely to say that because we have a small amount of evidence in that area is enough to absolve everyone who has taken part in passport frauds is not enough. We have yet to complete the picture as to why it was done and how it was done and by what means.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JACKSON. I yield.

Mr. YATES. The gentleman indicated that there was information that Arthur Miller was a Communist. On page 36 of the hearings, at the bottom of the page, this colloquy appears:

> Mr. ARENS. I put it to you as a fact and ask you to affirm or deny the fact that you did make application for membership in the Communist Party and that the number of your application is 23345.
>
> Mr. MILLER. I would not affirm that. I have no memory of such a thing.
>
> Mr. ARENS. Do you deny it?
> Mr. MILLER. I would deny it.

I would assume if Mr. Miller were guilty of perjury the committee would have referred the matter to the Department of Justice for action under the perjury statutes, rather than to come into this Congress and ask that he be held for contempt.

Mr. JACKSON. The committee might do that or the committee might continue investigation of the matter. Mr. Miller is not being cited for being a Communist. This matter is before the House for action today because Mr. Miller refused to name those who were said by him to have been members of the Communist Party during that period. In so declining to elaborate on his testimony he did not avail himself of the privileges that were his under the Constitution.

Mr. YATES. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. JACKSON. I yield.

Mr. YATES. Does the committee have any information about the fact that he was a Communist, which does not appear in these hearings?

Mr. JACKSON. I will say to the gentleman that the committee had evidence that satisfied members of the committee as to Mr. Miller's activities on behalf of the Communist front. Else Mr. Miller would not have been subpenaed.

Mr. FORRESTER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JACKSON. I shall be very happy to.

Mr. FORRESTER. Does not this present this kind of analogous situation: Is not this on a parity with a man saying to a grand jury: "I did not participate in the killing or the murder, but I was present at the time, and I refuse to testify to tell you who those people were on account of my conscience or because I do not want to talk about my friends"? In other words, would not your whole theory of the admissibility of evidence in this case be in jeopardy if this man were not cited for contempt and punished?

Mr. JACKSON. I think very definitely so. If the pattern is established by this or any other committee of permitting a witness before that committee to go so far into his activities in the Communist Party or a Communist front organization, and then to stop at his own discretion, the entire structure of congressional investigation is in danger, in very serious danger.

Mr. SCHERER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JACKSON. I yield.

Mr. SCHERER. If you will read the record of the testimony, Miller in substance said to this committee that he believed at the present time that a writer such as he was had the right to advocate anything, even to overthrow of this Government by force and violence.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JACKSON. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. YATES. Did not the late Senator Taft, in a speech to the Executive Club in Milwaukee, state in effect that he considered it the right of any person to advocate anything, even Communist doctrines, as long as he was not engaged in a conspiracy to overthrow the Government of the United States by force and violence?

Mr. SCHERER. No. The Smith Act provisions would forbid advocating the overthrow of this Government by force and violence.

Mr. MOULDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. MOULDER. Mr. Speaker, the act creating the Committee on Un-American Activities charged the committee with the duty of making certain investigations. Under the principle of self-preservation, the House of Representatives has the implied right to prevent acts which, in and of themselves, obstruct or prevent the discharge of legislative duties. As this inherent right was latent, undefined, and unpublished, and as common justice required that citizens be advised as to the extent and limitations of this power, a statute was passed making it a misdemeanor for a person to refuse to answer any question pertinent to the question under inquiry. The penalty for the violation of this statute is a fine of not more than $1,000, nor less than $100, and imprisonment for not less than 1 month nor more than 12 months.

There are instances in which this governmental right or power comes into conflict with the right of a witness to refuse to answer questions, such as is the case where a witness refuses to answer because the answer might tend to incriminate him. The Committee on Un-American Activities has just presented the facts to the House of Representatives regarding the refusal of eight witnesses to answer pertinent questions propounded to them in the course of committee investigations. The House of Representatives adopted resolutions in each of these instances referring the facts to the proper United States attorney for prosecution, for their refusal to answer certain questions propounded to them. In some of the cases presented, the witness did not assert any constitutional immunity against testifying; some did not assign any constitutional reason for refusing to testify; some refused to do more than answer to their names, and some based their refusal to testify on their reluctance to give information relating to other persons.

The House of Representatives should not consider lightly the relinquishment of its right to institute contempt proceedings in such cases, for to do so would encourage a recurrence of such wrongful conduct and bring into disregard and disrepute important legislative functions.

The committee sought to elicit information, the receipt of which would have been an aid to Congress in better understanding the problems arising from Communist activities and the information sought would have been an aid in the finding of a legislative solution to some of these problems.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from California [Mr. ROOSEVELT] may extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROOSEVELT. Mr. Speaker, first may the record show that on the previous citations I have voted to uphold the committee. But in the case of Arthur Miller I believe, after careful study, that the committee has made a serious error. This case is different from the others because of some or all of these facts.

First. Mr. Miller was a completely cooperative witness and the last words of the distinguished chairman to him were "You have learned a great deal, and made a greater contribution to what we think you now stand for than you realize because, by the errors that you have committed, you are serving a very loud note of warning to a lot of other people who might fall into what you did, quite obviously."

Second. The committee has repeatedly in other cases of similar refusal refrained from citing for contempt even though in some of these the witnesses also refused to answer many other questions. Mr. Miller, perhaps because of his prominence, has been discriminated against and the committee has raised a double standard. For reference we should read the memorandum of Mr. Miller's attorneys submitted on July 6, 1956. It documents 13 such cases.

Third. The very few witnesses cited for contempt who were cooperative in their attitude were directly affiliated with the Communist Party and in a position to be positive of information needed by the Government. Mr. Miller, on page 36 of the committee report, flatly denied he had joined the Communist Party and wrote the committee:

> I have no knowledge of any plan on the part of these people, past or present, detrimental to society or otherwise. I have no knowledge of any crime or criminal.

Fourth. The House is in the same position as a judge who decides that the degree of contumacy or contempt is not sufficient to require punishment. The argument that the trial court can also exercise this privilege does not excuse our ducking our duty just because there may be present to some technical degree of contempt. The past record of the committee actions as previously cited, the acknowledged helpfulness of Mr. Miller to the committee, and the very full and frank answers given in all other instances, it seems to me, calls on us as judges to act on the true merits of this case.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, if the contempt citation is voted it serves notice on all future witnesses before the House Un-American Activities Committee that they must answer all committee questions unless they plead the fifth amendment, conveniently claim forgetfulness, or deliberately lie. The ability of the committee to get useful, helpful information will be seriously damaged. This is not just a case of the House granting mercy, it is an opportunity for the House to exercise judgment and discretion toward a cooperative witness.

Mr. O'HARA of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, there have been numerous occasions since I have been a Member of this body when there have been resolutions similar to those we are considering today. It was in the 81st Congress, if I recall correctly, that a resolution of this nature was directed at a witness who had appeared before the committee headed by the late beloved Congressman Frank Buchanan investigating the practices of lobbies and of lobbyists. On that occasion many on the other side of the aisle opposed the resolution and sought to bring about its defeat. This, I thought, tended to take a hearing for alleged contempt from the proper judicial tribunal and decide it in the climate of prejudice and favor and of partisan bias on the floor of this House. We in the House in voting on resolutions of this character are not passing upon the guilt or the innocence of the person sought to be cited. That is the province strictly and entirely of the courts. During my terms in the Congress, even at times when I thought the practices of some congressional committees did not conform to the recognized rules of American courts and of fair play, I uniformly have followed the rule of voting for resolutions of the type now before us. The passing of such a resolution does not constitute a finding either of guilt or of innocence. It does not constitute a finding of approval or of disapproval of anything the witness did or anything the committee did. It merely refers the matter to the proper tribunal. It is the duty of the House to maintain its own dignity, and whenever one of the committees of the House makes a prima facie case that any witness before it has been disrespectful of its authority, the proper procedure, of course, is to have the matter referred to the courts for judicial determinations of the facts and of the law.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 373, nays 9, not voting 50, as follows:

PROVIDING INSURANCE AGAINST FLOOD DAMAGE

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (S. 3732) to provide insurance against flood damage, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill S. 3732, with Mr. WILLIS in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. When the Committee rose on Saturday, July 21, the Clerk had read section 1 of the committee amendment. If there are no amendments to section 1, the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

FINDINGS AND DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

SEC. 2. (a) The Congress finds that in the case of recurring natural disasters, including recurring floods, insurance protection against individual and public loss is not always practically available through private or public sources. With specific reference to insurance against flood loss, the Congress finds that insurance against certain losses resulting from this period is not so available. Since preventive and protective means and structures against the effects of these disasters can never wholly anticipate the geographic incidence and infinite variety of the destructive aspects of these forces, the Congress finds that the safeguards of insurance are a necessary adjunct of preventive and protective means and structures.

Inasmuch as these disasters impede interstate and foreign commerce, hamper national defense, and cause widespread distress and hardship adversely affecting the general welfare, without regard to State boundary lines, and in the absence of insurance protection from private or public sources, the Congress ought to provide for such protection in the case of flood, and study the feasibility and need for similar programs in the case of other forms of natural disaster against which insurance protection is not generally and practically available in all geographical areas.

(b) (1) It is the purpose of this act to authorize the establishment of a program of Federal insurance and reinsurance against the risks of loss resulting from flood as hereinafter defined, and to require a study and report on insurance and reinsurance against still other natural disaster perils to the extent that such insurance or reinsurance is not available on reasonable terms and conditions from other public or private sources; and

(2) It is the further purpose of this act to encourage private insurance companies to write insurance covering the extent of the risks above the limits prescribed in section 10 (a) and to provide Federal reinsurance to the extent desirable and necessary to carry out this purpose.

(3) It is the further purpose of this act to authorize the establishment of a program of loans, and a program combining insurance and loans, to assist flood victims who have entered into contracts with the Administrator under this act.

ADMINISTRATION

SEC. 3. (a) To assist in carrying out the functions, powers, and duties vested in him by this act, the Administrator may appoint a Commissioner, and the basic rate of compensation of such position shall be the same as the basic rate of compensation established for the Commissioners of the constituents of the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

(b) The provisions of the Government Corporation Control Act, as amended, shall apply to the functions vested in the Administrator by this act, to the same extent as applicable to wholly owned Government corporations.

(c) In the performance of, and with respect to, the functions, powers, and duties vested in him by this act, the Administrator, notwithstanding the provisions of any other law, shall maintain an integral set of accounts which shall be audited annually by the General Accounting Office in accordance with the principles and procedures applicable to commercial transactions as provided by the Government Corporation Control Act, as amended, and no other audit shall be required: Provided, That such financial transactions of the Administrator as the issuing of insurance policies, the making of reinsurance agreements, and the making and guaranteeing of loans, and vouchers approved by the Administrator in connection with such financial transactions, shall be final and conclusive upon all officers of the Government.

AUTHORITY TO INSURE AND REINSURE

SEC. 4. To aid in carrying out the purposes of this act, the Administrator is authorized to provide, upon such terms and conditions (including coinsurance requirements) as he may establish, insurance and reinsurance against loss resulting from damage to or destruction against loss resulting from damage to or destruction of real or personal property (including property owned by any State or local government) due to flood, as hereinafter defined, occurring within the United States.

LOAN CONTRACTS

SEC. 5. (a) The Administrator is authorized to enter into contracts with any persons (not including State and local governments and agencies thereof) to the effect that, in the event of any subsequent loss resulting from damage to or destruction of real and personal property due to flood, as hereinafter defined, occurring within the United States—

(1) the Administrator will guarantee any public or private financing institution against loss of principal and interest with respect to any loan in an amount not to exceed such subsequent flood loss (as modified by subsection (f) of this section, relating to deductibility), which may be made by such institution to any such person in connection with such flood loss; and

(2) to the extent that a loan to finance such flood loss is not available from any such institution on reasonable terms, the Administrator will make a loan directly to such person in an amount covering all or part (as provided for in the loan contract between the Administrator and such person) of the difference between the amount of such flood loss (as modified by such subsection (f), relating to deductibility) and the amount of the loan available from such institution.

Each such contract shall contain such terms and conditions, and require from any such person such monetary consideration, as the Administrator may prescribe by regulation; but such monetary consideration shall be in the lowest practicable amount.

(b) Any loan made or guaranteed under this section shall bear interest at the rate, as determined by the Administrator, which is prevailing in the area where the money loaned is to be used but such rate shall not exceed 4 percent per annum on the unpaid principal balance.

(c) Any Federal Reserve bank, when designated by the Administrator, is hereby authorized to act, on behalf of the Administrator, as fiscal agent of the United States in guaranteeing loans under this section and in otherwise taking action in connection with such guaranties. Such funds as may be necessary to enable such bank to carry out any such guaranty shall be supplied and disbursed by or under authority of the Administrator from the Disaster Loan Fund. Such bank shall not have any responsibility or accountability except as agent in taking any action in connection with such guaranties. Each such bank shall be reimbursed by the Administrator, from funds appropriated by the Federal Government, for all expenses incurred by the bank in acting as agent on behalf of the Administrator, including among such expenses, notwithstanding any other provision of law, attorneys' fees and expenses of litigation.

(d) Actions and operations of such banks under authority of subsection (c) of this section shall be subject to the supervision of the Administrator and subject to such regulations as he may prescribe. The Administrator is authorized to prescribe the term and incidental charges for loans guaranteed under subsection (c) of this section. The Administrator is further authorized to prescribe regulations with respect to the forms and procedures (which shall be uniform to the maximum extent practicable) to be utilized in connection with such guaranties.

(e) To the maximum extent practicable, loans under this section shall be on a long-term basis in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Administrator, if so requested by the person obtaining the loan.

(f) Loans under this section shall be made only with respect to amounts exceeding the first $500 of the amount of the loss.

(g) The face amount of all loan contracts outstanding under this section at any one time shall not exceed $2,000,000,000; but such amount may be increased, with the approval of the President, by not to exceed $500,000,000 in any one fiscal year.

(h) The provisions of sections 8, 9, 10 (a), 10 (b), 12 (b), 12 (c), 13, 14, 15 (e), 15 (g), 17 (a), 18, 19, 20, 22, and 23 of this act shall be applicable with respect to the loan contract program under this section.

COMBINATION OF INSURANCE AND LOANS

SEC. 6. The Administrator is authorized to establish, under such regulations as he may prescribe, a program combining insurance and loans in order to provide the greatest variety and amount of protection against loss to the greatest number of affected parties in accordance with individual needs.

ESTIMATED RATES AND FEES

SEC. 7. (a) The Administrator shall from time to time establish a schedule of "estimated rates" for insurance offered under the provisions of this act, which would be adequate, in his judgment, to produce sufficient proceeds to pay all claims for probable losses over a reasonable period of years. Such "estimated rates" shall be used as a basis for determining the fees to be paid by the persons insured. They shall be based on consideration of the risks involved and shall be uniform for similar risks within a given classification of property. They shall not include any loading for administrative expenses of the Federal Government under this act. The Administrator shall establish a schedule of fees to provide insurance protection at reasonable costs designed to achieve marketability: Provided, That no insurance policy shall be issued for a fee less than 60 percent of such "estimated rate," except that reduced fees may be established for insurance on any classification of owner-occupied dwelling units if the Administrator determines that without such reduction the owners of such dwelling units as a class could not afford to pay the fees chargeable for such insurance. The Administrator is authorized to establish such classifications of fees as he deems necessary to carry out the purposes of this act based on the use of the property to be insured, the availability of insurance from private sources covering such property, and the ability of the insured to self-insure or reinsure and may establish differentials in levels of fees for such classifications: Provided, That all such fees shall be uniform for similar risks within a given classification of property. The Administrator shall from time to time pay into the Disaster Insurance Fund, hereinafter created, an amount equal to the difference between the fees charged for insurance policies issued and the amount which would have been charged if the "estimated rates" were applied.

(b) The Administrator from time to time shall also negotiate with insurance companies seeking reinsurance for the purpose of establishing fees for reinsurance offered under the provisions of this act. Such fees shall be based on consideration of the risks involved and shall be adequate, in the judgment of the Administrator, to produce sufficient proceeds over a reasonable period of years to pay all claims for losses. The fees shall not include any loading for administrative expenses of the Federal Government under this act.

PROPERTY AND LOSS LIMITS

SEC. 8. The Administrator is authorized to provide for the determination of types and location of property with respect to which insurance or reinsurance shall be made available under this act, the nature and limits of loss or damage in any area (including subdivisions thereof) which may be covered by such insurance or reinsurance, and such other matters as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this act.

RISK CLASSIFICATION

SEC. 9. The Administrator may from time to time issue appropriate regulations regarding the classification, limitation, and rejection of risks assumed by him under authority of this act.

POLICY AND PROGRAM LIMITS

SEC. 10. (a) The outstanding face amount of insurance issued by the Administrator under this act shall not exceed $250,000 per person: Provided, That the face amount of such insurance on any dwelling unit (including any structures and personal property connected therewith) shall not exceed $10,000.

(b) The Administrator may from time to time issue appropriate regulations regarding insurance coverage available to joint owners and subsidiary and affiliated corporations as he shall deem advisable to effectuate the purposes of this act.
